The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 11, 1907 NO. 911

Mortal or Spirit—Which?

A Study in Psychic Influence, by Charles Dawbarn, Illustrating a Psychological Crime.

The California Philosopher presents interesting facts in reference to spirit control or the danger of psychism, showing that Obsession of a dangerous character often occurs, constituting in all respects a "psychological crime" of deep significance to every thoughtful mind.

Mr. Dawbarn, one of the closest observers of things occult in our ranks, recognizes these "psychological crimes," and the advice he gave in the particular case named was wise and opportune. He counseled the man to go right back and take his wife to the theater that night. He advised him to leave the city next day, and to start on an extended tour and to seek amusement, and even excitement for his wife. And above all, neither of them to read, or, if possible, even think of Spiritualism for six months, and even then to carefully study its philosophy before he ever again sought to talk to his daughter through the mediumship of his wife. Now this was curious advice for a confirmed Spiritualist and profound thinker like Mr. Dawbarn to give, but under the circumstance, it was needed badly. Spirit Return, under right conditions, is a glorious truth, a soul-elevating truth, an angelic truth, but when the conditions are perverted, then look out for disastrous results, a psychological crime, as in the case related by Mr. Dawbarn, a leading light in the ranks of Spiritualism.

One afternoon, in the not distant past, an elderly gentleman accosted me by name, and said, "Excuse me, but I have lesion of the brain." This was startling, to say the least, but as he did not look dangerous I asked him why he was coming to me instead of a medical man? In reply he asked me to give him half an hour of my time, as he needed my advice, and had been sent to me. The tale he told me should interest both the psychologist and the believer in spirit return. I record it in its simple truthfulness just as he told it, but it is my duty to suppress any possibility of identification.

"I have for many years," said my visitor, "been a prosperous merchant in an eastern city. The wife of my youth is still with me, but our only child, a sweet daughter, died last year and left us broken-hearted. For my wife's sake I went out of business, and in constant change of scene I have tried to stop her from brooding over our bereavement. Recently we had determined that when opportunity offered we would try to meet our loved child by some of the processes practiced by Spiritualists. We only arrived in San Francisco last week. I was away from the hotel for a few hours, when my wife surprised me on my return by saying 'I have talked to our darling Lina, and she begged me to send you to her, as she had something of great importance to tell you."

"I found she had visited a medium, whose address she gave me. The next morning I made a nameless visit to that medium, who, shutting her eyes, began to talk to me as if she were my daughter. This is what she said: 'Papa, when you go back to the hotel, I want you and mamma to take the little table and place your hands on it. You will soon discover that mamma is a wonderful medium, and that I can come and talk to you and make you happy.' Of course there was a great deal more said, but you now know what brings me to you for advice.

"My wife and I began sitting at that table. It soon rapped and rocked, and at the second or third sitting it rose in the air and turned over. We spent hours at that table, day after day, when at last my wife began to write messages with both hands, and at the same time talk in the name of our darling daughter. It was at this time we got a written message from what purported to be my wife's father, who was a country doctor, and died in her childhood. He asked us to sit for him every morning, as it would enable him to protect us. We did not know what he meant, but we gave him our promise. It was soon after this that my wife saw clairvoyantly a spirit dressed as a clergyman enter the room, with a book under his arm. My wife was then entranced, and began to talk to me in the name of this spirit. I may say here that we are both church members, so I was pleased to greet our priestly visitor.

"He said the world was falling away from the true faith, and that my wife was chosen as a blessed instrument by God's holy angels to destroy infidelity. There was much more said to the same effect, and next day, in spite of my protest, he held my wife under his control from nine in the evening till two the next morning, and leaving her thoroughly exhausted.

"The next morning, according to our promise, we sat for the old doctor, my wife's father. To my astonishment he said we were in great danger. He asked me, almost ordered me to go immediately to Charles Dawbarn. I had never heard the name. He could not give me your address, but told me I could easily find it. I naturally asked, 'What am I to say to him?' He said, 'Well, tell him you have lesion of the brain, and he will listen to you.' At a New Thought book store I obtained your address. Now I ask, what does it all mean, and how am I to protect my wife from the spirit I could not drive away last night?"

Why this gentleman was sent to me I did not and do not know, but I showed him the danger to his wife unless the obsessing influence of that priest was broken up. I counseled him to go right back and take his wife to the theater that night. I advised him to leave the city next day, and to start on an extended tour, and to seek amusement, and even excitement for his wife. And above all, neither of them to read, speak, or, if possible, even think of Spiritualism for six months, and even then to carefully study its philosophy before he ever again sought to talk to his daughter through the mediumship of his wife. Some months after I heard that he and his wife were still traveling, and apparently free from the influence that had nearly wrecked their lives.

This is all I know of the case, for I never met the lady and everything for me was hearsay, that is to say, told me by the husband of the sensitive. But it seems to me that we have here a case for careful study, as it embodies two quite distinct phases of phenomena.

The experiences of both husband and wife with the medium will be claimed by our telepathic friends as belonging to their realm. The appearance of the daughter, and the facts she gave as identification will, of course, be claimed as pure telepathy by Hudson and his followers. We remember nothing was said about the hotel and the little table that was not known to both husband and wife. We acknowledge that the powers of the sub-conscious self, if there be sub-conscious self, are as yet unknown either in their fullness or their limitation. We remember that the medium had seen the lady the day before, and her sensitiveness may have been then manifested. So the advice given through the medium to sit for development might have been the everyday advice given to visitors eager to greet their loved ones. So much, I think we must concede to the school that claims telepathy as the universal solvent of spirit mysteries.

Yet further, when we accept the physical phenomena and its mental accompaniments, students from another school tell us that the powers and faculties of selfhood are as yet unknown, and that if known they might easily explain the movements of the little table. Since the husband saw no spirit form, such students would claim the appearance of the priest as based upon 'self-suggestiveness" on the part of the lady whose religious instincts were abnormally excited at that time. But a little incident occurred that cannot be explained by these clever students, since it points us to a personality not founded on either telepathy or self-suggestion.

The spirit of the lady's father, or claiming that relation, comes and writes a request that he may be allowed to control his daughter at eleven every morning. The request was apparently of trifling importance, but we see that as an intelligence he sensed danger unthought of at that time by either husband or wife. It looks as if the crafty old priest were something more than a "suggestion" to the shrewd old spirit doctor. If so, that may again explain his verbal silence as his request or his motive, for any warning given at that time would have probably been overheard and possibly counteracted.

At the next step we see the mischief done. The danger has become a reality, and that sensitive was doomed unless secret advice could be given. That is to say, the advice must be given through some other organism. The next morning we cannot discern a trace of either subconscious power or self-suggestion by the lady when the old doctor gives the husband my name through his unconscious wife, a name which neither of them had ever heard. As I have said, why I was chosen to give the advice I may never know. We none of us know the measure of our susceptibility to thought directed upon our brain. But neither telepathy, unknown forces of the Ego, nor self-suggestion on the part of the medium offers even a plausible explanation of the appearance of the old doctor and his practical advice. It is for me a typical case. Either that lady's father was present, saw his daughter's danger and gave advice that saved her from obsession, or else "spirit-return" is itself a delusion from which we may well say, in the language of the prayer book, "Good Lord deliver us."

We learn from the incident the power and the limitation of a spirit to protect a mortal. He saw his daughter's danger, but evidently was not strong enough to shut out the priest. It must be done by their own will power. He and the priest were on equal terms so far as hearing what was said through the medium at that time. But he knew that if he could impress an ousider his desired warning might reach the husband. I was utterly unconscious of his influence or presence, but I perceived the danger, and gave the needed warning. If I received unconsciously a thought or influence from that old doctor it may have been directed by a wonted spirit friend with ready access to my brain. However that may have been, the only telepathy possible in this case is the reception of a thought by me which emanated from the old doctor. And that kind of telepathy is just what is claimed as "spirit return" by those who have learned from experience that live thoughts from live spirits are everyday facts in mortal life.

I am obliged to confess that telepathy, though claimed as proved by leading scientists, has no support in my personal experience. For years I have made repeated attempts through various sensitives by mentally calling upon an old friend who had promised to return and prove his identity. I have never uttered his name aloud since his death. Had I done so this wonderful telepathy would probably have bedecked him with glory as a spirit visitor to an earth mortal. But my silence has proved death to such telepathy. In other words, since my friend, for unknown reasons, was not present, no simulation was possible until some unscrupulous invisible could get hold of his name.

As another anti-proof of telepathy the late F. W. Myers left writing which his spirit was to duplicate through some medium as proof that F. W. M. was both alive and wearing his old identity. The attempt, as all know, was a failure. But if telepathy be a natural fact the intelligence called F. W. M. knew just what was written within that sealed envelope, and most certainly could have found a mortal sensitive through whom to flash the thought embalmed in that envelope. But once again the boasted telepathy failed.

So far I have never seen nor heard a so-called demonstration of telepathy that could not be better explained by spirit intervention. The now renowned message, flashed across the Atlantic under test conditions for sender and recipient, left America in English garb, and arrived in the language of ancient Rome. Human immortality and spirit return are absolutely proved by that incident to any mind that understands the meaning of "proved." But the word is absolutely unknown to many scientists who have invented "telepathy," to cover their inability to grasp a truth with a spirit in it.

CHARLES DAWBARN.

San Leandro, Cal.

Reason must be our last guide and judge in everything.—John Locke.

Justice is the constant desire and effort to render every man his due.—Justinian.

Illinois Spiritualists!

Your Careful Attention Is Invited to a Proposition to Establish the Largest and Best Camp.

Shall Illinois have the largest and best Spiritualist camp in the country? Do the Spiritualists of the state want it, and are they willing to help toward that end? If they are, we can have it, with a very small individual cost. To accomplish this grand object we must try to arouse a wave of enthusiasm among the Spiritualists of the state that shall assist in bringing about the right conditions. It will be an easy matter to secure the needed land and funds for improvements if all those interested will unite in one grand effort; pull all together. And now is the time to do it; do not let us put it off to some better time which may never come. If it is desirable to have a camp, it is desirable to work for it now, this coming season.

There must be a nucleus from which to start this movement, and we have it in the First Society, Fraternal Order of Spiritualists. Enthusiasm and courage, combined with united effort have enabled us to organize one of the most prosperous and growing societies in the country. The membership, attendance and interest have, from the very first, been constantly on the increase. We have members in nearly every State in the Union, and many letters are being received inquiring as to the workings of the Order and expressing a friendly interest in its success. We are having some of the best talent procurable, and are striving to give the people of Chicago the very best instruction in the Spiritual philosophy, as well as an honest and reliable presentation of the phenomena.

The time is fast approaching when the services in the hall must close for the summer season, and we want to continue the work. We do not want the interest to wane and our people scattered. We want a camp, where we can take our families and live during the heated season; where we can enjoy country life and its varied pleasures, and at the same time not be deprived of the comfort and benefit to be derived from attending spiritual services. We want to take our Spiritualism with us. A certain jolly-minded Baptist minister of our acquaintance remarked to his wife, when he saw her put a bible in the traveling bag, preparatory to a week's camping out at the beach, "Oh, we are going to the beach to have a good time, let's leave the bible at home." We think we can have a better time if we take our Spiritualism along with us.

Now, what steps shall be taken to accomplish this much-to-be desired end? A few can not do it alone; we need the co-operation of all the Spiritualists in the State; we want a camp that shall belong to them all, not to a few; one in which we can all take an interest and feel that it belongs to us, our spiritual home.

The following suggestions are presented for your consideration:

First: Let twenty-five representative Spiritualists from different parts of the State, men and women of known business capability, meet and organize the Fraternal Camp Association. Elect a board of officers and get a charter from the State of Illinois, authorizing them to establish a camp for religious and educational purposes, (not for gain) allowing them to hold the necessary property and to transact all necessary business pertaining to the same; the officers to be authorized to secure an option on a suitable grove, preferably near Chicago, as being the largest business center.

Second: Get one hundred or more persons to give the sum of five dollars each, or upward, to become charter members, and three thousand or more to pledge themselves to pay one dollar per year, annual dues. This means work, hard work, and continued work, but all things come to those who work, wait and believe. Catching fish is not the only industry that requires persistency. If anything is worth having, it is worth working for.

Third: Collect money and pay for the grove, and proceed with the needed improvements. The ground will need to be graded, sewers constructed, electric lights and water works provided, auditorium and dancing pavilion built, and many other improvements made to make it what we are determined to have, the very best camp in the world. Get the grove paid for and all the rest will come easy. All needed improvements can be secured by giving security on the ground.

Fourth: Lease lots for a period of ninety-nine years to responsible persons at five to ten dollars per lot. In that way people will be encouraged to build substantial cottages in which they can make a summer home for themselves and families from June to September, where they can be surrounded by friends and be instructed as well as amused, and at the same time have the best possible conditions for health and happiness.

Fifth: Proceed to raise money in all legitimate ways to pay the indebtedness. Money can be raised by fairs, dances, seances and circles by mediums interested in the success of the organization, by donations and by all the various ways in which money is raised by other organizations. After the debts are all paid, let the one dollar annual dues entitle members in good standing to all the privileges of the Association, lectures, concerts, classes, etc., without charge.

Sixth: Use all possible efforts to induce wealthy Spiritualists and other friends of the enterprise and of the cause, to build and endow schools for special summer courses on all progressive lines. Have competent teachers instruct the children in all healthful field sports, including fishing, swimming and boating, in addition to the instruction given in the lyceums and pleasure afforded by suitable entertainments, making the summers spent at the camp among their pleasantest memories, that their children and their children's children may continue to make the camp their summer home.

Friends, this is not a fairy story, nor need it be a castle in the air. We can have all this and more, on a firm foundation, if we will. Let us get our Camp Association organized and then let us all unite in an effort to get members to join it. We want, and we can get, members enough that our organization shall stand as an irresistible force, working for the building of this camp; let us work unselfishly, hand in hand, for the advantage of the Spiritual Cause and it will surely be for the advantage of us as individuals as well. Let us get three thousand members and it will be a simple thing to build the grandest camp that has ever stood in the name of Spiritualism.

If you want to have the privilege of hearing the best lecturers, the best test mediums and the best music the world affords, at the least individual expense, join this movement and help make it possible.

Let us organize and solemnly pledge ourselves to give time and money, (as far as possible) to further the objects of the organization and help make a grand camp center that shall send out a wave of progressive thought that may be felt all over the world.

This is an age of improvement and progress; we must keep step with other organizations; and above all, let us cultivate a spirit of harmony, cleansing our hearts of all selfish motives and instead of working for personal gain and self-aggrandizement, let us have courage and enthusiasm; as Scarboro says, "If you don't feel enthusiastic, get out and run up against some fellow that does." Enthusiasm is contagious and if we have not got it, let's try to "catch it."

This movement, in common with all other enterprises, would be of benefit to the business interests of the State. Chicago being the greatest railroad center in America, makes it more suitable than any other location for an enterprise of this nature. People come to Chicago from all parts of the world, on both business and pleasure, and those interested in Spiritualism would combine the two by spending their vacation at the camp and accomplishing their trading or whatever business might call them to our city at the same time.

Dear readers, will you help in this grand undertaking? Will you each consider yourself a committee of one to talk the matter up, and try and arouse an interest in your fellow Spiritualists? The writer will be glad to hear from all who are interested and are willing to help organize an Association for the purpose of securing a Spiritualists' Camp in this State. Send the address of those you consider suitable for the first committee of twenty-five to organize and oblige.

ALEX. CAIRD, M. D.

598 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

A Suggestion.

Were half the power, that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals nor forts:

The warrior's name would be a name abhorred!
And every nation, that should lift again
Its hand against a brother, on its forehead
Would wear for evermore the curse of Cain.

—Longfellow.

Let It Pass.

Has it been a weary day?
Let it pass;
Lots of others on the way—
They will pass.
Soon the stars will start to lighten,
All around begin to brighten,
And misfortunes cease to frighten—
Let it pass.

Does the world the wrong way rub
you—
Let it pass;
Did your best friend seem to snub
you?
Let it pass.
Chances are you were mistaken,
None is ever quite forsaken,
All for naught your faith was shaken,
Let it pass.

SPIRITUAL TEACHINGS.

Internal Cosmic Operations and External Effects.

We who were spirits in the upper worlds when this Earth was young, come in this epoch of great spiritual inductions of wisdom and force, as vibratory connections with spiritually attuned mortal minds afford us the privilege of bringing some of the eternal truths of universal operations before the councils of our brothers on Earth.

For ages upon ages, we have closely observed all internal cosmic operations for external effects. We know and affirm that the essence of the cosmos consists of seeds and germs; that the cosmic spirit is cosmical electricity in its blended negative and positive qualities, and, in a sense, it is life; yet is the life fluid proper, a vital compound of all the essence of cosmic substance, differing in refinement from plane to plane of progressive life.

We have witnessed and closely studied the eternal evolutionary processes as a whole, also the numerous separate processes which constitute the referred-to whole eternity, or eternal federation of world systems, supremely ruled under the one mind or head, commonly called GOD, but presided over by the separate creative compacts of the brightest and most powerful Angels.

It is a truth as eternal as the All-Power from which all power flows, that such Masters of universal wisdom and creative skill, are supremely required to draw mathematical drafts of such great works and enumerate all the crude substances they wish to evolve by virtue of correlative inductions of that which is refined, and in its degree of refinement calls for the action of the universal spirit of each degree, to incite life, cause action and govern pursuits. This is supplemented by the quickening, evolving and sustaining power incorporated in the central dynamo or sun, of such world system, together with its auxiliaries, which aids and forces are supremely granted and supplied from the universal store for all such processes.

These truths are hard for mortal students to grasp and comprehend rightly, owing to their mental limitations which prohibit the full discovery of eternal facts as demonstrated in visible nature.

The geological students find, that this Earth has existed millions of years, but they do not discover that many separate processes have been launched and worked out to purposed consummations during these world ages. They have but a faint historic or other knowledge of Earth nations that flourished under former creative processes.

True, remnants of attained mental power and mastery of nature's secrets and principles of such older nations remain, yet nothing of worth is ever carried over clearly for those who come after them and are rated under a new creative pro presided over by different creative Masters. All such referred-to processes and beginnings are alike crude from necessity, because only thus the crude or raw cosmical materials can be worked up and refined in compliance with nature's statutes. All evolutionary gradations are marked by vibratory differentiations in which all force activities are included. The enlargement of vibratory circuits and reciprocal activities with that which is higher, as substance, force and mind, marks the progress made.

In all these separate creative processes, prolonged preparatory operations are necessary. It is marvelous to behold by what stress nature's crude substances are refined in her chemical and electrical crucibles to a fitness for form life to be called forth and maintained. Form life becomes a powerful aid to draw in crude substances to be thereby, jointly with nature's processes, refined from grade to grade into spiritual substance. Here we would say, that although man as a mortal has such a beginning and ending mortally, his inborn divinity, or say we, the eternal soul germ incorporated in man mortal, survives physcial death, is by that process released from its house of clay and progresses on and on until fully individualized and tangible angelhood is attained, thenceforward to enjoy life and the fruits of his labors forever, as these worlds upon worlds with their great and matchless populations of purified beings testify.

It is a recorded truth that whenever, in the evolutionary processes of any creative plan, a specified number of humanity's students have reached that state of unfolded consciousness that they can receive intuitively the truths of life and its import in a collective and specific sense and penetrate the secrets of nature and of electricities, their use and power, it is held as a sign that such a creative process has almost run its course; that all incorporated substances in such draft have been evolved and brought into such legitimate uses as that draft provided for. This does not mean the end of the world as commonly held, because other processes are worked up for new beginnings. These pursuits and labors follow each other eternally, but portions of the known geographical world are always destroyed at such a terminus. The new processes make this necessary, but all processes finished on Earth so to say, continue forever in their onward careers as all before them continue, as world systems and eternal world powers of the great eternal world confederacy.

We are pleased to behold that the present large human family has arisen in unfolded consciousness to a state where they realize the need of human brotherhood and a great confederated world power. As it is above, so it must be below, is an eternal verity.

If our efforts prove a help to Earth's students who delve deeply into nature's secrets of the co-ordained so-called psychic and material unities of activities for grand results, to press on and grasp the trophies of their search, it will be gratefully noted.

MRS. M. KLEIN.

Van Wert, O.

I belong to the great church that holds the world within its starlit aisles; that claims the great and good of every race and clime; that finds with joy the grain of gold in every creed, and floods with light and love the germs of good in every soul.—Ingersoll.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

Invocation of Spirits.

Many Distinguished Converts to the Occult Science in Italy—Princess D'Antuni Is One—Her Powers of Clairvoyance Declared to Be Wonderful—Has Numerous Followers—All set forth in The Chicago Daily News.

Rome, Italy.—Generally speaking, the majority of Italians are prejudiced against Spiritualism, which is confused with magic and kindred occult practices, and hence avoided because condemned by the church. However, of late years there has been a revival in the study of the occult; but more as a pastime than as a science.

Among the middle classes table-turning and the invocation of spirits have had considerable vogue and in many towns and cities coteries of devoted adherents, instead of the usual evening game of cards, dabble in Spiritualism and wax enthusiastic over the results obtained. Gradually societies of psychical research have been formed in the more important centers. A new trade, that of professed mediums, has sprung up.

Unfortunately, it often happens that these mediums are caught "faking." For instance, at a certain seance, when materializing phenomena of a wonderful character were supposed to have been obtained and the spirit of an illustrious historical personage had brushed his bushy beard against the cheeks of the astonished and frightened devotees present, the lights were suddenly turned on and the medium was discovered holding a false beard at arm's length. His attempt to hide it proved fruitless. Such discoveries have been frequent and have contributed to discredit Spiritualism and to lessen considerably the reputation of Italian mediums.

Still the students of psychology are not discouraged. Now and again one hears of the conversion to Spiritualism of some man of note. The late Dr. Lapponi, the pope's physician, wrote a book on the subject, in which he attempted to reconcile Spiritualistic practices with the church's condemnation. Then followed Prof. Lombroso, the noted allienist, who has become a convinced Spiritualist, and quite recently Sig. Marconi, the inventor.

Princess d'Antuni.

It has only been lately that Roman society has evinced an interest in Spiritualism, which has become a genuine fad. The leader in this movement has been the Princess Elika d'Antuni, one of the women of the royal court and a leader in Roman society. The princess is of Polish origin, her grandfather being the celebrated Gen. Grabinski, who fought under Napoleon I., and was rewarded for his services by the grant of a title and an estate in Bologna. Her husband, the Prince Ferdinando d'Antuni, the only son of the Prince del Drago, and the sister of Queen Maria Isabella of Spain, belonged to one of the most noble and richest families in Rome.

Nine months ago the princess was a light-hearted devotee of fashion, with a devoted husband and stepchildren who loved her as if she were their own mother. Nothing marred her happy life, when suddenly a great sadness seemed to oppress and drag her down. She felt in some mysterious and inexplicable way that a great calamity was going to happen. In fact, when her husband was taken ill with a slight cold she immediately said: "I feel that he is going to die," and predicted the day and hour of his death. Within a few hours of her husband's death, which verified her prediction, she was in communication with his spirit, and she has been guided by him ever since.

Predicts Deaths.

The experiences of the princess are wonderful to relate, and would fill a volume. She predicted the deaths of several friends of hers. Her spiritual guide, Artaxis, who is supposed to have been a Roman high priest under Nero, and whose soul had been reincarnated in her late husband, has materialized in her presence on several occasions. Quite lately the spirit of a young girl, the daughter of Princess Massimo, an intimate friend of Princess d'Antuni, materialized in the presence of two noble ladies. The mother refused to believe that the apparition was that of her daughter, whereupon the spirit disappeared and returned after a while bearing a withered flower. The mother recognized it at once as one which she had placed herself on her daughter's body at the time of the burial four years before, and when the body was exhumed the day after this event the flower was missing.

Message in Sanskrit.

D'Antuni's powers are wonderful. She receives messages in Sanskrit and other ancient languages which she deciphers with the utmost facility. She has developed a remarkable power of clairvoyance and can predict any future event. She claims she communicated with the spirits on the planets and from them learned the whole planetary system is inhabited. It has been asserted that very often she receives a letter by simply holding it in her hands unopened she can repeat its contents word for word.

The princess is slight and not very tall. Her face is one of great delicacy and classic beauty. Her Spiritualistic studies have cast a shade of melancholy over it, but when she talks about her experiences, speaking English fluently without the slightest trace of foreign accent, the shade of sadness disappears, her eyes sparkle, her face lights up and she recounts marvelous happenings as if they were everyday occurrences, often smiling at the astonishment of her listeners. Her complexion is creamy and rendered more so by her hair, which has a tint of gold. The princess is still in mourning for her husband's death, and while the mourning lasts (two years) she will not consent to be photographed. The accompanying picture was taken five years ago.

Distinguished Converts.

Many ladies of social prominence in Italy, nearly all the friends of the princess, are Spiritualists. Princess Dorin, Princess Boncompagni, Princess Massimo, Marchioness Roseberg, an Englishwoman by birth, and Countess Brenda are the most prominent. There are many members of the diplomatic body who have become converts to Spiritualism. Among them is Henry White, the American Ambassador and M. Pioda, the Swiss minister. The foreign colony is following the fad of the Roman aristocracy and a prominent Russian sculptor has lately, it is reported, succeeded in "photographing" several Spiritualistic manifestations of a wonderful character. It is said that this gentleman photographed several spirits of Roman emperors and that the likenesses he obtained tally with ancient marble busts in the Capitol museum.

RAPINET MACKENZIE.

SERIOUS QUESTION.

Where Shall I be Found When the Transition Called Death Occurs.

This is certainly a question which demands an immediate and decisive answer from every mortal unmindful of conditions.

In those days of business excitement and worldly attractions, we are not unlike unto a man traveling in a fast express to a known destination, but becoming so interested in the little incidents of the travel as to lose sight of the main object of his journey.

Possibly some have not received conclusive testimony of the reality of immortality, and, in consequence, continue an aimless roving career which knows no goal. But while it may not be possible to immediately reach such sufferers, and supply the evidence so sorely needed, they must know, if they reason at all, that the Creator of the Universe could scarcely have undertaken the very irksome and tedious task of building up the various kingdoms (mineral, vegetable and animal) merely in order that the John of the present age shall be off snugly in his office concocting schemes at to the next financial move to make upon the Bourse, or that Mary Ann should ride about in her automobile and by way of variety, visit a dry goods store to keep the clerks there awake.

My dear reader of this article, this question of immortality is no idle speculation. It is a veritable reality, and sad indeed, is the knowledge of the fact that such a truth, so seriously needed those days of general disbelief, should be so often found adulterated with spurious articles as to twist out of recognition. But the truth is mighty and shall ultimately prevail!

Then what shall be our condition when this transition takes place? Do we expect to lose our identity by the mere shedding of this outer garb of flesh? Then are we prepared for the change?

The Christian depends upon the efficacy of another's acts to supply the wants of his manhood, and the Spiritualist, who professes to know better than his Christian brother, contents himself with the hope of the conscious knowledge of the spirit state to furnish all his needs. But where is the creed to be found which is fully alive to the significance of present opportunities? We appear to be entirely unconscious of the fact that the progress made here in the development of reason and the building of character, holds good in the spirit sphere. At least, we do not seem to realize the fact that if we are vain, selfish, deceitful and ignorant now, we will be so then. Fine garments and the pageantry of earthly splendor count for naught there. Every man and woman shall stand solely upon their individual merits. What then shall we have to recommend us when stripped of outer appearance?

My dear brother and sister, the answer to these questions may be put off, but the issue cannot be evaded. The neglect of to-day can never be made good to-morrow. Time means everything. Let us then commence at once to cultivate those talents which alone can stand by us when brought before the judgment seat of our own souls which registers without failure the acts of our careers, and is the book of life which knows no error.

May the infinite source of all good gifts help us to realize the significance of this truth, and while remembering that bitterness is the common characteristic of unripeness, the beautiful fragrance of the flower never fails to disclose its unfolded condition.

FRED K. DAGGAN.

New York City, N. Y.

Speak the Word of Cheer.

There is health and wealth in a cheering word,
And a fortune fair in a sunny smile.
There is truth and youth in the glad tones heard.
And a courage brave, that is worth the while.

In the strife of life, with its stress and strain,
With the cares that cumber, and claim our time,
Through the sin and din, through the shadowed pain,
Speak the word of cheer, that shall heal like wine.

In the cheer that's near, there's a golden grace,
That may save some soul from deep despair,
For a word oft heard, has a special place,
And a power to guide in ways most fair.

ELLA DARE.

One solitary philosopher may be great, virtuous and happy in the midst of poverty, but not a whole nation.—Isaac Iselin.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is last year's nest from which the bird has flown.—H. W. Beecher.

Drinking water neither makes a man sick nor in debt nor his wife a widow.—John Neal.

Is the Dog Immortal?

An Earnest and Comprehensive Plea in Behalf of this Animal.

The recent agitation that has been stirred up by anti-vivisectionists in Chicago and elsewhere [says the Inter Ocean] when publicity was given to some experiments conducted here with rats which seemed unnecessarily cruel, has started anew the discussion as to whether animals, particularly dogs, possess souls. E. D. Buckner, A. M., M. D., Ph. D., of Chicsago in a logically written article declares his belief in the immortality of the dog and contends that traces of such a belief can be found in the earliest history of mankind.

"The question, Are animals immortal? is as old as the question, Is man immortal?" says Dr. E. D. Buckner. "Traces of a belief in both can be found in the very earliest history of mankind. Man being especially interested in the perpetuation of his own existence, has almost lost sight of the fact that lower animals have the same assurance of immortality and is supported by the same logical reasons.

"When we deal in historical and scientific facts it is not a question of what our preconceived opinions may be, or what we may prefer to believe, but what is the evidence for such belief?

"Does natural and revealed theology afford sufficient evidence to warrant the belief that the destruction of the body is not the destruction of the vital essence that gives it life?

"Since the dawn of civilization man has believed himself to be immortal, and we will concede that he is without an argument.

"What I contend for is that the same analogy of logic that can be adduced to prove the immortality of man will apply equally to lower animals.

Possess Dual Beings.

"That man and lower animals are dual beings, possessing a double organism, the one structure being corporal, visible, and tangible, the other incorporal, invisible, and intangible, is an assumption that cannot be disproved. Man, besides being man, in a zoological sense, is an animal. Matter and mind exist in both, and though there may be a difference in degree there is no difference in kind. In proportion as the functions or relations are more or less perfect, man and lower animals ascend and descend in the scale of existence, but mind and matter exist in all alike. Modern scientists advocate the theory that all the germs of the moral and mental faculties of man are contained in the lower animals, and that the vital force, which theologians call soul, is as much a part of lower animals as of man. All were created from the same chemical elements, received the same kind of breath of life, and are governed by the same physical and mental laws. When the gross matter, called body, is freed from the life essence the laws of chemistry, hitherto held in subjection by a superior control, assert their authority, and the whole visible system falls a prey to corruption and decay. This is the final result of all living beings. But what becomes of that life essence?

"Modern theology teaches that in the case of man, the life potency does not decay with the body, but finding that the body is no longer a suitable residence, it assumes new functions that are governed by the immaterial universe, and is conveyed to some future place of perpetual existence. Now, if this is the destiny of man, what becomes of that mysterious life potency of an animal at the dissolution of the body? There is that same visible difference between mind and matter in lower animals as there is in man. Scientists agree that force is an immortal essence, and forms a substantial entity which is indestructible. Everything which is immaterial forms an attribute of God, and must be immortal. Force is an immaterial principle, and, consequently, vital force, mental force, and all other faculties of the mind, must be immortal and belong to animal life. Force is the propelling power of the soul life. It is manifested by the diyine will, consequently, no living being without the aid of some vital force superior to chemical and mechanical force can live. Vital force constitutes the phenomena of life, and is entirely distinct from the lifeless matter which is devoid of any motion or force, except as applied to it from external causes. The life essence which thinks, moves, and controls the body is the essential properties of what theologians call the soul, and is that God-given principle to all living beings, and includes the capacity for an endless duration of existence. Nothing, therefore, can possibly preclude the soul life of animals from the perpetual state to come but a fundamental destruction, for they must continue through all revolutions of future ages, unless the Creator who made them shall see fit to doom them to an eternal annihilation.

Power of the Creator.

"It is true he could annihilate any or all of his creatures just as easily as he created them. Certainly, to reduce any substance into nothing requires the same power as to convert nothing into something.

"Man and lower animals are not immortal from choice, or any knowledge they may have of the fact, but because the beneficent Being who created them has willed to uphold them in an eternal existence.

"The greatest philosopher and the most degraded heathen, the brightest intellect and the most repulsive idol, the most intelligent animal of the highest species, and the most inert of the lowest species, have an equal chance for eternal life. Theology teaches that heathen, idiots, and children are saved by reason of the fact that in them the purposes of God have never been fulfilled, and the responsibility for action never reached. This will apply equally as well to lower animals.

"In either case, if the mind ever becomes sufficiently developed to enjoy a future existence, it must undergo a spiritual growth in the future life. In the highest attainments of man there is still an undeveloped capacity that would make him an infant as compared with the heavenly hierarchy.

"Therefore, it is reasonable to conclude that all beings are in an embryonic condition and require another life to complete their permanent existence. As there is no waste in nature, and all beings are endowed with certain abilities and capacities for life and happiness, if by any cause such endowment cannot be realized in this life, then there must be a future state in order that the purposes of God may be fulfilled.

"When God created lower animals and man and pronounced them 'very good,' it is obvious he was looking through and beyond the intermediate state, to the ultimate purposes of creation in the final redemption of all created beings. Is it in accordance with what we see and know of the nature of God to suppose he would give to some of his innocent creatures eternal life and doom others to an eternal annihilation when, as Solomon says, 'They have all one breath, so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast?'

"We perceive the diversified operations of the soul life in man and in lower animals and call this energy by different names, according to different manifestations. When inferring truth from truth, it is called understanding; when tracing a cause to an effect, it is reason; when contemplating the future, imagination; when reviewing the past, memory; when choosing or refusing, will; and when spontaneous, instinct. As all refer to the phenomena of vital action, it must be true that the life potency, or soul, has many faculties, and equally true that there is not a living being deprived of them all. While the intellectual faculties of man are superior to lower animals in most respects, yet that portion of the nervous system distributed to the organs of sense is superior in lower animals. They surpass man in acuteness of sight, sound, and scent—three out of the five senses. The faculty called instinct is far stronger in lower animals than man, and forms one of the chief arguments for their immortality. It is knowledge from God, directly imparted to animals, not once, but continually; and we do not know where it begins nor where it ends. The Creator deals more directly with the creature under the law governing instinct than any known law in the great cosmos. It is so closely interwoven with all the phenomena we see and know around us that if it is not an immortal attribute of God, we know of nothing that is.

"It is the very highest attribute of the soul life, and man who would deny that it is immortal could, with the same consistency, deny that the omniscience, omnipotence, or any other attribute of God, is immortal. The word is not found in the Bible, and was invented by man to explain the intelligent acts of animals, but the manifestations of mind and instinct cannot be divided by some unknown and uncertain mystical line. If an animal moves itself, it does so for some reason, and with respect to some end, and does so, not only by its own reason, but by reason imparted by signs or words from others. A lifeless body, or matter alone, could not do this. It is the immortal essence, or soul life, which interprets the sense of such signs and words. An animal is conscious of its own identity as it can think, hear, see, and will.

Conception of the Senses.

"Without consciousness the outward world would have no meaning and an animal could have no conception of the senses.

"Mind and matter would be one and the same. Animals could not be domesticated and educated without a will to direct them in matters of right and wrong. To be governed by reason or abstract ideas, in some degree, is a general law imposed by the Creator upon all animals.

"Though mind may be considered as manifesting itself through a series of material organs, yet it is totally unlike any of those principles or functions that are termed material, and in fundamental contrast to them. When a man communicates his ideas to an animal it must be through a spiritual medium, for a material substance, such as the body would be without this soul-life, could not hold communication.

"Comparative psychology is opening up a wonderful field for scientific research, and we are learning to know God's purposes through nature as well as revelations. As all animal life is formed upon one common general law, it shows conclusively that if man is a dual being, composed of matter and mind, or body and soul, so are all other created beings.

"Natural theology fully sustains the theory of universal brotherhood of all God's creatures, and revealed theology makes it the more certain. When the Bible is properly translated and interpreted, there is not a passage but what gives lower animals as much assurance of immortality as man. In every passage of scripture where the Hebrew word for the soul, nephesh, and the Greek word, psyche, are used in reference to animals, it gives them souls the same as man. I could give a long list of great theologians who frankly admit the correctness of such interpretation. It is no longer a secret that the translators of the Bible, through indifference and prejudice, failed to give poor fallen animals the benefit of a true rendering of many words. But enough is properly translated to show that 'The tender mercy of God is over all his works. * * * In whose hand is the soul of everything. * * * He preserveth man and beast.'

Isaiah's Future Paradise.

"The inspired writer Isaiah portrays a future paradise for animals analogous to the Garden of Eden before the fall.

"St. John, in Revelations, gives us to understand that there are thousands of animals in heaven. St. Peter says that through Christ there shall be a 'restitution of all things.' St. Paul in the eighth chapter of Romans makes a statement which has been interpreted by some of the best theological scholars the world has ever produced to mean that animals suffered equally with man in the fall and will be restored through the redemption made by Christ. A grand thought, that, 'In the fullness of time God might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth. * * * For the earnest expectation of the creature (animals) waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. * * * For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.'"

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. Price, 25 cents.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Forces." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable, for health. Price, 25 cents.

An Autobiography

Of One of the Most Remarkable Women of the Present Age, Victoria Claflin Woodhull.

Sitting here to-day in this north room of 17, Hyde Park Gate, London—dreary, smoky, foggy, insulated as you are in customs and prejudices of centuries—I am thinking, with all the bitterness of my woman's nature, how my life has been warped and twisted out of shape in this environment, until, as I catch a glimpse of my haggard face in the mirror opposite, I wonder whether I shall be able to pen the history of this turbulent existence.

When I first saw the light of day on this planet, it seemed as if I had been rudely awakened from a death-like sleep. How well I remember the conversation between the doctor and my father as they handed me over to the nurse. I remember looking back at my mother's face at that moment, the look of pain and anguish on it was burnt into my plastic brain, and often during my young babyhood I would watch as she suckled me. Somehow she was impelled to talk to me, not as a child, but as her own heart, pouring out all her woman's desires, and bemoaning her failures. I remember well how the silent prayers, when her lips were moving, would stir my heart; and as I look back over the years from childhood to maturity, I realize that there was some subtle power of transmutation at work, for somehow, from the very first moment, I seemed to know all the future without being able to give any expression in words. As I review now that strange childhood, I understand the alchemical transmutation of nature's forces as no ordinary study of books could have imparted. I know that my companions from the moment of birth were Heaven's choicest souls. They talked to me, they watched over me. I grew side by side with them, in fact all the education and inspiration came over them. I knew what fears and hopes agitated my parents, and often felt that, if I could convey to them my love, it would lift the veil obscuring the future from their gaze.

When I was one year old, my mother decided that the time had come to wean me from her breast. She told my father that if I could be made to understand that it was her wish, she felt sure I would never touch her breast again. I heard and understood all this, but could not reply. That night, in putting me to sleep, she put on the nipple some distasteful drug, and then attempted to make me take the nipple in my mouth, which course of action hurt my tender heart so much so that I could scarcely overcome the repugnance, and at this moment the scene is vividly before me. In after years, when I could talk with my parents, I told them how my soul resented such treatment, and I can hear my mother laugh now as she called me her little old baby. When I was two years and half old, a young woman who used to come to our house and nurse me suddenly died. At the moment of death she came and took me in her arms, and we floated through space, seeing scenes of wondrous beauty, and she impressed on my mind what part I could play in the world's history. At five years a scourge of scarlet fever swept over the village where we lived, and I was the only child left. I remember every incident of that dreadful plague, how I aided those who nursed to overcome the deadly blight, when, at the crucial moment, two women came to my mother about me, and, stepping into the room where I was lying, they went to the window, and were in the act of raising it, saying to my mother, "Give the child air, she can't live anyhow." My mother sprang up from my cradle, and said, "There is plenty of air outdoors for you, my child has told me she will not die now." When I had recovered and was able to sit up, the doctor said, whispering to my mother, "When I come to-morrow I must lance her neck, which is swollen twice its natural size; she must not know of it till all is over." When he came, I told him what he wished to do was right, and that he need have no fear of me. I turned my neck in the right direction, and he lanced it with all safety, hugging me to his breast, saying, "You are too old for your age."

During those years of childhood, I was my father's constant companion. He would consult me about things over which he was perplexed, and often would say, "Which shall I do—this or that?" I somehow knew just what he wanted. When six years old, my father was called away from home suddenly. He had arranged with the man who served us, to bring to our door a load of wood, but a dreadful storm set in and the roads were impassible. My mother, fearing lest we should freeze to death, in the deepest agony gathered us together, and with all the intense desire born of love for her children, she poured forth a prayer for immediate relief. The words are ringing in my ears now, as full of love as when she, whose body lies in Highgate, silent as the dead alone are, uttered them, "O merciful Father, send relief or we perish." At that moment I heard a sound as if someone was throwing logs of wood down, and going to the window, sure enough, in answer to a prayer, a man was unloading. My mother asked how he came, for the roads were impassible, but he only said, "I was ordered to do so," and whilst we were looking at him, horses, wagon, man all vanished, leaving the wood to tell its own story.

I remember one night when all was silent, the great old-fashioned fireplace was sending out over the room in which we, my sisters and I, were sleeping, a shadowy light, suddenly I saw an enormous black and white dog enter the room and, walking to the fireplace, disappear, whilst I lay there wondering what it all meant. I was conscious of the presence of some living being near me. In a moment a tall, dark man said: "Come with me." We seemed to walk out into the open air. When I looked up at his face it was radiant with divine wisdom. He told me I should play a part in ushering in the new order of things, which would be understood and acted upon before the close of the nineteenth century. At that moment I saw people ascending and descending, apparently walking with all the ease with which we now walk on this earth. He told me this could and would be accomplished through the concentration of will power becoming a scientific truth, which those capable of understanding and applying would act on, and they in turn would stimulate those minds into activity, who, wishing to solve the problem of life, needed only to be shown the way, and he said that that was the door which, when once opened, could never be closed again, spoken of in the book called the Bible. He told me that when this power was understood by the very few, the forces at work throughout nature to develop her hidden secrets would become a fascinating study, while when once a page of the book of life was read, the book could never be closed or discarded until the whole mystery were elucidated, and, said he, this is a part of your work in which you will be guided and instructed, and you shall demonstrate to the world what was meant by the statement we should then see God face to face, when the veil of ignorance is rent asunder, and desire has sprung into life within our hearts as a living fire which nothing can quench until the veil which hides the future from our view disappears.

One day a little girl who lived near us, in fact their house was by the river bank—swallowed a kernel of corn, and it got into her windpipe and choked her to death. She had been playing in our garden that day. I remember the woful feeling of sadness that came over me, as I stood on the bridge looking down into the room where this child lay dead, when I felt the presence of a hand, and there at my side stood a woman dressed in white, who said, "Come," and she led me round the house, I knew instinctively it was the dead child's mother, and when I came running home, one of my sisters said, "Who was the lady whom you went with to see the dead child?" I said, "Her mamma." When my mother saw the look of astonishment on my sister's face, she said to her, "I, too, saw who it was."

Just before the fatal illness of baby sister Odessa, I was sitting where she lay in her cradle, when I saw a white form coming flitting towards her. She looked up and commenced crowing and smiling. She died within a fortnight.

Palmistry.—When I was five years old, an old seer who used to come and see my father occasionally, one day called me to him, and said: "One day you will be a public speaker, and your first effort will be made at Washington. When you are forty years old your name will have been published in every language on this planet. You will cross the ocean and spend a number of years abroad. When you return to your native country, you will become ruler of your people."

When I was in my tenth year, two younger sisters were both stricken down with measles. One day I was left alone with them kneeling by their cradle rocking them. I was watching their faces which were scarlet with fever, suddenly I was gently pushed over, and two angels hovered over the cradle fanning them with their hands. When my mother came into the room she found me in a deep trance, and both sisters were healed; the fever had vanished. I told my mother what had happened. In truth I was never quite alone, I always felt the presence of invisible forces near me. The love of study which I early exhibited gave my father intense pleasure, and when he would wish to aid me, I would say: "No, dear father, I have those teaching me who are invisible to you," and then he would talk to me about complex law matters, telling me his hopes or fears of this and that case, always counselling me. When he was returning home after some law business, I was always the first to meet him, and find out whether victory or defeat had been the result of his labors.

One evening when we were all gathered around the old fireplace, where the crane was always ready to hang the kettle. It was our evening prayer. My mother was commending her little flock to the divine care of Him whose watchful eyes are always on us, when I heard the door open, and on looking up, there standing in the midst of us was a tall man with a red silk handkerchief over his face. I looked at his feet, and there was a cloven foot. Before I could open my lips it vanished. Everyone felt something horrible, but I alone said what or who it was.

My mother was taking me with her one evening to class meeting when I said, "Mamma, stop to hear voices." I clasped her tightly to show her she must not make a noise. When a few steps further on we distinctly heard two men talking. I was compelled to listen. Then my mother and I heard a plot to enter our house on that very night to rob my father, and, if necessary, to kill him. Had I not paid attention to the voices of the air, certainly he would have suffered. These men came about two o'clock at night, but finding the house all alight, did not dare to come further.

I was spending a short time in Indianapolis, Indiana, just after my infant son's recovery. When sitting in the parlor of the house which we occupied, I had this baby boy on my lap; every person had gone, and I was entirely alone. My thoughts were on this child's miraculous restoration, when I felt a wave of air sweep over me, soft and tranquil as if fresh from the flowers culled in Paradise. On looking up I beheld standing in the doorway the form of Jesus. I seemed to know instantly who it was, His arms outstretched showing me his hands and feet. I saw the scars of His crucifixion. There was a light blue scarf around Him, and the form was visible several minutes. My whole future was foreshadowed and I saw the visions of my childhood realized.

During the summer of 1875, we were living in East 50th Street, just opposite the great Cathedral, when one day an old sage came to see me, and asking for pen, sat down and wrote this message: "You will finish a long lecture tour on which you are starting, and when you return to New York, circumstances will so shape themselves that you will start for Europe and remain a certain number of years, which is a necessary part of your education, which you will need later on in life, when you will be in a position of trust and dignity." I asked him how long I should remain abroad, he said "Twelve years before you return; but both sides of the water will be as one home thereafter."

During the early part of my public career, I found myself afflicted by what the doctor whom I consulted was pleased to call sciatica; there were times when the pain was simply unendurable; one day, I remember it well, I was on the point of sending a telegram to my agent saying it would be impossible to fill my engagement to lecture next night. I took up my pen to write when, instead of the words I had in my mind, this message was written "go to your bedroom undress and lie down, allow no one to disturb you for two hours and we will cure you, and you will be able to fulfill your engagement to-morrow night." I rang the bell, gave orders I was not to be disturbed and did as directed, and when I was quite ready, wondering what was going to happen, I suddenly felt a drowsy feeling and seemed to be under some spell. I could not move or speak. I know that three men had entered the room and stood looking at me, when suddenly I felt a desire to look at my body. The three doctors were taking my leg apart; I saw them take piece after piece and lay them down and saw distinctly that they were scraping the bone; when they seemed satisfied with my leg and what they had done they put it all together again, and one turned to me and said you will never suffer again from that limb, and then I saw them looking at me with faces beaming with love, and knew they were going away—when I awakened from that stupor I felt as well as ever I did in my life, and never since, during all these years, have I had a recurrence of pain in that part of my body.

The Folsom-Stewart Defeat.

Josie K. Folsom in her pamphlet says: "Down your Bible! your prayers! your creeds! Away with your Gods!"—How the poor lady was turned down by the Judge—An explanatory letter from Paul McArthur, President of the Missouri State Association of Spiritualists.

To the Editor: I have just received the following letter from our lawyer which explains itself:

(Copy)

Paul McArthur, Dear Sir: I have just received word that Judge Taylor has handed down his decision in the matter of the Society of Scientific and Religious Truthseekers, in which he denies their petition for pro forma decree. This settles the matters, and there is no appeal.

Yours very truly,
MARTIN A. SEWARD,
Attorney.

For the benefit of your readers, and also for the benefit of some Spiritualists who have not yet woke up, and who still believe that Josie K. and C. W. Stewart are a much abused pair, I will review briefly some of the most important features of the evidence brought out at the rehearing. I want to especially call to the attention of the sleepy, the declaration of Josie K. Folsom-Stewart on Spiritualists and Spiritualism UNDER OATH ON THE WITNESS STAND.

I want also to call attention to the fact, that although the State Association had witnesses present to testify, yet at the conclusion of the examination of the Stewart-Folsom crowd with THEIR exhibits, we rested our case on THEIR evidence. Our reasons will become apparent as we proceed.

When Miss Phoebe Wolf, treasurer of the society, was placed on the stand, she was handed during the cross-examination by Judge Taylor two cards on which were gold writing, and asked if she recognized the writing. She said she did, and identified the handwriting as that of one of Mrs. Folsom's spirit band, the one who produced the independent card writing manifestations.

The Judge asked her if she was positive that she was correct in her identification? She said she was. The Judge then told her that the cards identified were the two written by Ella Preston (the former confessed accomplice of Mrs. Folsom) before the N. S. A. Committee, and asked how she accounted for the apparent fact that instead of Miss Preston endeavoring to forge the handwriting of one of Mrs. Folsom's spirit band, the spirit was trying to imitate hers?

She couldn't account for it, but finally suggested that the cards were not those written by Ella Preston before the N. S. A. Committee, but some prepared for the occasion by enemies who were jealous of Mrs. Folsom.

Our lawyer submitted then the written confession of Miss Preston, sworn to by her before a well known lawyer and justice of the peace. The handwriting was identical with that on the cards, and Miss Wolf admitted, but could not account for it. Our lawyer offered to bring the justice of the peace into court to identify the confession, but his offer was not taken up.

Gustave Viernow, another witness, told with pride that he considered himself an expert in legerdemain, as he frequently in his business went behind the scenes in theaters while magicians were doing their stunts, and was on to the tricks of the profession. He told how at one time he had tested the mediumship of Mrs. Folsom. He attended her meeting one Sunday night, having first procured cards from a stationery store similar to those used by Josie K. When a request was made for a person from the audience to hold the cards on which the spirit messages were to be produced, he responded. A pack of cards were handed him to examine. When called upon to return them, he switched packs (so he stated) and gave his own cards. The messages were received (so he claimed) on these cards.

On cross-examination he was asked: "If you could switch a pack of cards on the medium and the audience, what would prevent her from doing likewise, and how do you know that she did not?" But he wouldn't have it that way; that was impossible.

One of the strong points the Stewarts endeavored to make, but failed most dismally, was, that the alleged spirit cards produced as evidence of fraud at the former rehearing and the N. S. A. trial by the State Association witnesses (which were transfers from well known medical ads.), were never produced at the Folsom meetings, but were prepared by evil and jealous minded people in a conspiracy to down that greatest of all mediums, Josie K. Folsom.

In order to show the court the difference between the genuine article and the spurious, two witnesses were brought forth with the real (?) thing. But, alas, "the best laid plans of mice and men!" A Mr. Wilson, optician, was placed on the stand, and asked to identify a gorgeous bunch of yellow flowers painted on a card. He did so, and declared it had been produced through the mediumship of Josie K. for him before a large audience one Sunday night.

Judge Taylor took the card and examined it closely. In the cross-examination he asked Mr. Wilson if since he had received the card he had examined it closely, and was thoroughly satisfied as to its genuineness? He said he had, and was perfectly convinced. The Judge then called his attention to the faint impression of another flower on the back of the card, and asked him if he had ever noticed it? He said he had not, and after examining it, he declared it to be the impression through the card of the flower in front. But Judge Taylor dispelled this illusion for him by having him stick a pin through the flower in front which did not come out anywhere near the flower on the back. "It is evidently not the impression of the flower in front," said the Judge, and the witness reluctantly admitted it.

"Does it not seem to you as an optician, taking away for a moment your faith in Mrs. Folsom, that this impression was caused by the card being carelessly laid upon another which had been painted before this one by some unknown person? Mr. Wilson admitted that it did look that way, and left the stand looking quite crestfallen.

The other card was the transfer (apparently) of a female face touched up with colored crayons, to which the Judge called their attention. Both cards were dismal failures as proof of spirit power along artistic lines; but the finale was the most important feature to organized Spiritualism as tending to show how while whimpering for sympathy among some of the credulous in our ranks and crying persecution, Josie K. and C. W. Stewart really regard our belief.

All the way through the examination of both, they played strongly for orthodox sympathy. Josie K. DECLARED:

"THAT SHE WANTED TO GET AWAY FROM SPIRITUALISTS AND SPIRITUALISM, BECAUSE THEY REJECTED THE BIBLE AND WERE A LOT OF ATHEISTS AND MATERIALISTS."

She said at one place where she had been engaged as medium, and had taken the bible with her onto the rostrum, that they had wanted her to throw it out of the window, which she refused to do. She said these things had grieved her much, and she wanted to get away from people of that kind. She declared that her teaching was founded on the bible. The Judge asked her how she reconciled that statement with the one she advanced in her pamphlet called, "Godism," in which the declaration is made:

"DOWN WITH YOUR BIBLE, YOUR PRAYERS, YOUR CREEDS! AWAY WITH YOUR GOD!"

This question was a solar plexus.

She finally said that the book was written automatically by her while under spirit influence. "ADMITTING THIS TO BE TRUE," replied the Judge, "YOU WERE NOT UNDER SPIRIT INFLUENCE WHEN YOU HAD THE PAMPHLET PRINTED AND SCATTERED BROADCAST."

"Is it possible, Mrs. Folsom," he said, after a painful silence, "that you have experienced a change of heart since the writing of that pamphlet?"

Josie clutched at the suggestion like a drowning man at a straw, and one of her spirit (?) band alas, like the Savior of old, was denied and betrayed. PAUL McARTHUR.

St. Louis, Mo.

HELEN STUART-RICHINGS.

Her Work at Meadville, Pa.

Madam Helen Stuart-Richings delivered her closing lecture on Spiritualism Sunday evening, April 21, in Odd Fellows' temple, Meadville, Pa., when her subject was "The Convent, the Stage and the Platform."

There was a large audience present, [as set forth in the Republican] and the lecture was largely a relation of the speaker's personal experiences, as a girl in a convent, where she received her first Spiritualistic manifestation; later, as an actress on the stage, where those manifestations continued, and still later in her life as a public lecturer in the cause of Spiritualism, to which she was finally converted.

All of Madam Richings' stories were very interesting, and in many parts of her lecture she stood distinctly on the ground of the orthodox church, her one pronounced departure being in her claim of the truth of spiritual communication with this life, and the possession of evidence of the life beyond.

She spoke at some length on hypnotism as a fact in science, and cited having seen as large instruments as hat pins driven through a person's cheek or tongue, under the influence, without drawing blood. She followed by saying that some spirits have the power to hypnotize mortals.

Following a description of some of the manifestations which came to her in her convent life, the speaker related experiences which came in her theatrical experiences which, though determining not to do so, she completely forgot herself in playing a part and imagined herself the character she was acting, playing it with an earnestness which left her completely exhausted at the close.

While playing in Boston she went one evening to hear W. J. Colville speak on Spiritualism. She was deeply impressed, and shortly afterwards he, speaking under spirit control, told her that within a year she would give up the stage to go on the platform for Spiritualism. She said she did not believe it; that the stage paid her dollars where the platform would only bring her pennies—but the spirit knew, and within one year she had done just as she was told she would do.

Referring to independence of action, Madam Richings declared there is no such thing in life. No atom but is dependent on every other atom. There are spirits everywhere; and we are parts of the great infinite whole from which no one part can become separated. There is no such thing as accident; everything happens exactly in accordance with the infinite law, and step by step, hour by hour we are moving on towards that perfection which is the finality.

Following her lecture Mrs. Richings gave some interesting and very remarkable psychic readings, nearly all of which were promptly recognized by some one or more of those present.

"A Conspiracy Against the Republic." By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. A condensed statement of facts concerning the efforts of church leaders to get control of the government. An important work. Paper, 25 cents.

RHEUMATISM

CURED

Through the Feet

New External Remedy Found Which Is Curing Thousands. A Postal Brings Anyone

A $1 PAIR FREE TO TRY.

If you have rheumatism, write to-day for a pair of Magic Foot Drafts—to try Free. They're curing many of the toughest old cases on record, and all the earlier stages.

Magic Foot Drafts cured J. Wesley Bennett, Indianapolis, Ind., after 25 years suffering. Disease hereditary, his brother having died from Rheumatism. Cured two years ago, no return of disease.

Magic Food Drafts cured Miss C. Tena Segoine, Auburn, N. Y., after 10 years suffering and using crutches. Cured two years ago, no return since.

W. F. Bogguss, 326 W. 61st St., Chicago, tried six different physicians and spent six weeks in expensive sanitarium without avail. Cured by Magic Foot Drafts.

Magic Foot Drafts cured me entirely. It is a wonderful thing." Rev. J. Holz, Chicago.

TRADE MARK MAGIC

We have letters from thousands besides these who have been cured by Magic Foot Drafts. Simple and harmless, being worn on the feet as shown above, covering the large foot pores and nerve centers. Try them. If fully satisfied with the benefit received, send us One Dollar. If not we take your word and don't ask you to pay. We trust you. Will you try them? Just send your name and address to the Magic Foot Draft Co., X019 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich. Write to-day.

MONARCH VISIBLE

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Science and a Future Life

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

The Proofs of Life After Death

A Twentieth Century Symposium.

An assembly and collation of letters and expressions from eminent scientists and thinkers of the world, giving the strongest and best reasons known to the world to-day, as substantial evidence of the continued existence of the soul after death. Arranged under the several heads of Science, Psychical Research, Philosophy, Spiritualism. With a special contribution on Immortality, from New Standpoints.

Compiled and edited by Robert J. Thompson, Late Special Envoy of the United States to the President of the French Republic.

A work of especial value, giving the views of a large number of eminent persons. Finely printed and bound. Price $2. For sale at this office.

"THE LIFE BOOKS"

BY RALPH WALDO TRINE.

What All the World's A-Seeking, or The Vital Law of True Life, True Greatness, Power and Happiness. Contents—The Principle; The Application; The Unfoldment; The Awakening; The Incoming; Character Building Thought Power. Price, $1.25.

In Tune with the Infinite. Contents—Prelude; The Supreme Fact of the Universe; The Supreme Fact of Human Life; Fullness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; The Secret, Power and Effects of Love; Wisdom and Interior Illumination; The Realization of Perfect Peace; Coming Into Fullness of Power; Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; How Men Have Become Prophets, Seers, Sages and Saviors; The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion; Entering Now Into the Realization of the Highest Riches. Price $1.25.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. "The moment we fully and vitally realize who and what we are, we then begin to build our own world even as God builds His."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Every Living Creature. "The tender and humane passion in the human heart is too precious a quality to allow it to be hardened or effaced by practices such as we often indulge in."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Character Building Thought Power. "A thought, good or evil, an act, in time a habit, so runs life's law; what you live in your thought world, that, soonest or later, you will find objectified in your life."—From title-page. Price 35 cents.

The Development of the Spirit After Transition. By the late M. Faraday. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. Price, 10 cents.

RADIANT ENERGY and Its Analysis, Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price, cloth, $1.75.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 18, 1907 NO. 912

What Spiritualism Is.

And What It Is Not, as Comprehensively Set Forth by the Lamented Emma Hardinge Britten.

Spiritualism applies in general to the communion of spiritual beings with mortals, but when used in connection with the term "modern" Spiritualism signifies:

The discovery of a mode whereby spirits can and do communicate systematically with earth.

The consensus of the earliest manifestations affirms and proves not only by corroborative intelligence, but also by tests of personal identity, that the communicants are the spirits of the men, women, and children who once lived on earth, and are now in the continuity of life, personal identity, and all that made them individuals, in varied spheres of existence known as spirit land.

These communications, by a great variety of signals, such as sounds, lights, motions, and psychologic influence, inform us of their conditions of life in the spirit spheres (the sum of all being), that they are in varied states of happiness or misery; in exact proportion to the amount of good or evil they have done on earth; that the young, from infants upwards, are taught and trained by good spirits, who, as their fathers and mothers, adopt them, while the vicious and ignorant are unceasingly ministered to until all are stimulated onward to progress, the good to ascend higher, the evil to become good, and ultimately to attain to the highest known condition of angel-hood.

Another branch of spiritual revelation has been to point out that the ancient seer, prophet, or magician, and modern medium, are one and the same in organic nature, and though some ancients, by study, isolation, and special devotion to spiritual powers, may have acquired a wider and more practical knowledge of spiritual potencies than we have, they, like the modern medium, possessed their special gifts as the result only of certain psychological and natural organic qualities, and not by virtue of any special morality, goodness or the favor of the Creator.

Spiritualism teaches that as all human beings are spirits, and the body is only an external mould, in which spirit grows, forms, and becomes individualized, so all power exercised by spirits appertain as much to the human spirit now as they ever will do in the hereafter, and if all mortals cannot and do not exercise these powers it is only on account of their ignorance, the darkness concerning spiritual things in which the world has been kept, and the present incipient and experimental state of the communion between spirits and mortals.

While it is admitted that bad and undeveloped spirits can communicate as readily as the good and true, it is taught by spirits, as well as by reason, that no bad spirit can compel a mortal to do wrong any more than a bad human companion can do so, and that, as the wrongdoer is himself the real actor, so it is subterfuge and an unnatural pretense to allege that evil spirits can influence good men to do wrong, although it is an equally assured fact that good spirits can, and constantly do compel men to forsake their errors and become good.

It is claimed by reasonable mortals as well as taught by spirits, that it is just as natural, as in divine order, for fathers, mothers, children, and friends to communicate with each other, when the one party is on earth and the other in the spirit world, as it was when both parties were on earth; also that the spirits of mortals who have lived a good life, or even simply done their best, are impelled by affection towards those they have left behind to communicate with them. Furthermore, that as they are in a higher and better life, and in most cases have wider vistas of knowledge and wisdom than when on earth, so such communion is not only good, instructive, and natural, but it tends to prove immortality—the existence and nature of spirit, and therefore, inferentially, of GOD THE SPIRIT, besides offering the strongest possible motor power for living a righteous life, and avoiding evil, by proving that heaven and hell are both states resulting inevitably from the good or evil within the soul itself.

The evidence that human spirit-control is true is to be found in its spontaneity, having originated without expectation of, or participation in, its demonstrations by man. Next, in its world-wide appeal to all grades, classes, and countries of earth during the last forty years; in the conviction of a personal, human, spiritual agency, which its manifestations have forced upon millions of minds, including multitudes of the learned, wise, scientific—persons accustomed to take judicial evidence—common-sense people, and even simple children.

The phenomena by which this immense and unprecedented sum of conviction have been wrought have in quite two-thirds of their action been accompanied by such intelligence as could only have originated with the individual spirits claiming to be communicants. Thus names, ages, dates, events, and many secret things known only to the communicating spirits and their friends, have been spelled out by raps or signal motions, written or spoken sometimes automatically by mediums, sometimes by the spirits themselves. Thousands of portraits of deceased persons have been drawn, painted, or photographed, sometimes under magnetic impressions, by mediums, sometimes by spirits. Millions of spirits have been seen and described by stranger mediums and recognized by their friends. The unlearned have been inspired to speak with new tongues, or abnormal powers of eloquence. Healers have been inspired and directed. Spirits have guided, instructed and not infrequently saved their beloved one on earth from danger and mischief by their counsels and advice. They have presented wise and wonderful visions, and in thousands of ways blessed, benefited, and assisted the friends they have left behind.

Though spirits can only directly communicate through any of the modes above named when they can find mediumistic persons who stand related to them as a battery to an operator, it is claimed that every living being, even the lower animals as well as man, are susceptible to spiritual impressions; hence that spirits—whether mortals know it or not—whether repudiated or acknowledged, stand related in their spheres of influence as a soul world to this natural world and therefore that the knowledge of their existence, their communion with earth, the palpable demonstrations they bring of immortality, the supremacyof good, the failure of evil, and the existence of God the spirit constitute the essence of true religion, whilst the subtle laws and forces by which spirits communicate with earth constitute a new, wonderful, and highly momentous, though as yet not understood, phase of science.

From the above statement it may readily be determined what Spiritualism IS NOT. Being a direct revelation from the spiritual spheres of existence, it does NOT originate in any human theories or opinions; nor do its facts bend to any such; unless these theories and opinions correspond to its facts. As its communications and descriptions of the life hereafter proceed wholly from those who are in the actual experience of what they teach, those teachings derive NO authority from books written by men, whether ancient or modern, whether labelled "sacred" or "profane." As a movement founded on facts, corroborated by such testimony as is admitted the world over to represent truth, Spiritualism does NOT need endorsement from, or affiliation with, any sect, society, body of believers, or any dogmatic class of thinkers. Spiritualism is not a religion—it is religion per se.

Spiritualism is not a sect. It has no fixed creed, and is NOT binding upon any human soul that is not convinced of its truth by sufficient evidence. It may be in harmony with one or more religions, sects, or writings, but it derives no authority from them, being an existing independent fact of itself. It may be in harmony with the known laws of science, but it derives no authority from them, claiming to proceed by virtue of spiritual laws, absolute and true, whether man understands them or not.

THE DEVIL FISHING.

Illustrating the Different Kinds of Bait Required to Accomplish Certain Results.

The Devil sat by the river side,
By the Stream of Time, where you'll always find him,
Casting his line in the rushing tide,
And landing the fish on the bank behind him.

He sat at ease in a cozy nook,
And was filling his basket very fast,
While you might have seen that his deadly hook
Was differently baited at every cast.

He caught 'em fast as a man could count;
Little or big, it was all the same.
One bait was a check for a round amount—
An assemblyman nabbed it and out he came.

He took a gem that as Saturn shone;
It sank in the water without a sound,
And caught a woman who long was known
As the best and purest for miles around.

Sometimes he would laugh, and sometimes sing;
For better luck no one could wish,
And he seemed to know to a dead sure thing
The bait that was suited to every fish.

Quoth Satan: "The fishing is rare and fine,"
And he took a drink, somewhat enthused,
And yet a parson swam 'round the line
That e'en the most tempting baits refused.

He tried with his gold and flashing gems,
Hung fame and fortune upon the line;
Dressing gowns with embroidered hems,
But still the Dominie made no sign.

A woman next went on the hook.
"I have him now," quoth the Devil, brightening.
Then Satan's sides with laughter shook
And he landed the preacher as quick as lightning!

—Anon.

AT-ONE-MENT.

Alone with my soul, I am waiting—
Alone! in the stillness of night,
Yet I feel that the Allness is with me,
And fills all my pathway with light.

The peace of my soul is surpassing
The joys of the pleasures of earth,
And I know by the blessings that thrill me,
That my life has passed the new birth.

The pleasure of sense cannot bind me,
They pall on my heart like a blight,
But the oneness with love and with duty
Brings blessings surpassingly bright

Oh, yes, I will walk in this brightness,
This glorious oneness with God,
And scatter on all rays of gladness,
As all who this pathway have trod.

For over the earth's scattered pathways,
Where millions of people have trod,
There are ever through tangle and upland,
Bright pathways that lead unto God.

SARAH STONE ROCKHILL.
Alliance, O.

Communicating With Spirits.

A Trenchant Reply to Violent Attacks Against Spiritualism.

To the Editor, St. Louis Globe Democrat: My attention has been called to an article from the pen of Edward B. Warman, A. M., that appeared in the columns of your most excellent journal in the issue of April 14, 1907, in which the author, posing as a scientist, presumes to settle the question as to the possibility of communicating with the spirits of the departed. The great Arago once said, "Outside of mathematics, science can never speak the word impossible." Prof. Warman evidently is not a scientist in the true sense of the word, or he would never have asserted that spirit communion is an impossibility. It takes an omniscient mind to find the dividing line between the impossible and the possible. Does Mr. Warman possess it? If he can make one, three, and three one, at one and the same time, it may safely be admitted that he is in possession of some sort of power, supernormal or omniscient, with which no other mortal is endowed. But he does not possess this power, the unit remains one and the same forever, absolutely indestructible and indivisible.

Natural law does govern and control everything. The supernatural does not exist. Does Prof. Warman dare assert that the supernormal does not exist? Are there not phenomena, both physical and psychical, that transcend his personal experiences? Witness the marvels wrought by liquid air and radium as evidences of conditions that went far beyond his normal range of vision and experimentation until he made himself familiar with them by means of thoughtful study and painstaking analysis.

Do not psychic phenomena come under the same law? Are they any more marvelous and more "supernatural" than the discoveries made through the medium of the "N" and "X" Rays? They differ in degree—not in kind—for all phenomena are traceable to one and the same source in the last analysis. Intelligence lies behind them all as the causative energy that ushered them into being.

Human history is filled with accounts of psychic phenomena that were no doubt well substantiated at the time they were produced. The Bible from Genesis to Revelation is replete with stories of psychic manifestations. Take them out of the Bible and its value as a text book of religion is destroyed forever, both to Christians and to Spiritualists. The Bible declares in scores of places, that excarnate spirits spoke with their mortal friends. Why should Prof. Warman stretch the parable of the rich man and Lazarus to cover all psychical questions when he knows, if he has kept pace with the Higher Criticism of the Bible, that the resurrection wonder part of that story originated with the imaginative writer of John's Gospel, and had no place in the teachings of the Lord Christ? If the angels came and talked with Jesus, did they not both commune and communicate with him? If they did, has there not been one instance of genuine communication with the so-called dead? If there has been one genuine message received, does it not prove that there is a natural law through whose mediumship other genuine evidences may be received?

"Telepathy"? Has not this hypothesis of Prof. Thomson Jay Hudson been greatly overworked? If the subjective mind exerts such a powerful influence over the objective mind, does it not destroy the potency of the will, and thereby throw into dire disorder the mental machinery of every mortal? Does it not require a fearful stretch of one's reasoning powers to believe that subconsciousness is a greater, a more powerful consciousness than a conscious consciousness is? Telepathy may explain some psychic phenomena, but it does not explain them all. It fails to account for intelligence and for the influence exerted by an intelligent use of the will.

Dr. Hudson proved too much for the safety of his theory in elaborating as he did upon "The Law of Psychic Phenomena." The interference of excarnate beings with the affairs of men in the way of intelligent communings is much more rational, far more scientific, much more in harmony with the rules of logic, than his labored, complex, far-fetched explanations of the phenomena he discusses. Prof. Warman in following Hudson, has closed his eyes to the light of fact, and deliberately forsaken the legitimate methods employed in all scientific research. The ipse dixit of one age gives way to the demonstrations produced by the one following it. "All text books that deal with the different branches of science," says a great educator, "are worthless as soon as they are ten years old, and should be discarded." Prof. Warman should remember this in his dealings with the subject of psychism. The theories of T. J. Hudson are much more than ten years old. The moral will deduce itself. Prof. Warman will likewise be comforted by Hudson's assertion "He who denies psychic phenomena is not entitled to be called a skeptic; he is simply ignorant."

Prof. Warman is sadly misinformed upon the subject of mediumship. His definition is as lucid as was Samantha Allen's understanding of the word "barter." Spiritualism asserts that the Soul is the real man, and that the body is but a medium used by the Soul to interpret itself to its fellows. It therefore follows that every intelligent being is a medium, whose powers may be undeveloped, or sufficiently unfolded to make possible the reception of intelligent messages from the unseen side of life. Some mortals prefer the dross of materialism to the gold of spirituality, and deliberately smother their spiritual natures until they even persuade themselves that they do not possess anything over and beyond their bodies.

Prof. Warman owes it to himself to read the twelfth chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians. The great Apostle's advice to cultivate the best gifts, i. e., the spiritual, contrasts strangely with Prof. Warman's declaration that spiritual forces are dangerous, and should be let alone. When the spiritual self dominates one's being, when man leads a truly spiritual life, there will be no danger of nervous derangement or disease. The poisoning of the body with narcotics, whiskey, drugs, and vile food, has more to do with disease and insanity than any and all spiritual influences, taken together, can produce.

I admit the fraudulent character of the work of some pretended mediums. I admit the puerile and inconsequential statements often made by some mediums who possess psychic power imperfectly developed. I admit the "fogland state" in which some communicating intelligences seem to be wandering. I admit expectant attention, unconscious muscular action, and nerve excitation. Let us rule them all out, and then we shall have the real with which to deal. That real consists of a rich residuum of psychic truth, in search of which the true scientist is or should be, ever striving. In that field of endeavor, he will receive, not only one, but many intelligent messages from wise men and women who have taken leave of earth, even as did the prophets, seers, sages and teachers of the far away past. What Joseph, Moses, Samuel, Isaiah, Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Jesus, John, Peter, James, Paul, Polycarp, and others received from the unseen side of life, will be multiplied many fold, for the writer of Ecclesiates declares that what is, hath already been, and what hath been is now," for the law is the same forever.

Religion, science, the Bible, human experience, poet, seer, and sage, all unite in testifying to the truth of spirit communion, and Prof. Warman will awaken some day in sadness of heart, to find himself far in the rear of the grand army of human progress, clinging to ideas that were exploded in the long ago, and so blinded by his own prejudice as to be unable to find his way to the table land of spiritual illumination, where the doors to the storehouse of wisdom will be opened unto him.

Very truly yours,
HARRISON D. BARRETT,
Editor-at-Large,
National Sp. Association.

Immortality for All.

We wish to acknowledge through your paper our appreciation of the privilege of being one of the observers of the very interesting and instructive debate that has in the last few weeks occupied the pages of The Progressive Thinker concerning the merits and demerits of "The Great Work." The best of all is the kindly spirit manifested by the contestants toward those who take a different view of the subject. It is impossible for us all to see alike on all questions because as separate individualities we are standing at different angles, viewing the great central truth regarding human destiny.

If it is true that any one soul could be destroyed, then all can be. But it cannot be destroyed, for immortality is a truth, and no matter how low in the scale the individual life may be, or how far it has strayed from the path which leadeth to the light, it will eventually return. According to our earthly calculations the time may be a long one, occupying ages; but it will be accomplished, for the law of progress is not merely for a few but for all. The lowest grade of savage human life that has existed on this planet or that does exist will sometime be advanced out of that low estate and placed on a higher plane of being. If it were not so, there would be truth in what the colored preacher said.

In his discourse he strove to impress upon his hearers the fact that "There were two roads through this world; one was the broad and the narrow road that led to perdition, and the other was the narrow and broad road that led to destruction." One of his congregation arose and exclaimed, "if dat am de case, then this darkey takes to the woods." But we will not, any of us, of whatever race, have to flee to the wilderness, for the great law of soul progression is leading us out of the lower planes of life and placing us on more exalted ones, and that law will operate with every one, none will be left out.

I wish also to express my appreciation of the testimony given forth by the president of the National Spiritualist Association regarding the necessity of cleansing the temple of Spiritualism of the influences that are seeking to corrupt its life. Those brave ones who are determined to make the house clean will succeed, because the higher spiritual powers are on their side and the truth will prevail.

HAMILTON DEGRAW.
Watervliet, N. Y.

CAN YOU DO IT.

He Wants Some Medium to Locate a Lost Son.

To the Editor: Being a constant reader of your most valuable and instructive paper, and scarcely overlooking any items of interest, I noticed the advertisement of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil A. Brittan of Walla Walla, Wash., stating the disappearance and loss of their little son, the incident occurring in July, 1906, and I wonder that no medium of fame and possessing wonderful gifts and powers, have not long e'er this endeavored, with the assistance of their guides, to investigate the matter, and assist those people in their deep distress, and try to alleviate their suspense and anxiety, for in that case alone is a grand opportunity of doing good outside of the rostrum, and show the public that Spiritualism brings forth comfort and relief to the anxious ones in locating the missing boy, to bring joy and gladness into their household once more. Besides, their offer of compensation seems fully sufficient to anyone who would succeed in behalf of the afflicted ones, and I wish some good medium would become interested in the case, and try to locate the whereabouts of the little one.

S. A. BRICKELL.
Conrad, Y. T. Canada.

Duty is carrying on promptly and faithfully the affairs now before you. It is to fulfill the claims of to-day.—Goethe.

PROF. W. M. LOCKWOOD.

His Views on Spectrum Analysis—The Eminent Lecturer and Profound Thinker Declares that Men Ought to Rejoice that They Live in a Century of Progress.

Prof. Lockwood, the lecturer on psychology and scientific subjects, said last night in his address at the Prospect Avenue Spiritual Temple, that the world to-day is doing more tall thinking than ever before in its history.

Sometimes, when I read of how we are manufacturing improved weapons of war in order to slay the more readily thousands of our fellow men, the day when there shall be universal peace seems farther off than ever," said the speaker. "And then when I see how many fellow men are grafting and all that my very soul sinks within me. Still, one ought not to let these things discourage him. On the contrary, he ought to feel glad that he lives in a century when the world is full of geniuses laboring for the good of humanity, and great thinkers are found on all sides studying and investigating that they may benefit others."

Prof. Lockwood's subject was "The Value of Spectrum Analysis in the Investigation of Spiritual Phenomena." The principles of the chemical spectrum were illustrated by a set of Geisless vacuum tubes illuminated with electricity. The experiments were very interesting and were witnessed by many of the city's leaders in education and scientific investigation.

Spectrum analysis has opened the eyes of the world to wonderful scientific facts. It is greater even than chemical analysis. It has shown the medical world where in certain diseases molecular death has set in, and the blood has lost its life. It has proven the falsity of the old belief that the solar system consists of seven primary colors by revealing an infinite number of colors.

The experiments of Brewster discovered an infinite variety of spectra lines and color motion, and the recent invention of the Bolometer confirms this fact. Spectrum analysis applied to modern Astronomical discoveries gives us a comparative knowledge of the composition of the photosphere enveloping the stars and suns veiled in billions upon billons of miles of infinite space, yielding us a view of the sublime and limitless tract of cosmic extension with its mile-stones of suns and stars.

At this juncture in the discourse some of the most beautiful colors imaginable were produced in these tubes by the action of the electricity. These, the professor said, came from the very lap, the womb of nature, and gave one a vision of life principles. Spectroscopic analysis, he declared, means much for coming generations. It is inciting all classes to deeper investigation and is doing much for the cause of Spiritualism. It shows how the visible comes from that which is invisible. If we did not possess the knowledge that material things had their source in the invisible there would be no basis for our present day philosophies.

The public mind should be instructed in the truths of the changes constantly taking place around us of our relation to invisible forces in every department of cosmic process. The food you eat to sustain the life of your soul in the body, undergoes many changes of chemical transformations before it becomes converted into blood, and the blood in circulation is transformed into many spectrum changes in its contact with the various glands of assimilation, thereby furnishing the soul or life principle with ready made material of Electro-magnetic character to support the ever changing scaffolding we call the body.

The professor illustrated by the vacuum tubes imperfect action in spectrum change. This, he explained, was a state of depolarization similar to that which a man experiences when sick or insane.

The illustrations gave the audience a pretty clear idea of some of the great truths lying behind cosmic process. They realized more fully the change of chemical expression in man's life and understood as never before that it is the soul of things, of man, of the animals about him, even of the flowers, the plants and shrubs, and the trees in the forest, that nature is constantly working on.

The Doctor said that persons often ask him if he believes in solid materialization. He couldn't say he did. He has never seen a solid materialization, but has been seen etherealization.

"When a man comes to me and says that he is a Spiritualist because he has seen ten or fifteen spirits materialize all at once, I just hold my judgment in abeyance, said the speaker. "But this I do know positively—spirits can be and have been photographed. I have seen genuine spirit photographs. I also know that so-called independent slatewriting is no fraud for I have had ample evidence of this fact."

But the professor doesn't believe every physic medium is trustworthy. He declared too many of them assume to be what they are not qualified to be, and so step beyond the borderland of facts.

"Don't let the fact get away from you that the spirit life promises better conditions for soul unfoldment than we find here," said the lecturer.

"Real Spiritualism stands to-day upon the rostrum of demonstrated truths.

"Eternal progress is the birthright of every human soul.

"Don't be too incredulous, nor yet, too credulous. If you are you'll never be a good scholar.

"Be a thinker in the world. Then say what you've thought out if it's something that will set other people to thinking.

"But don't go about the world with a roll of damnation for those who don't think as you do. The world is better off without such mental demons. They should be reincarnated.

"We live too near to strife, too near to warfare in this world of ours and not near enough to the beautiful in life, the ethical side of human nature, to understand the value of spectrum analysis in the development of character."

In concluding his address the Professor declared that in his opinion, before the twentieth century closes, the world will demand "a religion founded on scientific facts."

An Angel On Earth.

I is indeed refreshing to find an Angel on Earth. Judging from the account given below, old Peter Heswitt must be one. Unselfishness, Honesty, and all the other cardinal virtues put into practice constitute one worthy of being called an Angel, whatever his earthly religion may be, and such is Mr. Heswitt, with his nine adopted waifs. He is rearing nine waifs; how many are you trying to rear.

"I'm the happiest man in the world!"

Old Peter Heswitt, of Chesaning, Mich., proudly boasts of this. And if you want to know his reason for it he will tell you.

"I'm not the father of a single youngster," he laughs, "but I've got nine of them just the same—dearest little things in all the world. You can stake your last dollar on it that I love them all, every one—I've adopted the whole nine, one after the other."

It is really true. This aged patriarch, now passing the evening of his days in well-to-do comfort, has gathered about him one by one nine little children. He has made himself their legal parent; he is educating them and suporting them. To see him with the nine gathered round about would warm the heart of even the most callous person that ever lived.

Forty years ago Peter Heswitt was the happy husband of a pretty young wife that he adored and the father of two little children that were the idols of his heart. Suddenly he was called upon to bear his cross. Wife and the two little ones were drowned together.

For a long five years the man in him rebelled.

To his grief-sodden brain there could be no reason for it all. He had never done anything to deserve such a punishment. But time, in all its pity, gradually healed the wounds; he turned to gentle mourning for relief. Bitter rebellion against the cruelty of Fate was put aside.

And so, for twenty-five long years he mourned quietly, patiently.

Then suddenly there came into his lonely life an ambition. Why not have a little child, all his own? Why not adopt some poor waif and make it happy?

This is not an unusual occurrence anywhere. Thousands of childless ones have adopted some little boy or girl to be their very own. But with old man Heswitt it became the passion of his life. To-day eight little girls and one little boy own him as their adopted father. And among the nine only two years separate the oldest from the youngest.

The desire came upon him suddenly. He had mourned his quarter of a century without any idea that he was ever to be blessed with a little one. Suddenly the thought—why not adopt some child that needs a home?

But he was poor then, and it was hard even to care for himself. He had been ruined in business by a new invention, and he realized that in order to live he must adapt himself to the new conditions.

"I just grabbed hold of the thing that had ruined me," to quote his own words, "and became a ready-mixed paint maker."

When he began life all over again Peter Heswitt hadn't two dollar bills that he could fold together. But he had health and strength and a lot of knowledge about paint. He started a factory.

Even at the beginning they called him "Old Peter," and that's what they call him to-day. He was among the first to realize the vast field that lay before him. Year after year he did nothing but think, talk and work.

He was working not for fortune really, but for a child that he might adopt. Soon he succeeded.

"Now," said Peter, cheerfully, when he found his weekly pay just doubled, "I can take a child."

And he did. He found a motherless, fatherless tot of two that he loved; he adopted her. He gave up his room, rented a tiny cottage, hired a woman to do the work and took the little thing home. For the first time since that day when they told him that the wife and the two little ones were gone forever he was happy.

With the child came the turn of the tide of fortune.

Then he invented a new process and this made a man of means of Peter Heswitt overnight. It wasn't "Old Peter" now, but "Mr. Heswitt," if you please. At once he decided to increase his family. He found another pretty little girl that caught his heart and he adopted her. But even these two didn't satisfy him.

A month later he adopted orphaned twins. He was able to give up work and live upon the income his creations were giving him. He moved to Chesaning. As time went on he added again and again to his family. The more he got the happier he was. He bought a ten-acre farm where he could give himself up entirely to his "children."

They were all nearly of the same age. Sixth, seventh, eighth—all girls and only a bare two years separating the oldest from the youngest. And then in an asylum the old gentleman saw a small boy that reached his heart-strings, and he was added to the brood.

To-day the eldest of this remarkable family is ten years old. The youngest is eight.

"What am I going to do with my girls when they grow up?" laughed old Mr. Heswitt. "Well, if I should die I've got enough to bring them comfortably into young womanhood—and if I don't die I'm going to make traveling men out of 'em! Yes, sir, every one of them is going to be a salesman. They know that successful business is what brought us together, and they're going to live and die by business just as I have."

Perhaps it won't be long before this mellowhearted patriarch adopts another child to add to the nine. All he asks is that they come to him when they are babies. He has taken all nine before they were two years old, and to all of them he is father in every sense of the word.

And he is the happiest man in the world when the whole nine are romping about him.

This cheerful old gentleman is never happier than when he has the whole crew of them about him. What makes it hard, too, is that he can't have them all except at meal times. But what person in the world, single-handed, could collect nine romping youngsters at one and the same time if it wasn't for breakfast or dinner or supper?

Then, again, the nine of them must go to school; they are away a goodly part of the day. So each day finds old Mr. Heswitt looking forward to 3 o'clock, when the eight girls and the boy come rollicking home again from school.

It's a pretty sight to see them trooping about him then. They climb on his knee, they tug at his patriarchal beard, they steal his pipe, they feel in his pockets for lemon drops and apples, they play pranks on him without number—all to his delight.

There are plenty of families with nine children in this big land of ours, but whoever saw one where the whole nine were practically all of the same age? And that is just what delights the old man most of all.

"They wouldn't be any fun at all," he will tell you, "if they ran up and down like a flight of steps. I like them all of one size—wouldn't have them any other way."

HE KICKS VIOLENTLY.

The Devious Methods Adopted by the Church.

The general advanced independence, characteristic of the editorials in The Progressive Thinker, has prompted me (in my plain unvarnished manner) to offer my mite in the direction of steering our grand old spiritualistic craft clear of some of the rocks that have strewn the highway of history with a host of credal derelicts.

The particular rock of which I wish to speak at present, and the one that to-day is disgusting the progressive intelligent, thinking majority with church methods — is the beggarly methods employed by most churches in securing finances with which to maintain their crumbling institutions. I do not object to any honorable entertainment or attraction where the general public is at liberty to patronize or not as they choose, but where a method is employed, evidently intended to either extort contribution from an unwilling victim, or place him in an embarrassing position in case he refuses, I call it blackmail pure and simple; and the minister or other leader who, hiding behind the farce of "the end justifies the means," is guilty of sanctioning any such hold-up methods, is not a person to be entrusted with the noble calling of reformer.

I will illustrate my point with the particular case that has bee instrumental in suggesting the advisability of this article. The so-called Christian church of this city has lately extended a "call" to one of those over enthusiastic young graduates imbued with the idea that his ordination has been the occasion of furnishing the sinners of his charge with the only real chance they have ever had to escape "the wrath to come." I believe that he would originally have been a really sensible young man had he not made the mistake of allowing himself to be ground out to order through the Christian church mill; but as it is, an otherwise brilliant mind has been diverted into a very narrow channel, and now for the result. For over two weeks there has not been a day but what some little girl has assailed me with a form holding twenty nickels, together with a plea that I "please give a nickel to help pay the preacher."

Talk about dignity of the cloth, will you? Talk about the moral example of the church, will you? Talk about Christianity being responsible for the advancement of the age, will you? and at the same time make common street beggars of your children, to furnish a snap for a young man who should blush at the fact that he is so short on common dignity as to make himself an object of charity through questionable means of support. In conclusion, let me say that I hope through this little talk to add my mite in preventing the Spiritualistic organizations of our land from doing other than exemplify the fact that our methods are all clean, dignified, and within the resources of our own membership.

A SUBSCRIBER.

People may outgrow natural ignorance, but ignorance carefully cultivated, polished, propagated, and called divine truth, can rarely be outgrown, because it paralyzes the power of growth.—Moncure D. Conway

The practice of self-restraint and renunciation is not happiness, though it may be something much better.—T. H. Huxley.

The glory of science is that it is freeing the soul, breaking the mental manacles, getting the brain out of bondage, giving courage to thought—filling the world with mercy, justice and joy.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Man alone is and shall be our god.—Feuerbach.

There would be more happiness in the world if we would rejoice more with others instead of feigning sympathy with their sorrows.—Max Bewer.

When any one of the prouder passions are hurt, it is much better philosophy to let a man slip into a good temper than to attack him in a bad one.—Thomas Paine, in Crisis.

Ignored Truths.

President Barrett Presents Some Trenchant Facts to the News of Indianapolis, Ind.

Under the above caption, a writer in a recent issue of the News, sees fit to attack Spiritualism, and seeks to cast opprobrium upon its followers. As president of the National Spiritualists' Association and its editor-at-large, I respectfully request space in which to present some facts with regard to Spiritualism with which the caustic writer is certainly not acquainted. I am not seeking controversy; my people and their religion have been attacked without warrant, hence I am only seeking justice and fair play for them. Thousands of the readers of the News are Spiritualists, and are entitled to a hearing. Abuse is not argument, and never will be. It is not right that the Spiritualistic readers of the News should rest under the aspersions of one who knows nothing about their religion, much less about its effect upon their lives.

Philosophically speaking, the human family is divided into two great schools of thought, the Materialist, and the Spiritualist. Every person who believes in God and in a future life, is a Spiritualist, no matter what label he may choose to assume. Every person who denies the existence of God, and declares that Life ends with the grave is a Materialist. Between the two great schools, all mortals are forced to choose. There is no middle ground. It is either Spiritualism, with a recongnition of God, and proof of life beyond the tomb, or it is Materialism, with its pitiless edict of annihilation of the finite soul, and blasphemous assertion that there is no God. Even our captious, uninformed critic is a Spiritualist, if he believes in God, the Bible, the Christ-life, and the soul's immortality.

In the New Testament we read, "Pneuma ho Theos"—Spirit is God"—not "God is a spirit," hence any believer in God as Spirit must of necessity be a Spiritualist. Man is said to be made in the image of God, hence man likewise is Spirit, finitely expressed. If man possesses God's likeness in his real nature, then he must be heir unto all that Infinite possesses, therefore, is as immortal as his source. Recognizing man as finite Spirit, or Soul, and God as Infinite Spirit, or Soul, we have a spiritual concept of the universe. The material is seen to be the resultant of a cause, which cause rests in God. This same material is an instrument through which the invisible real forces make themselves known in the objective. In fine, all material substances are phenomena, meaning appearances, the results of causes that are invisible. These physical phenomena, through analysis and chemical changes, can be made to disappear, or rendered absolutely invisible. As appearances, they challenged man's attention and inspired him to find their cause. From effect to cause, and from cause to effect, he reasoned, and was rewarded at last by the most wonderful of all demonstrations in logic, science, and philosophy, that Life can only produce Life, and that all extraneous phenomena are but manifestations of Life.

For convenience, man, the student, divided the phenomena he was analyzing into two classes, physical and psychical. In experimenting with the former, he found them to be objective appearances of subjective concepts. In analyzing the latter, he found them to be the products of intelligence, which intelligence was the prompter of those concepts when they assumed objectivity. All phenomena, therefore, became of value to him, as helps in a search for truth, in his endeavor to find the Causeless Cause. Phenomena are not playthings. Galvani's experiments with a piece of zinc and the legs of a defunct frog, gave him the title of "The Frog's Dancing Master," but they were the forerunners of the wonderful galvanic battery and other mighty instruments operated by an invisible force known as electricity. Psychic phenomena may amuse some people, just as the crude electric toys of a century ago did the unthinking ones of that time. To the true scientist, however, they are signs that point to the laboratory of Infinite Wisdom, helps to inspire man to hasten on in his quest for the Holy Grail.

These psychic phenomena, direct results of invisible intelligent action, are not new, nor are they strange. They have appeared in all ages, and have ever told the same story, i. e., that they were caused by intelligent entities that have survived the change called death. The Bible is full of just such marvels, and in no place are they condemned by the seers and prophets who received them. They were then used, as they are, or should be to-day, as aids to religion—as helpers to the children of men to rise above the sordid conditions of the material world, into a conscious recognition of the realities of the spiritual. Both the Old and New Testaments are filled with glowing accounts of angels' visits to their mortal friends. When did those visits cease? When was the law established prohibiting soul communication because one being had left the body while the other was still dominating the physical form? Does not Ecclesiastes 3rd Chapter, 14th throw some light upon this question? The writer of that book declares that God's law endures forever. Is our critic more highly inspired than was the writer of Ecclesiastes?

Probably the Bible does contain fulminations against witches, soothsayers, necromancers and other prestidigitators. Does it not also record the results of psychic investigation side by side with such pronunciamentos? Did not Saul receive truthful statements from the woman of Endor (not witch—for that word is not to be found in the text of the Bible story), whose prophecy was fulfilled to the letter on the field of battle? How about the writing on the wall at the feast of Belshazzar? Did any witch, soothsayer, or necromancer produce that writing through trickery? Was it not, rather, a direct interposition of spirit power with the affairs of men and nations? What was the effect of the warning? Did it "demoralize" or "debauch" those who saw it? Did it harm Daniel who interpreted it? Were not the revealers fully "debauched" and "demoralized" before the writing appeared? Was not its appearance a direct warning that they must pay the penalty of their sins? Was not the phenomenon a help in the sense that it brought the drunken brutes to soberness for a few moments, at least, before they left the earth forever?

Our critic asserts that those phenomena weaken human wills, debauch the understanding, demoralize mortal life. Did they do so in Bible times? What evidence has he to show that they do so to-day? He has spoken without knowing, and has, thereby, become a blind leader of the blind. "No man can teach that which he does not know," and our critic has revealed his weakness in presuming to speak of that of which he is ignorant, in discussing questions upon which he has never reasoned.

His assertion that people lose all sense of duty, all consciousness of obligation to others in becoming Spiritualists, is wholly gratuitous, and has absolutely no foundation in fact. Spiritualism emphasizes the law of consequences, and declares that there is no possible forgiveness for sin. It asserts that man must work out his own destiny, and pay to the uttermost farthing, for his every sinful act. He must, therefore, live right and do right. He must discharge every duty to his fellowmen faithfully and well, and honestly redeem his every obligation to those to whom he is indebted. He must face himself throughout eternity, hence must present a clean record, if he would be happy in the Kingdom of God. Surely, there is no lack of morality in these teachings?

Our critic's reference to the effect of Spiritualism upon the intellect is equally absurd and unwarranted. It has quickened the reasoning powers of thousands of people, and developed many intellectual giants who have gone into the editorial rooms and the pulpits of the land, from which points they have fearlessly sounded the death-knell of Materialism. It has set priest, prelate, minister and layman to thinking, and led them into the temple of wisdom in their search for the truth. Are there men of greater reasoning power or intellectual standing than Rudolph Virchow, Alexander Aksakof, Carl DuPrel, Caesar Lombroso, Camille Flammarion, Alfred R. Wallace, Sir William Crookes, Robert Hare, James J. Mapes, John W. Edmunds, Paul Gibier, and their compeers? Will they not compare favorably with a like number of churchmen, non-churchmen and Materialists? Their judgment is and long has been accepted as authority in their special fields, and our critic cannot produce an atom of evidence to show that their mentalities have ever been impaired in the slightest degree. As for credulity, let me ask in all seriousness, which possesses the more—the man who believes that three is one, and one three, at one and the same time, or the man who has proved for himself that he can commune with his loved ones in another world?

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

FOUND SLEEPING.

A Psychic Who Desires to Work only on the Higher Planes.

To the Editor:—Some irresistible power is urging me on at this moment to write. I don't know to what end. Mr. Barrett's letters of late have aroused an active spirit within me. All he has said I fully endorse; but I must confess he managed to bring a feeling of conviction—yea, a feeling of guilt—right home to me. While reading I seemed to hear the Master say: "Little one, what use have you made of the talents I gave you? Have you reaped a full harvest with them?

I had to confess "No!"

The angel world has given me a sacred gift which I have not used properly.

From a babe I could see spirit forms and hear voices, and could sense the past, present and future of a person. Prophecy is also mine.

Mr. Barrett's words have proven me a worthless servant, and that's why I write. I did not know what the so-called Spiritualism was until seven years ago, but I always knew the so-called dead were near us.

This old world has been very unkind to me, but I always found solace in my angel teachers and friends.

A number of years ago, in Ireland, I was playing a game of spirit talking, or table-talking, as we termed it there, and it gave me my life's history—all important events correctly. I received the answers to my questions with raps on the table; I did not call it Spiritualism. I didn't know of such an "ism."

I have given my services at Spiritual meetings often. Some time ago I went to Springfield, Mo. I there organized two Lyceums with good results. There they wished to ordain me as a worker, but I refused. When there I prophesied a railroad wreck which took place exactly as I stated, three days after. The medium I was staying with said I was a rare psychic, but not a medium. Yes, if control makes a medium I am not one. AS I BELIEVE IN CO-OPERATION, NOT CONTROL, MR. BARRETT VOICES THE SENTIMENTS OF MY SOUL.

My Spiritualism is sacred; it is from within. My aim in life was to be a worker for truth and right, but I am afraid I have fallen by the wayside, tired and weary.

"Why so," you might ask.

Because I have found so much greed and lack of charity among our workers—too much of the commercial and too little of the Christ principle.

Well, I must proceed. I left the ranks for the year to be a Palmist and Psychometrist. I had studied the hand for years, and found many truths therein, and I could give correct advice, and do lots of good. My year is up. I have finished that experience.

Mr. Barrett mentioned palmists and clairvoyants, etc., in one letter which hurt me. They can't all be bad. I know I was not. I would not tarnish my soul with a falsehood, and I am convinced I did a good work, even as a Palmist. Necessity compelled me to do something.

I dearly love our beautiful philosophy, and would only be too glad to help enlighten whoever I came in contact with. I would organize lyceums, etc. My idea is that the adults need the lyceum as well as the children. My classes in Springfield were adults, and I am pleased to say were largely attended. Now, if you are wanting help, I will postpone my future plans and join you; no matter what the work, I will attempt it. Mr. Barrett's letter has seemed to say to me: "Wake up! Why are you sleeping? We are wanting help!"

Anyone addressing me personally can have all information concerning myself. Also references of Psychical ability from where I have worked.

MARGUERITE MACK.

179 University avenue, Chicago, Ill.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.00.

A FRIENDLY CRITICISM.

Religion, Spiritualism, and Commercial Mediumship.

To the Editor: Mr. Barrett's lengthy article on the second page of The Progressive Thinker of April 6 seems to call for a gentle criticism. The spirit and zeal in which he writes are commendable; and his motive is respected equal to that of this writer. What seems to arouse his concern is the personal character of spiritual mediums. He thinks they ought to give their services wholly to the Cause of Spiritualism as he understands it, and because they—some of them—engage in "commercialism" they should be condemned.

Mediums, like other people, are good or not so good, partaking of the general characteristics of humanity. There is a prevailing conception among Spiritualists that mediums are the active agents in the production of spirit manifestations; whereas they are the passive instruments of the spirits, in this matter.

Mediumship is one thing, and personal character is another thing. One may be a good medium and have an objectionable character; or one may have a good character and be an indifferent medium. There are those who are willing to engage in commercialism, and others who are not; and all that Mr. Barrett or anyone else can say, will have no effect upon those who yield their consent to the demands of their patrons.

The moral status of a people (mediums included) is the reflex of the indwelling spirit—the effect of a cause—and that cause is never considered. To complain of what mediums do is little less than folly. The great desideratum is knowledge of human nature. That it is not understood, is evidenced by the vast contrariety of opinions in regard to it.

Spiritualism when understood, is science. Science is clearly defined elements and principles of a series of cognate facts arranged in systematic and logical order. When human nature is understood, Spiritualism will take its place in the category of exact science. Then all this wrangling discord will come to an end.

Existing difficulties have their rise on both sides of life. Mortals do not know; and spirits of low development, having no regard for the welfare of mortals seek their own gratification in controlling mediums. If we of earth understand how to make the right conditions, all would be well, but we do not know. Most of us want to "get rich quick." Mines and stocks are enticing us, and there are mediums ready to locate mines, oil and gas wells, give information by spirit control on the fluctuations of stocks, and tips on horse racing for a good fee, which is willingly paid. Hence the business is in a flourishing condition.

Admitting these to be facts, what shall we do? What can we do? The cause lies in the imperfect development of human nature, and to decry against it is simply futile. This is the condition that confronts us. Evidently the thing to do is to deal with the cause—the imperfect development of mankind. In dealing with the difficulties we meet, we direct our energies to the effect of the cause, which is absurd. A good tree cannot bear evil fruit; neither can an evil tree bear good fruit. And so it is with human nature. The tree is known by its fruit. Good and evil are the effects of causes. They come by the action of immutable forces, and can not be changed without changing their cause, which is not recogniged.

There is one feature in Mr. Barrett's article that seems to call for a mild criticism; that is, the "religious" aspect of Spiritualism. He seems to take it for granted that "religion" is a thing well understood, and that man can deal with it as an established fact in its theological sense. He says: "One writer whose erudition is to blinding to his own eyes, and conspicuous by the entire absence to men and women of scholarly attainments, goes so far as to insult better Spiritualists than himself by calling them if they believe in Spiritualism as a religion, idiots, imbeciles, and lacking in common sense." To say the least, this is unpleasant, if not unfair. He continues: "This is afflicted by a disease that was almost eradicated in the 19th century, and will be entirely stamped out before the 20th century is gone." Does this mean that Spiritualism is a religion? Such is the implication. Jesus said, "Judge not." Every act has its reaction which is of the same character as the act itself. He goes on: "His terrible disease is known as the conceit of ignorance. It harms its possessor more than any one else, yet it is offensive to cultured minds and progressive souls from its resemblance in mental odors to those flung into the material atmosphere by the angry pole-cat."

The spirit of this language breathes of arrogant assumption that a milder sentiment would have avoided.

The Latin word for "religion" is religio, from which the English word is derived. The Roman meaning was a sacred oath or vow to the gods, or the obligation of such an oath or vow, which was held very sacred. This conception is retained in the modern sense of the word. It is founded on belief—or creed—among Protestants, Westminster Confession of Faith and the Larger and Shorter Catechism. Religion is not science, as is shown by the 200 different Protestant denominations which are antagonistic to Catholicism. Religion is a system of worship, of rituals and ceremonials. It has its rise in certain feelings innate in the individual—reverence, hope of heaven, fear of hell, credulity and the love of mystery. It is wholly a personal affair.

It being a power in the individual, for the purpose of concentrating individual powers by surrendering them to an executive by means of organization; ambitious men effect such organization for the purpose of concentration and exercising it in holding dominion and obtaining honors, dignity and fame. This spirit of ecclesiasticism has unconsciously crept into Spiritualism, and those who are religiously inclined, instinctively seek satisfaction of their feelings in organizing and attending "spiritual churches." They do this conscientiously and with the best of motives as they feel them.

No one can reasonably object to this; but to denounce those who do not do this, manifests an intolerant spirit. Spiritualism, per se, is not religion, it is demonstrable truth, embracing every moral and spiritual interest of humanity. Science is demonstrated knowledge. Spiritualism is demonstrated knowledge, and when we understand ourselves it will be developed; and such articles as this which is criticised in a mild and friendly spirit, will have no occasion to be written.

E. J. SCHELLHOUS.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

FAITH AND KNOWLEDGE.

Christianity's Evidences Not Like the Evidences of Spiritualism.

The Christian religion is a religion of faith based on the resurrection of Jesus, a hope of heaven and a belief in hell. There is no knowledge obtainable as to the truth of the existence of either heaven or hell.

The bible records these things, but the evidence it offers is inconclusive. For over 1800 years, according to Christian belief, there has been evidence offered to substantiate these records, but the belief in these records rests entirely on blind unreasoning credulity.

Christianity as a belief is not adapted to this progressive age. Its crude ideas of the other life are incongruous with the advancement of knowledge. Facts are demanded to take the place of fancy. The myths of the ancient world are losing their force as influences in determining human conduct. Truth is wanted, truth as established by evidence, procurable when wanted. Truths that can be verified from day to day. Hearsay evidence is no longer taken as conclusive, nothing but proof will satisfy.

Christianity proclaims an existence after death of a kind which does not appeal to reason, and offers only hearsay evidence to sustain it. The condition of the spirit after death, as taught by Christianity, would not satisfy as to heaven, because it is unnatural, and yet Christians affect to think that it would, when if they would really think, they could see how impossible it would be for any civilized person to be happy in such a heaven, and no one who has any sense of justice can believe in the existence of their hell.

A belief in immortality is universal. No religion could stand without this great underlying principle. It is believed as a matter of faith by the greater portion of mankind—as a demonstrable fact by a much smaller number. Faith in this connection, where it amounts to an absolute conviction, is nothing more than superstition. This class of believers have within their mental consitutions the inherited superstition of ancestor worship and a belief in demonology. The only faith that is needed is that which prompts investigation, and a desire to know the truth.

The faith believers have no confidence in the facts which Spiritualism presents. Their minds are made up. They prefer to speculate. They really don't want to know the truth, for fear that their theories will be destroyed. There are many varieties of this class of believers, but there are three who are prominent, the Christian Spiritualists, the Materialists, and those who think that nature works all the wonders that present themselves to the mind of man. It is the province of those who believe in the phenomena of Spiritualism as now presented, to reconcile these various incongruous beliefs.

The Christian Spiritualist brings his God, his heaven and hell slightly modified into Spiritualism, seeking to modify and pervert it to the cause of the church. He is purely a supernaturalist.

Closely allied to the Christian Spiritualists are those who, while they discard Christian theology, yet maintain the immateriality of the spirit and discredit all materiality of spirit phenomena. The last are forever descanting on the beauties of spiritual philosophy and decrying the phenomena. They are not investigators; the truth they are not concerned about. They prefer to revel in dreams of the spirit world. They are idealists. Those in the deepest darkness are bible believers; they are the Christian Spiritualists. The idealists call themselves materialists, and profess a belief in the teachings of nature.

All these, whether idealists, materialists or supernaturalists, are outside of the Spiritualist belief in the immortality of the soul of man as established by the phenomena of Spiritualism. Their presence in the ranks of Spiritualism is deterimental to the cause. They are the disorganizers. Their presence among Spiritualists accounts in a large measure for the lack of organization. They have no confidence in the foundation of Spiritualism. Its phenomena are utterly discredited by them or assumed to come from a supernatural source. They are greatly in love with the philosophy, but the intangibility of doubt is the basis of their philosophy. They are speculative dreamers. They build structures without foundations. Their presence is inimical to Spiritualism, for they prevent that positive purpose which is necessary to its growth.

They represent a negation that is incapable of producing positive results. They profess a desire of purifying Spiritualism, but they would destroy it by the cry of fraud against all its phenomena.

Their principal object of assault is materialization.

The truth of spiritual phenomena must rest on the intelligence of the investigator. That which he may believe is always on a par with his intelligence. Ignorance and blind unreasoning credulity will ever be the victim of designing mercenary mountebanks. Only a small measure of protection can be offered to those who have not intelligence to protect themselves.

Spiritual phenomena must rest on a rational ground. The fraudulent is not adverse to the genuine. Ten thousand fraudulent manifestations would not vitiate one that was true. A lie, however big it may be, can not destroy one truth. Therefore it is better that all should be believed that is presented as true, than that none be believed, for in the one case some truth as to the life after this world be gained, and in the other there would be nothing to lighten the darkness brought by the despair of annihilation.

The Christian consoles himself by a belief in things of which he can never have any evidence of their truth, and on reasonable ground they must be deemed untrue, yet he is happy in cherishing his delusion. Take the immaculate conception, for an instance, upon which the divinity of Christ rests. I would not say one word to encourage those ghouls that prey on human credulity. Severe condemnation should meet them wherever they go, but they are powerless to destroy the truth.

Spirits are disembodied persons. They are not much, if any, better than when they had a physical body. They in no case should be worshiped or be deemed infallible. They know but little more than when they were in this life, therefore you must exercise your judgment on all information received from them.

J. F. BAKER.

Indianapolis, Ind.

(To be continued.)

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

A PERIOD OF SELF-DENIAL.

An Earnest Appeal in Behalf of The Temple Fund.

The Christian denominations, particularly the Salvation Army members, often have a week of self-denial, in order to thereby be able to contribute funds to their cause for some special effort.

Have the Spiritualists that much zeal and self-surrender? If not, why not? Surely Spiritualism is a demonstrated truth of great value, and its power is splendid for human good. The people sadly need the truths and moral power of Spiritualism. The spirit messengers do not come to us simply to show us they can manifest their presence and give us a personal communication; but they are anxious to help the people at large mentally, morally and spiritually. Whose is the duty to make opportunities for their help in the world? Evidently, that duty is the ones who call themselves Spiritualists.

How can we better further such processes than to erect Temples dedicated to their cause, wherein the mediums they empower may have opportunities to minister unto the people?

You may say, "Let each community erect its own Temple." That is what can be done if we as a body will encourage, co-operate and assist. For mutual helpfulness we have organized the Temple Fund Society as a national movement. While we shall hope for, and soon or late receive many liberal donations and bequests for this purpose, we must first show that we are mutually interested. To that end, and to make it a representative body, we are a society of personal members, composed of the Spiritualists of each and every state of our nation.

The annual fee is one dollar for each member. That seems a small amount to secure Temple extension; but it should aggregate a vast sum in a few years. Are there a million Spiritualists? Many more are claimed. About two hundred of you have responded to our energetic calls so far made. And our request for a special donation the second Sunday in March met with a response by not quite a dozen societies. This is not encouraging to ask you for a week or more of self-denial for the benefit of the Temple fund; but I am going to do it. Your season of public meetings will end in most of places, the last of May. You will have no calls for local funds during June. Will you save a dollar somehow that month, by denying some luxury or even a pleasure, or perhaps a slight necessity, and send that amount for a membership for this year? And perhaps you can obtain other members, or a small donation occasionally, from some interested person. Will you try? The Temple Fund Society must obtain one thousand dollars before it can begin to help local societies to secure a Temple. And then many thousands of dollars can be used to good help of people worthy of such. We hope to make a good report of enthusiasm amongst the Spiritualists, at our convention next fall. Will you assist, or prevent that?

Address Mrs. Carrie H. Mong, Secretary, 415 S. Franklin Street, Muncie, Indiana, or

GEORGE W. KATES,
President.

Cheyney, Pa.

IN THE SOUTH LAND.

The Noted Drummer Medium, Geo. A. Letford.

To the Editor: Since the organization of our "Psychic Society" in this place by Sister Twing a few weeks since, we had at our first meeting the very unexpected visit of Geo. A. Letford, that justly noted "Drummer Medium," who lectured for the society and gave fine readings in his specialties, clairvoyant and clairaudient work. I know no man to-day giving out this truth, to whom Spiritualism owes so much. Traveling as he does for that firm long in business in your city, H. E. Bucklin & Co., with vast territory covering the Southern and Middle and Northern States many, he necessarily comes in contact with many of the best business men of the country. He visits no town or community which does not call on him for work in his mediumistic line, to which he never fails to respond, with very profound results. Thus he is giving out this grand and interesting truth to thousands of the very best people in his territory, absolutely without charge, never having been known to receive one cent for his work.

To say that his work in this line is hard, is putting it very mildly indeed. He must necessarily meet the agnostic and the skeptic in its hardest form; also all the different churchmen and religionists, rarely having an audience lending sympathy or love. With all these hard conditions and varied audiences, his honesty and sincerity are never questioned. I consider his success great and worthy of public mention. He has brought thousands to this living truth to my certain knowledge (the writer amongst them.) His annual visits as drummer and medium are looked forward to with an unusual interest and pleasure by his score of friends.

W. T. MARLER,
Pres. Apalachicola Psychic Society.
Apalachicola, Fla.

DIRECTION.

Fair are the flowers and the children,
but their subtle suggestion is fairer;
Rare is the roseburst of dawn, but the secret that clasps it is rarer;
Sweet the exultance of song, but the strain that precedes it is sweeter;
And never was poem yet writ but the meaning outmastered the metre.

Never a daisy that grows, but a mystery guideth the growing;
Never a river that flows, but a majesty sceptres the flowing;
Never a Shakespeare that soared, but a stronger than he did enfold him,
Nor ever a prophet foretells, but a mightier seer hath foretold him.

Back of the canvas that throbs the painter is hinted and hidden;
Into the statue that breathes the soul of the sculptor is hidden;
Under the joy that is felt lie the infinite issues of feeling;
Crowning the glory revealed is the glory that crowns the revealing.

Great are the symbols of being, but that which is symboled is greater;
Vast the create and beheld, but vaster
the inward creator;
Back of the sound broods the silence,
back of the gift stands the giving;
Back of the hand that receives thrill the sensitive nerves of receiving.

Space is as nothing to spirit, the deed is outdope by the doing;
The heart of the wooer is warm, but warmer the heart of the wooing;
And up from the pits where these shiver, and up from the heights where those shine,
Twin voices and shadows swim eastward and the essence of life is divine.

—Richard Realf.

CONDITIONS PAST AND PRESENT.

Historical and Philosophical View of the Reasons for the Scattered, Disorganized External Status of the Cause of Spiritualism.

To the Editor: In your issue of April 13, 1907, a very large part of the space was devoted to articles from three sources that made prominent history and conditions past and present. H. D. Barrett's very extensive lesson covered over a half century, and however unpleasant the statement may be, it is in strict conformity to the high and sacred injunction: "Speak the truth though the heavens fall."

The reasons are many why the cause of Spiritualism first started in such an individualized, unorganized and scattered a manner. Many of the early adherents were materialists or independents, bitterly opposed to all religious organizations, and claims for Bible authority. Such writers and speakers as Robert Owen, Robert Dale Owen, Warren Chase, Henry C. Wright, Prof. Robert Hare, William Denton, and large numbers of speakers later on, as they traveled over the country, were harsh and bitter in their denunciation of churches and all religious organizations, as an unwarranted dictation and interference with the personal rights and minds of their members. So, for many years war was on fierce, and continuous between the churches and Spiritualists. After awhile the question of organization arose among the Spiritualists, and a National Association was organized west, and held meetings in different states. The organization question had to be fought over at every session. From the time the raps started from Hydesville on their journey around the world, I was in favor of organization, local, State and National, and on that question I was elected president at Providence, R. I., as the successor of the grand veteran John Pierpont, of Boston. Three years later, the go as you please, free for all crowd won, and elected Victoria C. Woodhull as president, and in less than two years the invalid organization died and there were no mourners to hold a funeral. Vermont was alive, and organized the first State Association, and it has never failed to hold its annual and semi-annual meetings to the present time; and the ministers and church people now do not criticise.

If the Spiritualists had been wise enough to have thoroughly and practically organized, even if only for business purposes, the cause would have been stronger thirty years ago than it is to-day. How true it ever was and ever will be, "united we stand, divided we linger and fall." I once saw a man so bound up in his isolated foolish individualism that he would not sign a petition or a promissory note, which connected him with others. It never was any wonder that consistency has been called a jewel.

Organization for any cause is always needed for proper regulation and protection. The wise and lasting foundation to build upon is that humanity is a universal family that dwells in both earthly and spiritual tenements; and that Spiritualism is a sacred and exalted religion represented by character and true living; and when properly organized and guarded would shut out those who would make it a show solely for the money.

Organized societies should always have permanent settled speakers, who can know and be known by those who listen to the instructions. Lectures, and children's lyceums, and phenomenal manifestations in all cases, should be held at sessions by themselves.

The cause of true Spiritualism is not responsible for the frauds who deceive; it is only hurt by those who uphold the wrong-doers after full exposure. The church is not responsible for the ministers who sometimes go wrong, and the members who prove to be hypocrites, unless, after knowledge, it tries to defend them.

I once saw a scrap-book in which were published accounts of over two hundred ministers who had gone wrong. Those were all within fifteen years' time. The headings of a large number of the notices were "Ministerial Rascals." A Methodist minister in Vermont advertised to preach six sermons, some time ago, against Liberalism and Spiritualism especially. That led to the scrap-book. It is quite evident that the one hundred and fifty speakers and well known Spiritualists, whom Brother H. D. Barrett found had allied themselves to some of the church organizations, did not find that the churches contained only Religious Saints. The chief reasons for many of the changes, with parties well known to me, were that they were more sure of a settled home, far better support, and an easier life in a regular and united organization.

It has been a great consolation to me to realize that while so many well known speakers and workers were leaving the Cause, a larger number of new ones all over the country were investigating and adopting the greatest revelation and most glorious truth the world has ever known.

The human mind cannot be fettered; changes will come in all the conditions of life. Falsehood cannot prevail while truth is free and ready to combat it. There always has been and ever must be a variety among the children of earth. There were money changers in the old Temple, who were driven out, and they are quite common inside and also outside of Temples in these days, who should be driven out. There are wonder seekers, and wonder workers to match. There are much needed active helpers and many heavy and selfish leaners who ever seek for front seats and easy places at small cost. In Bible times there were peculiar people, and some have been known in the days of Modern Spiritualism. They were opposed to organization, and a ten-cent admission to the lectures on the philosophy, and could not afford to pay for a Spiritualist paper; but sure to be on hand at dark seances, at one dollar admission, during the camp meeting season. The old-time H. Melville Fay, the rope-tying pretender, was detected in Vermont once, and frankly told me that while audiences would pay ten cents admission to hear lectures, he could take in fifty dollars a night with the dark circle rope exhibitions.

True and false, right and wrong, good and bad, genuine and counterfeit, are opposite terms that belong to things and conditions that do and ever will exist in the world. Genuine and counterfeit money; genuine and counterfeit mediums; good and bad ministers; good and bad organizations; honest and dishonest business men; true and loyal and deceptive people. While we should love and cherish and extol the good, we should not overlook nor deny that the bad exists, and strive to keep free from the wrong in all things. Hope on, hope ever; despair not, despair never.

NEWMAN WEEKS.

Lansdowne, Penn.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Science and a Future Life

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH

OR

Dial Planchette.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than twelve years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid, and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the

FORMATION OF CIRCLES AND CULTIVATION OF MEDIUMSHIP

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

BOOKS BY—

LILIAN WHITING.

THE LIFE RADIANT.—Cloth, $1.00 net. Decorated cloth $1.25. In this, her new book, Miss Whiting aims to portray a practical ideal for daily living that shall embody the sweetness and exaltation and faith that lend enchantment to life. It is, in a measure, a logical sequence of "The World Beautiful," leading into still diviner harmonies. "The Life Radiant" is characterized by the same essential qualities that have marked "The World Beautiful."
CONTENTS—The Golden Age Lies Onward; Discerning the Future; The Ethereal Realm; The Power of the Exalted Moment; The Nectar of the Hour.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE; or Death as an Event in Life. cloth, $1.00. A book from her pen means new flashes of insight, a revelation of Spiritual truth almost Emersonian in kind.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL; First, Second and Third Series. Three volumes, $1.00 per volume.
CONTENTS OF VOL. I.—The Duty of Happiness; Nectar and Ambrosia; Believe in the wings; The Vision and the Splendor; The Enlargement of Relations; Friends Discovered, not made; A Psychological Problem; The Supreme Luxury of Life; Exclusive and Inclusive; Through Scorning Nothing; The Woman of the World; The potency of Charm; Fine Souls and Fine Society; The Laws of Our Country; In Newness of Life; The Heavenly visitors.

AFTER HER DEATH.—A Story of a Summer. Price, $1.00. The ideas in the book will afford comfort to many, and should bring positive aid in sorrow to such as will receive its message.—Hartford Post.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT—Verses of the Life to Come. New edition, with additional poems. $1.00. Decorated cloth, $1.25. Lilian Whiting's verse is like a bit of sunlit landscape on a May morning.—Boston Herald.

KATE FIELD; A Record, with several portraits of Miss Field, including one by Elihu Vedder. Decorated cloth, $2.00

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning. With Portrait. Decorated cloth, $1.25.

RADIANT ENERGY and Its Analysis, Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price, cloth, $1.75.

Things in General.

As Viewed from the Standpoint of Mrs. Clara Watson of Jamestown, N. Y.—A Brief Reply from the President of the N. S. A.

No, a thousand times no, "Sister Clara Watson" does not think, nor has she ever advocated, nor ever so much as hinted that base, low, vile, immoral, deceptive action was as sacred in Spiritualism or anywhere else, as is good, clean, pure, upright, honest, moral action.

I read Mr. Barrett's recent letter and wondered what it all meant in charging this writer with upholding or defending such fraud and filth, deception, immorality and pretense, robbing of money and of virtue, debauchery, etc., as he sets forth in his letter. I did not know such awful degrading things were a part of Spiritualism.

His letter was a sad and terrible revelation to me, and Mr. Barrett's suggestions, or thought even, that I was a defender of such acts of wrong doing is hardly in accord with the good words he speaks for myself as an individual.

And here I wish to thank you, kind friend. Your kindly words are appreciated, and I will ever try to be worthy of the praise so generously bestowed.

In this writing I wish to reply to a few points in your letter of sad revelation. In my defense of what is termed commercialism in Spiritualism I was speaking of true mediumship, and not of fakes, pretenders, fortune-tellers and deceivers, plying their trade for money. If I read aright, Mr. Barrett's letter deals largely with the latter class.

My claim was and is that mediums who locate mines, oil wells and springs; that find lost or hidden treasures, or that give counsel in business, were benefiting humanity, and the denouncing of this work because it was not religious was and is a move toward divorcing Spiritualism from the practical or material needs of humanity. Abraham James was my type of a commercial medium, and his work was upright and legitimate. My good brother admits Mr. James' true worth as a man, and his success in locating some of the hidden treasures nature had stored away in the recesses of the earth for the benefit of mankind, and because he made money and helped others to do the same, and then lost it and died poor, Mr. Barrett ironically exclaims: "Great is commercialism in Spiritualism, and most wonderful are the results thereof."

But surely the making and losing of money through these finds did not constitute the all of the enterprise. The good to humanity at large outweighs a thousand fold the mere fact of large money to two or three individuals. The oil, water and minerals thus produced have blessed and benefited millions of lives, and the good accomplished by Dr. James lives after him.

It may not be called religious to find lost articles for people, but it may be very helpful. Spiritual help, words of cheer and hope and comfort, benedictions of peace and love, of which mention is made, are helpful and needful, and even practical, but they do not cover the whole of life's needs. Just recently a poor widow at whose husband's funeral I had officiated a few months before, came to me for a "sitting," work which I do not and cannot do. The lady seemed greatly disappointed, but as chance would have it a medium widely known who does give sittings, and who was a guest at our home at the time, accommodated the caller. It developed that important papers had been lost or mislaid, the finding of which possibly meant the saving of the humble home the husband had left her. The lady went away light-hearted, feeling the information received would aid her. Shall such effort be counted out of Spiritualism because not religious? Not from my Spiritualism.

The writer tried religion many years before coming into Spiritualism, and from it there came nothing helpful to my life. There was no spiritual growth, no progress, no education, no unfoldment of mental powers. The soul-longings were all unsatisfied; but Spiritualism supplies all. Spiritualism to me is not immorality.

The picture presented by Mr. Barrett's article is a terrible one. Can it be that Spiritualists are as black as painted in the picture?

Are Spiritualists "scoffers at the realities of being"? Do they "sneer at morality in season and out of season"? Do they "deny people reverence for truth—the divine urge onward and upward"? I have never encountered teaching of this kind in my thirty years' adherence to Spiritualism, but such are the accusations.

President Barrett defines religion as "good works, and the maintenance of a pure moral character," and then concludes that it is the "absence of the true religious spirit (or morality) that has wrought our ruin." And yet statements and statistics have been given again and again in The Progressive Thinker declaring Spiritualists as a class to be the most moral people on earth.

Again it is charged that it is the low standard of moral character among Spiritualists, their lack of devotion to truth and of "regard for the sacred impulses of the soul that is driving high minded, clean souled men and women from our ranks and into the church,"

Think of people leaving Spiritualism because it is "placed on too low a level," and going into the Christian church! Shades of departed heroes! Upon what level is the church builded? Upon a book containing a record of crime, debauchery, cruelty, lewdness, immorality, cannibalism, concubinage, bigamy and obscenity, utterly appaling, and the Bible characters thus represented are held up as models of emulation by the church. Its very foundation, which is its scheme of salvation, rests upon seduction, immorality, crime, bloodshed, cruelty and murder. This was "God's" plan of redeeming mankind. Dr. Crapsey, the late comeouter from the church, says: "The whole system is immoral."

It is nonsense to claim that the church is teaching the principles of Spiritualism. The church is still preaching the old "believe or be damned" doctrine.

Revivalists are roaming the world over, scaring people into the church through fear of being eternally lost if they refuse.

Last season during the revival effort here a leading churchman called upon me and urged me to come and be "converted." He said: "You are in danger. Come, Jesus is able to save you."

Recently I officiated with a minister at the funeral of my own cousin, a good man, but who did not believe in the church. In my remarks I spoke of his good life and good works as a preparation for the good life beyond, and advanced the thought that the loved husband and father might now become the spiritual comforter unto the sorrowing family. The minister flatly contradicted me, and said: "No person could enter the kingdom of God on their own good life and works. Only through Christ can mankind be saved." Again he said: "It is true the comforter can come, but it comes only through the Lord Jesus Christ, our Savior, and never through the return of any individual spirit."

But of course the poor fellow didn't know any better, and this is some of the "sop" high minded Spiritualists find in the church.

If Dr. Childs and Rosamond Dale Owen or any one else is in sympathy with the immoral, unnatural, impossible basic principles of the church; if they are in love with its damnation doctrine; if they sanction the bloody atonement—faith, not works that saves; if they enjoy its senseless ritualistic services, repetition of the Lord's prayer a billion times over, and reciting the creed, "I believe in the holy Catholic church, the virgin mother of Christ, the trinity of God (Father, Son and Holy Ghost), and in the resurrection of the physical body," etc., etc.—if all this pleases and edifies them, and means to them "reverence for truth," then the church is their place.

The church teaching the principles of Spiritualism!

Not much!

Rev. Dr. Hickman, president of the great Chautauqua movement, said recently: "There can be no morality without religion," meaning of course, the Christian kind, thus branding the great body of outsiders as immoral.

The church is constantly making effort to encroach upon the rights and liberties of all non-church people by urging more stringent Sunday laws to prevent people being happy on that day. In Canada the Sabbatarians have caused the enactment of the old or new Blue Laws, called "The Lord's Day Act in Force." Of course we all understand that the Unitarian and Universalist churches are an improvement over the orthodox, but both of these take the Bible with all its unsavory "mental odor," as their foundation, and rest their claims upon it.

Good Brother Barrett deplores the small pay of our workers, and thinks the Spiritualists are not generous supporters of their principles, because they do not pay as large salaries as the church does; but, my good friend, Modern Spiritualism has not had 2,000 years in which to work up a financial basis; and then one of the greatest incentives to giving to the church and in the church, does not belong to Spiritualism, that of fear of eternal damnation if they do not give. The people are made to believe by the priests and preachers that they are giving to God. That God requires "cheerful givers," and the poor dupes of priestly power give and give to the "Lord," and the preachers gather in the shekels.

With all its faults Spiritualism has never reached so low a level as to wring from the poor, ignorant, half-paid, half-fed, half-clothed and illy housed toilers a tithe or more of their scant earnings, that priests might revel in luxury and regal splendor. It has never sunk so low as to boast of takink the "widow's mite' or the last penny of the poor unfortunates to aid in building costly temples for the royal robed clergy to enter and receive the flattery, praise and homage of the poor dupes.

Spiritualism is an educator and an enlightener, and I do not believe any leader in our ranks can succeed in driving the sheep to the slaughter as does the church leader.

But I wish our workers could be better remunerated, and when our cause has become as popular, as old and as strong and as arbitary as the church, maybe they will be. My own income from my work in Spiritualism averages above expenses, perhaps three hundred dollars per year, and yet I have no thought of going back to the church. It is true I have a comfortable home as friend Barrett states, gotten through hard labor, industry, economy, sacrifice and perseverence on the part of my good husband and myself, and just three years ago we lifted the last indebtedness against it, and we are both in the sixties.

I have never asked, nor have I ever received a penny for the very many articles I have written covering almost every subject of human interest. I love my work and write because I like to, and because I think there is need for the liberal, progressive, advanced thought to be spoken.

I never put a price on my funeral work unless requested to, and then never make an arbitrary demand, but try to be governed by the circumstances of those calling me. Many times among the poor my service is perfectly free, sometimes leaving money instead of taking it, and I go just as willingly among this class, and try to do just as good work as among the prosperous and wealthy.

I have not given large money to Spiritualism, because I have not had it to give, but I have given devotion, time, energy and defense of its principles, and I have tried to give to it the record of a true life. We must each give in our own way.

Three prominent workers and givers to our cause and to the world have recently passed to the realm spiritual—Moses Hull, Jennie Hagan Brown and Theodore J. Mayer. They were all benefactors to mankind. Mr. Mayer, the last of the three to join the ranks of the immortals, devoted his energies, his efforts, his labors, his life, to the accumulation of material wealth (and yet not to the neglect of his spiritual nature), and was successful far beyond the average, and untold blessings have accrued to humanity through his success.

Now, had Mr. Mayer sought counsel or advice in some business venture from some business medium (not a fake), would this have been to the discredit of this noble hearted man? I do not know that he ever did, but really I can see no more harm in consulting with a spirit friend on matters of importance, than with a mortal friend.

However, I do not believe in rushing to mediums with every little affair of life, and throwing away reason, judgment and good sense to follow spirit direction.

Moses Hull, the first of the trio of noble workers to close his earth life, did not acquire material wealth. His legacy to Spiritualism and to the world was wealth of mind and soul. He bent his every effort to the accumulation of intellectual and spiritual riches, and his lectures, writing, debates, controversies and books and their influence in the world, is the heritage he leaves to mankind. The life and efforts of Mr. Hull have blessed and benefited the race and enriched the world of thought.

The little pen "squabbles" the writer had with good friend Moses, were but for the passing hour.

Mr. Hull was a fearless champion of right and truth as it appealed to him, and I always admired his ability and the interest he manifested in all reformatory work.

Jennie Hagan Brown left the heritage of her sweet, gentle and winsome nature woven into her public work as lecturer, speaker and medium. Her lectures and choice poetical and rhythmic productions or improvisations, touched the spiritual nature, comforted, benefited and uplifted humanity. I knew dear Jennie personally, and it was my pleasure at one time to entertain her in my home.

But I must close this already too lengthy article, and I haven't said half I wanted to, there was so much in President Barrett's letter that could be commented on, but I trust I have made myself plain on my view of commercialism in Spiritualism; but upon one point further I feel to say a word. Mr. Barrett charges that Spiritualists have "flouted (or mocked) religion." But my brother, a religion of "good works and pure moral character is a new thing; it is not what the world recognizes as religion. Good works and good character belong to the infidels, the atheists, the materialists, and to non-church Spiritualists, as much as to religionists, and to claim such action alone as religion, without any "worship," is as stated, a new thing. We haven't gotten accustomed to it, and if battling the errors, inconsistencies, absurdities and immoralities of the Christian religion its "mocking at religion," then many of us must plead guilty to the charge, and we Spiritualists have many able allies in the heretics from the church.

Again I say, the letter under consideration, coupled with the claims of the obsessionists and the endorsers of great psychological crimes in the name of Spiritualism, have cast a shadow over my life, and put a damper upon my exalted opinions of Spiritualism and Spiritualists. I tell you, fellow Spiritualists, it is an awful come-down when you had thought for many years that you were associated with a movement that was glorious, ennobling, uplifting and had denied with voice and pen all these years the foul charges of our opponents, to find these charges admitted by leading Spiritualists, and to learn that Spiritualism is honeycombed with fraud, selfishness, immorality, deception, demonism and damnation.

Can it all be true? If it is I do not wonder that two of our number took to the "woods" of materialism. I have been thinking of late whether or no I would add another to the list and be company for Mrs. Denton and good friend Jamieson. Now don't anybody rise and tell me Spiritualism could get along without me, for I know that fact perfectly well. But then I cannot muster quite courage enough as yet to take the step, however much I respect Mr. Jamieson (Mrs. Denton I do not know), and I remember how my materialist friend honored me with an invitation to act as one of the moderators at one of his debates with our now arisen Brother Moses, and I remember, too, how proud I was to accept the position, but then I'll not join materialism just yet.

In closing, let me say that I believe Mr. Barrett has the good of our cause at heart, and no doubt thinks the exploiting of the short-comings of Spiritualists will benefit the same.

But all do not agree with him. A little praise now and then goes a long way.

My good brother, your expressions of confidence, esteem and respect in and for myself are reciprocated in full.

CLARA WATSON.

Jamestown, N. Y.

JEAN INGELOW'S "SEVEN TIMES."

Staged at San Jose, California, Under the Direction of Rev. John W. Ring.

Jean Ingelow's "Seven Times" was very fittingly presented at the Y. M. C. A. Hall in San Jose, California, under the auspices of the First Spiritual Union.

Rev. John W. Ring, assisted by local talent, produced the staging of this beautiful poem.

Seven times one, "Childhood" was innocently portrayed by Miss Helen Bock; the second tableau, "Romance," by Miss Grace Ware; Miss Merle Muntz, who is the conductor of the Sunset Lyceum of San Jose, and brother acted the third role, "Love"; "Maternity," was interpreted very appreciatively by Mrs. H. S. Bock; "Widowhood," Miss Merle Muntz; "Longing for Home," Mrs. L. N. LeMay.

The mock wedding ceremony in which Mrs. Sheale represented the lonely widow, giving away her daughter, was an attractive feature. Miss Linda Zink, whose services as musician for the First Spiritual Union of San Jose are widely appreciated, rendered the music during the intermissions and while the different parts of the poem were being presented. Dr. H. S. Bock interested the audience with stereopticon views and moving pictures. Misses Evelyn Hambly and Grace Ware gave a specialty in the nature of a song, "Heine," which carried away the house. Miss Hambly's "Coon" solo was generally applauded, and "Mademoiselle New York," a song and dance by Miss Ware, was received with great pleasure by the audience.

Rev. John W. Ring also officiated at a Christening Sunday afternoon, March 17, at Hale's Hall, while filling his engagement with the First Spiritual Union, of San Jose. The beautiful public demonstration of christening the little ones, was preceded by some very instructive remarks by Rev. Ring.

Rev. J. W. Ring's services here were appreciated by one and all, and although the tears of heaven fell copiously, during his short stay in San Jose, we hope that he may be with us again in the near future. All recognize him as an able speaker and an arduous worker.

MRS. L. N. LE-MAY.

San Jose, Cal.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

The Last Word.

As Explicitly Set Forth by President Barrett.

It was with real pleasure that I read Mrs. Clara Watson's able and most kindly review of my article that appeared in The Progressive Thinker of April 6-13 ult. I do not find that we differ at all regarding essentials, varying only in our choice, perhaps use of terms.

Truth is many-sided, yet is always one at the center. Mrs. Watson is and ever has been a fearless truth seeker, an advocate of the principles of right and justice in all of her public and private utterances. She believes that error must be removed even if it takes hard blows to make that removal possible. No one would hold out a helping hand to one struggling to reform, more quickly than she would. She is against sham and pretense masquerading as mediumship, and stands loyally by the real gem, in brave defiance of all counterfeiters. In battling against these elements, she is at one with all true-hearted Spiritualists whose slogan is "Counterfeit Mediumship Must Go!"

Mrs Watson's excellent article shows where she stands and why. It is just what I knew she would say and do when the evils complained of were brought to her notice. Bald commercialism, tricking and fraudulent practices in the sacred name of mediumship, have no defender nor apologist in Clara Watson.

In regard to Abraham James, let me say that I did not intend to apply my ironical exclamation to him. I meant the men whose fortunes had been augmented by his mediumship, who not only neglected him when he needed aid, but also forgot the Cause he so ably represented. Abraham James was and is a good man—a true medium. His loss of property was his misfortune—not disgrace, nor yet reflection upon his integrity. He gave up everything to his creditors, preferring penury to possible profit in dollars through bankruptcy proceedings, and thereby gained a clear conscience. I honor him for his integrity and for his most excellent mediumship, yet feel that he is the exception that proves the rule, when dealing with commercialism as a whole.

The finding of those papers to which Sister Watson referred was certainly a good deed. Are not "good works" a part of the religion of Spiritualism? There was nothing sordid, nor material in the sitting in question. The medium who gave it relieved the distress of a needy widow, and added to the sum total of her happiness. This is religion from my point of view. Is there not, however, a wide difference between such sittings as the one mentioned, and those that are given for the express purpose of aiding some gambler in the stock exchange? What is there in common between it, with its help and comfort, and the giving of tips on races, with their demoralizing tendencies, when weighed side by side? I do not believe excarnate beings who are lovers of truth and honesty, lever lower themselves to the level of professional gamblers through the manipulation of any of the markets, nor yet by seeking to give people on earth something for nothing.

My instructors from the other side of life have always declared that we must pay to the uttermost farthing for everything we get. A line can be drawn between the mediumship that helps, comforts and uplifts mankind, and the sort that reduces all who seek it to the plane of the trickster, the charlatan and professional gambler. My protest is not against the giving of advice in business affairs as a part of the sitting; it is against the sordid practice of making our friends messengers for dealers in futures, and speculators in the sordid material elements of this life.

No doubt there are seeming paradoxes in my former article. When analyzed, however, they will be found to be such only in seeming. They testify to one and the same thing. The Spiritualists of our land are moralists of a high order of excellence. Taken as a class, they are honest in their business dealings. Their intellectual integrity is unquestioned. Many of them, however, are not consecrated to the support of the movement that has given them their freedom. They have gotten hold of a most precious segment of truth, retired into the privacy of their homes, where they purpose to enjoy it, little realizing how selfish they are in doing so. They are their brother's keepers, and as such, owe it to that brother to make him as happy and as intelligent as they are themselves. This they can do by supporting the Cause of Spiritualism as generously as they are able. My strictures applied only to those who are selfishly enjoying what the spirit world has given them, and are cruelly ignoring the heart-aches and soul-hunger of their suffering brothers. Spiritualism means so much to me that I long to see its blessings extended to all mankind. It is, or can be, the Universal Religion for all the world, but its followers must do their duty by it, or it will have to give way to a movement that does stand for universality. My words did not apply to the devoted generous givers in our ranks. They were designed for and applied to those who, though having much, yet do nothing.

As for those who returned to the church, let us concede that they were as honest as Brother Jamieson and Sister Denton, who have become materialists. They, at least, so Brother Jamieson says, left us because of their doubts as to the verity of many of the phenomenal. Those who went into the churches did so for reasons equally cogent. They wanted instruction from the platform. They desired dignity and decorum in the conduct of Sunday meetings. They rebelled against the dominant influence of sensationalism, and went where they would not have to thrust upon them. In the deeps of their souls, they knew Spiritualism to be true; but realized that its power for good could not be made known under existing conditions. The need of bread and butter drove some of our ministers into the ministry. Can we blame them for going where they could command living salaries? Let us settle our speakers, support our schools, carry on an active missionary propagandism, and then see if scholarly men and women will go from us rather than come to us. Dignity, decorum, reverence, scholarship are the requirements of the soul and in all public assemblies. Spiritualists should not be so unwilling to meet these great needs of the real man.

"High salaries?" I thought I made myself clear on that point. I do not believe in an overfed priesthood, and an underfed humanity. I do not believe in grinding the poor to enable a salaried clergy to revel in luxury. But I do believe that the laborer is worthy of his hire. I do contend that in inviting cultured men and women upon our platforms, we owe them at least a living. If they do not receive it, whose is the fault, if they return to the church or take to the woods of Maerialism? Like Sister Watson, I never make a charge for a funeral service outside of cost of travel. Were we properly organized, all such services could and would be performed gratis, by reason of the fact that our speakers would be compensated by their societies for all such work. Mrs. Watson has been a liberal giver to Spiritualism. Her whole life has been a round of good deeds. She has not only spoken the truth, but she has lived it, hence she cannot even by imputation, be classed with the mercenary parties whose practices and failures to practice I condemned so severely. Would that there were ten thousand workers in our ranks as devoted to Spiritualism as we know Clara Watson to be!

In my brief span of years, I have tried to do a little work for Spiritualism. I realize that I have made many mistakes—that I have not always done what my compeers thought best. But I have had faith in the angels, and in that principle of Theism upon which I am said to harp, hence have held on hoping for the triumph of the right in the end. I am no pessimist, even though some of my writings may seem tinged with bitterness, and tinctured with despair. I am confident that all will be well in the realm supernal, but not well unless we do our best here. I have for many years been "out on the firing line," where I have received hot shot from the enemy in front, and oftener still terrific volleys from those in the rear, who did not relish the idea of there being any work for them to do. I am outspoken in my opposition to the doctrine of "laissez faire."

I believe in doing.

I have written of the dangers that confront us, and have even painted some dark pictures setting forth existing conditions. It has not been a pleasant task, but the work had to be done by some one, and it chanced to be I to whom the duty was assigned.

I believe in the ultimate of the good, but only when people unite to supplant Error with Truth. I believe in bestowing praise wherever praise is due, but, I hold that the consciousness of having done one's best is a higher reward than that of praise.

Our Spiritualism is safe. The angels will take care of it. The Spiritualists are the ones with whom we must deal, and make them so optimistic in their thought-lives that all of the children of men will be cheered and warmed in soul by the radiant love-light they cast upon the world.

Yours for Spiritualism,

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

"AN IMPORTANT LESSON."

Spiritual Organization as Now Constituted Lacks Adhesive Power.

To the Editor: I have read in The Progressive Thiner with much interest the "Important Lesson," which Mr. H. D. Barrett has endeavored to impress on the minds of all who are interested in the welfare of Spiritualism as an organization.

I doubt not that every statement he has made of the moral obloquy and criminal performances of certain mediums is true, and Spiritualism as an organization must, under the present system or lack of system, shoulder the responsibility of all these vile and criminal performances.

The lesson which we learn from Mr. Barrett's communication is, first, that all kinds of commercial mediumistic work which fosters fraud, sensuality and every evil thing, is openly advertised by mediums who are supposed to represent Spiritualism. We learn, secondly, that many gifted Spiritualists have severed their connection with the organization of Spiritualists and united with Christian churches.

Now, what does this lesson teach us? It teaches us that, as Dr. C. W. Hidden says in an impressive article in The Progressive Thinker, "There is an Upper and an Under World of Spiritualism." We learn further, that the spiritual organization as now constituted lacks cohesive power; that there is something lacking in its teaching and philosophy, which lack leaves an aching void in the heart and mind, and is therefore inimical to that peace for which man in general as a religious being is continually searching.

Man must have a religion. To make a long story short—the Spiritualists' organization to hold many of its members must have a system of morals and a declared belief in God.

When they organize on that basis they will of necessity cut out the Under World of Spiritualism, which can then drift as it pleases; then purified and glorified Spiritualism can not be held responsible for the misdeeds of mediums.

Spiritualism reorganized on the basis I have suggested will command the attention and respect of the civilized world; its mediums will be teachers; its phenomena and revelations will be acceptable, and a solace to the mind and heart.

Let reorganized Spiritualists adopt the teachings of Christ as their creed, and be known as The Christian Spiritualist Church; then they will hold fast in the bonds of love and Christian fellowship every good man and woman who investigates spirit return, and it will never again be possible for Brother Barrett to present a long list of names of good and eminent men and women who have left the Spiritualist organization and gone to a Christian Church. THEODORE GRIFFIN.

Kansas City, Mo.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies." A Review of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated articles upon Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism, A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

The Brainy Rev. W. R. Bennett.

GREAT PROGRESS.

It is Being Made in the Churches—Spirit Return is Coming to the Front there, and Statements Are Made that Startle the Listeners—Rev. William Rainey Bennett, Pastor of the Congregational Church at Marion, Ind., is Appropriating the Truths of Spiritualism, as Reported in a Secular Paper.

I have always wondered why the religious people were so set against proving immortality. They seem to abhor the thought of any communication from those long loved and lost awhile. But I, for one, shall welcome every scientific evidence that can be established as a proof of the life after death. And I firmly believe that science, particularly psychic science, will back up my faith in the resurrection of Jesus by communications from persons who have passed into the great silence. I believe the great divide will be crossed and that we can be absolutely certain here on earth that our friends are in heaven.

You would be surprised if I told you that there were many who doubted the continued life, and many, many thousands who are longing for a certainty stronger than blind faith that their loved ones live.

So strong has become the current of scientific thought, so dominant the temper in all circles of culture, that we can no longer allow our immortality to remain an unverified hypothesis, or content ourselves with a "larger hope." We must have an evidence that is more than a faith in the words of one man living 2,000 years ago, if we can get it.

Meyers, the great scientist, thinks that the human soul did not begin to exist with life of the body, and will not cease with the cessation of that body. The human soul does not depend for its existence upon the body, but only for its manifestations, as I compared the soul and brain last Sunday night to a violinist and his instrument. "Nor," says Meyers, "is the soul dependent all the time for all its manifestations on the body."

Quite a number of the psychologists of the present time claim that we can photograph thought. That the subconscious mind can project itself so that it can be seen, and Hudson accounts for ghosts on these grounds.

The evidence that I shall use to-night is of men of authority. Now it is not at all fair to take the words of all persons. I could have enough evidence here to-night to convince the world if I would believe everything that has been told me since I began this series of lectures. But when we consider the word and work of such men as William James of Harvard, James Hyslop, Frank Podmore, Frederick H. W. Meyers and Dr. Hodgson, the evidence becomes virile and strong. We are certain that men of the scientific reputation such as they have the world over will not try to deceive themselves, and will not be easily deluded. In fact they have rejected all the more common "facts" of Spiritualism and have limited their evidence largely to the work of one woman, Mrs. Piper.

In fact, only one man of any repute in science has made any observations in "materializations" and has given them any validity whatsoever. And this man is Sir William Crookes, the inventor of the "Crookes Tubes." used in connection with the X-ray machine. But the society of psychical research has not considered his observations along this line of any great value.

But as I read Podmore, the keenest critic of the work of the Psychic Research society, on his criticisms of Sir William Crookes, I must confess that he does not make out a strong case against him. Crookes made a series of experiments with a medium whose spirit was called "Katie," and he claims to have in all forty photographs both of her and the medium at once in his own home.

But I prefer to agree with Dr. Hyslop in his articles on the work of the Psychic Research society, when he says physical phenomena of Spiritualism are too easily and commonly connected with fraud to be of value. In fact, the society has exposed nearly, if not quite all, "materialization" seances as frauds. The only thing that has appealed to them are those alleged facts which reveal the personal identity of the supposed spirit.

Now, telepathy has become a scientific fact if we can believe the words of the most scientific men in America and England. Mind can talk to mind and distance does not enter in as a factor.

Too many of these experiences are occurring to make it a mere matter of coincidence. No doubt I could get evidence of mental communications right here to-night by the hundreds. But that does not prove the life after death. But it does suggest that if two minds can communicate with each other without any physical medium, at any distance, that mind has a quality more than has been understood. It also suggests the possibility of two sympathetic minds communicating through the thin veil that separates the next life from this, if there be any. It has given us the means and the method for us to know that our friends live, if we can get the results.

Now, it has been considered impossible heretofore to have any way to communicate with the departed spirits, and we had thought of the other world's being shut off by impervious space. It means much to have pointed out the possible means to an end, and I for one admit the possibility. I am only waiting for the application of the principle—the actual instances.

Now, the intervention of a "medium" seems to have helped out this communication between earth and heaven. Let us not behave unseemly at this thought. It is in thorough accord with all the rest of the scientific phenomena, also with our religion. For instance, we talk of Jesus Christ as a medium, or mediator, pleading at the throne of God for us. We pray through Him. We say He came to tell us of God, and reveal the Father. He said all along that he did what He saw the Father doing. He claimed to be "controlled" by the Father.

The theory of inspiration upon which the authority of the Bible is founded in most people's minds is a theory of "spirit control." Modern science is bringing up instances of the inspired person to-day who speaks more than he knows. There was Joan of Arc, one of the most wonderful women from the point of influence ever known — absolutely uneducated. The bystanders said of Jesus: "How can this man so speak having never learned?"

Some of the most wonderful things occur at the present time. There was an inspirational speaker at Chesterfield last summer. She would speak on any subject at a mere invitation, and her language and reasoning powers were astonishing. She was asked by a friend of mine last summer to speak on the subject of sociology and religion, and did so. I have the testimony of two men who are not either of them Spiritualists, who say it was the most wonderful speech they had ever heard. They said that one of her age could not have had the scientific knowledge and the use of language she displayed by any known method of getting knowledge. These men are both lifelong students of the subject both of economics, and both claimed to me that they could not have prepared as good a speech in a week's time, with the help of a good library. And this young girl, not 20, spoke for two hours without any preparation at all.

Now, these are wonderful things, and go to prove that we are immersed in spiritual forces of which we are ignorant, just as we are living in a sea of natural energies invisible, but real.

But in this there is no identity of persons, and no proof of a personal existence after life.

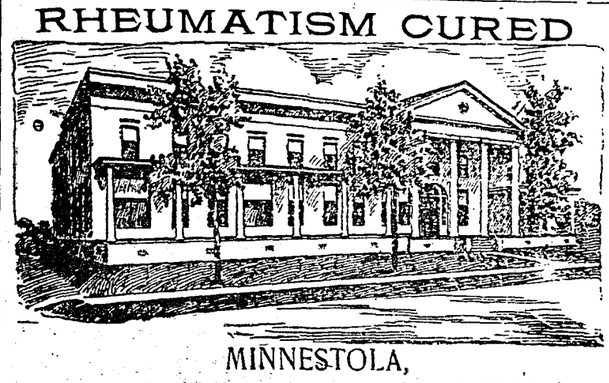
Now, I want to present some evidence which has been told me by a lady in whom I have a great deal of confidence. This lady's mother is a "medium," but her powers are not generally known. The family is well-to-do in this world's good, hence there is no temptation to make money out of the mother's psychic powers. She never does any "trance work" outside of her own family. These "trances" come on her without her volition, and in fact she tries by will power to keep them off. During these trances, in which the alleged spirit talks through her, she herself is unconscious of what she is saying or doing, and always asks what was said. There are very few believers in Spiritualism in that community, so naturally all of these things are kept quiet. In the course of her conversation Mrs. X, I will call her, told me many things that would come under the head of telepathy or mind reading, and I could account for them on natural grounds. But she told me this instance in which her mother and she were sitting alone one night, reading, when all of a sudden Mrs. X saw that her mother was in a "trance." The spirit addressed her as Mrs. X, and said, "Do you know me?" Mrs. X did not. Then the medium took a newspaper and held it close to her eyes, as if she were near-sighted, and said, "Don't you know me now?" No. "Well, I'm Ike Smith." Mrs. X said, "I did not know you had passed out." He said, "Oh, yes, and I have come to strengthen your faith." Mrs. X was not a Spiritualist.

Now what were the facts. Mrs. X had not seen Ike Smith since she was a girl. But she remembered him as near-sighted, but otherwise a fine-looking man. They were friends. But she did not know he had died. For days she kept this a secret. Finally she told her mother what she had said. Her mother was ignorant of Smith's death, and was very much afraid that a mistake had been made. They never told it to anyone, for they were afraid it would disturb the faith of her father. On investigation they found that Smith had been dead for three years.

If this were the only instance I would call it a coincidence and let it go. But the Psychic Research society has worked with Mrs. Piper until they have an abundance of evidence that something speaks through her with more than human knowledge. It is true that many of the things she tells the sitter he knows, and it is a pure case of telepathy, but Podmore, the most unmerciful critic of the society's work, has been compelled to admit that there are facts she tells that can not possibly be known by the sitter. The most conclusive evidence or proof yet known is the massages of a friend of Dr. Hodges, who had promised to make himself known if he were alive after death. Dr. Hodges and many others claim that messages have come back from him through Mrs. Piper that identify beyond doubt his personality.

Space forbids me to give concrete instances, but any who want to know can find the results of the Psychic Research society in the library. The evidence is very strong.

Next Sunday night I shall take up "The Ageless Life," and will talk about conditional immortality and the teachings of Jesus on life after death.



ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration. If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

Womanly Beauty ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

Things in General.

As Viewed from the Standpoint of Mrs. Clara Watson of Jamestown, N. Y.—A Brief Reply from the President of the N. S. A.

No, a thousand times no, "Sister Clara Watson" does not think, nor has she ever advocated, nor ever so much as hinted that base, low, vile, immoral, deceptive action was as sacred in Spiritualism or anywhere else, as is good, clean, pure, upright, honest, moral action.

I read Mr. Barrett's recent letter and wondered what it all meant in charging this writer with upholding or defending such fraud and filth, deception, immorality and pretense, robbing of money and of virtue, debauchery, etc., as he sets forth in his letter. I did not know such awful degrading things were a part of Spiritualism.

His letter was a sad and terrible revelation to me, and Mr. Barrett's suggestions, or thought even, that I was a defender of such acts of wrong doing is hardly in accord with the good words he speaks for myself as an individual.

And here I wish to thank you, kind friend. Your kindly words are appreciated, and I will ever try to be worthy of the praise so generously bestowed.

In this writing I wish to reply to a few points in your letter of sad revelation. In my defense of what is termed commercialism in Spiritualism I was speaking of true mediumship, and not of fakes, pretenders, fortune-tellers and deceivers, plying their trade for money. If I read aright, Mr. Barrett's letter deals largely with the latter class.

My claim was and is that mediums who locate mines, oil wells and springs; that find lost or hidden treasures, or that give counsel in business, were benefiting humanity, and the denouncing of this work because it was not religious was and is a move toward divorcing Spiritualism from the practical or material needs of humanity. Abraham James was my type of a commercial medium, and his work was upright and legitimate. My good brother admits Mr. James' true worth as a man, and his success in locating some of the hidden treasures nature had stored away in the recesses of the earth for the benefit of mankind, and because he made money and helped others to do the same, and then lost it and died poor, Mr. Barrett ironically exclaims: "Great is commercialism in Spiritualism, and most wonderful are the results thereof."

But surely the making and losing of money through these finds did not constitute the all of the enterprise. The good to humanity at large outweighs a thousand fold the mere fact of large money to two or three individuals. The oil, water and minerals thus produced have blessed and benefited millions of lives, and the good accomplished by Dr. James lives after him.

It may not be called religious to find lost articles for people, but it may be very helpful. Spiritual help, words of cheer and hope and comfort, benedictions of peace and love, of which mention is made, are helpful and needful, and even practical, but they do not cover the whole of life's needs. Just recently a poor widow at whose husband's funeral I had officiated a few months before, came to me for a "sitting," work which I do not and cannot do. The lady seemed greatly disappointed, but as chance would have it a medium widely known who does give sittings, and who was a guest at our home at the time, accommodated the caller. It developed that important papers had been lost or mislaid, the finding of which possibly meant the saving of the humble home the husband had left her. The lady went away light-hearted, feeling the information received would aid her. Shall such effort be counted out of Spiritualism because not religious? Not from my Spiritualism.

The writer tried religion many years before coming into Spiritualism, and from it there came nothing helpful to my life. There was no spiritual growth, no progress, no education, no unfoldment of mental powers. The soul-longings were all unsatisfied; but Spiritualism supplies all. Spiritualism to me is not immorality.

The picture presented by Mr. Barrett's article is a terrible one. Can it be that Spiritualists are as black as painted in the picture?

Are Spiritualists "scoffers at the realities of being"? Do they "sneer at morality in season and out of season"? Do they "deny people reverence for truth—the divine urge onward and upward"?. I have never encountered teaching of this kind in my thirty years' adherence to Spiritualism, but such are the accusations.

President Barrett defines religion as "good works, and the maintenance of a pure moral character," and then concludes that it is the "absence of the true religious spirit (or morality) that has wrought our ruin." And yet statements and statistics have been given again and again in The Progressive Thinker declaring Spiritualists as a class to be the most moral people on earth.

Again it is charged that it is the low standard of moral character among Spiritualists, their lack of devotion to truth and of "regard for the sacred impulses of the soul that is driving high minded, clean souled men and women from our ranks and into the church."

Think of people leaving Spiritualism because it is "placed on too low a level," and going into the Christian church! Shades of departed heroes! Upon what level is the church builded? Upon a book containing a record of crime, debauchery, cruelty, lewdness, immorality, cannibalism, concubinage, bigamy and obscenity, utterly appaling, and the Bible characters thus represented are held up as models of emulation by the church. Its very foundation, which is its scheme of salvation, rests upon seduction, immorality, crime, bloodshed, cruelty and murder. This was "God's" plan of redeeming mankind. Dr. Crapsey, the late comeouter from the church, says: "The whole system is immoral."

It is nonsense to claim that the church is teaching the principles of Spiritualism. The church is still preaching the old "believe or be damned" doctrine.

Revivalists are roaming the world over, scaring people into the church through fear of being eternally lost if they refuse.

Last season during the revival effort here a leading churchman called upon me and urged me to come and be "converted." He said: "You are in danger. Come, Jesus is able to save you."

Recently I officiated with a minister at the funeral of my own cousin, a good man, but who did not believe in the church. In my remarks I spoke of his good life and good works as a preparation for the good life beyond, and advanced the thought that the loved husband and father might now become the spiritual comforter unto the sorrowing family. The minister flatly contradicted me, and said: "No person could enter the kingdom of God on their own good life and works. Only through Christ can mankind be saved." Again he said: "It is true the comforter can come, but it comes only through the Lord Jesus Christ, our Savior, and never through the return of any individual spirit."

But of course the poor fellow didn't know any better, and this is some of the "sop" high minded Spiritualists find in the church.

If Dr. Childs and Rosamond Dale Owen or any one else is in sympathy with the immoral, unnatural, impossible basic principles of the church; if they are in love with its damnation doctrine; if they sanction the bloody atonement—faith, not works that saves; if they enjoy its senseless ritualistic services, repetition of the Lord's prayer a billion times over, and reciting the creed, "I believe in the holy Catholic church, the virgin mother of Christ, the trinity of God (Father, Son and Holy Ghost), and in the resurrection of the physical body," etc., etc.—if all this pleases and edifies them, and means to them "reverence for truth," then the church is their place.

The church teaching the principles of Spiritualism!

Not much!

Rev. Dr. Hickman, president of the great Chautauqua movement, said recently: "There can be no morality without religion," meaning of course, the Christian kind, thus branding the great body of outsiders as immoral.

The church is constantly making effort to encroach upon the rights and liberties of all non-church people by urging more stringent Sunday laws to prevent people being happy on that day. In Canada the Sabbatarians have caused the enactment of the old or new Blue Laws, called "The Lord's Day Act in Force." Of course we all understand that the Unitarian and Universalist churches are an improvement over the orthodox, but both of these take the Bible with all its unsavory "mental odor," as their foundation, and rest their claims upon it.

Good Brother Barrett deplores the small pay of our workers, and thinks the Spiritualists are not generous supporters of their principles, because they do not pay as large salaries as the church does; but, my good friend, Modern Spiritualism has not had 2,000 years in which to work up a financial basis; and then one of the greatest incentives to giving to the church and in the church, does not belong to Spiritualism, that of fear of eternal damnation if they do not give. The people are made to believe by the priests and preachers that they are giving to God. That God requires "cheerful givers," and the poor dupes of priestly power give and give to the "Lord," and the preachers gather in the shekels.

With all its faults Spiritualism has never reached so low a level as to wring from the poor, ignorant, half-paid, half-fed, half-clothed and illy housed toilers a tithe or more of their scant earnings, that priests might revel in luxury and regal splendor. It has never sunk so low as to boast of takink the "widow's mite' or the last penny of the poor unfortunates to aid in building costly temples for the royal robed clergy to enter and receive the flattery, praise and homage of the poor dupes.

Spiritualism is an educator and an enlightener, and I do not believe any leader in our ranks can succeed in driving the sheep to the slaughter as does the church leader.

But I wish our workers could be better remunerated, and when our cause has become as popular, as old and as strong and as arbitrary as the church, maybe they will be. My own income from my work in Spiritualism averages above expenses, perhaps three hundred dollars per year, and yet I have no thought of going back to the church. It is true I have a comfortable home as friend Barrett states, gotten through hard labor, industry, economy, sacrifice and perseverence on the part of my good husband and myself, and just three years ago we lifted the last indebtedness against it, and we are both in the sixties.

I have never asked, nor have I ever received a penny for the very many articles I have written covering almost every subject of human interest. I love my work and write because I like to, and because I think there is need for the liberal, progressive, advanced thought to be spoken.

I never put a price on my funeral work unless requested to, and then never make an arbitrary demand, but try to be governed by the circumstances of those calling me. Many times among the poor my service is perfectly free, sometimes leaving money instead of taking it, and I go just as willingly among this class, and try to do just as good work as among the prosperous and wealthy.

I have not given large money to Spiritualism, because I have not had it to give, but I have given devotion, time, energy and defense of its principles, and I have tried to give to it the record of a true life. We must each give in our own way.

Three prominent workers and givers to our cause and to the world have recently passed to the realm spiritual—Moses Hull, Jennie Hagan Brown and Theodore J. Mayer. They were all benefactors to mankind. Mr. Mayer, the last of the three to join the ranks of the immortals, devoted his energies, his efforts, his labors, his life, to the accumulation of material wealth (and yet not to the neglect of his spiritual nature), and was successful far beyond the average, and untold blessings have accrued to humanity through his success.

Now, had Mr. Mayer sought counsel or advice in some business venture from some business medium (not a fake), would this have been to the discredit of this noble hearted man? I do not know that he ever did, but really I can see no more harm in consulting with a spirit friend on matters of importance, than with a mortal friend.

However, I do not believe in rushing to mediums with every little affair of life, and throwing away reason, judgment and good sense to follow spirit direction.

Moses Hull, the first of the trio of noble workers to close his earth life, did not acquire material wealth. His legacy to Spiritualism and to the world was wealth of mind and soul. He bent his every effort to the accumulation of intellectual and spiritual riches, and his lectures, writing, debates, controversies and books and their influence in the world, is the heritage he leaves to mankind. The life and efforts of Mr. Hull have blessed and benefited the race and enriched the world of thought.

The little pen "squabbles" the writer had with good friend Moses, were but for the passing hour.

Mr. Hull was a fearless champion of right and truth as it appealed to him, and I always admired his ability and the interest he manifested in all reformatory work.

Jennie Hagan Brown left the heritage of her sweet, gentle and winsome nature woven into her public work as lecturer, speaker and medium. Her lectures and choice poetical and rhythmic productions or improvisations, touched the spiritual nature, comforted, benefited and uplifted humanity. I knew dear Jennie personally, and it was my pleasure at one time to entertain her in my home.

But I must close this already too lengthy article, and I haven't said half I wanted to, there was so much in President Barrett's letter that could be commented on, but I trust I have made myself plain on my view of commercialism in Spiritualism; but upon one point further I feel to say a word. Mr. Barrett charges that Spiritualists have "flouted (or mocked) religion." But my brother, a religion of "good works and pure moral character is a new thing; it is not what the world recognizes as religion." Good works and good character belong to the infidels, the atheists, the materialists, and to non-church Spiritualists, as much as to religionists, and to claim such action alone as religion, without any "worship," is as stated, a new thing. We haven't gotten accustomed to it, and if battling the errors, inconsistencies, absurdities and immoralities of the Christian religion its "mocking at religion," then many of us must plead guilty to the charge, and we Spiritualists have many able allies in the heretics from the church.

Again I say, the letter under consideration, coupled with the claims of the obsessionists and the endorsers of great psychological crimes in the name of Spiritualism, have cast a shadow over my life, and put a damper upon my exalted opinions of Spiritualism and Spiritualists. I tell you, fellow Spiritualists, it is an awful come-down when you had thought for many years that you were associated with a movement that was glorious, ennobling, uplifting and had denied with voice and pen all these years the foul charges of our opponents, to find these charges admitted by leading Spiritualists, and to learn that Spiritualism is honeycombed with fraud, selfishness, immorality, deception, demonism and damnation.

Can it all be true? If it is I do not wonder that two of our number took to the "woods" of materialism. I have been thinking of late whether or no I would add another to the list and be company for Mrs. Denton and good friend Jamieson. Now don't anybody rise and tell me Spiritualism could get along without me, for I know that fact perfectly well. But then I cannot muster quite courage enough as yet to take the step, however much I respect Mr. Jamieson (Mrs. Denton I do not know), and I remember how my materialist friend honored me with an invitation to act as one of the moderators at one of his debates with our now arisen Brother Moses, and I remember, too, how proud I was to accept the position, but then I'll not join materialism just yet.

In closing, let me say that I believe Mr. Barrett has the good of our cause at heart, and no doubt thinks the exploiting of the short-comings of Spiritualists will benefit the same.

But all do not agree with him. A little praise now and then goes a long way.

My good brother, your expressions of confidence, esteem and respect in and for myself are reciprocated in full.

CLARA WATSON.

Jamestown, N. Y.

JEAN INGELOW'S "SEVEN TIMES."

Staged at San Jose, California, Under the Direction of Rev. John W. Ring.

Jean Ingelow's "Seven Times" was very fittingly presented at the Y. M. C. A. Hall in San Jose, California, under the auspices of the First Spiritual Union.

Rev. John W. Ring, assisted by local talent, produced the staging of this beautiful poem.

Seven times one, "Childhood" was innocently portrayed by Miss Helen Bock; the second tableau, "Romance," by Miss Grace Ware; Miss Merle Muntz, who is the conductor of the Sunset Lyceum of San Jose, and brother acted the third role, "Love"; "Maternity," was interpreted very appreciatively by Mrs. H. S. Bock; "Widowhood," Miss Merle Muntz; "Longing for Home," Mrs. L. N. LeMay.

The mock wedding ceremony in which Mrs. Sheale represented the lonely widow, giving away her daughter, was an attractive feature. Miss Linda Zink, whose services as musician for the First Spiritual Union of San Jose are widely appreciated, rendered the music during the intermissions and while the different parts of the poem were being presented. Dr. H. S. Bock interested the audience with stereopticon views and moving pictures. Misses Evelyn Hambly and Grace Ware gave a specialty in the nature of a song, "Heine," which carried away the house. Miss Hambly's "Coon" solo was generally applauded, and "Mademoiselle New York," a song and dance by Miss Ware, was received with great pleasure by the audience.

Rev. John W. Ring also officiated at a Christening Sunday afternoon, March 17, at Hale's Hall, while filling his engagement with the First Spiritual Union, of San Jose. The beautiful public demonstration of christening the little ones, was preceded by some very instructive remarks by Rev. Ring.

Rev. J. W. Ring's services here were appreciated by one and all, and although the tears of heaven fell copiously, during his short stay in San Jose, we hope that he may be with us again in the near future. All recognize him as an able speaker and an arduous worker.

MRS. L. N. LE-MAY.

San Jose, Cal.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

The Last Word.

As Explicitly Set Forth by President Barrett.

It was with real pleasure that I read Mrs. Clara Watson's able and most kindly review of my article that appeared in The Progressive Thinker of April 6-13 ult. I do not find that we differ at all regarding essentials, varying only in our choice, perhaps use of terms.

Truth is many-sided, yet is always one at the center. Mrs. Watson is and ever has been a fearless truth seeker, an advocate of the principles of right and justice in all of her public and private utterances. She believes that error must be removed even if it takes hard blows to make that removal possible. No one would hold out a helping hand to one struggling to reform, more quickly than she would. She is against sham and pretense masquerading as mediumship, and stands loyally by the real gem, in brave defiance of all counterfeiters. In battling against these elements, she is at one with all true-hearted Spiritualists whose slogan is "Counterfeit Mediumship Must Go!"

Mrs Watson's excellent article shows where she stands and why. It is just what I knew she would say and do when the evils complained of were brought to her notice. Bald commercialism, tricking and fraudulent practices in the sacred name of mediumship, have no defender nor apologist in Clara Watson.

In regard to Abraham James, let me say that I did not intend to apply my ironical exclamation to him. I meant the men whose fortunes had been augmented by his mediumship, who not only neglected him when he needed aid, but also forgot the Cause he so ably represented. Abraham James was and is a good man—a true medium. His loss of property was his misfortune—not disgrace, nor yet reflection upon his integrity. He gave up everything to his creditors, preferring penury to possible profit in dollars through bankruptcy proceedings, and thereby gained a clear conscience. I honor him for his integrity and for his most excellent mediumship, yet feel that he is the exception that proves the rule, when dealing with commercialism as a whole.

The finding of those papers to which Sister Watson referred was certainly a good deed. Are not "good works" a part of the religion of Spiritualism? There was nothing sordid, nor material in the sitting in question. The medium who gave it relieved the distress of a needy widow, and added to the sum total of her happiness. This is religion from my point of view. Is there not, however, a wide difference between such sittings as the one mentioned, and those that are given for the express purpose of aiding some gambler in the stock exchange? What is there in common between it, with its help and comfort, and the giving of tips on races, with their demoralizing tendencies, when weighed side by side? I do not believe excarnate beings who are lovers of truth and honesty, lever lower themselves to the level of professional gamblers through the manipulation of any of the markets, nor yet by seeking to give people on earth something for nothing.

My instructors from the other side of life have always declared that we must pay to the uttermost farthing for everything we get. A line can be drawn between the mediumship that helps, comforts and uplifts mankind, and the sort that reduces all who seek it to the plane of the trickster, the charlatan and professional gambler. My protest is not against the giving of advice in business affairs as a part of the sitting; it is against the sordid practice of making our friends messengers for dealers in futures, and speculators in the sordid material elements of this life.

No doubt there are seeming paradoxes in my former article. When analyzed, however, they will be found to be such only in seeming. They testify to one and the same thing. The Spiritualists of our land are moralists of a high order of excellence. Taken as a class, they are honest in their business dealings. Their intellectual integrity is unquestioned. Many of them, however, are not consecrated to the support of the movement that has given them their freedom. They have gotten hold of a most precious segment of truth, retired into the privacy of their homes, where they purpose to enjoy it, little realizing how selfish they are in doing so. They are their brother's keepers, and as such, owe it to that brother to make him as happy and as intelligent as they are themselves. This they can do by supporting the Cause of Spiritualism as generously as they are able. My strictures applied only to those who are selfishly enjoying what the spirit world has given them, and are cruelly ignoring the heart-aches and soul-hunger of their suffering brothers. Spiritualism means so much to me that I long to see its blessings extended to all mankind. It is, or can be, the Universal Religion for all the world, but its followers must do their duty by it, or it will have to give way to a movement that does stand for universality. My words did not apply to the devoted generous givers in our ranks. They were designed for and applied to those who, though having much, yet do nothing.

As for those who returned to the church, let us concede that they were as honest as Brother Jamieson and Sister Denton, who have become materialists. They, at least, so Brother Jamieson says, left us because of their doubts as to the merity of many of the phenomena. Those who went into the churches did so for reasons equally cogent. They wanted instruction from the platform. They desired dignity and decorum in the conduct of Sunday meetings. They rebelled against the dominant influence of sensationalism, and went where they would not have it thrust upon them. In the deeps of their souls, they knew Spiritualism to be true, but realized that its power for good could not be made known under existing conditions. The need of bread and butter drove some of our ministers into the ministry. Can we blame them for going where they could command living salaries? Let us settle our speakers, support our schools, carry on an active missionary propagandism, and then see if scholarly men and women will go from us rather than come to us. Dignity, decorum, reverence, scholarship are the requirements of the soul and in all public assemblies. Spiritualists should not be so unwilling to meet these great needs of the real man.

"High salaries?" I thought I made myself clear on that point. I do not believe in an overfed priesthood, and an underfed humanity. I do not believe in grinding the poor to enable a salaried clergy to revel in luxury. But I do believe that the laborer is worthy of his hire. I do contend that in inviting cultured men and women upon our platforms, we owe them at least a living. If they do not receive it, whose is the fault, if they return to the church or take to the woods of Maerialism? Like Sister Watson, I never make a charge for a funeral service outside of cost of travel. Were we properly organized, all such services could and would be performed gratis, by reason of the fact that our speakers would be compensated by their societies for all such work. Mrs. Watson has been a liberal giver to Spiritualism. Her whole life has been a round of good deeds. She has not only spoken the truth, but she has lived it, hence she cannot even by imputation, be classed with the mercenary parties whose practices and failures to practice I condemned so severely. Would that there were ten thousand workers in our ranks as devoted to Spiritualism as we know Clara Watson to be!

In my brief span of years, I have tried to do a little work for Spiritualism. I realize that I have made many mistakes—that I have not always done what my compeers thought best. But I have had faith in the angels, and in that principle of Theism upon which I am said to harp, hence have held on hoping for the triumph of the right in the end. I am no pessimist, even though some of my writings may seem tinged with bitterness, and tinctured with despair. I am confident that all will be well in the realm supernal, but not well unless we do our best here. I have for many years been "out on the firing line," where I have received hot shot from the enemy in front, and oftener still terrific volleys from those in the rear, who did not relish the idea of there being any work for them to do. I am outspoken in my opposition to the doctrine of "laissez faire."

I believe in doing.

I have written of the dangers that confront us, and have even painted some dark pictures setting forth existing conditions. It has not been a pleasant task, but the work had to be done by some one, and it chanced to be I to whom the duty was assigned.

I believe in the ultimate of the good, but only when people unite to supplant Error with Truth. I believe in bestowing praise wherever praise is due, but, I hold that the consciousness of having done one's best is a higher reward than that of praise.

Our Spiritualism is safe. The angels will take care of it. The Spiritualists are the ones with whom we must deal, and make them so optimistic in their thought-lives that all of the children of men will be cheered and warmed in soul by the radiant love-light they cast upon the world.

Yours for Spiritualism,

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

"AN IMPORTANT LESSON."

Spiritual Organization as Now Constituted Lacks Adhesive Power.

To the Editor: I have read in The Progressive Thiner with much interest the "Important Lesson," which Mr. H. D. Barrett has endeavored to impress on the minds of all who are interested in the welfare of Spiritualism as an organization.

I doubt not that every statement he has made of the moral obloquy and criminal performances of certain mediums is true, and Spiritualism as an organization must, under the present system or lack of system, shoulder the responsibility of all these vile and criminal performances.

The lesson which we learn from Mr. Barrett's communication is, first, that all kinds of commercial mediumistic work which fosters fraud, sensuality and every evil thing, is openly advertised by mediums who are supposed to represent Spiritualism. We learn, secondly, that many gifted Spiritualists have severed their connection with the organization of Spiritualists and united with Christian churches.

Now, what does this lesson teach us? It teaches us that, as Dr. C. W. Hidden says in an impressive article in The Progressive Thinker, "There is an Upper and an Under World of Spiritualism." We learn further, that the spiritual organization as now constituted lacks cohesive power; that there is something lacking in its teaching and philosophy, which lack leaves an aching void in the heart and mind, and is therefore inimical to that peace for which man in general as a religious being is continually searching.

Man must have a religion. To make a long story short—the Spiritualists' organization to hold many of its members must have a system of morals and a declared belief in God.

When they organize on that basis they will of necessity cut out the Under World of Spiritualism, which can then drift as it pleases; then purified and glorified Spiritualism can not be held responsible for the misdeeds of mediums.

Spiritualism reorganized on the basis I have suggested will command the attention and respect of the civilized world; its mediums will be teachers; its phenomena and revelations will be acceptable, and a solace to the mind and heart.

Let reorganized Spiritualists adopt the teachings of Christ as their creed, and be known as The Christian Spiritualist Church; then they will hold fast in the bonds of love and Christian fellowship every good man and woman who investigates spirit return, and it will never again be possible for Brother Barrett to present a long list of names of good and eminent men and women who have left the Spiritualist organization and gone to a Christian Church.

THEODORE GRIFFIN.

Kansas City, Mo.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies." A Review of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated articles upon Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism, A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Forces." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

The Brainy Rev. W. R. Bennett.

GREAT PROGRESS.

It is Being Made in the Churches—Spirit Return is Coming to the Front there, and Statements Are Made that Startle the Listeners—Rev. William Rainey Bennett, Pastor of the Congregational Church at Marion, Ind., is Appropriating the Truths of Spiritualism, as Reported in a Secular Paper.

I have always wondered why the religious people were so set against proving immortality. They seem to abhor the thought of any communication from those long loved and lost awhile. But I, for one, shall welcome every scientific evidence that can be established as a proof of the life after death. And I firmly believe that science, particularly psychic science, will back up my faith in the resurrection of Jesus by communications from persons who have passed into the great silence. I believe the great divide will be crossed and that we can be absolutely certain here on earth that our friends are in heaven.

You would be surprised if I told you that there were many who doubted the continued life, and many, many thousands who are longing for a certainty stronger than blind faith that their loved ones live.

So strong has become the current of scientific thought, so dominant the temper in all circles of culture, that we can no longer allow our immortality to remain an unverified hypothesis, or content ourselves with a "larger hope." We must have an evidence that is more than a faith in the words of one man living 2,000 years ago, if we can get it.

Meyers, the great scientist, thinks that the human soul did not begin to exist with life of the body, and will not cease with the cessation of that body. The human soul does not depend for its existence upon the body, but only for its manifestations, as I compared the soul and brain last Sunday night to a violinist and his instrument. "Nor," says Meyers, "is the soul dependent all the time for all its manifestations on the body."

Quite a number of the psychologists of the present time claim that we can photograph thought. That the subconscious mind can project itself so that it can be seen, and Hudson accounts for ghosts on these grounds.

The evidence that I shall use to-night is of men of authority. Now it is not at all fair to take the words of all persons. I could have enough evidence here to-night to convince the world if I would believe everything that has been told me since I began this series of lectures. But when we consider the word and work of such men as William James of Harvard, James Hyslop, Frank Podmore, Frederick H. W. Meyers and Dr. Hodgson, the evidence becomes virile and strong. We are certain that men of the scientific reputation such as they have the world over will not try to deceive themselves, and will not be easily deluded. In fact they have rejected all the more common "facts" of Spiritualism and have limited their evidence largely to the work of one woman, Mrs. Piper.

In fact, only one man of any repute in science has made any observations in "materializations" and has given them any validity whatsoever. And this man is Sir William Crookes, the inventor of the "Crookes Tubes," used in connection with the X-ray machine. But the society of psychical research has not considered his observations along this line of any great value.

But as I read Podmore, the keenest critic of the work of the Psychic Research society, on his criticisms of Sir William Crookes, I must confess that he does not make out a strong case against him. Crookes made a series of experiments with a medium whose spirit was called "Katie," and he claims to have in all forty photographs both of her and the medium at once in his own home.

But I prefer to agree with Dr. Hyslop in his articles on the work of the Psychic Research society, when he says physical phenomena of Spiritualism are too easily and commonly connected with fraud to be of value. In fact, the society has exposed nearly, if not quite all, "materialization" seances as frauds. The only thing that has appealed to them are those alleged facts which reveal the personal identity of the supposed spirit.

Now, telepathy has become a scientific fact if we can believe the words of the most scientific men in America and England. Mind can talk to mind and distance does not enter in as a factor.

Too many of these experiences are occurring to make it a mere matter of coincidence. No doubt I could get evidence of mental communications right here to-night by the hundreds. But that does not prove the life after death. But it does suggest that if two minds can communicate with each other without any physical medium, at any distance, that mind has a quality more than has been understood. It also suggests the possibility of two sympathetic minds communicating through the thin veil that separates the next life from this, if there be any. It has given us the means and the method for us to know that our friends live, if we can get the results.

Now, it has been considered impossible heretofore to have any way to communicate with the departed spirits, and we had thought of the other world's being shut off by impervious space. It means much to have pointed out the possible means to an end, and I for one admit the possibility. I am only waiting for the application of the principle—the actual instances.

Now, the intervention of a "medium" seems to have helped out this communication between earth and heaven. Let us not behave unseemly at this thought. It is in thorough accord with all the rest of the scientific phenomena, also with our religion. For instance, we talk of Jesus Christ as a medium, or mediator, pleading at the throne of God for us. We pray through Him. We say He came to tell us of God, and reveal the Father. He said all along that he did what He saw the Father doing. He claimed to be "controlled" by the Father.

The theory of inspiration upon which the authority of the Bible is founded in most people's minds is a theory of "spirit control." Modern science is bringing up instances of the inspired person to-day who speaks more than he knows. There was Joan of Arc, one of the most wonderful women from the point of influence ever known — absolutely uneducated. The bystanders said of Jesus: "How can this man so speak having never learned?"

Some of the most wonderful things occur at the present time. There was an inspirational speaker at Chesterfield last summer. She would speak on any subject at a mere invitation, and her language and reasoning powers were astonishing. She was asked by a friend of mine last summer to speak on the subject of sociology and religion, and did so. I have the testimony of two men who are not either of them Spiritualists, who say it was the most wonderful speech they had ever heard. They said that one of her age could not have had the scientific knowledge and the use of language she displayed by any known method of getting knowledge. These men are both lifelong students of the subject of economics, and both claimed to me that they could not have prepared as good a speech in a week's time, with the help of a good library. And this young girl, not 20, spoke for two hours without any preparation at all.

Now, these are wonderful things, and go to prove that we are immersed in spiritual forces of which we are ignorant, just as we are living in a sea of natural energies invisible, but real.

But in this there is no identity of persons, and no proof of a personal existence after life.

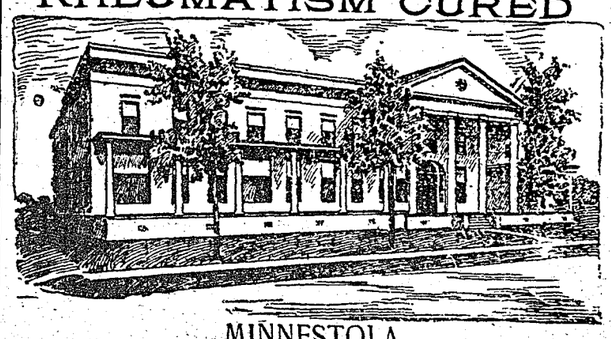
Now, I want to present some evidence which has been told me by a lady in whom I have a great deal of confidence. This lady's mother is a "medium," but her powers are not generally known. The family is well-to-do in this world's good, hence there is no temptation to make money out of the mother's psychic powers. She never does any "trance work" outside of her own family. These "trances" come on her without her volition, and in fact she tries by will power to keep them off. During these trances, in which the alleged spirit talks through her, she herself is unconscious of what she is saying or doing, and always asks what was said. There are very few believers in Spiritualism in that community, so naturally all of these things are kept quiet. In the course of her conversation Mrs. X, I will call her, told me many things that would come under the head of telepathy or mind reading, and I could account for them on natural grounds. But she told me this instance in which her mother and she were sitting alone one, night, reading, when all of a sudden Mrs. X saw that her mother was in a "trance." The spirit addressed her as Mrs. X, and said, "Do you know me?" Mrs. X did not. Then the medium took a newspaper and held it close to her eyes, as if she were near-sighted, and said, "Don't you know me now?" No. "Well, I'm Ike Smith." Mrs. X said, "I did not know you had passed out." He said, "Oh, yes, and I have come to strengthen your faith." Mrs. X was not a Spiritualist.

Now what were the facts. Mrs. X had not seen Ike Smith since she was a girl. But she remembered him as near-sighted, but otherwise a fine-looking man. They were friends. But she did not know he had died. For days she kept this a secret. Finally she told her mother what she had said. Her mother was ignorant of Smith's death, and was very much afraid that a mistake had been made. They never told it to anyone, for they were afraid it would disturb the faith of her father. On investigation they found that Smith had been dead for three years.

If this were the only instance I would call it a coincidence and let it go. But the Psychic Research society has worked with Mrs. Piper until they have an abundance of evidence that something speaks through her with more than human knowledge. It is true that many of the things she tells the sitter he knows, and it is a pure case of telepathy, but Podmore, the most unmerciful critic of the society's work, has been compelled to admit that there are facts she tells that can not possibly be known by the sitter. The most conclusive evidence or proof yet known is the massages of a friend of Dr. Hodges, who had promised to make himself known if he were alive after death. Dr. Hodges and many others claim that messages have come back from him through Mrs. Piper that identify beyond doubt his personality.

Space forbids me to give concrete instances, but any who want to know can find the results of the Psychic Research society in the library. The evidence is very strong.

Next Sunday night I shall take up "The Ageless Life," and will talk about conditional immortality and the teachings of Jesus on life after death.



ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration. If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

Womanly Beauty ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year..... $1 00
Six Months..... 50cts
Thirteen Weeks..... 25cts
Single Copy..... 5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

A Song Sparrow's Gratitude.

It is a rare occurrence for animals in a wild state to select man for a companion and friend, yet there are well authenticated instances where this has been done. The Louisville Courier-Journal lately published the following, which is vouched for by a young woman, who it says, is a close and accurate observer:

"Last week, my brother, a lad of twelve years, killed a snake which was in the act of robbing a song sparrow's nest. Every since then the male sparrow has shown his gratitude to George in a truly wonderful manner. When he goes into the garden the sparrow will fly to him, sometimes alighting on head and at other times on his shoulder, all the while pouring out a tumultuous song of praise and gratitude. It will accompany him about the garden, never leaving him until he reaches the garden gate. George, as you know, is a quiet boy who loves animals, and this may account in a degree for the sparrow's extraordinary actions."

Were it not that man, because of his murderous propensities, is the terror of the animal world, probably pleasant relations would have existed between them and us through all the ages. Possibly in the immortal state harmony may be established between all life. Without the birds and flowers, with animate nature in every form which characterizes mundane existence, and add so largely to its pleasures, where the enjoyment in the Elysium of a continued life? If there is any state of being where "the lion and the lamb shall lie down together, and a little child shall lead them," it is "over there." The crawling vermin, and the serpent whom God cursed, we take it, will not be repeated in a realm where "hate" is unknown.

A Stolen Idea on American Coin.

Previous to the death of Alexander the Great, who died before our era 323 years, all images impressed on coin were of deities. History but repeated itself when "In God We Trust," was impressed on American coin.

After Alexander's successes at Issus, Arbela and Tyre he invaded Egypt, visted the temple of Jupiter Ammon, in the desert, and bribed the priest to salute him as a god. After this he demanded divine honors be awarded him. Callisthenes, Alexander's preceptor and principal advisor, who refused to award the conqueror such worship, was put to death for his obstinacy. Did they who put into the mouth of Jesus, Luke 19:27: "Those mine enemies which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me," act upon this idea?

The passage quoted is the authority from Jesus' own words, who churchmen claim is the Eternal God, for all the bloody work of the Inquisitors, and for all the crimes against humanity which Christians have perpetrated during all the centuries in the propagation of their faith.

Why They Preach.

Archbishop Whately, in giving the distinction between a good preacher and a bad preacher, said: "A good preacher preaches because he has something to say, and a bad preacher because he had to say something." Times have not greatly changed since the good Archbishop wrote. Do they not all preach, whether they have anything to say or not, for the money there is in it? Withhold the reward and little preaching would be done.

POSTAGE TO CANADA.

The Progressive Thinker to Canada in the future will be $1.50 per year, the postage costing this office 52 cents. This is a new deal between the two governments, we regret to say. Heretofore the postage has been so little, it was hardly worth mentioning.

THE BILL DEFEATED!

THROUGH THE CONSTANT WATCHFULNESS AND EXERTIONS OF DR. GEO. B. WARNE, (PRESIDENT OF THE ILLINOIS STATE SPIRITUALIST ASSOCIATION) AND DR. BURGESS, THE BILL IN THE ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE TO SUPPRESS THE EXERCISE OF MEDIUMSHIP, WAS DEFEATED. PARTICULARS NEXT WEEK.

And Still There Are Critics.

A good patron does not like the idea of pointing out the defects in the Bible. He would like the good things made prominent, and pass over the objectionable things in silence. Bless his dear soul, that is just what the preachers have been doing for, lo, many centuries, until they seem to believe it, and are trying to make their parishioners believe the book is inspired of God; the consequence is, they are peopling our prisons with victims, and furnish more than any other profession of their own numbers to the penal institutions. Besides they dishonor our common Parent, by making him the inspirer of a book, publishing quotations from which in the public press are sending convicts to the penitentiary, and portions of it read before a mixed audience should bring the blush of shame to every cheek.

In the interest of decency, and in justice to Infinite Wisdom, we have repeatedly begged the churches to devise some method by which the obscenity, vulgarity and contradictions in the book may be obliterated.

Our friend may treat the Bible as a fetish, with its multitude of errors, if he will, and disregard the opinions of eminent scholars that the entire production is of doubtful origin, a barbarian record adapted to the needs of an illiterate people at its best. While all the world has been advancing in knowledge, and improving in morals, that book has remained substantially what it was in the beginning, a work written in the interest of priestcraft.

Truth will not submit to fetters. It demands, and in the end will receive, an honest hearing. Scholars, they who have given careful attention to the subject, take the same view of it as does this writer. The great thinkers of every age the church has branded infidels!

Had Mr. Walker been a regular reader of The Progressive Thinker for a few years, instead of but recently, and then in a fragmentary way, doubtless he would view the Bible question in a different light from what he now does.

For centuries the priesthood have searched every page, and frequently distorted passages of the holy book to make them serve their purpose in winning converts to their cause. Those distorted passages do not represent the book. Allegories and fables do not become modern thought. The time was when the uneducated delighted in riddles. A scientific age pays no attention to them. Allegories and fables belong to the same class, and nothing has been lost by their disappearance.

What Is Dying?

I am standing upon the seashore. A ship at my side spreads her white sails to the morning breeze and starts for the blue ocean. She is an object of beauty and strength, and I stand and watch her until, at length, she hangs like a speck of white cloud just where the sea and sky come down to mingle with each other. Then some one at my side says: "There! she's gone!" Gone where? Gone from my sight—that is all. She is just as large in mast and hull and spar as she was when she left my side, and just as able to bear her load of living freight to the place of her destination. Her diminished size is in me—and not in her. And just at the moment when some one at my side says: "There! She's gone!" there are other eyes that are watching her coming and other voices ready to take up the glad shout: "There she comes!" And that that is—dying.

Somebody thus happily expressed the truth as taught by Spiritualism. The departed spirit has only passed out of mortal sight at what we call death to be welcomed by others on the not distant shore.

Joined to Her Idols.

Canada leads in devotion to Sunday. Her Lord's Day Act, recently passed, must have been drafted by a clerical snob, who wished to imitate the blue code of Connecticut in its early history. It provides that it shall be unlawful on Sunday to engage in any public game or contest for gain, or to be present at any performance or public meeting, elsewhere than in a church, at which a fee is charged, or to run, conduct or convey any excursion on which passengers are conveyed for hire, or to advertise any performance, or to bring into Canada for sale or distribution or to sell or distribute on the Lord's day any foreign newspaper or publication classified as a newspaper.

Churches are allowed to take a fee for admission to divine service, and of course by a former act the preachers are allowed to labor, and be compensated for their services, but woe unto foreign newspapers. The spirit of Progress has never gained a footing in Canada, but her Western provinces will come to the front in due time.

Thought controls the universe,
Controls your life and mine,
Sways the destiny of nations,
Yet servant is of mine and thine.

Notes and Comments.

By the President of the National Spiritualists Association.

The columns of The Progressive Thinker always contain instructive reading for those who are privileged to peruse it from week to week, but, during the past two months, there have been some extraordinarily good things presented to its patrons. The lecture, stenographically reported by Walter P. Williams, by Dr. George A. Fuller, in Washington, D. C., was a pearl of great value. It could be read and reread with great profit by every thinking Spiritualist in the land who would be sure to find something especially helpful with each successive reading. Such a man as Dr. Fuller is a credit to Spiritualism, and an honor to its platform. Whenever he has had the opportunity to be heard, as he deserves to be, great waves of inspiration have rolled over him, carrying him far beyond the high-water mark of the normal, to a point where wit, wisdom, and eloquence would pour from his lips, a healing flood for the refreshing of the nations. He is truly a scholar, an orator, a poet, a thinker, a humanitarian worker, combined in one. Would that he could be placed where the world could be instructed by his splendid inspirations! A generous endowment of the N. S. A. would make it possible for Spiritualism to utilize his great talents for the good of all mankind.

The essay entitled "Divorce" by Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, was both instructive and inspiring. It was needed and came just at the right time. This able man is a thinker, and he has a reason for every position that he takes. Moreover, he has the courage of his convictions, and does not hesitate to strike hard blows whenever occasion demands the use of an iconoclastic hammer. His words on the subject in question are worthy of an honored place in the economy of thought of every Spiritualist. The present activity among churchmen to secure drastic legislation on this question should be met with activity equally vigorous on the part of lovers of freedom, and of justice, in all sections of our fair land. The church, aided and abetted by peanut politicians of all political parties, is determined to gain absolute control of the two great issues, marriage and divorce. Success may crown its efforts unless the sleeping Spiritualists and other Liberalists in religion awaken from their slumber of fancied security. Prof. Lockwood has pointed out some of the immanent dangers now before the American people, and his ringing words should be to all Spiritualists, what Thomas Paine's "Crisis" was in those other days when men's souls were sorely tried.

President McArthur, of the Missouri State Spiritualists' Association, has said some very helpful things on divers occasions to his brethren in America. His article in The Progressive Thinker of May 4th will bear several careful readings. His stand on the fraud question, his earnest plea for an educated ministry, his endeavors to place the rostrum of Spiritualism above reproach in all respects will commend themselves to sensible people everywhere. With him, there is no compromise with error. He and his friends have just won another signal victory over the fraudulent element in the far-reaching decision of Judge Taylor of St. Louis. Wendell Phillips once declared the Constitution of the United States to be "a league with death," a covenant with hell"! For Spiritualists to halt or compromise with the frauds and their friends would be to covenant with the imps of hell to kill the most precious and beautiful, as well as the most sacred, truths the world has ever known. There is hope for Spiritualism so long as such men as Paul McArthur, Thomas Grimshaw, George B. Warne, John R. Francis, and others like them, are able to do picket duty, out even beyond "the firing line."

Hudson Tuttle, Edgar L. Larkin, and Charles Dawbarn have placed some trenchant truths before the American people through the same great medium—The Progressive Thinker. Professor Larkin's "corpuscles" may be some other man's "atoms," or "molecules," or they may be a brand new discovery on the part of the gifted astronomer, yet the fact remains that he has not accounted for, nor explained away, the existence of life. It takes life to produce life, despite all that may be said of atoms, molecules, and corpuscles. When matter is proved to be the cause of life, the Spiritualists will have to furl their banners, and, to quick-step music, march away into—annihilation. Hudson Tuttle is a veritable encyclopedia of information, and his array of facts, figures, historical events, scientific demonstrations make him truly a teacher of teachers. His department is one of the most valuable of all the valuables that are to be found in The Progressive Thinker. Charles Dawbarn's recent essay should be sent broadcast over the earth. Every Spiritualist should have a copy. Every seer, sage and prophet should study it with care. By so doing they and their associates may find a mathematical route out of "fogland," by which they can travel to the lofty plateaux of verity, led by the spirit of wisdom.

Yours for Spiritualism.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

The Church Like a Theater.

Are the preachers paving the way out of the church by their exposure of its objectionable features? It looks like it. A late telegram from Cleveland has the following:

"Bishop Samuel Fallows, of Chicago, at the Church of Epiphany, Reformed Episcopal, Sunday declared that most persons go to church simply as they go to a theater or a club, to be pleased or amused, losing sight of the fact that they should go to worship.

"'Many persons go to church because it is the fashion,' he said. 'They go to have a good time. To meet with God, to worship Him—this is foreign to their idea of church-going.'

"The music must be 'heavenly,' the services must be dignified and beautiful and impressive and inspiring, rendered with grace, with effective rhetorical intonations and spiritual unction. The sermon must be polished and finished, winning, eloquent and short."

Just Think of It.

Satan was so ambitious to gain a votary he offered Jesus all the kingdoms of the earth if he would fall down and worship him, at least Matthew says so, though Ethen Allen, of Ticonderoga fame, declared the poor devil did not own one foot of earth. The bribe offered was an enormous one for so small a service.

Churches have gone one better than did he of the fiery kingdom. They offer eternal life and a front seat in kingdom come to those who will believe Jesus is the anointed son of God. More severe than Satan, they threaten with eternal damnation those who won't believe.

Though it is probably true, as Col. Allen insisted, that the Devil had not one little kingdom, with which to pay his proffered bribe, so the churches have no control of Paradise, and the chances are more than a thousand to one, they have no little hell in which to fry souls. That place is used as a "scare-crow" for gulls.

Equal Cause for Lament.

Standing at the foot of the statue of Liberty, Paris, where she was waiting to be guillotined, Nov. 9, 1793, Madam Roland exclaimed:

"O, Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!"

Had the madam cast her mind's eye backward along the pathway of Christian history, she could, with equal propriety and correctness, have apostrophized Religion in the same lamentable strain.

The idle man is the devil's cushion.—Bishop Hall.

"I AM SEEKING REAL LIGHT."

AT THE TEMPLE SUNDAY EVENING, AT MARION, IND., WILL BEGIN A SERIES OF FOUR LECTURE SERMONS ON THE PROOF OF LIFE BEYOND DEATH. IN THIS SERIES SPIRITUALISM WILL COME IN FOR A GREAT FACTOR IN THE DEMONSTRATION. NOW, I AM NOT A SPIRITUALIST, AND HAVE NEVER SEEN A GHOST, NOR A PHANTOM OF ANY KIND. NEITHER HAVE I EVER HAD ANYTHING THAT WOULD GIVE ME THE LEAST HINT THAT ANY OF MY FRIENDS OR ANY OTHER PERSON WHO HAVE DIED ARE ALIVE. IT HAS BEEN PURE THEORY AND BELIEF IN THE WORDS OF JESUS WITH ME, BUT I KNOW THERE ARE OTHERS WHO HAVE HAD MORE DEFINITE KNOWLEDGE ALONG THESE LINES. I SHALL BE GLAD TO HAVE ANY INFORMATION DURING THESE LECTURES THAT SEEMS SCIENTIFIC OR INDISPUTABLE. IF YOU HAVE HAD ANY EVIDENCE OF THE LIFE AFTER DEATH THAT IS MORE THAN A HOPE OR A FAITH, OR A THEORY, LET ME KNOW ABOUT IT. WRITE ME OR SET A TIME FOR ME TO SEE YOU. I AM IN MY STUDY AT THE CHURCH AFTER NINE O'CLOCK EVERY MORNING BUT MONDAY.

I AM SEEKING REAL LIGHT. HAVE YOU SEEN OBJECTS MOVED BY A FORCE THAT IS DIFFERENT FROM THE ORDINARY FORCES? HAVE YOU HAD COMMUNICATIONS THAT SEEM TO HAVE BEEN FROM THE SPIRITS OF THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED OUT— A COMMUNICATION THAT CAN NOT BE EXPLAINED AWAY AS A FRAUD? TELL ME.—WM. R. BENNETT.

WANTED! WANTED!

The address of every worker for Spiritualism in the State of Illinois. About ten in every hundred are unselfish workers. Many will donate liberally when asked. Some want to take the lead on State occasions. Some are generous with advice, and nothing else; others see nothing but failure in every undertaking, but all do the best that is in them. What we want in order to start our Fraternal Camp Association, are the workers. If you are not one, send the address of those you know who are, and at the same time state what you wish, to be a charter member at $5 for the first year, or $1 annually. Let us hear from all.

ALEX CAIRD, M. D.,
598 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

The world is continually growing better to all who are honestly trying to make it better.—Everett McNeil.

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES.

Comments on the Eddy Brothers, Madame Blavatsky, Dr. Hidden and Others.

To to Editor: In your issue of April 13 are lengthy accounts of Col. H. S. Olcott, recently passed away, and Dr. C. W. Hidden of Newburyport, Mass., and the very peculiar and notorious woman, Madam Blavatsky.

When Col. Olcott first came to Vermont to visit the Eddy mediums, the hotel keeper at Rutland made mention of my name to him as one who had known the Eddy family from childhood up. He came to see me and stated that he then represented "The New York Sun"; that so many marvelous accounts of the Eddy mediums had reached the press in New York, that he was sent to make a full investigation, and write it up. So I was the first one he saw who knew all the Eddy family. I advised him to make a long stay, keep his eyes open, enquire of other people near by, and not depend in full upon what the mediums would claim that they had done and could do.

Not long after, a very peculiar woman appeared at the Eddy home in Chittenden among the spruce trees. In walking up and down the mountain street, and side paths, for daily exercise, she attracted much attention; very ordinarily dressed, dark complexion, and made use of a pipe in smoking, and if any one met her and observed very closely, she could use swear-words.

At other times in conversation she seemed very intelligent. She took no special interest in the power claimed by the mediums, but was sure of vast power and influence in her work.

After investigating the Eddy seances for some time, Col. Olcott and Mrs. Blavatsky returned to New York. Soon Col. Olcott came back to Chittenden as representative of an illustrated New York paper, and was accompanied by a New York artist, followed by Mrs. Blavatsky two days later. Just when the new book, "People From the Other World," was decided upon no one knew; but publishers know that it requires artists to get up an attractive illustrated book. The new foreign spirits, very richly ornamented, soon came, and soon disappeared, and the Chittenden audiences saw them no more.

The most wonderful portion of the history of the meddiumship of the Eddy family, as related in the "People from the Other World," no doubt, was their own story, so Col. Olcott had it from first hands. The price of the book, $2.50, spoiled the sale and the intended profits.

Some of the Eddy family were more honest and reliable than others, but owing to their backwoods native shrewdness and anxiety for money, some of them at times needed close watching.

After part of the family many years ago went through some portion of the west giving some expose seances, the family as a whole disagreed and disbanded. Mary, Mrs. Huntoan, has continued sometimes at camp meetings in recent years, and is considered most reliable.

Col. Olcott was a very friendly and intelligent man, and had many ideas that were in harmony with Spiritualism, while Madam Blavatsky had only denial and ridicule for Spiritualism and Spiritualists; so I can leave her memory and her ideas and personal quality, as given several years ago by friend Coleman of California.

People who desire to be consistent Spiritualists should formulate their ideas so when compared they will at all times be in true harmony with the grand philosophy which can never change.

Regarding Dr. C. W. Hidden, I hardly think he should be denounced as a blackslider from the ranks of Spiritualists, unless he slid into the ranks since I used to see him and hear him. He did not have much real, earnest and active Spiritualism to backslide from.

I first met him at Lake Pleasant, Mass., twenty years ago. He then mingled with a few men who had formed a club or class and held meetings in a large tent to discuss some subjects which would be announced at each of the meetings for the next; and his favorite subject was one not new to many Spiritualists in the camp, Hypnotism. He was full of that, and anxious to exercise it, and did upon several mediums. Miss Lizzie Harlow was quite an easy subject then.

Dr. Hidden was not a regular attendant at lectures, and only occasionally at circles. He had no use for those which he and some good Spiritualists called "dark shows, at one dollar per head." He had many ideas that were in harmony with the philosophy of true Spiritualism. He had criticisms for some modes of supporting the cause, some of which I thought were needed. He did not join as an interested member of the camp. If invited he would lecture upon subjects in which he was most interested. He was capable, and a nice man to meet. Several years later he came to the Vermont Spiritualist convention at Montpelier, as one of the speakers. His main theme was "Hypnotism and Medical Reform." The Cause of Spiritualism did not come in. He handled Hypnotism in a good, rational manner. He said it should never be used to make sport, but as a remedial agent; that it was a dangerous power in the hands of a bad and vicious operator. His lectures were acceptable, but he exhibited no special interest or personal zeal for Spiritualism in general.

His recent address in Boston was somewhat of a curiousity, and is Dr. Hidden vs. Dr. Hidden. It is an old saying that "praise to the face is an open disgrace." He gives higher praise to the Spiritualists as a class than some of the speakers in the ranks I have heard. He says: "Their lives in the Upper World are clean and wholesome. They believe in all that makes manhood great and true womanhood noble." That very flattering statement ought to be put into a frame and hung in some of the orthodox churches in Philadelphia, where ministers, officers and money holders have had knock-down fights in the church room, and are now in the court for a legal communion.

Dr. Hidden finally comes to conclusions and statements that the facts do not warrant. When Spiritualism, called Modern, first came to the world the church was its most savage foe, and the battle was fierce for many years, and very few came into the ranks from the church; but early Spiritualism was recruited mostly from the liberal denominations and skeptics. Since the church ceased its bitter open warfare, more converts have accepted Spiritualism, and left orthodoxy during the last fifteen years than during thirty years after 1848. Many of the old war horses were Materialists, such as E. V. Wilson, Robert Dale Owen, Prof. Robert Hare, Warren Chase, Isaac Whrew, Dr. J. R. Buchanan, Prof. William Denton, Dr. R. T. Hallock, and Henry C. Wright. Mr. Wright was an Abolitionist, and for woman's rights. He claimed that some portion of the Bible sanctioned human slavery; and that it was a He book. From the liberal denominations were: Rev. Wm. Fishbough, Rev. J. O. Barrett, Rev. S. B. Brittan, Rev. J. G. Fish, Rev. J. M. Peebles, A. P. Greenleaf, Selden J. Finney, Dr. H. B. Stover, J. H. W. Toohey, Joel Tiffany, Dr. H. L. Gardner, Dr. J. V. Mansfield, Dr. Giles B. Stebbins, Emma Hardinge Britten, Amanda Britt Spence, Dr. F. L. H. Willis, A. B. French, H. H. Brown, Dr. H. P. Fairfield, Lyman C. Howe, Sarah A. Byrnes, George A. Bacon, J. Frank Baxter, Lizzie Doten, and Rev. John Pierpont.

Out of about twenty-five mediums and speakers in Vermont the only ones direct from the church was Mrs. Sarah A. Horton (Methodist), Prof. J. S. Loveland (Methodist), Alonzo E. Newton (Congregationalist), and Moses Hull (Adventist).

In recent years converts have been coming from the orthodox to Spiritualism all over the country, and quite a new plan has been resorted to in some parts of the country to merge and unite two or three poor orthodox churches together to save expense and secure better attendance. Many Baptist ministers, even at middle age, with gray hair, are now on Spiritualist platforms.

It is wonderful how quick the "close communion" Baptist preachers will cast their former ideas into the rubbish heap, on a broad and rational platform. Dr. Hidden might write a letter of amendments.

NEWMAN WEEKS.
Lansdowne, Pa.

More Rank Deception.

Phosphorescent Rag in Seance—Materializations Rudely Interrupted When "Spook" Is Pinioned by Spectator—Woman Pleads With Captors and Officers to Return the Money.

By and by Spiritualists will awaken to the startling fact that there has been erected right in the midst of the pure ranks of Spiritualism, Houses of PESTILENCE AND CRIME, where fraud, deception, lies and legerdemain are principal agents in producing bogus spirit manifestations, palmed off on the public as genuine.

In all our large cities these Houses of PESTILENCE AND CRIME exist, cesspools of corruption, and they have led to about thirty bills being introduced into State legislatures and city councils during the last six months, which, while tending to abolish the evil, are, we regret to say, at the same time a blow at genuine mediumship, preventing the exercise of the ANGELIC GIFTS that every true medium possesses.

The thanks of Spiritualists everywhere are due to Mr. McArthur, President of the Missouri State Spiritualist Association, for his efforts in exposing the fraudulent spirit manifestations of Mrs. Graham.

It has, through a long series of years, become a fixed fact, that to grab the spirit as it appears before the cabinet is equivalent to grabbing the medium or a confederate dressed in artificial toggery prepared expressly for the occasion. Is not all this evidence of fraud, deception, charlatanism and legerdemain, of sufficient value to demonstrate that right in the ranks of Spiritualism are Houses of Pestilence and Crime, exercising their deleterious influence.

When, oh! Angels of Light and Love, will this unhappy condition of things cease?

Following the dramatic expose of Mrs. Katheryne Graham, a reputed Spiritualistic medium, living at No. 4278 Finney avenue, last night, Paul McArthur, of No. 2733 North Spring avenue, president of State Progressive Spiritualists' Association of Missouri, said he would apply to Circuit Attorney Sager to-day for an information charging Mrs. Graham with obtaining money under false pretenses.

The expose was made by Doctor Otto Vierling, of No. 2857 Magnolia avenue, who is a member of a Spiritualists' society affiliated with the State Association, in the presence of three women, who gave the names of Mrs. Jane Smith, Mrs. Springer and Mrs. Maynard.

Mrs. Graham was impersonating a spirit, wrapped in a white sheet, with a lace petticoat thrown over her head, which she fluttered as wings, her head, hands and feet luminescent in phosphorus, when Doctor Vierling, with a leap that would have done credit to a football player making a flying tackle, pinioned the "medium's" arms to her side and bore her to the floor.

The "Spirit" was stunned for a moment. Then realizing her predicament, she screamed in a decidedly earthly voice. The gas, which had been extinguished when Mrs. Graham retired into the cabinet to commune with the spirit world, was lighted just as President McArthur, who had been waiting outside, appeared through the front door.

Tore Robe and Make-up From Woman's Shoulders.

McArthur and Vierling tore the petticoat from Mrs. Graham's shoulders and took possession of a quantity of white cheese-cloth, and a black rag, saturated with phosphorus.

McArthur denounced the medium, and she answered him by pleading that "all mediums impersonate the spirits."

She offered to return the money that had been paid her, but her offer was declined.

The expose occurred in the midst of what Mrs. Graham termed a "materializing seance."

Dortor Vierling sat patiently in the "circle" for nearly two hours conversing with the phosphorus-bedecked figure in the darkened room, first being told that his mother was before him, again his brother, and latterly that Red Cloud, an Indian, "who possessed him of evil thoughts," had come from the spirit world to make himself known.

Red Cloud scored the hit of the performance, though the rules permitted nothing more than suppressed merriment.

Mrs. Graham Adept at Indian Dancing

Mrs. Graham proved herself an adept at Indian ghost dancing, while impersonatig the "redskin," though his cuticle on this occasion was of an ashen hue. To the music of a phonograph,, which appeared to be an important part of the seance, all the spirits maintaining in turn that tuneful airs gave strength, the "Indian" cavorted about the room.

The medium seemed partial to "Red Cloud" as she ascended or descended from the "happy hunting grounds" on three different occasions. It was after 'Red Cloud" had retired into the cabinet, from which he is supposed to have been wafted back to the spirit world, that Doctor Vierling made his "leap for death."

Previous to this startling climax, which caused three women in the circle to scream in unison with Mrs. Graham, and so frightened them that they were unable to move from their seats, the medium had appeared in the dark room in the guise of spirit relatives of others present.

Mrs. Springer's late husband was supposed to have been one of these. Mrs. Springer is a little woman with silvery hair and she was greatly affected when "Charles," as she called the "spirit," caressed her and whispered endearing terms in her eager ears.

'Haven't you a message for me?" pleaded the excited woman. "You know the rest," was the "spirit's" answer in sepulchral tones.

"Yes. I know the rest," was the old lady's reply in a quaking voice.

Mrs. Graham protested that she was a good test medium, and called on President McArthur to verify her statement that he found her to be such. McArthur admitted to a reporter of the Republic that Mrs. Graham was a "psychic," but said her afforts to bring the spirits to this world in material form was a pretense.

She Collected Fee of $1.00 Before Seance.

Mrs Graham is a slender woman of about 40 years. She was attired in a loose wrapper when she received the quintet which joined the circle, and the white sheet in which she impersonated the spirit was thrown over this when she entered the cabinet, it was later discovered.

A fee of $1.00 was collected from both Doctor Vierling and The Republic reporter before the seance began.

Mrs. Maynard stated that the odor of the phosphorus had aroused her suspicion before the expose. Mrs. Smith, though admitting that all did not seem right to her, insisted that she had lived at Mrs. Graham's house for the purpose of entrapping her, and had failed to find anything to lead her to believe that the medium was other than she professed.

Mr. McArthur said that he was endeavoring to vindicate those who believe in Spiritualism as a creed and oppose charlatanism under the guise of Spiritualism.

Mrs. Graham insisted that she was merely impersonating the spirits, as, she declared all mediums do.—St Louis Republic, May 7, 1907.

TAKE NOTICE.

Mass-Meeting of Spiritualists and Liberalists.

A New York State Mass-Meeting is to be held in the City of Buffalo, at Spiritualist Temple, corner Jersey and Prospect streets, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, May 17, 18 and 19, 1907.

Many prominent speakers and mediums, including several officers of the State Association, will take part in the meeting. A fine musical program fill be rendered at each sesion.

Each and every worker in the Spiritualist field is invited to unite with the State Association in making this will be rendered at each session.

H. W. RICHARDSON, Pres.

Platitudes against sin are as harmful as applause for sin.—Anon.

Letter from Mrs. Carrie M. Hinsdale.

To the Editor: Last night we celebrated the 12th anniversary of the organization of the Galveston Spiritualist Society. Twelve years ago I was making the first missionary tour, so far as I know, ever made in Texas, and organized this society in a hall on Tremont street. There was a long list of charter members; to-day there is but one—possibly two members of this society whose names were on that list so many years ago. What changes have come to this society and to us all in these years.

The first lectures were held in "Chosen Friends" hall. Later the society purchased a church building on the corner of 14th and Post Office streets, and dedicated it to the work for Spiritualism. It is a commodious, substantial building, with a large lyceum room, and up-stairs a well furnished handsome auditorium.

Adjoining the Temple is a large two-story parsonage, from which the society receives revenue in rents. Two bed hcamber, kitchen and dining room in the Temple give a pleasant home for the speaker. Your readers all know that Mr. John W. Ring was speaker for this society for many years. A year ago he moved to Colorado. Since that time the Temple has been closed for several months at a time, but the earnest, self-sacrificing workers who have labored so faithfully for the upbuilding of the society, have learned that closed doors means a falling off in membership, and have determined to keep a speaker in the Temple.

There have been several new members added since I began my work here on March 1st, and there are a half dozen applications for membership to be voted upon at the business meeting to-night, which is the annual meeting for the election of officers to make plans for the coming year, etc.

The Temple will be closed July and August, for the weather is so warm during those months that most people do not feel equal to any exertion, even going to church.

My visits to Galveston have always been most pleasant, and my work for the past two months has been no exception. The members of this society are whole-souled, earnest men and women, and it is a pleasure to work for and with them. May the year of work, beginning to-day, be the "Banner" year in their history.

MRS. CARRIE M. HINSDALE,
President Texas State Spiritualist Association and Speaker for Galveston Society, Spiritualist Temple.

MEMORIAL SERVICES

Held in Honor of Theodore J. Mayer.

Washington, D. C. April 14, 1907.

[Stenographically Reported for The Progressive Thinker, by R. Stanley Ashton, Washington, D. C.]

Invocation by Mrs. M. T. Longley.

Thou source of all Love Divine, Thou soul of all sublime Truth, Thou infinite source of every blessing, Thou eternal majesty of Being, Thou Lord God our Divine Parent, Author of all Life, all Consciousness, all Power, we turn to Thee in this sacred moment seeking anew Thy light, the ministrations of Thine angels, those who go about doing good and ministering unto humanity in all tenderness and love. We ask, O Thou Divine Parent, that in this moment we shall be uplifted upon a mighty wave of spiritual exaltation; that in thought and contemplation we as Thy children shall arise above the petty things of material life and blend in harmony with the angels of peace, of purity and of perfect good; that in this moment we may receive from Thee and Thy ministers of peace and comfort and joy such inspirations as will fill the soul, such illuminations as will flood our minds with a more perfect kinship with Thee as will awaken within our souls a new thought of the grandeur of being, of the glory of existence, of the joys of immortality.

We praise Thee for death, because it opens the pathway of life eternal to the ascending soul. We thank Thee for this great white Deliverer, the Angel of Peace, which men call death, for it enables the weak, the aged, and those that are burdened with great pain, those who have gone through trials and tribulations and have become weary and sad with the conditions of external life, to pass onward from these scenes of mortality into the realms of more perfect being, of greater exaltation, of greater achievement, where opportunity is given to every soul to perfect itself along the lines of progress and of beauty.

We praise Thee for life and for knowledge of that life; for communion between the two worlds. We thank Thee, O Divine Parent of all good, for this life of our friend and brother whose memory we revere, in whose honor we convene this evening. We praise Thee that in his life and in the beauty of his example ever shall shine that which may be a beacon star, an impetus of light unto those who know his works and who strive to follow after him. We feel that he is blessed in his arisen state, that he is amid congenial scenes and associations, that his life is like a beautiful poem, a grand pean of music, filled with sweetness and with power; and that sweeping from the corridors of immortal life shall come unto our aspiring souls something of the melody and beauty of that life which is still marching onward in good works for humanity.

We thank Thee, O Divine Spirit and all the angel hosts of ministration, for all the good things that are given to us from the immortal world. For all the glory and the peace, the consolation and the truth, the hope and the opportunity to rise into communion with the loved ones who have gone before, we bless and praise Thee, O our Divine Parent. And we offer to Thee our homage, now and forever. Amen.

The invocations was followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. Yentriss, "Only Remembered by what I have done."

Introduction by Chairman Wood, President of the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington.

The personality known to us as Theodore J. Mayer was almost unique from any point of view. With the soul we cannot deal. The personality of that soul's expression was a study, an unsolved problem to me. This was to an unusual degree a dual life; it was many sided as well. To those who knew him in the business world of competition and strife only, he was bold, positive, perhaps sometimes slightly aggressive and dominating. But to his most intimate and trusted friends and in the presence of his inspirers and teachers he was gentle, passive and receptive. But it is not for me to pronounce his eulogy. Others are present whose inspirations will come from long and intimate association with him, and also from the oracular spheres of consciousness. They will try to tell us what he was and what he did. We are indeed fortunate in having so many members of the official board of the national organization present this evening, and the first one to speak to us has been for many years and now is the chief executive officer of that organization: President Barrett.

Address of President Barrett.

Kind friends, one and all: Some one said in the olden time, "God's finger touched him and he slept." Some other one said, also in the olden time, "And his works do praise him." I believe I could not open my remarks this evening better than by quoting those two oldtime sayings that have floated down to us from the centuries, referring to the transitions of other men, of women, too, whose lives have blessed humanity. As our president has said, the life that has closed in, after the brief earth journey of about three score years, was many sided, and each side had something expressive of good, of power and of blessing to this world through which he moved. From whatever point of view we come into contact one with another, there is an influence which I believe, in the interior recesses of my own being, makes those who thus come into association the better for even the transitory touch, as it may be.

More than three score years ago, I feel that the soul of him in whose honor we are assembled here to-night, saw the need of filling into the recesses of his being, a new store of experiences, and, feeling that need, the mighty will that dominated that soul sent forth into consciousness the personality whom we have known through the changing events of these years as Theodore J. Mayer. Knowing beforehand what he needed, he sought that expression on this earth which would give to him those things that would round out his being and make him what he sought to be. Everything that came to him, therefore, was an experience to add to the sum total of his knowledge and to make him a living stone in the spiritual temple, the "house not made with hands," when he should return to the place whence he came in the long ago.

Having made his choice, having come, having undertaken the duties of life here, through the childhood years, when his feet ran over the hills and through the valleys of old Switzerland, when he listened to the liquid music of the purling brooks and heard the sweet songs of the birds caroling in the trees in that beautiful country; when he heard the higher music still which called his soul forth into the larger activities of the freedom that lay to the westward, so that he could come into a new land and there adjust himself to the civilization of the western world—all were experiences by which he could better add to that sum total of knowledge which he sought to round out the being that he sought to perfect here on this side of the Great Divide. And he knew through what he sought just what the end would be; and I do not believe that he could have added another year to his experience had there been ever and ever so much influence brought to bear, because into some lives there are crowded more things in a few short years than there are into other lives that may have rounded out a century. So his was a life full of pulsing activity, a life that was full of power, energy, progressive thought and inspiration—a man who believed in doing things, and in that belief he wove every particle of his being into the warp and woof of human life and made the perfect web upon which and over which he and his friends could tread with perfect safety.

So we have come to-night, not with tear dimmed vision to look down in sadness because the casket which he dominated for awhile, the machine which he used for a time, has been laid aside, that he might go back and take up the other activities in the broader life that lies just beyond, but we have come, rather, to pay our tribute to the memory of one who has walked with us, whose purpose was to do good. "And his works do praise him." We can add in this connection that he has awakened from the dream of the seeming into the beautiful activities of the real, where he now is reposing, resting for a little time beneath the shade trees on the sunkissed hills of Immortality, so that he may gather unto himself those forces that will make him the same active being that he was here among us on this side of Life.

I first came into touch with him fifteen years ago, but it was not my privilege to meet him until one year later, since which time his life and mine, because of the official positions we have held, have been closely interwoven. I learned to know something of the great, loving heart that pulsed so freely in his bosom. I learned to know something of the great soul that lay behind the mask of the mortal, and could come in touch with those inspirations and aspirations that were his, that sought not only to uplift himself and those he loved, but all humanity, to the loftier heights of spiritual progress and spiritual endeavor, to a spiritual realization of what the soul of life is, so that each one might be made conscious of the fact that he is a soul man to-day, and not wait until some dim, distant, misty to-morrow to become acquainted with the fact that one is really alive. He believed in living to-day, and in that living to be doing, and in that doing to have that doing count for something that will make for progress for all mankind.

Of his public works and benefactions others may speak, but they are written in letters large upon the scroll of—human fame, shall I say? No, upon the scroll of honor that hangs between the world seen and the world unseen, so that it may be noted from both sides of life, and thus be a continual inspiration to men in the mortal and to men in the immortal to do something because of the life he lived and tried to work out here so wisely and so well.

"Large was his bounty and his soul sincere," some one once said, and we can say of our brother that this is true. I have gone through the length and breadth of the land, I have traveled through every state and territory of the United States, excepting Alaska, and wherever I have gone the question has been asked me, "Do you know the treasurer of the National Association?" His name has become a household word wherever our religion is known; and, dear friends, there is no land upon which the sun shines to-day into which some knowledge of the religion of Spiritualism has not gone. Consequently, in lands where the Spanish tongue is spoken, where we may hear the melodious Italian, or the soft lisp of the Portugese, the gay French or the deeper German, you will find Spiritualistic literature, and in and through that literature the name of our brother has found its way, until he is known over the sea, down in South America, all over the world, and known by what he has done, and will be remembered because thereof.

Dear friends, why, therefore, should we look down in sadness and in mourning to-night and let the tear of regret fall, when we know that we have this rich legacy of truth that has been woven into the fabric of being by his loving hands; when we have this rich legacy that he has given to us of a well-lived life, through which the doing for others, the thinking in behalf of others, the striving to build temples of love in which others may gather to worship, have been handed down to us by him through his life and through his doing?

"Aye, look not down in sadness,
But fix your gaze on high.
He has only dropped his mantle here;
His soul can never die.
He lives, but, Oh, not idly
To fold his hands and rest,
For those who love God truly
Are the ones who serve man best.
Love lightens all his labor
And makes all duty sweet.
His hands are never weary
When wayworn are his feet.

He lives, and still unbroken
Is that magnetic chain,
Which, in our tearful blindness,
We thought was rent in twain.
That chain of love was fashioned
By more than human art,
And every link is welded
So firm it cannot part.

Thus, by that life of beauty,
And by that life of love,
And by the Holy Angels
Who listen now above,
Let's pledge our souls' endeavor
To do whate'er we can
To aid our Sister Woman
And bless our Brother Man."

That would be the summing up that he would give if he could speak to-night out of that land of the real, out of that land of sunshine where he now dwells; that would be the summing up of all he would have to say: "To aid our Sister Woman and bless our Brother Man." "To sow in the springtime the seeds that will bear rich harvest in the autumn; to do those deeds of kindness in the mortal life whose fruitage shall be rich reward in the spiritual realm beyond." And to those who are bound to him by ties of blood, to the son who is left, and to all those who entered into his life by reason of family ties, the selfsame message would be given: "O, my mortal friends and brothers, the heart that gives most freely of its treasures hath the more; and in giving love, you bind it like an amulet of safety to your souls forever."

Theodore J. Mayer has given love in rich, full measure; and he has given love because he wanted this world to be made the better because of his having passed across the narrow isthmus that we call human existence. He has gone home at an early age, rich in honor, crowned with that crown immortal which tells of a life well-lived; and lo, and behold! to-night, from the vantage ground of the new position he has now taken, there floats back to us the message: "Be good, do good, live right, and all will be well in the land beyond the cloud rift."

Mr. and Mrs. Longley then sang, "Only a thin veil between us," one of Mr. Longley's compositions, and Mr. Mayer's favorite song.

Chairman Wood: The Vice-President of the National Organization is present to pay loving tribute to his former associates on the Executive Board. Dr. George B. Warne, of Chicago.

Address by Dr. Warne.

Mr. President, fellow workers, fellow Spiritualists, ladies and gentlemen: Sorrow and song are the inseparable associates of this occasion. Pain and pleasure are strangely intermingled in the services of this hour.

I am glad to voice to the First Association of Washington Spiritualists fraternal greetings from their fellow-religionists of the great Prairie State in the Mississippi valley. I bring to you as fellow-workers congratulations upon your situation at the civic heart of this mighty people. As "a city set upon a hill cannot be hid," neither can the example of your activities be accurately measured or fully defined as to the extent and power of its influence. Countless eyes the country over turn with interest to the published records of your planning and doing. Dwellers in farm and hamlet, in town and city, are stimulated to some degree of emulation by the knowledge of your endeavors. It is heartsome to us all to know that the lamp of Truth has never been allowed to go out in our Nation's capital for want of the oil of perseverance upon your part. We are all thankful for your past accomplishments, for your fidelity to present opportunities, and for your ever broadening vista of future possibilities.

But a great shadow and discouragement has fallen upon your Association. Opposite a familiar name upon your muster rolls the Recording Angel has written, "Honorably discharged, with special mention for valiant services rendered on many fields and in varied forms." Theodore J. Mayer has responded to Death's tattoo, which sounds in the evening hour of every life, and has joined the garrison of Eternity, which folds the disembodied souls of all ages. Sadness over his going is not alone your portion, but is shared by every true hearted Spiritualist between our sunrise and sunset shores. Mingled with your sorrow is that of the many mediums, to whom, because of temporary misfortune or of being permanently superannuated, he has come as a bountiful benefactor by his gifts in private, as well as by his public munificence. The struggling, over-burdened missionaries of our public field never had a firmer champion in our ranks. Every friend of organized Spiritualism, whenever he may be, mourns for him as for a veritable Hercules in his efforts for the solidification of our aims and methods. Every surviving member of the Official Board of our National Association mourns for him, not only as a fellow-counselor of honesty and of stirring initiative, but as a brother beloved because of the inherent nobility of his nature. Not alone you in Washington, but the entire field of American Spiritualism has been stricken by a sense of loss because of his transition; and it is not too much to say that the impulse of his faithfulness has caused our Truth to reach to countries beyond the ocean, and will be felt by the generations of coming future.

Our sorrow to-night is not for him, but because of our great loss. "How muchsoever, in this life's mutations, we seek our shattered idols to replace, no one in all the myriads of the nations can ever fill another's vacant place." And so the souls we love pass on and leave us. Time teaches patience at a bitter cost.

Never have I made so sad a journey to our capital city as the present one. I have not yet schooled myself to think of the familiar form of our National Treasurer as already but a mere handful of ashes. Sad will be the home gathering of our Official Board at its headquarters on the morrow, because we will miss his fraternal hand-clasp. We will not hear again his hearty greeting, or listen to his direct and forceful utterances, ofttimes illuminated by humorous act or illustration. Sad indeed will be that gathering.

At this moment there comes into my mind a scene from the opening chapters of Thomas Nelson Page's wonderful delineation of Southern experiences during the reconstruction period in our country's history. At just about the time when the spirit of rebellion was about to break forth into a destructive flame, two Northern gentlemen in one of the Southern states were invited to visit at the ancestral home of a Southern family that had the gift of hospitality. After studying the living characters with whom they came in touch, they turned their attention to the pictures that covered the walls of the hall and drawing room. Amid all those paintings of mythology, battle fields and family portraits, they paused before one. It was that of a man which hung alone in the space above the great fireplace. As they studied the garb, the attitude, the expression of that mute form, the visitors agreed that whoever the original had been, he had been a master; that the other paintings were portraits, but that one was a man.

To-night, as we stand in memory's gallery and recall the earthly life of our arisen brother, we find ourselves again in the presence of a masterful man. Towering above many of his fellows in stature, broader in form than the average man, those physical proportions were but the outer guardian of a heart still greater in its generosity, and sheltered a soul that was grandly noble.

Ever the friend of mediumship, yet our brother stood unflinchingly by his associates of our National Board in the Stewart-Folsom case, in that of the former Iowa State Association, and in all matters of that nature. His personal views upon all kinds of imitation mediumship were fully known to his associates. With the courage of a lion in loyalty to his convictions, yet in his finer moods there was all the tenderness and sympathy of a woman.

Someone has said that life is only truly measured by the soul's advance. Man's progress in life is not determined by what he gets outwardly, but by what he gains inwardly. For fully two years Brother Mayer's associates upon our Board have spoken among themselves on more than one occasion of the noticeable revealments of his own inner development and growth as he manifested them in association together. Often he was misjudged, but by those who knew him least. It is ever the fate of the doer of things to be misrepresented by the do-nothings and the fault-finders, those mental and spiritual dwarfs adrift upon the tide of time.

On the Sunday evening preceding the meeting of our national convention in 1905 in the city of Minneapolis, most of the Board were anxious to attend the local meetings and listen to the home and foreign speakers that had already arrived, but with a firm hand President Barrett held us to official duty, because of the great accumulation of business that must be dispatched before that convention should open. Late that evening the question of the general need of our cause upon the field of the entire country came up for consideration, and Brother Mayer himself opened it at unusual length for him, and spoke with a power and pathos that made the occasion veritably one for spiritual outpourings. Not a member who was present at that time has forgotten to what we listened, nor have we been able yet to escape from the spirit of consecration that seemed to have come into that upper chamber, as it came to Jerusalem's upper chamber on the Pentecostal Day. On the following morning I said to Brother Mayer, "You came near turning the Board meeting into a prayer meeting," and his reply was, "Doctor, I don't know why I said what I did, but I had to do it." On many occasions and in other ways than in that of finance alone, Theodore Mayer was the instrument of the spirit world.

An old writer has said that the true memorial for our dead should be the giving of thanks that they have lived and a prayer for them in their new sphere of existence. Both of these methods are open to the Spiritualists of America to perpetuate the memory of our brother. Let us as laymen and mediums so express our thankfulness for our brother's earthly life that we shall every one of us rededicate ourselves and our means to the Cause that was so dear to him and is so dear to us; and then let us apply to him the words of Canon Wilberforce, of England, over a departed friend: "Vouchsafe him light, rest, refreshment, joy, peace, and the consolation of the companionship of saints. Tell him how much we love him, how we miss him, how we wish that we could see him again; and if there be any way by which he may come near, grant us a sense of his nearness and vouchsafe him to us as a guide and guard."

Fellow Spiritualists, let us not stand with the disciples of the olden times upon the Galilean mountain top of our sorrow looking idly toward the spirit world. Our brother went from us a spiritual body, a living personality. Already he has come, and will continue to come in like manner as he went away. May he find at each return every one of us awake on the picket line of our duties to humanity. To-night his words are borne to us: "Call me not dead, when I have joined the company of the ever-living. I have won at last rest, release, converse supreme and wise, music and song and the light of immortal faces." By and by—

One by one, we, too, shall have furled our sail
In mooring sheltered from storm and gale,
And greeted the friends who have sailed before
O'er the unknown sea to the golden shore.

Chairman Wood: He who is the pastor of one of the strongest spiritual organizations in the country will be our next eulogist: Rev. Thomas Grimshaw, of St. Louis.

Address of Rev. Thomas Grimshaw.

Mr. President, fellow-workers and friends: There comes no more bitter time in all our lives than when the Death angel enters our homes and steals away out of our sight the form of some one that we dearly love. It is then that we begin to question the goodness of God. It is then that we begin to wonder why those that are the nearest and dearest to us, those that seem indispensable to our lives should be taken away. It is then that we need all the consolation that it is possible for religion to give. It is then that we sigh and cry aloud for the "touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still." It is then that we begin to yearn for some sign, something that will assure us that the one we loved has not gone out into the night of annihilation.

We Spiritualists are indeed in an exceedingly fortunate position. We have been privileged to receive a personal revelation, a revelation that has convinced us of the fact that our friends are not dead. It has been my privilege to stand over hundreds of open graves, to see the form of some dear one laid there, to speak the last words of consolation; and I never feel so helpless as I do when standing in such a place. It is then that I long to be able to give that consolation which has grown upon me to those that are sorrowing and bereaved. It is then that I wish that the eyes of all the people were opened, so that they could perceive the forms of their friends as I have been privileged to see the forms of my darlings.

I remember reading, in the days of my youth when I was an attendant at the Sabbath-School, of the experience that Paul had when on the way to Damascus. You know, friends, that he was a very bitter opponent of Christianity, that he persecuted them on every occasion, and when he undertook that journey he even gained permission to have every professing follower of Jesus imprisoned. But he had an experience: He heard a voice, and that voice said to him, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" And he asked who it was. He did not see anything, but he heard that voice, and the reply came, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest." And you know Paul was converted on the minute. He had nothing more to say against Christianity; he became one of its stanchest supporters. In fact, there would not be a church spire in this city to-day were it not for that experience that Saul had on the way to Damascus.

And I remember that I, too, was once in darkness. I had a darling mother; she was dearer than all the world to me, as I was to her. But the Death Angel came into my house and took her away out of my sight; and I questioned the goodness of God. I said, "There cannot be a God. If there is a God, he is not good, or he would not have taken my mother from me." But I did not understand; it was my ignorance; and for years I went along in darkness, questioning even the existence of an after life, when I had an experience like Paul's: I heard a voice. It was the voice of my mother, just as clear and natural as any voice I had ever heard. And because I heard that voice, I am a Spiritualist. I am a Spiritualist seven days in the week. I am a Spiritualist anywhere and everywhere; out on the broad ocean or on the land. I am proud of the title. I am a Spiritualist because I know there is no such thing as death; "what seems so is transition," as the poet says. "Death is but a kindly frost that cracks the outer shell" and gives the spirit more room to unfold and express its divinity.

Our brother has been born. He has experienced that glorious birth out of the limited conditions of the flesh into the freedom of the spiritual life. And whilst we sigh and grieve over his departure from our outer sight, whilst we wish that he might have remained with us, whilst we feel sometimes that it would be almost impossible for us to get along without his assistance and his counsel, yet we rejoice with him to-night. We rejoice because of the freedom that is his. And he has not gone away. The Bible tells us that Heaven is with those we love, and that means that Theodore J. Mayer will be with us. It means that he has gone to join that band of workers just out of sight, and I am one of those that believe that a man has more power after he is "dead" than when he was alive in the form. Do you know, I believe that it is a part of the plan of the spirit world that some of our most prominent workers should go out of the limitations of the flesh at this time, that they can concentrate their energies as spirits upon the great multitudes of the earth to stir them into activity as they have never been stirred before. And I look for a glorious revival.

I heard an announcement at the opening of this meeting that for a moment chilled my heart. In a call for a meeting, the Chairman said that the very existence, almost, of the society would depend upon what took place there. If you love Theodore J. Mayer you will go to that meeting and will put your heart and your soul into making a living monument to his memory. What are words? Idle things that are driven away by the winds. It is only when we are ready to show our friends who have gone into that higher life that we really love them by working to complete their plans, that we manifest that we have love in our hearts for them.

I remember that meeting that our good Brother Warne refers to in 1905. Do you know, we might have appeared simple, if somebody had just looked into the door and seen us; but we all felt like getting down on our knees and praying the angel world to bless us in our declaration that we would consecrate our lives to making Spiritualism so honorable that no one would dare to cast a reflection upon its good name. Our hearts were attuned to the vibrations of higher spiritual influences. Our resolutions were strong. If need be, we would be willing to sacrifice ourselves. What did it matter if we should go down even to the grave, if we should succeed in doing something to make this world brighter and better for our having lived in it. And I want to tell you, ladies and gentlemen, that I do not believe there is a single member of the Board of the National Spiritualists' Association who would not be willing to lay down his life to see the truths for which our Spiritualism stands taken into the hearts of the people, so that the mourners might be freed from their grief, the tears that course down their cheeks dried, and the hearts that are wounded healed once more. We are not trying to live in the clouds; we are not so interested in a life beyond death that we have no more interest in the life that is here or in the people of this world. I want to see smiling faces. I want to see happy men and women. I am not so much interested in going to heaven as I am in bringing heaven here. And that is what our gospel is, and that is the gospel that was preached in the life of Theodore J. Mayer. He was not trying to go to heaven; he was not spending his time and his energies down on his marrow-bones: He was up and doing, trying to bring good cheer into the lives of those with whom he was brought in contact. And I tell you, brothers and sisters, there is a message that we can read in his life, if we will take it home to our hearts. If we will inject a little of his spirit into our lives, if we will do something, it will be the grandest memorial that was ever bestowed upon living man.

I never did believe in making a giant out of a man after he is dead, and reducing him to a pygmy when he was alive. I believe that if we love Theodore J. Mayer we will try and love one another more. We will try to do more to make life worth living. We will try to sow the seeds of sweetness and joy along the paths we are called upon to travel. We will try to do all that we possibly can to make this world brighter, to make the lives of men nobler, to banish the fogs that envelop the mentalities of men, to establish nobler and more spiritual ideas in the world; and until we succeed in doing this we shall always have wars and rumors of wars, we shall always have strikes and rumors of strikes, we shall always have need for penitentiaries and asylums, we shall always have barefooted children and starving men and women, until the ideals of the people are made nobler and grander; and they can only be made nobler and grander as people are born into a realization of the spiritual, until they have the joy that came into my life, that came into the life of Paul on the way to Damascus; a spiritual insight into life and its meaning.

I am going to live for a million years. I am going to live after all these material forms have faded out of sight. I am going to live, and Theodore J. Mayer is living, and you are going to live—all of you. We may not meet again in the body, but we shall meet in the spirit just over there; and my earnest prayer would be that we may so conduct ourselves toward one another that when we meet we shall have no occasion to feel ashamed.

I believe, ladies and gentlemen, that this gospel that Modern Spiritualism comes to preach is the gospel that the people need. The outside world has been fighting a man of straw. They have manufactured a Spiritualism that has no existence outside their minds. They do not know what Spiritualism is; they do not know what joy it can bring; they do not know what happiness it can administer. They do not know how it can help us to look across the tomb and see what lies beyond. They do not know all these things. All they know is what they have read in the newspapers—of some grand expose, of some person who has been pretending to be a medium.

Theodore J. Mayer was a friend of honest mediums, as every one of you ought to be. Theodore J. Mayer was staunch in his denunciation of that which was wrong and practiced in the name of mediumship, and every one of you ought to be.

Ladies and gentlemen, let us give thanks that our brother has been promoted. Just as we rejoice when our friends go on a vacation across the ocean to visit lands afar and we know they are about to have a glorious good time, let us rejoice with our brother, who has crossed to that better shore where he will know no more pain, where he will experience no more any of the bitterness of heart which he necessarily experienced while here. Let us think of him—not as dead, not as living in some distant heaven so far away that he will never have any more thought of us; let us think of him as living in spirit as our brother, as our comrade, anxious all the time to do all he possibly can to help us in good work.

Brother Grimshaw's address was followed by a song by Mr. and Mrs. Longley, "Where the roses never fade."

Chairman Wood: Another member of this Board of earnest workers is sometimes moved by the Spirit to write beautiful things. Mr. I. C. I. Evans, of our own city, will give us some of his inspirations.

Mr. Evans: Mr. President, co-workers and friends. As one of the members of the National Board, I received a letter yesterday morning from our Secretary asking me if I would not prepare a few verses to be read on this occasion. Knowing as I did that we would have with us many other members of the Board who are born orators, many of whom you have heard before and are all glad to hear again, I had thought that I would not be called this evening. But we who know Mr. Mayer know well that he is more than deserving of the encomiums of praise that have been tendered him to-night, and I am glad to offer my small tribute in honor of our arisen friend:

IN MEMORIAM
THEODORE J. MAYER.

We've known him very many years;
He's been an honored friend,
A man whom we have found to be
Most loyal to the end;
In social or in business life,
Or for the nation's good,
He placed his shoulder to the wheel
And pushed as best he could.

But did he never do a wrong?
That, friends, I cannot say;
But yet, in earnest truthfulness,
I do declare to-day
That though I knew him many years
And oft heard gossip's tongue,
Yet never have I heard that he Did harm to old or young.

In truth, we did not all agree
With his keen power of thought,
And he, maybe, did many things
Which we, perhaps, would not;
But whatsoever thing he did,
I know we all agree,
In every word and every deed
He acted honestly.

He knew without the slightest doubt
That when his work on earth
Was o'er, he quickly would ascend
Unto the higher birth;
No purgatorial bonds to break,
But instantly his soul,
Once severed from the mortal form,
Would reach the higher goal.

No fearsome hell, no tortuous route
Was to befall his way,
No hindrance to his onward march,
No loitering for a day,
But when at last his soul was freed,
Freed from all mortal pain,
It would in triumph speed unto
The heavenly domain.

In triumph, for a work well done,
A service well performed;
For having lived an honest life,
And dutifully stormed
The citadel of earth, and won
A victory, grand and true,
By having finished, faithfully,
The work he had to do.

And thus our comrade stands to-day
Not far away, but near;
Not in some distant land afar,
But he is ever near
To guide and lead us on the path
Of righteousness and love,
That we may feel the spirit of Divinity above.

He has not gone, he stands to-day
Still battling by our side,
To banish human sufferings
That on this earth abide—
To break the chains of human creeds—
To free the mortal soul—
To teach mankind that he is God,
A part of one great whole.

Chairman Wood: Mr. C. L. Stevens, of Pittsburg, another member of this Board, like myself, would much rather work than talk, but he has a word for us on this occasion.

Address of Mr. C. L. Stevens, of Pittsburg, Pa.

Mr. Chairman, Co-workers and Friends: It seems to me sufficient has been said, so eloquently expressed, that it is out of place for me to speak at this time. I make no pretense of doing this, but I do wish to say one word, to pay my tribute to this dear brother who has vanished from our sight.

As has been sung, it is "only a thin veil between us." He has been with me to-day. We are all to a certain degree mediums; every man or woman is a medium. And so I feel oftentimes the power of the spirit—I, who at one time delighted in scoffing at Spiritualism. I saw no good in it some years ago; but I was converted after a time, in the camp at Lily Dale, where the Spiritualists meet. I went there as a business man to find the false; I cared nothing for it. I was not ready for it, to a certain extent. But when certain messages came to me, a total stranger, from the public rostrum, followed the next day from our Brother Keeler, of your city, it convinced me, and nothing has since changed my mind.

I have known our dear Brother Mayer for eight years, meeting him first in 1899 at the Chicago convention. We became friends at that time in a social way. We went together to our meals. We sat together in convention. The following year I was elected on the Board, and for seven years have been connected with him in that capacity. And one of the greatest delights of my life was to meet Brother Mayer, to join him in semi-annual or annual conventions. Brother Mayer and I were two warm, confidential friends, and I want to say that all who have known him know that you could not be with him long without learning to love him. He may have been a little rough in his exterior at times, but he was your friend and you knew it. If he did not agree with you, you knew that. But he was an honest man, a grand, good soul, and that is what we should all be. We should all stand up for our convictions.

We who are associated with an organization, like Brother Wood and myself, sometimes grow discouraged, and I could appreciate the words he used in announcing your coming meeting. I believe I expressed about the same words one week ago. We were to hold our annual election, and I expressed about the same words in making the announcement: "We want as large an array of our membership as possible on this occasion. It is for you, the members, to decide on those that will conduct the affairs of your society the coming year." We met and we had a very pleasant, harmonious meeting; and again, as for eight or nine years, I was placed at the head of that association. We are working with a soul and determination to succeed, but we sometimes feel discouraged.

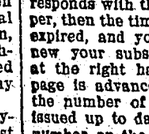
The other day, at the Hotel Schenley, it was my privilege to meet and talk with William T. Stead, of England. I asked him, if he were going to remain here for a few days, if he would give us a lecture. He said, "I am sorry, I cannot. I espouse the cause of Spiritualism everywhere. I have acknowledged it here to the reporters." In fact, it was through the reporters that I got up courage to go and see him and talk with him. He owns the truth of Spiritualism, and is ready to espouse it and speak on that topic whenever the occasion requires. "But," he said, "I am here in this country this time on a different mission. It is the Peace mission. We are trying to establish the time when all wars shall cease. We wish to establish universal peace, arbitration to be the rule. And so I have promised my guide that I would not take up the subject of Spiritualism at this time, as my guide has advised me not to on this occasion. For there are so few who understand it. There are so few, apparently, who understand what the real purpose of Spiritualism is. Why, it takes hold of all the progressive movements of the age. It is something that I am sure, if we look upon it aright, will take up all religions."

A short time ago I was asked to make a few remarks at a sister society, where I knew were some who were very radical. They opposed the acceptance of the Infinite Intelligence; they opposed the God idea, the Heaven idea, and all that. I made this statement: "When Spiritualism gets so narrow that it will not take in the good of all nations and all creeds, I don't know but what I shall say it is not wide enough and broad enough for me." If we go back five or eight or ten thousand years to the ancient philosophies, the good in all of those philosophies I can accept. Why, I love to talk with a certain Catholic priest. He has written, and I have in my pocket one of the best spiritualistic sermons that you want to read. It would do on any Spiritualist platform. And in talking with Brother Stead the other day, he referred to one of our prominent ministers who has preached upon the subject, a Presbyterian minister, Rev. Young. It was broad and liberal.

Spiritualism is advancing; it is coming to the knowledge of the people. It has been so misunderstood, but we should feel that it is the religion of the future. As one of our leading papers of Pittsburg brought out on the occasion of our anniversary, "Some fifty-nine years ago was inaugurated that which is destined to be the coming religion of the world." And so I believe in Spiritualism.

Friends, as I sat here—we were all

(Continued on page 8.)



WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF "ACTINA"

In the Treatment of Afflictions of the Eye

Every person with impaired eyesight or suffering from weak or diseased eyes should write for our latest free booklet, entitled "Positive Evidence."

The records of phenomenal cures by the "Actina" treatment, as described therein by grateful patients themselves—names and addresses given—will satisfy the most skeptical that "Actina" is not only a remarkable, simple and harmless invention, but restores eyesight even after specialists have pronounced cases incurable.

Following are a few of the successes produced by "Actina," but more fully described in our free booklet.

A Chicago gentleman, after suffering 12 months with inflammation of the iris, used "Actina" a few weeks. He says he can now see as well and as far as anybody.

An Iowa lady writes that after being under treatment of specialists for 15 years, "Actina" completely restored her eyesight and she no longer uses glasses.

Astigmatism and granulated lids impaired the eyesight of a Hartford (Conn.) lady. Specialists failed to cure. As a last resort, against advice of friends, she tried "Actina." She writes:—"For many months I have written almost daily without glasses. No more pain in my eyes and drooping eyelid is restored."

"Actina" removed a cataract from the eye of an Oklahoma lady; relieved the closure of a tear duct for a well known Chicago lady, and in scores of instances people have been able to discard eyeglasses through the faithful use of "Actina." To get an idea of the enthusiasm of our patients the entire letters as printed in our book should be read.

"Actina is made on common sense principles. Its simplicity, effectiveness add lasting qualities will appeal to any one that will investigate. Let us send you one on two weeks' trial. Use it as often as you please and if you are not benefited, or for any other reason are dissatisfied, send it back and no charge will be made. Write today. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342 W., 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

912

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Miss Kate Hoyt, secretary, writes: "On Sunday, April 28, Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie closed a most successful engagement with our society, at Battle Creek, Mich., which has been steadily improving since she came to us a year ago. We now have a lyceum of interested little people, which meets each Sunday morning at ten o'clock, and the older people seem to enjoy it as much as the younger ones. Mrs. Gillespie and the energetic members have worked together in giving pleasing entertainments of various kinds, for the benefit of the society, with a very happy result. A noonday cafeteria has been instituted in the church-room, which bids fair to be a fruitful source of income. On the whole, the society is now in a prosperous condition, and the new board, consisting of Mrs. Della Platt, president; Mr. H. J. Wells, vice-president; Mrs. Emma Hoyt, treasurer; Mrs. Lottie Estelle, Mr. John Pollock, and Mr. Joseph Seereeter, trustees, and Miss Hattie Hoyt, secretary, with one voice extended to Mrs. Gillespie an urgent call to return to us in September, and remain during the ensuing year, when Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie will make it their home in Battle Creek. Her sterling good qualities as a woman, and exceptional ability as a speaker, commend her to the highest regard of her hearers; and many friends join us in wishing her God-speed upon her long journey, and a safe return to us in the fall

Not missed a paper for eighteen years! O. H. Ambler of Stowe, Vt., writes: "I notice my subscription on The Progressive Thinker expires this week, and I enclose one dollar to renew for another year. I have not missed a number for eighteen years, and could not afford to lose one now. Hoping you may be spared many years to combat the errors in old Theology and the frauds in our own ranks, till they turn from the evil of their ways."

Mrs. S. A Bicknell writes from Canada: "In looking through the columns of The Progressive Thinker my attention was attracted to the account of "Rev. Dr." Moore's Seances in New York City. I can feebly express the height of my indignation toward such people who call themselves "mediums," and "Pastors," and who debase themselves into extorting the fees for admission to seances wherein are practiced such monstrous impositions upon the heads of those poor souls who so willingly pay their money for the sake of learning the reality of spirit return, desiring the smallest spark of comfort, by seeing their departed ones, or obtaining the slightest token or message from them, and when they found, after being so overjoyed with their expectations that everything was false, what bitter disappointment their hearts endured, and disgust they would hold against the Cause of Spiritualism, and what a disgraceful revelation to all good true believers in the land to-day, more especially the hard, earnest and genuine workers in the field endeavoring to convert the mass of people that come forward for investigation, into the science of the grand truths of the Spiritual philosophy, endeavoring also to convince them that there is no death. Then comes such impostors as the Moores to blight the good work of the truthful workers. I sincerely hope the day is not far distant that class could be fully and entirely excluded from the societies of all good members in the Cause, and should be extensively advertised."

Etienne Fantoits writes: "The Progressive Spiritual Society held its regular Sunday evening meeting at North ave., and Burling street. Burning words flowed from the mouth of Dr. T. Wilkins into the hearts of those present; everyone who listened to him carried home food for the soul, sufficient for a whole week. Mrs. Dr. Caird, who assisted our pastor, Mrs. B. Hilbert, gave tests, reading from articles, as clear as the sun by the noon-time. After the meeting two young gentlemen stepped up to the rostrum and applied for membership, being visible fruits of the meeting. Next Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Bloom will be present with their heavenly hosts."

Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie writes: "After a week's rest at home with M. Gillespie, again I take the trail for a trip to British Columbia, then Vancouver, and a flying trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles, then home to open Brady Camp the last Sunday in July. For May my address will be Summerland, B. C., but all mail will be forwardedd to me if addressed to 5876 Ellsworth avenue, Pittsburg, Pa. In regard to lyceum work, can say truly that there is much interest manifested in different parts of the country, but all my help has to be given through writing and without any funds to carry on the work; it is an up-hill undertaking, but the lyceums which have entered the contest for the prize are doing nobly, and I know if the older people would give them the support and attention needful, it would be but a short time until our lyceum work would be in a most healthy condition. I wonder if some humanitarian will not see his duty in this, and donate a fund for our young people. I will be glad to hear from the several lyceum workers. I need your advice and co-operation in this matter. I am hoping to visit some of the different lyceums this season, and find the needs, and though I may not be able to do what is asked, it may be possible to plan for future success. One thing is certain, either the children must be brought into the work or Spiritualism will soon be a thing of the past. The great army of the unseen workers is being rapidly augmented by the many deaths of our old workers, and who but the young soldiers to carry on the battle with bigotry and narrow creedism?"

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no way responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

E. H. Thompson writes: "The Fraternal daughters of the First Society, F. O. O. S., held their semi-monthly meeting in Atlas Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, May 1, 2:30 to 9:30. The afternoon session was taken up by the mediums' reading from tea-cups, and the evening session by short talks from Brother Tyler, and the guide of Brother A. W. Bloom, along the lines of our prospective Camp, which we hope to organize in the near future. Then we had some messages from Sister A. W. Bloom, Brother Travers and Chas. A. Thompson. Our meeting was brought to a close by our Financial Secretary, Sister Jennie S. Adams, who gave us a report of how the Fraternal Daughters had progressed, and we are very much pleased to announce that everything has been paid for that they have bought, and there is a little balance in the treasury. Our next meeting will be held May 15. Come and get acquainted with the daughters."

J. G. O. Mayer writes from Medical Lake, Wash., expressing his high appreciation of The Progressive Thinker. He relates some of his experiences with a materializing medium, and would like to know why so many mediums congregate in the large cities.

W. F. Schumacher, President, writes: "The Society of the Students of Nature meets every Sunday evening at 461 West North avenue. Messages bearers are Sister Smith and Sister Richet."

The Venerable Spiritualist, Newman Weeks, writes from Lansdowne, Penn.: "At the age of 83 I have retired from all regular business in a fast driving age, and from all official life; but there is one thing I have not and can not retire from, and that is Spiritualism, true, sacred and holy. I was recruited and mustered into that spiritual army in 1848 for earth-life and the eternity that never ends, I heard the raps and saw the Fox children at their little plain home; read the first spiritual paper ever printed. I attended the first public meeting held by the Spiritualists in the county of Rutland, Vermont. I was president of Vermont State Spiritualist convention, which was the first in the United States. Occasionally I feel like sending a few thoughts to the press, showing that I still live, and can in good weather go six miles to attend a Spiritualist lecture."

C. Harding wrotes: "Spiritualism is making good headway in Toronto, Canada. Mr. Harding and Mrs. Loveday are holding services Sunday evenings, and are meeting with good success. Sunday, May 5, the seating capacity of the Hall was taxed, some having to stand. We had the presence of two co-workers also who ably assisted us, Mrs. Fielding and Mr. Ravell. We stand for truth and receive warm commendations for our work."

Wm. Hassman writes: "Last Sunday evening, May 5, a large audience filled every seat in the hall, 1546 Milwaukee avenue. Sister Mueller has regained her health, and showed her full power in delivering a beautiful lecture on "Spirituality and Honesty," which was listened to with great attention. After services many shook hands with her, congratulating her on her beautiful lecture. Brother Underbrough gave a few touching remarks on "Spiritual Life," which was very instructive. Sister Mueller and Sister Golden then gave spirit messages, which were fully recognized. Saturday night, May 11, the above society held a card party at Sister B. King's residence, 772 N. Lincoln street."

H. Anderson, secretary, writes: "The Church of Divine Light, Brooklyn, N. Y., holds services every Sunday night at Hart's Hall, Gates ave., near Broadway. Our medium, Miss Emma C. Resch, has returned from her trip to Boston, Lynn and Salem. Our little church is growing stronger every day, larger attendance, and great good is being done. We thank those who so kindly sent a donation in loving memory of some loved one to our building, and we hope there are a few more Spiritualists who will be glad to know there is a Spiritual Church in Brooklyn, built by donations of this kind. Help us, no matter how small the donation. Send to treasurer, Mr. P. J. Loeb, 708 Hancock street, Brooklyn, N. Y."

Mrs. J. A. Meayer writes from Pontiac, Mich.: "I feel lost without The Progressive Thinker. I have missed it now two weeeks. We have no spiritual society in this place, so the paper is dearer to me on that account. The many fine articles that come in it every week are enjoyed by me."

D. G. Hill writes: "On Sunday, April 28, the Golden Rule Spiritualist Society held its usual enjoyable afternoon service, with Mrs. Wasson (formerly Mrs. McIntyre) as speaker and message bearer, assisted by Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Nora E. Hill, message bearers. The work of these splendid mediums was duly received. In the evening our speaker was Mrs. J. L. Fravel, of Austin, a splendid lecture, followed with the beautiful christening service as rendered by one of the Oriental guides of Mrs. Nora E. Hill, of three little folks. May 5th the afternoon brought the usual number to receive the messages as brought by Mrs. Wasson, Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Nora E. Hill and others, with the satisfaction that these workers always bring in this line of work. In the evening our hall was packed to its limit to greet and listen to our faithful, capable and diligent worker, Dr. Geo. B. Warne. He lectured along the lines that now threaten the foundation of Spiritualism, giving an account of the efforts now on at the seat of our State government to throttle by legislation the underlying stone of our belief, shutting out the grand work of those mediums who stand as the open door between the two worlds. The hearty encores after he had finished was evidence of the appreciation of his talk. He was followed by Mrs. Nellie Kussebrow as message bearer and her first message was that the effort to pass the pending bill by the legislature would fail. The speaker for May 19, will be ex-States Attorney Charles Hughes, followed by the christening and baptismal service of three or more. O'Donnell College Hall, South Paulina, between Washington and Park avenue.

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Ferd. C. Suhrer writes: "Mediums' Day at the Fraternal Society, Hygeia hall, 406 Ogden avenue, attracted a large congregation Sunday, May 5th, as everyone knows of the high standard of our mediums. On this occasion services were made more interesting by the help of Dr. Wilkins, the well-known poet of The Progressive Thinker, who read one of his beautiful compositions. He also made a few remarks containing wholesome advice which was valuable to Spiritualists. Dr. Wilkins' visit was a surprise, but we are becoming accustomed to such agreeable diversions, and hope to be remembered again. Our mediums met with their usual success in voicing messages and in the circles. They were Sisters Lichtig, Caird, Adams, Bloom, Brothers Thompson, Traver, and others. They also did excellent work in the evening, and despite the fact that 5 or 6 of our mediums were called away to conduct services in different part of the state. Nearly everyone was amply rewarded in receiving recognition from the spirit friends. Our concert at 7 by Professor Jos. Singer, Mrs. Edith Hill and Master Edmund Miller, was made more enjoyable by the violin selections rendered by Prof F. M. Lappen and piano accompanist. We expect by this time everyone knows that the Honorable Harrison D. Barrett, president of the N. S. A., will address this society on Sunday, May 19, and we also expect everyone to be with us, as none will want to miss this opportunity of hearing one so gifted as Brother Barrett. He has accepted an honorary membership in our society, and will be initiated that day, when he will assist in conferring the degree on all those who have not yet been initiated, so let all be present who wish to join; 2:30 sharp, is the time, and we cannot delay this service. Preparations for a musical program are under way, and Prof. Singer will give us a rare treat as is his custom. Mrs. Alice Sexsmith has been called to serve the National Convention when that body meets in Washington, D. C., in October, and her many friends will be pleased to know she has accepted the offer, as we are confident she will be a credit to the Fraternal Order and do justice to her reputation as a medium. We congratulate the sister. The Fraternal Society has made arrangements with the Chicago Water Chute Company, at Kedzie and Jackson Boul., to give every Spiritualist in Chicago and their friends a day's outing. Tuesday, May 28th, is the day. Free tickets are being distributed now, which entitle you to entrance and free rides or entertainment. Each society or meeting has been given a supply of tickets so none need be without them. Bring your lunch and stay all day. There is an excellent and safe wading beach for the little ones. We will distribute 10,000 tickets and expect as many people. Come out and show the unacquainted how strong we are. This will be Spiritualist Day at the Chutes, and let it be a good one. The Progressive Thinker of January 19, 1907, contained an article on The Fraternal Order, and we bought and distributed 1,000 copies, and owing to the wide circulation of this paper and the publicity given all Spiritualistic news, we have today members in many states besides Illinois, and letters are constantly received from Spiritualists and others of liberal thought asking for information, etc. If you wish a paper of that date we will be pleased to send you one. We know of no better way to acquaint Spiritualists with news of interest to them than through the columns of this paper, and in the issue of May 11, 1907 there is an article on the first page to Illinois Spiritualists, inviting their careful attention too a proposition to establish the largest and best camp in the country, and is written by Alex. Caird, M. D. We have had printed 1,000 extra copies of this paper also, and will put them out among those interested. We feel greatly encouraged in already having received several applications for charter membership, and letters of inquiry from those wishing more information. We will send you one of these papers if you have none.

Mrs. C. A. Dodge writes from San Diego, Cal.: "David A. Leisk is engaged by the Spiritualists of Houston, Texas, for a time, and he will begin his work there on May 12. A reception in his honor was held on May 3, at the Spiritualist's Temple, San Diego, when he received many tokens of esteem and kindly wishes for his prosperity. Mr. Leisk has made many strong friendships in San Diego and he has a welcome back whenever the conditions are open for him to return.

Mrs. G. Partridge and Bobbie, her beautiful grandchild, have returned from California, and will be found at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. C. Kirkpatrick, Sandwich, Ill. The many warm friends of Mrs. Partridge will gladly welcome her home-coming.

Mrs. India Hill writes from Carthage, Okla.: "Perhaps many of my friends and co-workers have wondered if I have left this mundane sphere, or given up work for the cause of Spiritualism. I must affirm that neither is the case. Through ill health and an absolute need of rest and quiet, Mr. Hill, two of our sons and I came to this thinly settled part of Beaver County, Okla., and are living on a farm of 160 acres, improving the same. To view this vast prairie as nature has left it, so beautiful, it does not seem that man could add much to its grandeur, although there is much to be done before we can feel we are living in a civilized country. One Methodist minister and I are all I have any knowledge of who can dispense spiritual food, which some are asking for. I have been called to officiate at two funerals, at which we endeavored to give those present the soul-inspiring truths of our glorious philosophy. I have been requested by many to open meetings, which I hope to do if my health will permit. How long we may remain here is not apparent, but we hope to return to Decatur, Ill., at some future time, and enter more fully into the Spiritual work. The Progressive Thinker is our welcome weekly visitor."

Reports from Pittsburg, Pa., give glowing accounts of the good work of our Chicago platform medium, Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley, in that city.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE OHIO STATE SPIRITUALIST ASSOCIATION, FRIDAY, SATURDAY AND SUNDAY, MAY 24, 25 AND 26, 1907, AT SHERWOOD, OHIO.

GEO. W. LEWIS, A PROFOUND THINKER, AND AN OCCASIONAL CONTRIBUTOR TO THE COLUMNS OF THIS PAPER, WRITES FROM NEW YORK: "AS MY YEARLY SUBSCRIPTION DRAWS TO A CLOSE, I RECOGNIZE THE FACT THAT THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER IS ALWAYS ABREAST OF THE TIMES AND ALWAYS FORGING AHEAD, HOLDING FIRST PLACE IN THE FOREMOST RANKS OF SPIRITUALISTIC JOURNALISM AND PSYCHIC PHILOSOPHY. HE WHO FAILS TO PERUSE ITS COLUMNS WILL SUFFER AN IRREPARABLE DETRIMENT IN WORKING HIS WAY ONWARD AND UPWARD ALONG THE GREAT HIGHWAY OF LIFE."

Mrs. Celia Hughes, test and trumpet medium has removed to No. 120 Thirty-first Street., one door east of her late location.

S. A. Huntington of Malden, Mass., writes of the Progressive Spiritualist Society: At the 7:30 p. m. service, Mrs. M. A. Bonney of Boston was the speaker and message bearer. She prefaced her work by reading a beautiful poem entitled, "Uncle Nat's Funeral," after which she chose for her theme, "The beautiful sentiments of said poem," giving a fine address. She then occupied three-fourths of an hour in giving many beautiful messages. Oliver Thomas Newcomb of Boston will be the speaker on the 12th and Mrs. R. A. Swift of Haverhill, Mass., on the 19th. The regular monthly supper will be held on Thursday evening, the 16th. Circle every Thursday at 7:45 p. m.

C. L. Hatch writes from Appleton St., Boston, Mass.: The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society met as usual, with the president, Mrs. M. E. A. Allbe, in the chair. A social hour was enjoyed after supper; in the evening Mrs. A. S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Hattie C. Mason and others entertained the friends with words of cheer. Next Friday a good meeting will be held, Friday, May 31st, will be Memorial Day, and flowers are solicited. Watch next week's paper for list of talent.

Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie passed through the city last week on her way to Summerland, B. C., where she has an engagement. She will return in time to fill her camp engagements.

E. W. Sprague writes: We will arrive home on Monday, May 13th, where we will remain until we go to our camp meeting work the latter part of July. Will answer calls to attend funerals, officiate at weddings, or for a few meetings at places not too far from Detroit. Our time is engaged for camp work from the last Sunday in July until the last Sunday in August, inclusive. We will serve Chesterfield, Ind.; Wonewoc, Wis.; Clinton, Iowa, and Hazlett Park, Mich., camps. Persons wishing our services will please address us at our home, No. 1082 Trumbull Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Carrie L. Hatch writes from Boston, Mass.: Don't forget the mass meeting to be held at Worcester on May 24th, under the auspices of the Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists in G. A. R. hall. The best of talent will be provided; splendid music, and a fine supper. Be sure and come. Meetings at 2:30 and 7:30. Admission free.

Mary E. French of Clyde, Ohio, writes: As we have had an epidemic of grippe here, we have not held any lectures since December until May 4th and 5th, when Mrs. Marion Carpenter of Detroit, Mich., served us before fine audiences. The Sunday night lecture was fine indeed. It embodied knowledge of the powers within man himself as well as in the great world of nature. She was evidently under a high state of inspiration, and her readings after the lecture prove her to be a woman of marvelous psychic power. She seems to penetrate the darkness of physical obscurity, and a perfect vision of the spiritual world is before her, bringing proof conclusive that we survive the change called death. We trust her powers of inspiration will never wane, but continue with her into that other life when she shall have joined the workers who have gone before.

WILKINS EIGHT
SOME MICHIGAN NEWS.

A Letter From the President of the State Spiritualist Association.

Thinking a brief sketch of my work and the outlook at present would be acceptable to the readers of The Progressive Thinker, I feel impelled to write. During very cold weather I remained at home, the only exception being an occasional attendance of the State Board meetings held at Lansing, the funerals to which I have been called, and the M. S. S. Association mid-winter meeting, held in Jackson, in February. In March I filled an engagement with the Jackson society, learning on my return to them that our convention had created a great deal of interest among outsiders and had pleased the local workers. They have a splendid band of Spiritualists there. The State Association was more than gratified to learn that the local society, after all the expenses guaranteed by it had been met, had twenty-five dollars left in its treasury.

The death of A. R. Penny called me to Saginaw in April to officiate at the funeral. Sunday I filled an engagement at Chesaning. They have a fine little society and an excellent lyceum. Mrs. Eliza Waldron, the right woman for the place, is its president. She has good executive ability and is a fearless representative of our Cause. When they do not have regular speakers, Mr. Hopkins, a highly esteemed citizen of the place, reads selections from our best literature and with contributions from members along intellectual lines, good results obtain.

We cannot say too much for Miss Sheriff's work as conductor of the lyceum. The careful training by her of the little band was apparent in many ways.

Mrs. Ireland was my hostess, and she made me feel much at home.

Space does not permit me to speak of all who are officers and active members. Willis Miller, an editor along reform and local interests, also a Spiritualist, was present at both services, accompanied by his wife, and highly accomplished daughter, Nellie.

Grand Ledge Camp-meeting opens July 21, the writer occupying the rostrum until the 26th. Mr. A. Clark of Ionia, is manager, and he will supply programs and information to all who write him. Mr. I. W. Ewing will also send programs from his office in Grand Ledge, Michigan. Much to our regret, William Devine, one of the first workers of our camp, has moved to Harbor Springs. He and his wife will be greatly missed by our people.

I am now ready to fill engagements if societies need my services; can also be depended on to attend funerals or weddings. Have bell phone. I take this way to inform the gentleman who wrote me from Port Huron in regard to his wife's work, that I have not the address. Write again, that I may reply. ABBIE E. SHEETS.
Grand Ledge, Mich.

KANSAS STATE CONVENTION.

The Kansas State Convention will be held in Topeka, June 7, 8 and 9. All friends invited.

A. SCOTT BLEDSOE,
215 East 7th St., Topeka, Kansas,
President.

The Cause at Elwood, Indiana.

It is a self-evident fact that the day of knowledge and learning has dawned, and that men are beginning to assert themselves and demand their own. The more we delve into the mysteries of nature the less mysterious they seem, and the greater becomes our knowledge.

Years agone, amid the gloomy forebodings that bespoke the annihilation of all man's hopes and aspirations, as to a life beyond the grave, did our departed ones, with unceasing efforts, seek to draw the veil aside and allow man to peer into the future and learn the truth as it really is, and to cast off the fetters that bind him to self-made creeds, and a revengeful God.

For the last three years the Spiritualists of this city have been organized and marching ahead under the name of The First Spiritual Church, holding regular meetings each Sunday evening in its hall, our home talent being ably supported by many of our ablest speakers and mediums, such as Brother Will J. Erwood, Brother C. W. Smith, Brother Wattles and family, and the Rev. Bishop Davis, who must not be forgotten; who, by the way is an orthodox minister, and one who is not afraid to mount our rostrum and proclaim the truth, and one who is able and willing to defend our cause against all comers and goers, and many are the bright lessons of truth and reason hurled by him from our rostrum.

Brother Davis is one who believes that if the pulpit fails to furnish proof of a life beyond the grave, then there should be no objections raised by it against those seeking proof elsewhere. His views are that if communication was once, it is now, and if communication between the two worlds is impossible now, it always has been, and that man should not rest content with the mere hope for, and faith in, a future existence, believing that God never intended that man should upon this side of the grave seek to obtain the proof.

Our worthy Brother W. C. Jessup, has rendered valuable assistance in our cause by delivering messages and holding trumpet seances during the week meetings, with grand success. Judging from the interest taken in those circles by many of our orthodox friends, they do not seem to be content in the proof found in the following quotations: "For the living know they shall die, but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love and their hatred, and their envy is now perished." But have sought the command, "Seek and Ye Shall Find," and many are they that have sought and have found beyond all reasonable doubt that the change called death does not end all, but is only a moving forward into a higher condition of one continued life.

How comforting it is to sit and listen to the glad tidings coming from the great beyond, to have the loved ones converse with the investigator offering a preponderance of evidence that they still live and all is well; to listen to those great minds gone on before as they deliver their messages, pointing out the way, and how to live here and now that we may become better fitted for our future lives.

May our good brothers and sisters continue to press forward, spreading the truth until all are set free.

G. E. RUNYAN.
Corresponding Secretary First Spiritual Church of Elwood, Ind.

An Excellent Medium Passed to Spirit Life.

Mrs. Harriett N. Hamilton passed to spirit life May 5, at her home, No. 332 Huron street, Pt. Huron, Mich. She was a very remarkable woman, and one of the finest clairvoyants the writer has ever known.

The last time I visited her she spoke feelingly of the passing out of Mr. and Mrs. James White, of her city. She related the many kindnesses they had showered upon her in her old age. In closing her remarks she said: "Mr. White promised me that I should never be without that dear old Progressive Thinker; but his last five years's subscription is nearly run out. I hope I may not long outlive it. I am so tired of waiting for my release from this poor pain-racked body. I long to be at rest."

Mrs. Hamilton was born in Buffalo, N. Y., 78 years ago. She has lived in Port Huron over sixty years, and has outlived all her old associates. She was prominent in the Spiritualistic movement in its infancy, and has never ceased to strive for its best interests. May she reap her reward in the Spirit Spheres, is the earnest prayer of her friends.

MRS. J. G. PUDDICK.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

James I. Mettler passed to the higher life, April 26, 1907, at the hospital in Helena, Montana. He had been an invalid for the past three years, but was a constant worker in the cause of Spiritualism. He was laid to rest in Great Falls, Montana, beside his wife who preceded him on November 30, 1906.

THE PATHWAY OF THE HUMAN SPIRIT.

Or, the Pathway of the Spirit Traced.

By J. M. Peebles, M. D., M. A.

Did it pre-exist and does it reincarnate again into mortal life? When did it enter the body? What is its form—how does it relate to the soul body? Can it leave the human body and return again? Can it live in and control another mortal body? These questions and many others are asked and answered by the Doctor in this, his latest book, of two hundred pages. Price 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

"Spiritual Fire Crackers, Bible Chestnuts and Political Pin Points." By J. S. Harrington. A pamphlet containing 79 pages of racy reading. Price 25 cts.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM; A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 235 pages, beautifully bound, Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of
FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.
CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary,
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Adin Bugbee: Q.—Is psychometry a faculty that can be used at the will of its possessor, without assistance? Can it be acquired? What is the explanation of the divining rod, in locating minerals and water courses beneath the earth's surface? Why does it work with some persons and not with others? Can its use be acquired?

A.—For ages the divining rod was implicitly relied on, and the belief in its power was a part of the superstition which invested the rod of the magician with miraculous qualities. The Old Testament gives divine sanction to the rod in the hands of prophets and leaders; as Moses and the magicians, Aaron's rod, etc. The Apocryphal New Testament gives prominence to the magical virtues of the rod, especially in the story of the selection by the priests of a husband for Mary the Holy Mother, which is interesting and valuable as giving an insight into the ideas entertained in the early Christian ages. As this story goes, Mary was one of the virgins consecrated at the Temple, and having reached the marriageable age, the priests were constrained to seek a husband for her. According to the custom regulating the matter, all the marriageable men were brought together, each with a rod, and the one whose rod gave the most surprising results, was to have her as a wife. Joseph, as widower, past the age when he thought a new alliance possible, was persuaded to enter the contest. When his time came for the trial, a white dove flew out of his rod, thus far surpassing anything the others had evoked, and the "virgin" was given him against his earnest protest. It afterwards was revealed that his rod was the very same olive branch the dove brought to the Ark to let Noah know that there was dry land! The finale of this legend throws light on the earnest efforts of the high priests, to get Mary out of the Temple and well married, before what is now called a "scandal" was started by the laity. These apocryphal gospels have really just as good evidence of genuineness as the four Evangelists that received the sanction of the Councils. The only reason for their rejection was they told too much!

But to return from this wide digression. That the divining rod has some power, that there is a cause for its movement, must be admitted, to account for the faith reposed in it. A supple twig, or branching rod, of itself can have none of these qualities.

Whatever there is must reside in the hands which hold it, or the mind that directs.

Now to return to psychometry. It is not a distinct power. It is only a manifestation of that quality of the spirit which makes it sensitive to impressions—makes it a receiving instrument to the thought-waves of all intelligences, not only direct from them, but as these waves set in vibration everything with which they come in contact, with these secondary vibrations also.

A mind thus sensitive is able to receive impressions of itself, independent of any other intelligence. However, it will readily be seen that the primary thought-waves direct from such intelligences, mortal, or in spirit-life, must be stronger than the secondary. As there are an infinite number of sources of such vibration, the difficulty is not in their reception, but in their determination. The subject takes up a mineral specimen. He may receive the influence of locality, position in the rocks, and of the forces which aggregated its atoms: he may take up the influences of those who have held it in possession; he may receive the thoughts of Spirit-intelligences regarding it. All these may come like flashes through his mind, interrupted and shaded by his own ideas, and the only means he has of distinguishing those of one source from each other source, must come from a high order of spiritual training. Comprehending this, the difficulties encountered in this psychic investigation may be partially appreciated.

The high order of sensitiveness which enables a psychometrist to distinguish the impressions from minerals, letters, or personal belongings, should enable them to be thought-readers of phenomenal gifts, and to receive spirit messages with great accuracy.

Very few of those who advertise as mining experts would consent to this test, or if they did, meet it.

This sensitiveness, of which psychometry is only a side issue, is possessed in some degree by all mankind, and even by animals, and is simulated by some plants. Only a few have it in marked degree. It may be cultivated by practice. It cannot be bought or sold, and the promise of those who for a fee guarantee its full possession, is not possible to fulfill. All improvement must come from the efforts of the subject. All instructions that can be given, are contained in this one sentence: Put yourself in a passive condition by mental concentration. Continue these seances at fixed times. If psychometric readings are sought, take in the hand, mineral, letter, article, arranged so you do not know what you are taking. To arrange this an assistant is valuable. Speak or write the impressions received, and afterwards verify. Of course there will be failures, but continue and they will grow less and less.

If impressions from spirit source be desired, earnestly concentrate the thoughts on the desired one, and write or speak the thoughts that will seem to spontaneously come flashing into the mind.

Hold these lessons as privately sacred, and not rush before the public, and offer them to vulgar interest.

And now we have come to a point where the influence which directs the divining rod may be understood. The successful user is one who is sensitive, perhaps unknowingly, to these influences—and holding the rod, with mind concentrated on the one purpose, the hands are unconsciously moved to press down the instrument where the impressions are strong. This is the whole explanation of the genuine movement. Unfortunately, it can be easily imitated, and the fake diviners by their pretensions overshadow, and bring obloquy on the honest claimant.

It would be inferred from the promises, that this so-called "gift" can be cultivated. This may be done by practice, but as it is only one of the forms of expression of sensitiveness or impressibleness. The best method is the improvement of this faculty, which has been expressly called the sixth sense.

In this study, there is one thing which has been, and is almost wholy overlooked or disregarded—the limitations of the faculties. Too much is constantly expected and exacted.

A good share, perhaps the greater of the conditions for success are not well understood, or are unknown, and those that are known to be essential are often not complied with. The results received, are not sifted by reason and referred to classes to which they belong. Oten, too, because of failures or errors the whole is discarded.

The methods and conclusions of many investigators here, and in Spiritualism also, reminds one of a school boy who failing to solve a problem in arithmetic because of his own inaccuracy, declares the arithmetic a delusion. He afterwards will find that he must plod along by rules some of which have transparent reasons for their being, and others which are so arbitrary there seems none at all. He must comply with them, however, whether he understands them or not, and not only that, he must make no blunders, in the simplest addition. A slight error in the beginning may make millions in difference in the result.

The Good Work of Mrs. A. G. Atcheson

At this time when so much is being said and written for and against settled speakers, it seems fitting that mention be made of an occasion bearing largely in favor of having a settled speaker over a society.

May 5th at Niagara Falls, N. Y., the officers and members of the "First Spiritual Church" tendered a reception to, and held as an anniversary of, the beginning of the sixth year's pastorate of Mrs. A. G. Atcheson of Buffalo, who has served five years, never having missed one Sunday, or the monthly seance held for the church. The society requested the writer to act as chairman on that occasion.

The hall was beautifully trimmed and draped with festoons of red, white and blue crepe paper; palms and flowers on the platform and pedestals. Services were held in the afternoon and evening, and refreshments served between services. Mr. H. W. Richardson, president of the N. Y. S. Association; Mrs. T. U. Reynolds, vice-president; Mr. Hoyt, president of the Buffalo Temple Society, and a large delegation also from Buffalo, including Mrs. Roland and Mrs. Simmons, one of the oldest Spiritualists, 84 years young, who made this remark, "If I had the wealth of New York State offered me I would not take it in exchange for the knowledge I have of Spiritualism."

At the afternoon meeting, President Richardson was introduced and made some very fitting and encouraging remarks, congratulating the society upon having Mrs. Atcheson as their pastor, and Mrs. Atcheson for having had the courage, ability and desire to bring the society to its present successful condition. Mr. Hoyt followed and added many pleasant and profitable remarks. Mrs. Reynolds, who was at the halls with Mrs. Atcheson when the society was started and organized, added some words fitting the occasion and regarding its growth. Then Mrs. Atcheson was announced for messages, but seeing Miss Jergensen of Buffalo in the audience, Mrs. A. asked that she act as message bearer, which was accepted, and some fine messages were given. Mrs. Simmons and Mrs. Roland added much to the interest of the occasion by their remarks. A benediction closed the afternoon session, when the friends all exchanged greetings and held a social sort of reunion until supper was announced, a bountiful spread, comprising good things in abundance.

The hall began to fill long before the time of the evening service, but every one seemed cheery and happy, congratulating themselves and Mrs. Atcheson on the happy event.

Mr. Richardson and Mr. Hoyt were unable to remain to the evening service, which was of unusual interest. The principal speaker was the chairman, Mrs. Reynolds. One of the most impressive features was the presentation in behalf of the officers and members of the society, of a piece of silver and a hand-painted vase, accompanied by resolutions. The presentation was made with some heartfelt remarks, a tribute of love and esteem from the speaker as well as the society. Mrs. Atcheson responded, but her heart was so full it spoke more strongly than words although they were beautifully expressed. Messages were given by Mrs. Atcheson and Mrs. Reynolds. Benediction by Mrs. Roland. All unanimously expressed themselves, thinking the meeting had been a grand success.

May other societies go and do likewise.

MRS. T. U. REYNOLDS,
Chairman.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

At the Close of Day

At the Last there Came Into Her Heart a Great and Beautiful Hope.

A shaft of light from the sinking sun shot through a rift in the leaden clouds that covered the sky and touched the tops of the eastern hills with a golden light, causing the long limbs and ragged trunks of the paper birches to stand revealed snowy white like marble statues, but deep shadows lay upon the small rocky fields thickly strewn with maple leaves, brown, red, and gold. The trees were nearly naked and the grass in the fields looked brown and dead, and the cattle in "fall feed" were hanging about the barways nearest the barns, lowing. The chill of frost was in the air and the farmers looking out over the rugged New England landscape said, "It looks like snow to-night."

A small load of aged furniture was toiling up a hill near the farm house it had just left. The small brown horse that drew the load, and the man and woman that rode upon it, were well along in years. The man was bent and grizzled and careworn, and seemed in keeping with the stern, rocky hills upon which he had toiled from his childhood to the present, struggling through summer heat, autumn chill, winter's icy winds and drifting snows to wrest from nature enough to sustain life and furnish a protection for himself and family.

In his younger days he had looked longingly toward fairer lands, but the pleading of aged parents decided him to remain in his native town, and now —. He never once looked back at the weather-beaten house that for many years had been his home, but not so the woman, for she seemed unable to remove her eyes from it. She pulled her faded shawl—the shawl her mother spun and wove—closely about her thin shoulders and her sad hungry eyes grew tearful and her furrowed face quivered with strong emotion. It was a poor enough home she was leaving, but it had been hers for many years, and for it she had toiled and suffered. Every rod of the land was familiar to her. She had helped plant the trees and bushes which were just beginning to yield an abundance of fruit, and with her own hands she had carried the earth that made her flower beds. For this home she had shut her eyes and walked bravely by the little corner millinery store for many years, and carefully turned her black alpaca gown that it might do for wear on funeral occasions—she had given up going to church years ago. Her home no more!

"O if Johnny had lived this would never have come to us," she thought and wiped away the tears that would fall in spite of her efforts to restrain them and put away from her the vision of her own child killed by falling from a barn and brought to her crushed and lifeless.

They were building that barn for a neighbor to earn the money to make a payment on the farm which they hoped would in a few years be theirs, but the money went to pay funeral expenses, and there was no payment made that fall, and this was the beginning of the end. And Johnny—her bright and beautiful boy—"where, O where are you?"

How many times she had sent out that heart broken cry! She had gone to the minister—"a godly man," and asked for bread and received a stone.

A cow tied behind the wagon tugged at her rope and looking backward lowed for her mate recently sold to pay taxes. "Brindle—poor Brindle," said the woman in a choking voice, and she took an apple from her apron pocket and held it before the nose of the cow.

A bitter resentment arose in the woman's soul, such as she had never felt before and it voiced itself in the great but impotent "Why?" which forever rolls from breaking hearts into the unknown.

A man came hurriedly through the tangled blackberry and elder bushes that lined the roadway and extended a calloused hand to the man that sat upon the load driving the horse. "I'm sorry for ye, Eben, "he said and his voice trembled, "God knows I'd help ye if I could."

"Yes, Lisha, I know you would; I've known you for many a year and—"

"It's a wicked shame—a sin somebody has got to answer for if there is any justice anywhere."

The two men started at the unexpected outbreak and looked at the woman anxiously.

"It is a wicked shame," she repeated vehemently. "We have paid that man two hundred dollars more than he offered the place to Deacon Tumble for yesterday, and think of the work Eben and I have done there! There is no justice in all this world—some folks went so far as to think Johnny had gone to hell because he was not a professor of religion," and she covered her face with her shawl.

The man by the wagon side touched the old shawl with a kindly hand and his voice was full of sympathy as he said, "You must not feel in this way, Miry—you know Johnny is not in hell."

"I do not know any such thing," said the woman sharply," I don't know anything about the matter, nor you, nor anybody else."

All the pent-up, accumulated misery of years seemed to be finding voice at last, and she went on: "Talk about a God of love—a loving Father who gives us children to love with all our strength and being and then takes them away from us and never once lets us see them or hear one word from them! I don't believe one word of it—it's a lie—there is no such God! There is not a person in this world I hate bad enough to treat in such a way."

The man by the wagon looked at her and his face lighted with eagerness. "You have known me ever since you were a baby, Miry, have ye ever known me to tell a lie?" he asked.

"Never, Lisha, never."

Well, then I'll not lie to ye now Miry—I've heard from Johnny!"

"Lish Potter, what are you telling me?" said the woman, and her voice sounded tense and strange.

"It is true, Miry, or God knows I would not tell ye; there's a woman down to the village that sees spirits and hears what they say, and through her you can hear from Johnny—I did."

"Is she a good woman, Lisha?"

"Yes, a good, pure, honest woman—ye needn't worry 'bout that."

"But she has to have money for telling and I have not got a dime," and her voice sank into a sob.

"No, Miry, she will not ask ye a cent when she knows how it is. She is a good woman, Miry, and she told me herself that her mission is to the poor and lonely and hopeless folks, to tell the weak how to be strong, and the captives how to be free and to comfort the mourners and tell the sad and miserable how to find joy. Go to her, Miry, and God will bless ye," and he shook hands with both of them and the load moved on.

A young girl had been picking up beech nuts the other side of the bushes by the road way and had seen and heard, and sympathy for the aged couple and resentment against the man who had wronged them filled her mind. The sound of wheels attracted her attention and soon a span of beautiful black horses in silver mounted harnesses came into sight. In the newly painted carriage sat a man, sleek, well fed, well dressed, whose smooth face wore a self-complaisant look. "I have made a good thing on that old farm," he thought, "now I will give the church committee ten dollars for the new organ," and he tucked the new wolf-skin robe more closely about him.

A young girl ran nimbly down the steep bank and stood beside the road. The man pulled up his horses and said, "Well, my girl, what is it?"

The honest gray eyes of the girl met the hard gray eyes of the man fearlessly, and her face quivered but her voice was steady: "Why did you drive those poor old folks out of the home they worked so hard to earn?" she demanded.

The man looked surprised and was silent for a moment and then he laughed uneasily, and said with lofty condescension: "You don't know what you are angry about, girl; don't meddle with what does not concern you. These people could not pay all they agreed to give me, and I have no property to give away. Go back to your home and learn what St. Paul says about woman."

The sleek black horses sped swiftly down the road toward town and the little brown horse tugged at the load of goods. Half way up the hill she paused and looked around at her master appealingly, and he as was his custom clambered clumsily down and walked slowly up the hill beside her. A few snow flakes floated down from the somber sky and touched the face of the woman but she did not mind them, for in her heart there glowed a great and beautiful hope.

IDA LEWIS BENTLEY.
Garvanza Station, Los Angeles, Cal.

SPIRIT JOHN D. MUNGER.

A Message from him, written Through Mrs. Nellie Davis of Kewanee, Ill., at the request of the Society at Macomb, Ill.

My dear friends and relatives, all, I would like to send out a few words this evening, for truly there never will be a better opportunity, and it is like the balm that heals the wound, and you say that any interested spirit you would be glad to hear from. Well, now, children, you know no one can take any more interest in you and your little society than myself. I thought I knew all about this philosophy and phenomena, before I passed away, but if I had thoroughly understood some things, I might have been in the body to-night, if I was taken away just when I was needed most. I have learned since I passed on that I was mediumistic, too sensitive for the surroundings in earth life, and being such I took on all the conditions that seemed to be in my surroundings, both physically and mentally, and I found also that if I had understood the psychic powers, there would have been more happiness.

A great many who think they are sick are nothing more or less than sensitives, and being ignorant of the laws that govern such, they often pass out of the body in a very mysterious way. Now, I do not wish to send out a thought that will make people feel that every thing was not done that could have been done to benefit me, for I feel that I was removed from the earth life so that I could progress and use the faculties that God had given me better in the spirit world than in the mortal, and now I return hoping to bring some light, some comfort to you all.

I have been a close observer of all the various manifestations for a long time, and they are all grand guideboards on the highway to a higher plane of life.

All you recognize through your five physical senses are spiritual manifestations, and if you are living up to the light of your own moral and spiritual natures, you will receive lessons through your five physical senses, and analyze them by the use of your spiritual senses, thereby gaining true wisdom, by which you can form a universal brother and sisterhood on earth, and walk hand in hand with the angels up the Golden Stairs of Life that nature's holy law has built out of her spiritual storehouse of dual forces.

In changing worlds I did not completely lose my consciousness. This is not the case with those who suffer from disasters. Spirit life is so much like life upon earth, that some hardly know they have made the change. I found a place, or perhaps better expressed, a home prepared for me, when passing into the new state of existence. My garments were also prepared, and they corresponded with my taste, and I afterwards learned with my moral status.

I have frequently seen spirits whose habitations were upon other planets. They are sometimes sent to your earth as messengers.

I saw a spirit not long ago from planet Jupiter. She was enveloped in a mist, like cloud of pure gold, and moved very swiftly. She had long golden hair floating behind her. This beautiful cloudlike mist encircled her completely, and she looked like a vision of loveliness. They told me that she was an Angel of Mercy.

The higher intelligences of other planets have always had a great deal of influence upon the earth.

As to the existence of birds, animals and insects, I find it difficult to express realities upon this subject as I find them. I have never seen stinging insects or serpents in our state of existence. I think they subserved their uses in the material world that you now inhabit. Of course there is no annihilation. The universe knows no loss, accordingly the animals and insects of your plane having no aspirations for immortality, die, the grosser portion of them going to enrich the soil, while the spiritual part enters into, is absorbed by, the great vortex of spirit essence.

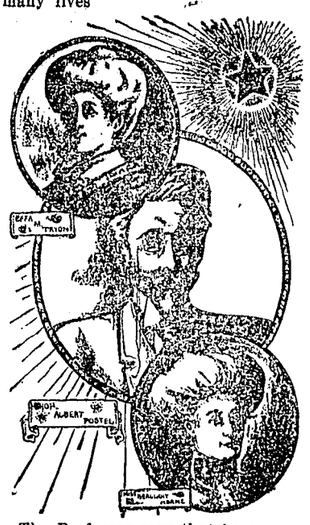
Well, friends, I don't feel discouraged about your society or the temple. I think this medium is just the one that will help you out.

JOHN D. MUNGER.

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

(Advertisement.)

Your Future Revealed



Professor Postel Perfects System by Which He Foretells Events and Reads the Lives of People Though Thousands of Miles Away.

Men and Women From All Parts of the World Seek His Advice About Love Affairs, Business, Health, Journeys, Marriage, Legacies, Changes, Speculations, Etc.

TO PROVE ABILITY HE OFFERS FREE TEST HOROSCOPE TO RICH AND POOR ALIKE.

ACCURACY OF READINGS AMAZE AND DELIGHT THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE.

From the great city of New York, where scientists and investigators are eagerly watching the progress of inventions and spending millions of dollars in the perfection of methods by which the masses may be benefited, comes the startling announcement that Professor Albert Postel, the great Astrologer, has perfected a system by which he can foretell the principal events of a life, forewarn people of danger, point out the road to success and explain the cause of failure in so many lives

The Professor says that he can explain who your enemies are, tell you those persons in whom you can place confidence and from whom you may expect favors. His method is unlike that of any other astrologer, and from the expressions of gratitude contained in the many thankful letters from his patrons, it is evident that much good is being accomplished by his work. The following are the samples of letters received by Professor Postel, and go far toward showing that his Life Horoscopes are not only accurate but are prepared with a view to guiding and benefiting those who apply to him for counsel.

Effa M. Tryon writes: "You are certainly the most wonderful astrologer living. Every one of your predictions came true. I consider that you not only saved me from an awful death, but prevented the loss of hundreds of dollars. I trust that many people will profit by your advice. Sincerely,

EFFA M. TRYON.

Another letter from Miss Bergliot Horne reads as follows: "I write to inform you that I am indeed thankful that I received my Horoscope from you just when I did. I followed your advice and succeeded in securing a position at a much higher salary than I anticipated. I consider the Horoscope worth hundreds of dollars to me, and wish you much success in your grand work. I took the trip to Europe and many things happened as you said. Sincerely yours.

BERGLIOT HORNE."

Charts and dials of strange designs surround the Professor in his daily work of answering the correspondents and sending out readings to people in all parts of the world. From a glance at the features of Professor Postel, 'tis clear to be seen that he is a man who has a kindly feeling toward humanity, and his manner and conversation tend to prove that he is sincere in his desire to be of real benefit to his clients.

Readers of this paper can obtain a reading free of charge by addressing a letter to Professor Albert Postel, Dept. 533, No. 126 West 34th street, New York, N. Y. Simply say you wish a reading of your life and be sure to state your birth date, sex and whether married or single. Enclose 10 cents (silver or stamps) to pay postage and clerical work and the reading will be promptly sent.

INVOCATION

Thou great Eternal Spirit
Of power, of life, of love,
Whose throne is all the universe—
Around, beneath, above.

Thy will called into being
All things that live and move,
In grand and perfect harmony,
In their appointed groove.

Thou gavest to the atom
That floats in viewless air
The quickening life of Spirit
That's breathing everywhere.

The suns with all their systems,
Respond with living light,
To the power that bade them conquer
The shadows of the night.

Oh, Spirit Universal,
That guides the planet's way
In trusting adoration
We lift our souls to-day.

We seek illumination—
Thy laws to understand—
That the light of truth and justice
May dawn on every hand.

May the lives that grope in darkness,
Like to Egyptian night,
Feel the quickening power of spirit
Flooding their souls with light.

May the Universal Father,
In his love be understood,
'Till the nations shall be gathered
In one bond of brotherhood.

ALICE C. BARRY.

Clinton, Iowa.

"The Light of Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $3 per volume.

VALUABLE LIBRARY ...OF... SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

A CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE REPUBLIC.—By Judge C. B. Waite, author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200." Price 25 cents.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT THE DEVIL.—By Chas. Bradlaugh, the great English Freethought leader, with a story of his life as told by himself and a history of his Parliamentary struggles. Price, 50 cents.

AFTER HER DEATH.—The Story of a Summer.—Pervaded with pure and sublimely spiritual thought. Something to make the reader pause and reflect almost to entrancement. By Lilian Whiting. Price $1.

AGE OF REASON.—Being an investigation of true and fabulous theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages. By Thomas Paine. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

ANCIENT INDIA.—Its Language and Religions.—Translations of the articles "Religion of the Veda," and "Buddhism." The Study of the Sanskrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Price 25 cents.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.—By Thomas Inman, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

A NEW CATECHISM.—By M. M. Mangasarian. A book suited to express the thoughts of men, women and children living in the new times Price, cloth, $1.

ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST RECITATIONS.—To advance Humane Education in all its phases. A book especially adapted to Lyceums. Full of enthusing ideas. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, 25 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. — Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realms. An intensely interesting work, carrying one deeply into the mysteries of the past. By J. M. Roberts. Price, $1.50.

A. P. A. MANUAL.—A complete exposition of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association, with a vivid description of Romanism as it is to-day. Price 15 cents.

APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT.—Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, His Apostles, and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Translated from the original tongues, and now collected into one volume. Price, $1.50.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.—Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price, 15 cents.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.—By Ella Ruddy. Price $1.

A SCIENTIFIC DEMONSTRATION OF THE FUTURE LIFE.—By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price, $1.50.

A SEX REVOLUTION.—By Lois Waisbrooker, author of "Helen Harlow's Vow," "Perfect Motherhood," and many other works. Price, 25 cents.

AS IT IS TO BE.—By Cora Lynn Daniels. This is a most spiritual book and gives a beautiful account of the process of dying. Price, $1.00.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.—A book of short poems. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Neatly bound in blue cloth with silver letters. Price, $1.

ASTRAL WORSHIP.—With a chart in the front cover with signs of the Zodiac. By J. H. Hill, M. D. Price $1.

ATLANTIS, THE ANTEDILUVIAN WORLD.—By Ignatius Donnelly, is a book of rare thought, proving the existence of a continent by the name of Atlantis years ago. Price, $2.

AURAS AND COLORS.—An Esoteric System of Teaching Concerning Halos, Aureolas and the Nimbus. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 50 cents.

BABY CRAFT, or Just What to Do for the Baby.—By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Price 25 cents.

BEHIND THE VEIL.—Written by a spirit in a most interesting manner, and describing his life in the spirit world. Price, 75 cents.

CAN TELEPATHY EXPLAIN?—By Minot J. Savage. Price $1.00.

CELESTIAL DYNAMICS.—A normal course of study in the Astro-Magnetic Forces of Nature. Just the book for Mental Healers or students in the science. 107 pages. Price, $1.00.

CHARACTER BUILDING, THOUGHT POWER.—A dainty little book and helpful. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, 35 cents.

CHRISTS OF THE PAST AND PRESENT. By Rev. Moses Hull. A valuable book. Price, paper, 25 cents.

CLAIRVOYANCE.—A book of 109 neatly printed pages, pertaining to a system of philosophy of clairvoyance, its law, nature and unfoldment. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, cloth, $1.50.

CONCENTRATION.—A series of six symbol cards and a valuable pamphlet on concentration, meditation and inspiration, with instructions how to conquer yourself and develop your innermost faculties. By Laura G. Fixen. Price, 50 cents.

COMMON SENSE.—A book of the Revolution, and yet adapted to the present day. A book to inspire the reader to love his free America. By Thomas Paine. Paper, 15 cents.

CONFUCIUS.—The moral aphorisms and terseological teachings of the sapient Chinese Philosopher. To which is added a correct likeness of the great philosopher and a sketch of his life. By Marcenus R. K. Wright. Price 25 cents.

CONTINUITY OF LIFE A COSMIC TRUTH.—By Prof. W. M. Lockwood, the well-known lecturer. Those who have had the privilege of hearing Prof. Lockwood lecture will understand and appreciate the character of this work. Price, $1.00.

CONTRASTS IN SPIRIT LIFE, and the Recent Experiences of Samuel Bowles.—Given through the mediumship of Carrie E. S. Twing. Price 50 cents.

COSMIAN HYMN BOOK.—A collection of original and selected hymns for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home. Compiled by L. K. Washburn. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS.—This book is just what its title indicates—a thorough exposure of the inner life of those elect of earth. A very interesting book. Price, 35 cents.

CULTIVATION OF PERSONAL MAGNETISM.—By LeRoy Berrier. Price, 50 cents.

CURED.—WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.—By William E. Towne. Price 25 cents.

DATA OF ETHICS.—By Herbert Spencer. Price 50 cents.

DEVELOPMENT OF SPIRITUAL GIFTS.—How to receive Healing from the Unseen Helpers.—By Carrie Fuller Weatherford. Price, paper, 50 cents.

DIALOGUE ON RELIGION, between Rev. John Jutz and Dr. T. A. Bland. Price, 15 cents.

DICTIONARY OF DREAMS.—One Thousand Dreams and Their Interpretations. By Dr. Robert Greer. Price, 25 cents.

DISCOVERY OF A LOST TRAIL.—By Charles B. Newcomb. A book that will help you see the beauty and joy of life. Price, $1.50.

EDITH BRAMLEY'S VISION.—A thrilling appeal to all who are interested in learning how the great forces of the Roman Catholic church are seeking to prevent the progress of liberalism. Price, 15 cents.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.—By Daniel K. Tenney. Price, 75 cents.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM, or a Concordance of the principal passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures, which prove or imply Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price, $1.

ENIGMAS OF PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.—By Jas. H. Hyslop, author of "Science and a Future Life." Price, $1.00.

EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL.—The most learned, accurate, scientific and philosophical analysis of His Satanic Majesty ever published. By Henry Frank, the Independent Preacher of New York City. Price, 25 cents.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.—A valuable book by Sarah Stanley Grimke, Ph. B. Cloth cover. Price, $1.50.

EVERY LIVING CREATURE, or a heart-training through the animal world. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Cloth, price, 35 cents.

FATE MASTERED, DESTINY FULFILLED.—By W. J. Colville. 30 cents.

FATHER TOM AND THE POPE, and the History of the Pope's Mule.—Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth 50 cents.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.—A book that has done more to enlighten the world of Catholicism than any other two published. By Rev. Chas. Chiniquy, ex- priest. Price, $2.25.

FORCE AND MATTER or the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.—A very popular scientific exposition. By Prof. Ludwig Buchner, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT.—A book FROM SOUL TO SOUL.—This beautiful book of beautiful poems is all that the title indicates—profound, sublime and tunefully poetic and restful in its variation. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, cloth, $1.00.

of poems. Verses of life to come. By Lilian Whiting. Price, $1. White and gold, $1.25.

FUTURE LIFE.—In the Light of Ancient and Modern Science. A work of immense importance. By Louis Elbe. Price, $1.20.

GERMS OF MIND IN PLANTS.—By R. H. France. Translated by A. M. Simons. Cloth, illustrated, 50 cents.

GOSPEL OF BUDDHA.—According to old records. A translation from Japanese, made under the auspices of the Parliament of Religions. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

GOSPEL OF NATURE.—A book filled from beginning to end with spiritual truth of the most sublime and soul-stirring character. In touch with all life. By M. L. Sherman and Wm. F. Lyon. Price, $1.00.

GREAT ROMAN ANACONDA, or Thirty-seven and a Half Years in the Church of Rome.—A 32-page pamphlet. By Prof. Geo. P. Rudolph, Ph. D. Price, 15 cents.

HAPPINESS AND MARRIAGE.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 cents.

HARMONICS OF EVOLUTION.—A valuable work, by Florence Huntley. Cloth. Price, $2.

HEALTH AND POWER.—A handbook of cure and human upbuilding by aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price, 30 cents.

HEAVEN REVISED.—By Mrs. E. B. Duffey. Price, 25 cents.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY, or Solar Mentality, with illustrations and ephemeris. By Verno Vedra. Cloth, price, $1.50.

HERESY, OR LED TO THE LIGHT. By the well-known writer, Hudson Tuttle. Paper cover only. Price, 30 cents.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP.—By Thomas Carlyle. Price, 50 cents.

HISTORY OF ATHANAEL.—Life in the Stone Age.—Written through U. G. Figley. It is very interesting. Price, 30 cents.

HISTORY OF THE INQUISITION.—Just the book for those seeking information concerning that most damnable institution known in history—the Roman Catholic Inquisition. By Cyrus Mason, M. D. Price, 25 cents.

HOW THE BIBLE WAS INVENTED. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price, 10 cents.

HOW TO GROW SUCCESS.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 cents.

HOW TO TRAIN CHILDREN AND PARENTS.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 25 cents.

HYPNOTISM, ITS HISTORY AND PRESENT DEVELOPMENT.—By Frederik Bjornstrom, M. D. Price, 75 cents.

HUMAN CULTURE AND CURE.—Part First.—Philosophy of Cure, Including Methods and Instruments. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price, 75 cents. Part Second, Marriage, Sexual Development and Social Upbuilding. Price, 75 cents. Parts Third and Fourth, in one volume, Part Third being devoted to Mental and Psychological Forces, and Part Fourth to the Nervous System and Insanity. Price, $1.00. Part Fifth, The Bodily Organs, their Diseases and the Great Natural Methods for Their Cure. Price, $1.00.

HUMAN PERSONALITY, and its Survival of Bodily Death. By F. W. H. Myers. 470 Pages. Price, $3.00.

KARMA.—By A. P. Sinnett. Price, 50 cents.

HYPNOTISM.—By Albert Moll. Price, $1.50.

HYPNOTISM.—By L. W. DeLaurence. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

HYPNOTISM AND SUGGESTION.—By C. Lloyd Tuckey. Price, $3.00.

HYPNOTISM. — An Experimental Study.—By Dr. R. von Kraft-Ebing. Price, $1.25.

INFLUENCE OF THE ZODIAC UPON HUMAN LIFE.—This book states the simple principles of the Zodiac in simple terms, and in a manner highly interesting and instructive. By Eleanor Kirk. Price, cloth, $1.00.

IMMORTALITY.—Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs. —By J. M. Peebles, M. D. Price, 10 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES.—Forty-four addresses and answers to his criticies. A portly volume containing an immense amount of matter. Price, postpaid, $1.00.

INTERVIEWS WITH SPIRITS.—A real visit with friends on the other side of life and a familiar talk. An interesting book. By Carrie E. S. Twing, medium. Price, 30 cents.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.—A story of spirit life. By Dr. T. A. Bland. Cloth, price, $1.00.

IN TUNE WITH THE INFINITE, or Fullness of Peace, Power and Plenty. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, $1.25.

INVISIBLE HELPERS.—By C. W. Leadbeater. Written in the author's charming style. Cloth, price, 55 cents.

JESUS CHRIST A MYTH.—By M. M. Mangasarian. Price, 25 cents.

JIM.—A story for young people, teaching spirit guidance. By Carrie E. S. Twing. Price, $1.00.

JOAN THE MEDIUM, or the Inspired Heroine of Orleans.—This is the most beautiful history of Joan of Arc ever written. Thrillingly interesting and convincing. By Moses Hull. Price, paper, 25 cents.

JOURNEYS TO THE PLANET MARS, or Our Mission to Ento.—By Sara Weiss. Cloth bound, price, $1.50.

JUST HOW TO CONCENTRATE.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 25 cents.

JUST HOW TO COOK MEALS WITHOUT MEAT.—A small valuable book on vegetarian cooking. By Mrs. Elizabeth Towne. 25 cents.

JUST HOW TO WAKE THE SOLAR PLEXUS.—By Mrs. Towne. A book on concentration. Price, 25 cents.

KAREZZA.—Ethics of Marriage.—A plea for a better birthright for children and a higher development of parentage through the most sacred relations. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.00.

KATE FIELD.—A RECORD.—By Lilian Whiting. Price, $2.00.

KINGDOM OF LOVE, and Other Poems.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

KORAN.—From the original Arabic. Price, cloth, $1.00.

KORADINE.—A prophetic story, and a valuable book for girls to read. Written by Dr. Alice B. Stockham and Lida Hood Talbot. Price, $1.00.

LANGUAGE OF THE STARS.—This important work is the first practical exposition of the Astro

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

(Continued from page 5.)

taking it rather seriously, and I thought of some things that Brother Mayer had said to me at different times, and I thought, "My heart is too full, I cannot speak," and I could just hear Brother Mayer say, "Stevens, you are too full, you can't talk now." Once, in walking along the streets of Chicago, he said to me, and he spoke it so soberly and impressively, "Stevens, I never forget—I never forget what I remember." We almost bent double with laughter. We are getting into rather a serious vein this evening; but it is "only a thin veil between us;" we shall meet him. I feel so convinced of it; I feel his presence now. I feel that dear soul has taught us all grand lessons by the life he has lived. He was often misunderstood. "Why," he said, "Stevens, if I did not cut up, if I did not carry on sometimes and have a little nonsense, people would say, 'He is a namby-pamby, he is a goody-goody kind of a man.' I would lose my influence in the world."

We know that a man does not necessarily lose all his power in the business world because he becomes a Spiritualist. Why, there are people who think that. Some years ago one of our prominent men in Pittsburg advised me, "Stevens, let Spiritualism alone! Just so sure as you uphold Spiritualism, you are not going to get along. I see your name in the paper, where you have been invited to speak." (It was nearly a column article, but contained nothing derogatory to Spiritualism. It was a well-written article and favorable to Spiritualism. But I learned afterwards that the reporter was one whose father had been a minister in the Campbellite church and very much denounced at one time, and he felt that here was a good place to express himself favorably toward the new religion and the new society that was being formed in Pittsburg, and so he wrote up an excellent article.) I said to this dear brother, "If my Spiritualism loses me trade, I am pretty able-bodied yet." This was fifteen or eighteen years ago, and I was full of vim at that time. "I will take the pick and shovel and I will earn my living. According to the spiritual ideas and teachings, somewhere I have got to face my life and its deeds; all the wrongs I have done, I have got to meet them somewhere and some place, I have got to answer for them. And so I will face myself first." And I have tried to do with all just as I would be done by. And while I have been no great success, I have never failed, but was always on the rising scale. And this same gentleman, now in an honorable position, greets me warmly, and has invited me into organizations—prominent organizations of Pittsburg with which he is connected. So you see you can succeed and be a Spiritualist. Friends, let us have more backbone; let us speak out and have the courage of our convictions. If we do right, we shall receive the reward from our fellow men. But do not work for rewards. That has been the trouble with the church, "You will get to heaven if you will only do so and so." But feel that you are going to heaven here. Here is where the reward will come, in the consciousness of well doing.

Address of Mrs. M. T. Longley, Secretary of the National Association.

Dear Friends all: Those of you who are Spiritualists, who have received the light from the great, glowing, unseen Love of the universe, manifested to you through the beautiful communion of those who have gone before, raise your heads to-night and thank God for Spiritualism. Thank Him, the giver of all good and perfect gifts, the giver all blessing and benediction to thankind, for the blessed light and truth of Spiritualism. You who are not Spiritualists, you who have lost dear ones from the mortal way, who have sorrowed and suffered, who have grieved and mourned because the lowly form has been laid from view, and who have turned your faces heavenward asking for light, "seek and ye shall find." The Comforter will come to you in time, uplifting your hearts to new conceptions of life in its divinity, life in its purpose and its significance, life in its joy and sorrow, its pleasure and its pain, all bestowed upon the human entity for its unfoldment and its higher growth.

Let us to-night sing our songs of praise, sing our beautiful outpourings of thankfulness, that death can come to humanity—that which the world calls death, but we who have received the living truth know that it is only eternal life, that it is enlargement for the human soul, that is thus given to mankind. Let us thank God, the Infinite Goodness, the Supreme Love, Tenderness, Wisdom and Power, that the change called death has come to our dear friend; that in the fullness and sweetness of his marvelous life, that in the glory and the strength of his manhood, that in the hour of his grand vigor outpoured through benevolent purposes and doings for humanity, he was called to the better world. We say, thank God because there came to him no shadow of decay, no moment when he could feel any sense of that condition which comes to one who is superannuated; because there came no letting down of the vital forces of that grand mentality, of that spiritual power which held and swayed him. These were alive within him to the very last, to the very end of his mortal life, until sweet insensibility fell upon the external form and he was wafted into that spiritual realm of light and beauty that lies just beyond. Let us be thankful for him that he went as he did, in the sweetness and the beauty of that life that had been giving itself to humanity.

Very few people understand Theodore J. Mayer. We who knew him best realize that. Many did understand him in some ways, but as our brothers have said, he was a man of many parts, of many sides, and it was given to but few to perceive all the man, to understand him in his various moods and in the various expressions of his mind and his spiritual aspirations. It seems to us that those who were so closely associated with him upon the National Board of the Spiritualist Association did know and understand him in perhaps as full measure as anyone could on this mortal side. We saw him in his various moods; we saw him in his anger and his positive denunciation of methods and things that did not appeal to him; and sometimes he disagreed very strongly with some of us, sometimes with all of us in one or another direction, and we met that stern conviction of his with our own positive force, and therefore we could measure ourselves with him and measure his strength against our own. We saw him in the most beautiful conditions sometimes, when sweet benevolence came forth in rare expression, in bountiful measure—thinking only of the needs of his fellow-men in a manner most glorious to behold. We looked upon him then as one who must have descended from the very gods, so far-reaching was his benevolence, so glorious his self-renunciation and his desire—and not only desire, but his deeds of doing good.

Our dear brother was known to us who are here upon this platform. He was known to us in our homes—our home for nine years in the national headquarters of this city, where he was a welcome guest. Sometimes when we had much business at hand he was a daily comer, and many affairs were discussed, many broad questions were entertained, many ideas were exchanged; and in the hours of social converse or in times of business association, we always had a glimpse of the heart of the man, and the heart of the man was sound and sweet and pure to its very core. We who knew him know this is true. And the soul of the man was brilliant in its expression of blessing and love for humanity.

O, so many things has he done that none of the outside world knows anything of. So many beautiful deeds. At one time years ago, before the Mediums' Relief Fund was established by our National Board, Brother Mayer came to our headquarters, and in our talk together concerning the needs of certain people he learned quite a good deal of a medium who lives in Massachusetts, crippled and diseased, a frail woman who for many years had done grand work for Spiritualism, but who had become paralyzed and helpless through accident and disease, and who also had the burden of caring for other dear, helpless ones upon her shoulders; and he said to me, "Mrs. Longley, I feel that I must help that case."

I said, "Well, Mr. Mayer, it will be only another of your good deeds."

Said he, "Don't let her know from whence this comes. Just write to her that a friend desires to help her along the way," and he handed me twenty-five dollars.

I sent it to this lady, and I said, "A good Spiritualist in Washington, who wishes to be understood as an unknown friend, sends you this twenty-five dollars to aid you in your work."

The days passed and the month closed. He was very busy attending to large contracts and other affairs in his daily life, but he came in and said, "Mrs. Longley, I haven't time now to stop and talk;" but he took out his wallet and said, "Here is twenty-five dollars. Send it to that lady in Massachusetts. Tell her it is from her unknown friend"; and he hastened away to attend to his affairs.

I did so, and the next month the same. And for two years, the first of every month Mr. Mayer came to me and handed me the twenty-five dollars for that woman whom he had never seen. He knew that she had been a worker in the spiritual cause, that she was a sufferer because of the work she had done for Spiritualism, and he knew she was a fellow-being who needed the strength of his sympathy and aid, and these he freely gave until the Mediums' Relief Fund was established and we placed that woman and her blind sister on our pension list, giving to each of them twelve dollars a month—he gave that twenty-five dollars, and none knew it save Mr. Longley and myself.

You may be sure that while I did not tell this friend the name of the donor of these beautiful benefactions, she came to learn it, because I always believe credit should be given where it is due, and I felt that our dear brother who was doing these things should have the credit for it. And so in a way she came to realize that it was the Treasurer of the National Association who was giving this money to her from month to month, and of course she blessed him in her heart.

But that is only one case. That was the only case where he paid out through my hands a monthly payment to any one individual, but through the years that I have been closely associated with him there have been numerous cases where he has placed in my hands sums from five to thirty dollars, bidding me send them in different directions to needy individuals and say nothing from whom they came, only that a friend in Washington desired to give them aid. In this way, as well as through public benefactions, of which we of Washington have learned and know, our dear friend gave to humanity. He earned his money to make it of service to mankind. He labored day and night that he might be able to dispense unto others that which should help them on their onward way. He sacrificed his life for humanity. I say this advisedly; I know it to be true that the labor and the time and the strength which he gave during the last three years to public works that he had in view, to hospital work that he desired to see established here in Washington that it might open its arms freely to the poor and take in the suffering and give them help and strength and needed encouragement—he gave up that which was the backbone of his physical life, the vital forces and energy that should have been applied to his physical health. And I know that he did sacrifice his life in large measure to humanity, applying himself to those business tasks through which he hoped to be able to do more for the world in benevolent works.

But, dear friends, he needs not our eulogy. He has passed onward; "his works do praise him." His good works follow him. He has been in this earth life a benefactor to many souls. He has been a staunch, true Spiritualist, standing fast to his colors.

Time and time again, in my work as Secretary of the National Association, I have either gone to his home at early morn before he would leave for his office, or have sent for him to come to my office, to consider with me affairs that would come up for immediate action. We had no time to call a Board meeting; we had no opportunity even to correspond with the members. But matters had to be attended to, and his wise counsel, his clear judgment, his sound mentality never failed. These were always on the right side, and all these affairs that claimed attention were given clear thought and strength of mind no matter what the conditions that were calling him to his personal affairs. And many and many times has he laid aside personal matters that belonged to his own business life to come up to headquarters to discuss and to plan for things that should be for the benefit of Spiritualism and the blessing of human beings.

So, dear friends, I know that he was an unselfish man. He was one who was thinking of others more than of self all the time. And for this reason has he departed at the early age of sixty years. He has been called to the immortal world. We wonder and we grieve, for we loved him when he was with us in the pride of his manhood, the strength of his spiritual nature, the clear light of his mentality. We admired the man; we had respect for his insight and judgment; we held him in close affection in our hearts, and so we grieve because he has passed from us. But not one whit less do we hold him in high esteem; not one shadow of our respect for him has fallen away from our hearts, and love and sympathy are still there in sweetest measure reaching out to him in the world of light to which he has ascended. But grief comes, as our dear friends have said, because we cannot bear to think that in the physical form he will not meet with us; that never again will we listen to that well known voice, or look upon that earnest, sincere, honest face; that never again will we clasp hands in the mortal and feel that he is one with us. At our headquarters is a vacant chair, to-morrow to be white draped in memory of one who, in the mortal, shall not be there; yet in spirit, when we meet as a Board of Directors of this great National Association, we shall call upon Theodore J. Mayer and he will respond. We know that he will not fail us now. We know that in the midst of our busy counsels, when we are met together, not only to pay tribute to this dear friend, but also to elect in his position and place one who shall serve as our treasurer and our valued associate, he will be with us. When we shall meet to-morrow and the day following to prepare for the coming convention of October next in this city, one that he in his thoughtfulness prepared the way for, and in his last days sent his friend and business partner to the managers of the Masonic Temple with a check to pay for the five days of our convention from his private purse, doing this when he was unable to sign his name to a check, in the last days of his mortal illness—shall we not believe that he will be with us still? Shall we for a moment think that he will fail to come when we seek for him in the depths of our hearts, and know that he is our friend, our associate, our loving companion, our comrade still?

For years he has stood like a bulwark of strength in the midst of our great conventions, and at various times in important issues of our Spiritualistic cause, by his will and strength and good counsel and insight has carried the tide whence it should properly flow. Shall we not then rely upon him still, and feel that he is still with us in love and care? Yea; good friends we may not grieve. It is only because we shall miss the mortal form that we shall long for the sound of the voice and a touch of the hand; and in gazing upon that vacant chair we shall feel more keenly, perhaps, than we have before that he has gone from our presence in the body, though, thank God for Spiritualism, we know he will be with us still in spirit.

We know there is a God. We Spiritualists do not flout the idea of an Infinite, over-ruling Presence and Power, a glorious, immutable, magnificent Being, call it what you may. We have no objections to your defining that Infinite source of intelligence and light in any terms you please; but to us it is God, God in Infinite Goodness, Divine Love, Wisdom and Truth, all things sweet and pure, uplifting and abiding. And God understands. Some day we shall know more fully than we do at this hour why this, our dear friend, this helper, this defender of Truth, this protector of honest mediumship, this friend of humanity—why he was summoned to the courts of heaven in that fullness of strength when the world needed him so much. But perhaps we can feel and say, with our dear Brother Grimshaw, that he can do more for humanity now than if he had remained a score more of years upon the earth. He has gone in the fullness of his strength, but will return in the might of his power; and some day we shall understand and know why we were deprived of his outward life while we felt we needed him so much.

In the days of the olden time, I remember being at a great convention of people in Music Hall in Boston. The occasion was that of Senator Frye paying tribute to Senator Blaine, who had passed from earth. Mr. Frye said in his eulogy of Mr. Blaine, "There was once a time when the great Daniel Webster passed from earth and his body lay in state for the people to gaze upon. And as they filed by his funeral bier, one poor farmer stood beside the coffined form and gazed upon it. Said he, 'Webster, the world will miss you.'" Said Senator Frye, "Blaine, the world does miss you." Say we, the National Association of Spiritualists, "Theodore Mayer, the outward world shall miss you because of your great energies and indomitable powers which had been made manifest through the physical form, but we as Spiritualists shall endeavor to forget that which is of the physical, which misses and mourns the body, for we know you will be with us, and we shall not miss you from our counsels and our abiding places."

He is an immortal soul. He comes to us, dear friends, with his words of strength; and you know that he was a practical man, a positive man, that he did his duty and expected every man to do his duty always as far as circumstances permit; that he expected us all to be good workers in Spiritualism. He was a "stand-by" and a worker in the First Association of Spiritualists of this city, and owing to him much has been accomplished, and he expects you and every one of you who are Spiritualists to come out and attend the meetings of the First Association and give your moral and your sympathetic support and your financial aid and your working activities to this Association, and make it a grand power, a credit to Spiritualism in this great city of the nation, in this great Capital City, where Spiritualism should send forth its shafts of light into the Senate Chamber and the Executive Mansion, abroad over the capital hill—everywhere, and be seen and known of men. He expects you to stand firm at your post of duty, doing your work as he would have done his if he were here to-night—as he does his from the spirit world, as he did every day and every hour in his mortal life. Yes, do this, dear friends, and as our brothers have said, it will be the grandest and sweetest eulogy that you can pay to him, for it will prove to him that his example has been of service to your hearts.

Dear friend, loved comrade, beloved one, having passed to the immortal world we know you will not forsake us; we know you will stand by us; but we ask, we pray for your continued aid. We petition you to be with us in our need. When the time comes and questions arise as to our duty, be by our side; send to us your influence and your strength; quicken in our hearts our sense of right and duty and that which should flow forth for love to humanity, lest we forget. Give unto each one present something of that great influence, that marvelous power, that magnetic force, that went from your frame and your heart like a living light to stir men's souls; let us have it here and in days to come. And knowing that we have such as you and other faithful ones who have passed on to grander heights of immortality as counselors and guides, we shall strive to do our work and our duty day by day. Morning shall arise, the sun shall set, hours and weeks and months shall flee away: you, our friend, will be marching over the heights to grander scenes, to more glorious achievements. But, as the eternal light never fails, as love ne'er grows dim, as truth abides, as sympathy and consciousness and intelligence live forever, so do we believe that in the great etoural world we shall meet with Theodore Mayer once again.

Song service and benediction.

On this occasion the massive stand was draped in flowing folds of white, festooned with violet streamers and bore an excellent picture of Mr. Mayer. The hall was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers—including an immense basket of crimson roses—the gift of Florist Gude—which, on the following day, was taken to the Mayer lot in the cemetery.

Items of Interest from New York.

It has been a subject of comment how many stormy Sundays there have been during the past winter, but today, May 5th, has been an exceptionally pleasant one. "Elk's Hall" is located upon 59th street, at the foot of Central Park, which was well filled by a happy throng who were attracted there in autos, carriages, upon horseback and also many pedestrians, to enjoy the beauties of nature, just donning her robes of green and many bright colors, as evidenced in the many beds of tulips and crocuses which flank the paths and drive-ways. Notwithstanding these allurements, an unusually large audience greeted Mrs. Helen P. Russegue who had left the Annual State Convention of her own State of Connecticut, held at the capital city, Hartford, for the day, in order that those who had convened there might have the privilege and pleasure of listening to Mrs. Gaule-Reidinger. After appropriate remarks by the president, Mrs. M. A. Newton, Mrs. Russegue's guides followed with a masterly discourse upon the subject, "What is the Message Which Spiritualism Brings which is superior to all other religions of the world."

The many psychometric readings which followed proved very satisfactory to the recipients, who pronounced them very correct.

Coming from New York City back to Brooklyn in the evening, the writer found a large and attentive audience convened in a very pretty hall at 1246 Bedford Ave., where Mrs. Walters White and Mrs. Emma Miller are holding a series of free Sunday evening meetings, the former presenting the philosophy of Spiritualism, inspired by a high order of intelligences, among whom might be some of those who framed our Government. Her listeners cannot fail in being benefitted by their ministrations. Mrs. Miller's psychometric readings are said to be astonishing to the skeptic, and very pleasing to the believer.

Many other meetings, both Sunday and week days, are also being held all over our city.

Mrs. O'Connor, one of our favorite mediums who is doing good work for a society over in Jersey City, was an interested and appreciative listener.

Now that Mrs. Pepper has closed her meetings and gone abroad, the wagging tongues of the gossips and scandal-mongers are busy discussing the reports contained in the secular press regarding her coming marriage to a wealthy member of the Vanderbilt family.

DR. G. W. FOWLER.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

AN ETERNAL PAST.

It Is the Basis of Immortality Future.

The above headings are over an article written by E. R. Rockwood in The Progressive Thinker of April 20, 1907, and calls to all thinking on the subject of immortality of humanity, and the eternity of the life that humanity was evolved out of, for eternal life, must be a life without beginning or end. I would refer Brother Rockwood to a book written by an Initiate of Esoteric Masonry, called The Light of Egypt, one of the few Spiritually unfolded writers of his day. I bought the book when it first came out at $3. It can be obtained at the office of The Progressive Thinker for $2. It explains the spiritual laws of incarnation, and reincarnation, from a spiritual standpoint, and how a human being can unfold his own spiritual senses and satisfy the cravings of his own soul or spirit, which is the coming Spiritualism, which is coming to take the place of hypnotic mediumship.

A. C. DOANE.

Summerland, Cal.

HAECKEL'S LAST WORDS ON EVOLUTION.

A popular retrospect and summary. By Ernst Haeckel, Professor at Jena University. Translated from the second edition by Joseph McCabe. With three plates and Haeckel's latest portrait. Price, cloth, $1.00 net.

CONTENTS:—Introduction. Preface. Chapter I.—The Controversy about Creation; Evolution and Dogma; Plate I; Genealogical Tree of the Vertebrates. Chapter II.—The Struggle over our Genealogical Tree; Our Ape Relatives and the Vertebrate-Stem; Plate II.; Skeletons of Five Anthropoid Apes. Chapter III.—The Controversy over the Soul; The Ideas of Immortality and God; Plate III.; Embryos of Three Mammals. Appendix.—Evolutionary Tables; Geological Ages and Periods; Man's Genealogical Tree—First Half; Man's Genealogical Tree—Second Half; Classification of the Primates; Genealogical Tree of the Primates; Explanation of Genealogical Table I. Postscript.—Evolu-

MODERN ARCHITECTURE

PRACTICAL BUNGALOWS AND COTTAGES FOR TOWN AND COUNTRY

This book contains perspective wash drawings and floor plans of one hundred and twenty-five choice homes, ranging in price from $500 to $2,000, and is invaluable to the home builder, furnishing many new and up-to-date ideas and suggestions in modern architecture. Every plan advertised is made by a licensed architect and been built from to the entire satisfaction of the builder and within the estimated cost invariably. Blue prints are furnished at moderate cost, ranging from $5.00 to $10.00 according to the cost of erection, consisting of floor, roof and foundation plans; front, side and rear elevations, with complete typewritten specifications. Arranged and edited by Fred. T. Hodgson. 12mo. Cloth, 250 pages, 300 illustrations. Price, $1.

Psychic Light

BY MAUD LORD DRAKE.

Mrs. Maud Lord Drake has a national reputation as a medium. The manifestations given through her mediumship have been most marvelous. She has written a book with this title: "PSYCHIC LIGHT—THE CONTINUITY OF LAW AND LIFE." It is a ponderous volume of 600 pages. It will hold your attention from the beginning to the end. It is chockful of stirring incidents. Price of this large volume, only $1.50, postpaid.

LIST OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Send in Your dates and Names of Secretaries at Once.

Interest in the various Spiritualist camp-meetings has commenced, and secretaries of the same should report at once to this office, so that proper announcement as to dates and officers can be made.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Semi-Tropic Spiritualist Association desires to correspond with speakers and mediums for engagements at Camp-meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, from August 15th to September 15th, 1907.

GEO. E. LYON, Sec'y.

1974½ E. First St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

The twentyfifth annual camp-meeting at Mt. Pleasant Park, opens July 31, and closes August 28. Programs and information given to all who write to Mrs. M. B. Anderson, secretary, Clarkesville, Mo.

Onset Camp.

Onset camp commences its thirty-first annual meeting, July 21, and closes August 25. For full programs address the Secretary, Onset, Mass.

Ocean Grove Camp.

This camp is located at Harwich, Mass., and opens July 28, and closes August 25, 1907. For programs and information, write Mrs. Mary B. Small South Harwich, Mass.

New Era Camp, Oregon.

The New Era Camp-meeting begins July 6 and ends July 29. For full programs, address Geo. H. Lazelle, president, Oregon City, or F. F. Dunton, secretary, Liberal.

Forest Home Camp, Mich.

This camp opens Aug. 4 and closes August 25. Any person desiring programs of information regarding campgrounds or camp work, will please write to the secretary, who will answer all inquiries. Mrs. Millie Mitchell, president; Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich.

Chesterfield Camp.

Begins July 25 and ends September 1. Mrs. Flora H. Millspaugh, secretary, Chesterfield, Ind. Send to her for full programmes.

Grand Ledge Camp, Mich.

The Grand Ledge Spiritualist Camp-meeting opens July 25, and closes August 18, with Mr. Oscar Edgerly as presiding chairman. For full particulars address J. W. Ewing, Grand Ledge, Mich.

Summerland Camp.

The Summerland Spiritualist Association will hold its annual camp-meeting the last week in June, beginning June 24. Mrs. F. Lee, secretary.

Winfield (Kansas) Camp.

The Winfield Camp Association will hold its fourteenth annual camp-meeting commencing June 30, and closing July 14. Mrs. A. McAlister president, North Manning street, Winfield, Kan.; Mrs. M. C. Sailing, secretary, 1602 South Church street, Winfield, Kan.

City of Light Assembly.

The season opens at Lily Dale N. Y., July 13, and closes September 3. For program address Laura G. Fixen, Secretary, 1047 Carmen ave., Chicago, Ill,

Sunapee Lake Camp, N. H.

SunapeeLake Spiritualist Camp at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., commences July 29, and clases August 26. For programs and infirmation write to the secretary, Lorenzo Worthen, Hillsboro Bridge, N. H.

Wonewoc Camp-Meeting.

The Western Wisconsin Camp Association holds its annual camp-meeting in Unity Park, Wonewoc, Wis., July 15 to August 13. For particulars and programs write Gertrude Spooner, secretary, Wonewoc, Wis.

Ottawa Camp.

Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, Forest Park, Ottawa, Kansas, August 17 to 27 inclusive. Write for programs. H. W. Henderson, president, Lawrence, Kansas; Mrs. May Cook-Pearson, secretary, Spring Hill, Kansas.

Camp Progress.

Meetings are held at Mowerland Park, Upper Swampscott, Mass., every Sunday, beginning June 3, and closing September 30. B. H. Blaney, president, 150 Elm street, Marblehead; Mr. H. S. Gardiner, secretary, 28, Cabot street, Salem.

Vicksburg Camp.

Vicksburg Camp, Mich., opens July 30 and closes August 20. For full particulars address Mrs. Jeanette Fraser, Vicksburg, Mich.

Edgewood Camp, Wash.

Commences July 29, and ends Aug. 19. For full particulars address Geo. E. Knowlden, 955½ Tacoma avenue, Tacoma, Wash.

Delphos (Kansas) Camp.

Opens August 9, closing on the 25th. Address all communications to T. D. Rice, Secretary, Delphos, Kan.

Island Lake Camp.

Island Lake Camp, Island Lake, Mich., opens July 14, extending until August 30. For programs or information write to the secretary, N. G. Swarthout, Fowlerville, Mich. At Brighton after July 1st.

Lake Brady, Ohio.

The sixteenth annual session of this camp will commence June 30, and end September 1. For full particulars address A. G. Keck, Akron, Ohio.

Unity Camp, Mass.

Opens on Suday, June 4, and continues every Sunday until the last of September.

Mantua Camp, Ohio.

This camp, located at Mantua Station, Ohio, will open July 9, and continue to August 27. For further particulars, address F. H. Sherwood, secretary, Mantua Station, Ohio.

Harmony Grove Camp

Harmony Grove Camp-meeting Association will hold its annual camp, July 22 to August 5. This camp is located three and one-half miles from Escondido, Cal. For further particulars in regard to the camp, address T. J. McFeron, secretary, 528 Fir st., San Diego, Cal.

Niantic Camp, Conn.

The Connecticut Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, at Niantic Camp Ground, Niantic, Ct.; season of 1907, commences June 12, and continues until September 11. For full particulars address George Hatch, South Windham, Ct.

Haslett Park, Mich.

The twenty-fifth annual assembly of Spiritualists at Haslett Park, Mich., commences August 6, and continues to September 3. For programs address E. F. Sprout, Okemos, or D. R. Jessup, Williamston.

Verona Park Camp.

The Verona Park Camp-meeting, Me., will open August 12 and close August 26. A. F. Smith, president, Bangor, Me.; F. W. Smith, secretary, Rockland, Me.

Queen City Park Camp, Vt.

QueenCity Park Camp, South Burlington, Vt., commences July 29, and ends September 3. For programs address A. F. Hubbard, president, Tyson; S. N. Gould, vice-president, Randolph, or Effie L. Chapman, Cambridge, Vt. After the camp opens address each of the above at Queen City Park, Vt.

Freeville Camp.

The Freeville Camp, N, Y., opens July 22 and closes August 19. For programs write to Miss Victoria Moore, Dryden, N. Y.

A NEW BOOK.

Science and Religion.

By Benjamin F. Loomis, 397 Pages, $1.50, Cloth.

Showing the harmony of the Sciences and their relation to Religion, or the relation of Man to the Universe.

The Macrocosm and the Microcosm.

Showing the harmony between Phrenology and Astrology, or the Influence of the Planets on the Human Mind; and containing the Horoscopes of Jesus Christ and of Adam. Progress of the World explained by the principles of PHRENOLOGY.

A Cosmic View of Christ.

The Rise and "Fall" of Man

Scientifically Considered, and many other things not commonly found in other books. Address

FOWLER & WELLS CO.,

24 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth. 75 cents.

Science and a Future Life.

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

Works of Thomas Paine

A new edition in paper covers with large clear type, comprising:

Age of Reason.....25 cts.
Rights of Man.....25 cts.
Crisis.....25 cts.
Common Sense.....15 cts.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure these standard works, as the price is within the reach of all. For sale at this office.

The Rosicrucian Brotherhood.

Mr. S. C. Gould of Manchester, N. H., editor of the magazine, "Notes and Queries," has just brought out a quarterly magazine entitled "The Rosicrucian Brotherhood."

This gentleman is remarkably well posted historically on the world's occult fraternities, and having an extensive library of rare and valuable books on the subject, has produced a most interesting magazine.

We are glad to recommend this work received.

Price one dollar per year. Address

Eulian Publishing Co.,

Salem, Mass.

Prayer; Its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Tabe: Price 10 cents.

Mrs. E. M. Hitchcock will answer 1 questions by yes or no for 25 cents; business questions preferred. Send own hand writing. Full reading, $1.00. Fern Hill, Wash. Send date of birth.

NOTICE.

"If anyone has a full clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill. and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same."

WANTED—Girl about 14, living on the South Side, for psychic training and development. Experience not necessary. Morning work. Pay by the hour. Send address to Psychical Society, Room 9, 423 E 47th street, Chicago, Illinois.

NOTICE.—If anyone has a full or test clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill., and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same.

Astrological Horoscopes.

Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Walrond, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years' study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Business and Family Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

FRED P. EVANS,

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address, FRED P. EVANS.

2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

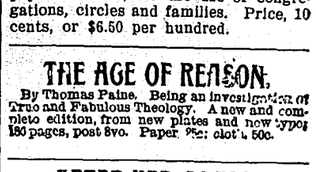
Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.

From an angel's viewpoint; including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,



21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Hary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some writes: "My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. P. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head, Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts. FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Vertnah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

230 North Sixth st.

San Jose, Cal.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—H. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 136 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth, 50c.

AFTER HER DEATH.

The Story of a Summer. By Lilian Whiting. Pervaded with pure and beautiful spirituality of thought. Instructive and helpful to all who love and seek the higher and finer ways of spiritual experience. Price, $1.00.

Paine's Theological Works.

Age of Reason, Examination of the Prophecies, etc. Illustrated edition. Post 8vo., 432 pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

OUR CHILDREN.

Hints From Practical Experience for Parents and Teachers.—By Paul Carus.

In this little book "Our Children," Paul Carus offers a unique contribution to pedagogical literature. Without any theoretical pretensions it is a strong defense for the rights of the child, dealing with the responsibilities of parenthood, and with the first inculcation of fundamental ethics in the child mind and the true principles of correction and guidance. Each detail is forcefully illustrated by informal incidents from the author's experience with his own children, and his suggestions will prove of the greatest possible value to young mothers and kindergartners. Hints as to the first acquaintance with all branches of knowledge are touched upon—mathematics, natural sciences, foreign languages, etc.—and practical wisdom in regard to the treatment of money, hygiene and similar problems. 207 Pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 25, 1907

The Microscope

And the Part It Plays in Instructing and Spiritualizing Mankind—Serious Thoughts for Reflection.

Who can measure space? Who can comprehend the Infinite?

When we take into consideration the millions of planets revolving in space, some of which are much larger than our earth, and that we would have to travel ten thousand times the distance across the Atlantic Ocean to reach the nearest planet that is revolving like our own around the sun; that the most remote planet of our system is so far from the sun and moves in such a large circuit, that it takes four thousand years to make one revolution; that it would take an express train the same length of time to reach it from this earth; that the whole milky way or "Milk Maid's Path," as it is sometimes called, is composed of stars and planets so far away and so numerous that we can see only the dim light from them which composes this bright track in the sky, we are truly led to say, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" and yet every hair of our heads are numbered, and not a sparrow falls to the ground unnoticed. All is law and order.

Take a microscope, if you please, and examine the smallest insect, and you will find every outline perfect, every tint and color complete. Look at a drop of water through this same microscope, and you will discover that it is filled with animal life, living, moving creatures of all shapes, and hideous to look upon. Let us take a walk along the beach at low tide. I pick up a shell; let us examine it. It is called a winkle; it is spawning time; a long string of spawn composed of lozenge-shaped pieces held together by a muscular fibre from one-half to a yard in length, is just being thrown out of this shell-fish. We hold it to the light and we discover that each lozenge-shaped piece is hollow and contains fifty or more little black seeds no larger than a poppy seed, and looking very much like them. Place one of those tiny seeds under our microscope, and what do we find? That it is a young winkle, perfect in all its parts, and that it is filled with meat and pulsating with life.

How wonderful! you exclaim.

You have noticed a house-fly on a warm day in summer rubbing his feet together, and then his wings, then winding his feet around his head, and you will say he is performing his toilet, but look at him through our microscope and we will find him covered with animal life that no doubt annoys the fly as well as the vermin we sometimes see with the naked eye that are troublesome to dumb animals.

Our grocer has just come in with an order, and left us some nice large prunes; they are getting a little dry, and are covered with a white substance, which you tell me is only a little mold that will wash off, but here our little microscope comes into play again, for we are growing curious, and our microscope is a great instructor. I place it over a prune and find that which you told me was only a little mold is a mass of living parasites, all crawling and moving, tumbling over each other in their hurry, each attending seemingly to its own particular business.

What a study. What a vast field of thought is nature in all her works. From the immensity of the heavenly bodies to the smallest atom, everything is complete and perfect. Nothing is left unfinished. Can we then comprehend the Infinite? Are we not rather filled with awe at the magnitude of the subject?

Every man has a different idea of God, each peculiar to his own understanding. We differ according to our degree of intelligence. All life is a manifestation of intelligence; the differing is in the degree of development. The harmonious and positive condition is not reached all at once, but by slow and steady growth, by a continual striving and reaching out after the best, the highest good, and the growth is gradual, and yet we strut up and down this little world of ours as though we were all there is of it, the alpha and the omega.

The wonderful demonstrations made with our little microscope lead to much thinking and speculating, and we ask ourself if these daily rounds, this constant struggle from day to day for a mere existence, is all there is of it? Are we placed here just for the little we can accumulate in the shape of dollars and cents, which we must leave behind when we go hence, as we certainly must? That we do know, for we see it demonstrated all around us daily, and yet why?

We see life, motion and action everywhere; from atom to man, from the mote in the sunbeam to the most intelligent of human kind.

Must we believe in disease and death? Must we leave behind bitter experiences and the lessons we have learned so dearly bought forever? I think not. There must be a continuation where even these are not lost. Let us hope so at least, for these experiences are purifiers; they make us better, fit comrades for the angels. Without them there could be no growth, and the harder and more bitter they are, the better for us and more purifying. Why shrink, then, and dread so much the shadow of suffering, when so much is to be gained from it? These experiences are our only true riches, the riches that cannot corrode or be taken away; all else is but dross.

It is said that just as a man is prepared to live, he dies. Should this be so? Let us step aside from the beaten paths of orthodoxy for awhile and think a little for ourselves, for surely our reasoning faculties would not have been given us except for use. If it is a sin to indulge in reasoning upon the vexed question, "If a man die shall he live again?" we may indulge in speculating on the subject for awhile at least just to see how it seems, for if the murderer can be forgiven at the eleventh hour, we are doing no worse, and may hope to be forgiven also; but when we set in motion our reasoning powers on the subject, we go on and on and we find the way so plain, and past teachings so absurd that we have no desire to turn back; in fact, there is no turning back.

We have learned that we are all mind; that matter is a continuation of spirit, and need not be separated. We learn of the All Truth that we are divine, filled with undeveloped possibilities, and being divine we are capable of doing divinely; that all strength is ours if we only recognize it; that we are capable of great possibilities, and when we learn our power fully, we can demonstrate it to the world and be of service to humanity, to those who sit in darkness in countless ways.

There is nothing we cannot overcome. All triumphs may be ours in time's futurity, if, whatsoever our fault, we do not faint or halt, but lean upon the staff of God's security."

Be up then and doing! Waste no more precious time in frivolity. The years go rapidly by. Life is short at best; then make the most of what little time there is left us. Let us hold hard, be strong and steadfast, with a heart ever in the right place, never wavering, but with hand outstretched to raise up the fallen and those who stumble by the wayside, and we need have no fears, for all will be well with us.

AUGUSTA FRANCES TRIPP.

Onset, Mass.

PEACE.

Up from the jungles where wild beasts roar,
Out from the pits of ignorance and crime,
Step by step through the battle and gore,
Fate has decreed that man should climb.
Outward and upward o'er steep and glen,
He tries for a foothold here and there,
Building of bodies and souls of men
The stairway up to his castle fair.

And the path he has journeyed you now can trace
By the blood-stained trail he has left behind,
For his glory has been to usurp the place,
And prey upon others of his kind.
Thus war to this day they glorify,
Yes, even in every Christian land,
While orators, statesmen and poets vie
In painting its victories great and grand.

But there is a song I fain would sing,
That its sweetness might reach and thrill the world,
And a message of joy and gladness bring,
Wherever war's missiles of death are hurled.
'Tis a song of peace; may its strains ne'er die
'Till the world's bloody strife shall cease;
The red rag of war be torn from the sky,
And unfurled the snow white flag of peace.

For an era has dawned, an era of right,
When man shall his weapons lay down,
And pitch him a tent 'mid scenes of delight,
On higher and holier ground.
Think you, O, ye wise ones, moulders of thought,
That his path must forevermore wind
Through regions by struggle and carnage bought,
Must he still seek to plunder his kind?

Ah, no! for the vanguard has reached a height
Where th' eternal sun streams from above,
And their camps are all gloriously alight
With the quenchless fires of love.
Then hail to thee! O, fair goddess of peace;
O'er earth may thy monuments rise,
Till the god of battles his songs shall cease,
And thy anthems shall reach the skies.

Then perish from earth every vestige of war!
Let its monuments crumble and fall,
Healed be every wound, forgotten each roar,
And the halo of peace gladden all.
Let reason and justice all questions decide,
In the court of the highest appeal,
And by its decision all learn to abide,
And the glory of life thus reveal.

LAURA B. PAYNE.

San Antonio, Texas.

MIND AND MATTER.

Oh! Mind, how wonderful thou art!
Where can we find thy goal?
For thou controllest every part,
So thou must be the whole.

All substance is controlled by thee,
For thou all substance art;
Where can we from thy presence flee?
Thou art in every part.

Thou art from all eternity,
And evermore will be;
And all there is are part and parts
Of thine Infinity.

Long have we searched through all that is;
The truth at last we find,
And know that mind all matter is,
All matter is all mind.

And so these two extremes do meet,
Unite from either pole,
And thus we find all things complete;
Two halves must make the whole.

In man we find thy highest goal,
For man creates with thee.
Thou hast evolved the human mind,
Forevermore to be.

Thou great immortal, mighty Whole!
We are a part of thee,
Mind individualized in man
Must then immortal be.

THEODORE SIMPSON.

Vancouver, B. C.

Heart keeping is the secret of happy housekeeping.—Anon.

PROGRESS A CONTINUAL CHANGE.

A Vivid Description of the Changes Occurring in the World to-day, the Tendency Being to Raise it to a Higher Plane.

The spirit of progress permeates every department of life, commercial, religious, social, and intellectual. This progressive spirit is the hand of God leading the world upward and onward toward a more complete something. It is the order of nature in all its departments to continually change according to the times, and thus keep in perfect equipoise. If some portion of nature, which includes the human race, fails through some cause to respond to this onward movement called progress, then that portion of nature is in an abnormal, an unhealthy condition, due to the fact that it is out of tune with God's great plan. Let us first consider what the world calls material things and see whether or not this spirit of progress is making changes and improvements according to the present status of the world's growth and thus bettering the condition of the race.

One hundred years ago we had no railroads, no steamboats, no telegraph, no telephones, no electric cars, and thousands of other inventions and improvements we enjoy to-day they of one hundred years ago knew nothing of. The tallow dip and candle, the ox-team, the spinning wheel, the loom, and the log house were adapted to the people of a hundred years ago, and were in perfect accord with their intellectual and spiritual unfoldment.

Now, if it were possible for the people of this up-to-date twentieth century with all its modern improvements to be placed back in that old time, it would be putting them in an abnormal condition, because their time would not do for our more advanced spiritual nature.

The progress during the past one hundred years has been great; in fact, amazing; and the progress during the next one hundred years will be equally great, yes, throughout all time, as progress is "the law of life." The future is filled with world building stuff and truths that will come to man just as fast as he is ready for them.

In the religious world we find this improvement and growth going on. As a man grows intellectually and spiritually his religion grows and takes on a higher form. The religion of one hundred years ago would not supply the spiritual needs of to-day, although the religions of all times and all ages were adapted to the times in which they flourished.

Yes, religion is continually changing, and thus adapting itself to the ever-present now. Those of us who fail to keep step with this ever-advancing host in religious progress soon find ourselves living in the past, living out of season, instead of the present, and thus become dwarfed intellectually, spiritually, and every other way.

The religion of to-day in all its various forms of expression will not do for the future race, especially in fifty or a hundred years from now, because the world will have grown and the people changed.

A man's god and his religion grow in proportion as he grows. His god is no larger than his conception of what God ought to be. His religion is no broader and grander than his conception of what religion ought to be.

This spirit of progress, which is God developing a human race, in other words, unfolding the real man, is manifested in science, art, literature, philosophy, and religion, all of which are expressions of the evolutionary process.

In the treatment of the ills of the physical body we find also changes, numerous and acute. The practice of medicine to-day is entirely different from what it was fifty years ago. In fact, the crude erratic treatment of that day of bleeding and calomel and jalap in sufficiently large doses for a horse would kill the more spiritualized sensitive nature of this twentieth century.

In the early day such crude objective treatment was essential to a crude objective people, but to-day we require something different. God, who is at the helm, steering the great ship of life, makes no mistakes. When His children need a new system of treatment or form of healing adapted to them in race growth or status of spiritual unfoldment, then He raises up some soul or souls, who catch the higher vibration which is adapted to the hour for the "healing of the nations."

When a portion of the race began to outgrow the old system of medicine, the allopath, the old school as it is called, then the time was ripe for something new for the treatment of the ills that belong to the objective life, and the homeopathic school was born, which perhaps is a safer and better method of treatment for the more sensitive class of mankind, notwithstanding the allopathic school laughs to scorn, pointing with finger to the small dose of the homeopath. They (the homeopathic school) in turn point to their successful record saying, "Beat it if you can." So we believe the homeopathic school is one of the great results of this spirit of progress, and one of the essentials of the human race.

Notwithstanding the fact that the homeopathic school of medicine is considered modern, it too is being outgrown by a portion of the race, as manifested in the system of healing called osteopathy. The principles of osteopathy were discovered in 1874 by Dr. Andrew T. Still, who founded the American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo., with eighteen students. To-day there are thousands of graduates scattered over this broad country, healing thousands of people that the older schools fail to reach, showing that as people develop and change the system of healing changes.

Not only in osteopathy do we find healing without medicine. We have magnetic healing, christian science healing, mental science healing, and healing by suggestion, all of which were unknown years ago because the race was not ready for them.

In religion the changes have been rapid and many during the past fifty years, because the race has grown more along intellectual lines than ever before during the same period of time in the history of the world. There is a correlation between intellectuality and religious growth.

Now, this spirit of progress does not reach all people alike. Some are susceptable to the ever changing and growing condition, while others are willing to remain in the old rut perfectly contented in their belief that they have reached the ultimate; hence the cause of strife and dissension in all departments of life. Those who move along with progress are condemned by those who remain behind, and those who remain behind condemn those who go ahead; and by and by, in the religious world for instance, the congregations are divided and new sects are born, which is essential to progress and always a step toward the betterment of the world. Whenever a religion drifts into a rut and is established upon a set of creeds or a declaration of principles as a finality, then the time is ripe for a new departure, and it always comes.

W. V. NICUM.

Dayton, Ohio.

A well governed mind learns in time to find pleasure in nothing but the truth and the just.—Anon.

We are so vain as to set the highest value upon those things to which nature assigned the lowest place.—Seneca.

WINONA GHOST PANE.

Not In It With This Strange Picture On the Wall—Scenes of Other Worlds—Fantastic Shapes Pictured On Walls of Morgan County House By Unseen Power—Natives Believe It Premonition of Ending of the World June 10.

To the Editor: I enclose herewith a clipping from Fayette Journal, in regard to some pictures developed on a wall—I presume the result of spirit power.

G. S. DOOLITTLE.

Ansted, W. Va.

A phenomenon rivaling in mystery the famous Rogers window pane picture which created such a furore in this section a couple of years ago is reported from Morgan county. Without any apparent reason strange pictures, said to represent scenes in heaven and hell have appeared on the walls of a room in the house of Emery Lopp, and people are traveling for miles to the house to view the wonderful pictures.

The house, which is located in the hill region, about two miles from Hancock Station, is a modern structure and a modest home. How the scenes said to be depicted upon the walls in such weird and fantastic shapes came there is a complete mystery, and superstitious people firmly believe that some supernatural power has been at work and that the pictures are a prophecy of things to happen. As a result of the talk that has spread around concerning the mysterious delineations excitement has been growing right along until the whole country around is around and every day numbers of people go to the house to look upon the walls.

A gentleman from Hancock was informed by a man of reliable standing who visited the house to inspect the walls that the reports concerning the affair are true. He said no human hand could have painted the scenes on the walls that appear in outlines representing angels and devils, snakes and other weird pictures that crawl and fly and of beautiful vistas and pits of flaming fires in such strong and striking contrast that the observer is awed by the seeming presence of some unseen power and its work.

Mr. Lopp, the owner of the house, is at a loss to account for the mystifying affair. He said he first noticed the pictures about a month ago. At first the wall appeared to be discolored as by smoke, and gradually the scenes began clearen, and he called some neighbors in to inspect the weird shapes and scenes upon which they looked with wondering eyes and the news went abroad until everybody in that section of the country became interested in the matter.

A well known Hancock physician who was driving in that section the other day passed the house of mystery, and counted about thirty teams hitched along the road. They were on the way to the house, having been attracted by the reports of the strange things to be seen there.

The prophecies that have been made that the world is to come to an end on June 10 by coming in contact with a comet has added to the excitement which prevails concerning the pictures in the house, and many believe that this is a premonition of warning for people to prepare for the finale of all things on that date.

Temple Fund Self-Denial Period.

Please read this at your next public meeting, and act as agent.

The Temple Fund Society cannot make its object successful unless the Spiritualists aid it to secure a competent fund.

THE MEMBERSHIP FEE IS ONLY ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM.

We are hoping for several thousand members this first year of effort.

THEN LARGER DONORS WILL FOLLOW, AND LEGACIES SOON MAKE A VAST SUM.

This success depends upon you!

Will you help? Or, will you wait for others to create the success?

THIS SOCIETY AND ITS FUND ARE SURE TO BE PERMANENT.

We hope that each Spiritualist will aid in securing a fund by such means as solicitation, entertainments, seances, meetings, etc.

WE NOW ASK FOR A PERIOD OF SELF-DENIAL.

During June and July nearly all local meetings are suspended, and the Spiritualists are not taxed for home support of the cause.

That will be a good time for each person to make a small donation to the Temple Fund Society.

You can each cut off some little luxury, pleasure, or even a need, and donate such proceeds to this worthy movement, for the good of all.

Let us co-operate.

Give your donations to your local society officials, and ask them to remit the same to the Temple Fund Society.

SEND ONE DOLLAR FOR A PERSONAL MEMBERSHIP, IF YOU CAN.

Ask all other Spiritualists, and friends of our Cause, to make some contribution.

OUR SUCCESS WILL THEN BE SURE!

Address Mrs. Carrie H. Mong, Secretary, 415 S. Franklin Street, Muncie, Indiana, or yours fraternally,

GEORGE W. KATES,
President.

Cheyney, Pa.

NONCONFORMITY.

W. F. Jamieson Writes a Decidedly Jamiesonian Epistle.

"Let the people think for themselves."—Harrison D. Barrett.

"There's something splendid in human nature that won't mind."—Col. Ingersoll.

The courteous manner in which Mr. Barrett speaks of his former co-workers is a refreshing contrast to the bitterness manifested by some who are teachers of the people.

In his classification of the "150" he places me in company with Elizabeth M. F. Denton. For this kind act I thank him. Mrs. Denton, wife of the great William Denton, is one of the deepest and clearest thinkers that ever graced this planet, and sheds lustre on her sex.

Brother Barrett informs us that "it is the absence of the true religious spirit that has wrought our ruin."

From the time I was ten years of age I hunted high and low for the "true religious spirit." Gave it up! Later, searched for a "materialized spirit," hoping against hope to find it.

Senator Beveridge declares that the Christian bible contains the story of the development of the "only divine religion know to man."

For years I studied that book more closely than any other; found many gems of thought in it; a few excellent moral teachings amid heaps of rubbish accumulated during ages of ignorance.

As to the "divine being" described therein, his character is that of a fiend, and from that source Senator Beveridge derives his "only divine religion known to man."

Friend Barrett does not believe in the Senator's religion. "Let it be remembered," says Mr. Barrett, "that by religion I do not mean long, doleful, puritanic faces; long, loud and meaningless prayers; nor yet the blind awesome worship of an anthromorphic god by means of self-abasement and hyprocitical pretenses."

Can that be the Senator's "only divine religion?" How ruthlessly the President of the N. S. A. uproots it, prayers, pretenses, and the only god-in-chief of the "only divine religion."

Brother Barrett is a merciless iconoclast. Candidly, I like it. When he writes of earthly things I understand him; but when he flies heavenward, descants on the "true religious spirit," I am at sea, as it were, until he performs the parachute act and gracefully settles once more on terra firma by telling us exactly what he means by religion; "I mean just what James, the apostle meant—'GOOD WORKS, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF A PURE MORAL CHARACTER.'"

That keen critic, Clara, of the town named in honor of James, will indulge in one of her benignant smiles and murmur: "We are agreed in substance; differ only in labeling the substance." "Good works, and the maintenance of a pure moral character" he labels "religion." I would call it "ethics." It is as precious as it is scarce. Who fills the bill? The Christian assures us that "only one" ever did fill it. We are good in spots, not all good.

I have never given up the study of Spiritualism; but, oh, how you highborn teachers do puzzle me!

There is Prof. Lockwood, a natural philosopher, who tells us that "Spiritualism is based on a natural science." Good foundation. Now, Professor, on what is religion based? He answers: "EVERY RELIGION IS FOUNDED ON A MIRACLE; SPIRITUALISM HAS NEITHER MIRACLE NOR MYSTERY IN IT. THE PEOPLE WANT FACTS TO-DAY, AND SPIRITUALISM SUPPLIES THOSE FACTS."

Will Bro. Barrett pronounce the benediction?

W. F. JAMIESON.

Pentwater, Mich.

Message to Mrs. Mattie E. Hull.

Dear Sister and Co-Worker:—A very pointed impression comes to me that I am the instrument through which you are to receive a pleasant message from your dear partner, 'The Moses of Spiritualism."

About ten days, or two weeks prior to the publication of the passing out of your dear husband, there came to me in a vision a casket, in which his body lay, over the casket was the United States flag. With the vision came the message that "a hero had passed over." This took place in a public circle held by me, where there were about twenty members and others present. Nothing further came until after the news came that Moses had risen; then on the first Sunday at the public meeting in the West Side Spiritual Church here, I was called upon by the president, Mr. H. E. Boerstler, to offer the invocation, and while so engaged a second vision came.

I saw a beautiful landscape; then a cross appeared. Standing amid rocks, on the right side of the cross and leaning over it, stood an apple tree in full bloom; on the left side, a crab-apple tree also in blossom. Flowing through the cross and gushing out over the rocks below, I saw a river of water. Looking up and off through the cross, I beheld a broad river, calm and fair, and upon its placid waters I saw a row-boat nearing the distant shore. Just then the sun arose in glorious brightness, sending golden streaks upward and outward, and thus the vision was complete.

The vision as it appeared to me was given to the West Side Spiritual Church gathering; afterwards by the request of the president and officers of said Church, I put the vision on canvas, under control, with my eyes closed. The original picture is 16 X 20, in a heavy gilt frame. A photograph copy is herewith enclosed. The picture I have named "From Shore to Shore."

The whole vision is a representation of life, the rough and the smooth, the light and the darkness, the sweet and the bitter, the joy and the sorrow, the cross and the crown. I hold copyright papers for the picture, from Washington.

Yours truly,

MRS. SUSANNA HARRIS.

493 N. High st., Columbus, O.

Sacred are the lips from which has issued only truth. Over all wealth, above all station, above the noble—the robed and crowned—rises the sincere man. Happy is the man who neither paints nor patches, veils nor veneers! Blessed is he who wears no mask!—Ingersoll.

CONNECTICUT SPIRITUALISTS.

The Twenty-First Annual Convention of the State Association.

The Twenty-first Annual Convention of the Connecticut State Spiritualist Association was held in Unity Hall, Hartford, Saturday and Sunday, May 4 and 5. Business meeting opened at 11 a. m., with the president, Mr. A. A. Gustine, in the chair. The report of the secretary, Mrs. Dillon, was read and approved. The report of the treasurer, Mr. Edward Brewer, was also accepted. Mr. Brewer gave a report as a delegate to the annual convention of the N. S. Association held in Chicago in October, 1906. A communication and greetings were read by Mrs. Dillon from Mrs. Longley, secretary of the N. S. A. Report of individual meetings held during the past year were given by Mrs. F. J. Storrs. Mrs. Margaret Gaule-Reidinger gave a short talk on the work of her New York society. The following officers were elected: President, Mr. A. A. Gustine, Meriden; first vice-president, Mrs. George Hatch; South Windham; second vice-president, Mrs. L. A. Lambertson, Poquonock; secretary, Mrs. Jennie E. B. Dillon, Hartford; treasurer, Mr. Edward Brewer, East Hartford. Trustees, Mr. Dumont Kingsley, Mr. George E. Cooley, Mr. Charles L. Smith; all of Hartford.

Delegates to the convention of the National Spiritualist Association to be held in Washington in October, A. A. Gustine of Meriden; Mr. George Hatch of South Windham; Mrs. Helen P. Russegue of Hartford. The delegates were given the power to appoint their own alternates if unable to go. Mrs. Dillon was vested with the power to appoint solicitors throughout the State. The chair was authorized to appoint a committee to draft resolutions on the transition of our ex-president, Mr. George W. Burnham, and others who have passed out during the past year who had occupied our platform as speakers at former convention.

The matter of holding mass meetings was left with the executive board, but it was suggested that Mrs. Dillon be instructed to correspond with the secretary of Niantic camp meeting association to see if arrangements could not be made to hold a "State Association Day" during the time of the encampment.

It was voted to hold the next convention in Hartford, the first Saturday and Sunday in May, 1908.

Mr. G. R. Sanford presented a paper in advocacy of a "Golden Rule Association," which had many signers, it advocated the brotherhood of man, and the elevation and promotion of spirituality.

At 2:30 p. m., Mr. J. C. F. Grumbine of Boston, Mass., addressed the meeting, taking for his subject, "Clairvoyance." At 7:45 p. m. the Rev. B. F. Austin of Rochester, N. Y., spoke on the subject, "Signs of the Times."

At 10:30 a. m. Sunday, a conference was held in Alliance Hall; many interesting remarks were made by those present, and the following resolutions were presented by the chairman of the committee on resolutions, Rev. B. F. Austin, and unanimously adopted.

Whereas, The Angel of Death has during the past year removed from our midst some of our noblest workers, gathering into the great harvest of the spirit realm our venerable friend, co-laborer and ex-president of the State Association, Mr. George W. Burnham of Willimantic, Conn.; also the gifted and inspired Jennie Hagan Brown, whose lofty thought and beautiful lectures have often charmed and enthralled us, also the gifted and eloquent Sarah J. Byrnes, whose devotion to all that elevates and ennobles mankind and eloquent advocacy of our philosophy made her a tower of strength and beauty in the cause of truth, also that scholarly, earnest and eloquent advocate of true Spiritualism, the Rev. Moses Hull, whose labors in behalf of the emancipation of humanity from the bondage of error were so abundant and successful; also our generous and loyal friend and brother the late treasurer of the National Spiritualists' Association, Theodore J. Mayer of Washington, D. C., whose devotion to Spiritualism and benefaction to our cause, to education and to charity have placed his name among the great philanthropists of our age:

Therefore be it resolved by the State convention here assembled, that,

First, We place on record our public recognition of the great and lasting work for humanity and the cause of truth accomplished by these devoted and successful workers in our ranks.

Second, We rejoice in the comforting truth of our philosophy, that while these noble laborers have entered upon the higher conscious life of the spirit, they are still with us, as an inspiring presence and still work for our common cause, the "spread of truth, and the elevation of mankind."

Third, We pledge ourselves to renewed devotion to those glorious truths which they loved, and to which they consecrated their noble lives.

At 2:30 p. m. the sessions were again held in Unity Hall, where the Rev. B. F. Austin spoke, taking for his subject, "The Religion of the Future."

At 7:30 p. m. Mr. J. C. F. Grumbine took for his subject, "Ancient and Modern Spiritualism." Both speakers were at their best and large audiences were in attendance. Mrs. Margaret Gaule-Reidinger followed each lecture with messages, every one being correct and fully recognized. The singing by the Arion Male Quartette of Hartford was an inspiring feature of the convention, and the convention adjourned with a feeling that these gatherings were important features in presenting Spiritualism to the people of Connecticut.

JENNIE E. B. DILLON,
Secretary.

Hartford, Conn.

Fame is not got by seeking it. All such pursuit is vain. It may very well come about that a man will succeed through tact and various artifices in making for himself some sort of name. But if there is no inner worth, all will prove empty and ephemeral.—Goethe.

I have lived to know that the great secret of human happiness is this: Never suffer your energies to stagnate.

Religion must always be something emotional, and the culture of emotion is not carried on advantageously in ordinary school-teaching. The system that is best for securing the intellectual element is not best for securing the emotional element.—Bain.

ENERGETICALLY AT WORK.

E. W. Sprague Emphasizes the Importance and Need of Missionary Work.

To the Editor:—It is a long time since we have reported anything regarding our work, and feeling in the mood, I will write a few lines that that our many friends, and the readers of your valuable paper may know that we are still battling for truth, and dispensing the gospel of Spiritualism to a needy and appreciative world.

Though we were not appointed as missionaries of the N. S. A. this year, we have been preaching organization, re-organizing societies, adding new members to local societies, and doing other missionary work ever since the meeting of the last National Convention.

Our time has been continually occupied, and we have received calls that would have taken three pairs of missionary pilgrims like ourselves to have filled, if the wants and needs of those who asked for our services had been supplied. This is good evidence of the need of missionary work, and I trust another year missionaries may be supplied to fill the demand.

Let no one think I am bidding for the place, for I do not want it. I am not a candidate for that important position. Our missionary work is not all finished, however, we shall continue to work along these lines wherever we go.

The last N. S. A. convention voted to place but one missionary-at-large in the field this year. I was called to fill that office, but felt obliged to decline to accept the position, as I did not wish to leave Mrs. Sprague at home alone. We have traveled together for many years, and we thought we had better continue to do so for awhile longer. We appreciated the call, and were pleased to note the fact that the members of the N. S. A. board retained the confidence in us that it had always manifested.

The missionary work should be continued. It should be prosecuted with vigor. Every State Association owes its success to missionary effort and not a few of them to the direct efforts of the N. S. A. missionaries.

Several of the state associations are doing splendid missionary work, but they may do much more and better work when their efforts become better systematized. More missionaries-at-large are needed. This is a vast country. The Spiritualists need to be constantly reminded that the N. S. A. is a great power in the advancement of our cause; that it is spending thousands of dollars every year in behalf of mediums; that it is the true friend of mediums, etc., because all of the "fakes" and some of those mediums and speakers who have failed to receive endorsement from our State and National Associations because of their incompetency and lack of fitness to fill the important positions to which they aspire, are constantly seeking to prejudice the people by misrepresentation and falsehood, to cripple the organization in its good work.

National and State associations, like individuals, are liable to make mistakes, and it is much more manly to take hold and help to correct those mistakes than to try to destroy the organization. It is a poor kind of dentistry that cuts off a man's head to cure the toothache. This is the principle used by those who would wish to destroy the N. S. A., because some person or persons connected with it has made mistakes.

Good, true Spiritualists should join societies, become delegates, attend the conventions and take an active part in our organization.

If anyone has been led by the false utterances of our opponents to think that the N. S. A. is opposed to mediums, let them read the report of the N. S. A Board, given through its secretary, Mrs. Longley, and published in The Progressive Thinker of May 11, 1907, which shows that many thousands of dollars have been spent in their behalf, in fighting their legal battles, in paying their doctor bills, in feeding them when they were hungry, in buying clothing for them, in providing respectable funerals for their poor, worn-out bodies, etc. Facts and figures weigh more in the scales of justice than prejudice, falsehood and vicious words.

We shall continue to work in behalf of the local, State and National organization, for we consider it as the only large body of people in this country that stands for pure and unadulterated Spiritualism Christian Science, Theosophy, and the many hopelessly opposing substitutes for this great truth, contain too much adulteration, and the little Spiritualism they have appropriated is so deeply buried in the debris of assumed "Divine Wisdom" (?) that a trace of it can scarcely be found.

Modern Spiritualism, as represented by the National Spiritualists' Association and its auxiliaries, is the pure and unadulterated article. It is the true Spiritual Philosophy, the genuine Spiritual or Psychic Science, the good and true in all religions, all of which are based upon the genuine phenomena of Modern Spiritualism in all of its legitimate phases. These prove its truth, and make a future life a reality

E. W. SPRAGUE.

Detroit, Mich.

A BIASED INTERPRETATION.

The Matter Set Right by Dr. Hager.

In the revised version of the New Testament, the biased opinion of the translators is very frequently seen, and now in the light of modern knowledge it can be seen more clearly. As an illustration: In 1 Cor., IV Chap., 12 verse, the revised version reads: "So also since ye are zealous of spiritual gifts seek that ye may abound unto the edifying of the church."

The word spiritual here has a small figure for marginal interpretation and translated in Greek means "spirits." The word gifts is in italics, and therefore was supplied by the translators. Rightly translated it should read: "So also since ye are zealous of spirits, seek that ye may abound unto the edifying of the church."

S. HAGER, M. D.

Chicago, Ill.

Platitudes against sin are as harmful as applause for sin.—Anon.

Excellent Phenomena.

Illustrating the Grand and Beautiful Truths of Spirit Return.

Recognizing the fact that The Progressive Thinker is an exponent setting forth various topics, especially those of a spiritual natue, and observing that phenomenal experiences of different individuals have been published for consideration by the reader, I have thought it expedient to relate my first experience under spirit influence, and some of the phenomena that attended my subsequent development spiritually.

In October, 1891, my wife, the last member of my family, passed to spirit life. Up to that time, I had no knowledge of spirit influence, return or manifestation. The terms, Spiritualism, Spiritualist and medium, were by virtue of early education connected with ghost stories and diabolical issues, I having been brought up under the strictest discipline of the Methodist church.

Very soon after my wife passed out I was seized by a numbness of the hands and fingers, especially so when I took up a knife or fork with which to eat, or a pen or pencil to write. I would throw them down, and immediately the hand would return to a normal condition. As often as I resumed the handling of these articles the numbness would return. I, as well as my friends, feared that I was approaching a paralytic condition, which gave me much concern.

Two months after my wife's interment, I was strongly impressed to go to Defiance, Ohio, to visit the graves of my loved ones. Not being able to throw off the continued impression, I made the journey from New Albany, Ind. Upon arrival, and the fact that the cemetery was near the railroad station, I decided to visit the graves before going up to the city. As I was entering the gate of the cemetery, there came over me a repellant force or feeling, and with it the thought, "Why come here? We are not here."

So strong was the impression that I simply walked through the avenue, paused a moment at the graves, returned to the station and boarded the first train for Albion, Ind., with the intention of spending a week with my father. When there the numbness returned to my hands again, greatly to the alarm of my father. At once I was impressed to move on, and felt that I could not remain there. I left there the next morning for Walkerton, Ind., with the intention of spending the Christmas week with my brother and his family. There again the unrest and discontent baffled my plans, and I was further impressed to go to Chicago to visit my wife's sister, which I did. I was content to remain for a week, though the numbness of the hands continued.

The second morning after my arrival in Chicago I accompanied my brother-in-law to his office. While there, I took up a city directory, opened it, and almost the first name I read was Miss Lizzie Bangs, slate writing medium. Why my attention was directed to it, I could not understand at that time, but there came over me the impression to go to her for advice. This I fought until the last day in the afternoon, before I was to leave Chicago for my home at night. Finally, I gave way to the influence, bought some slates at "The Fair" and washed them preparatory for use. Anticipating that the medium would require me to either ask questions or produce written ones, I took the precaution to write four, so arranged that they were not direct, e. g., "Father, prove to me by the style of your composition and writing that the communication is made by you." The others I constructed similarly in accord with the desired answer. I used no names in the questions. I folded each exactly alike, as small as possible, mixed them together so I could not possibly know them apart, placed them in my purse, saying to myself, "I guess that with new washed slates, and these obscure questions, the medium will be baffled indeed, for there will be no chance for mind reading or mechanical slate drawings." I took my skeptic defiance in hand, and boarded a car for Miss Bangs' residence.

It was 1 p. m. and bright sunlight in the seance room. After stating that it was my first experience with spirit manifestations, and that I was inclined to be skeptical, consequently had brought my own slates, and had my questions previously prepared, the medium remarked: "I am glad you have done so, for then if you get answers to them on your own slates, it will be the more convincing to you." She had me sit at a small table by her side, hold one of the folded slips in my hand, placing the latter on the table, and with the other hand to hold one end of the slate, on which I had placed a piece of pencil too small for human fingers to grasp and write with. She then placed one hand on the table near mine, and with the other, she held the opposite end of the slate, (which latter never passed from my possession, or sight) and very soon writing was distinctly heard on the underside of the slate. When filled, raps came on the slate, which she said indicated that the spirit control desired that the slate be turned over. I lifted the piece of pencil. She turned the slate as desired, and I replaced the piece of pencil on top again. The writing was at once resumed. Finally it ceased, and the medium said: "Take your slate now, open your question and see if you have a satisfactory answer to it." I did so. It chanced to be the one I had written to my father-in-law, as above referred to. In the earth life, he never wrote to me that he did not begin his letter thus: "My Dear Son Ben, Love and greetings to you to-day." These very words were used by him to open the communication on the slate. He was an accountant in the earth life, and wrote a bold back hand style, and all final "Y's" to his words were peculiarly flourished. I had joked him relative to them, saying that they looked like whip lashes. Every finaly in the communication on the slate was thus flourished, and as I had only addressed him in the question slip as father, yet he signed his name in full, "Francis H. Sleeper." Let the reader imagine my surprise.

Another slate and question was then taken, which latter proved to be one intended for my wife, in response to which came a communication giving detail as to how she had been working to bring me to the knowledge of the continuity of life, and the possibility of spirit return to guide and aid mortal friends, and that it was she who had thrown the numb condition upon my hands in her effort to make me feel her presence at the table, and in hopes to use my hand for automatic writing when holding my pencil. She began her communication by calling me "Bengie," her favorite way of addressing me (my name being Benjamin) and signed "Lovingly your wife Annie." Here my skeptical fortifications began to fall.

The third slate and question was now taken, with results as before. The question was the one intended for my mother. The communication in response began thus: "My Dear Son Ben; Mother has heard your lonely sad pleadings all the years she has been absent from you in the form. Open yet wider the door for communication, my child, and we will surely bring to you the knowledge you so much desire." (Here it might be well to say that my mother passed to spirit life when I was but four years of age, and that during my life time I always mourned the loss of a mother's counsel and love in the needed hour of effort.) She signed her lengthy communication with her full name." Mariah Zelina Leslie."

Here came my surrender to the glorious truth of Spiritualism, and the acceptance of positive proof relative to the continuity of life, and the power of spirit return, satisfaction I had not found in creeds or beliefs.

The fourth slate and question was then taken, to which my mother-in-law manifested. She like my mother addressed me thus: "My Dear Son Ben." She having named me as executor of her will, spoke in the communication relative to the manner in which I had carried out her wishes. As she and I had often conversed on the realities of the life beyond before her passing out, she made further comment upon the theme, as per her understanding from the spirit side of life. She also signed her name in full, "Harriet Osborn Sleeper." Here the tree of knowledge began to develop, and that of belief to decay, and hope, its fruit, nourished the sprouting unto future growth.

Every slate was filled. This caused the medium to doubt my statement that it was my first experience with spirit phenomena, but reassuring her of the truthfulness of my statement, she said, "For my pleasure, hold a slate yourself and see what you get." She sat at least five feet from me. Immediately the writing began. When completed, I found it to be a good-bye message from my wife. In the earth life when writing me a letter, she always reserved and marked off a corner on one of the sheets of paper in which she wrote "love and kisses from Callie and Roy" (these were our children). One corner of the slate was thus marked off; but instead of contents being in her handwriting the children had printed the message, "Love and kisses from Callie and Roy."

"Now," said the medium, place a slate beneath one of your feet and see if you can get anything that way." This I did, and to it came a good-bye message from my mother. On top of her writing at right angle with it, the bold, back hand writing of my father-in-law were traced the words, "God bless you, our boy," and the signature, "Father and Mother Sleeper." Thus was the door to the spirit world opened to me.

Regarding some of the strange phenomena that I have experienced since that time, I will say that some months after my seance with Miss Bangs I, with friends from New Albany, Ind., was invited to take tea with a friend in Louisville, Ky., just across the Ohio river, whose residence was on Chestnut street, near 22nd. A slate-writing medium was in the party, but there was no seance arranged on the programme for the evening. Most of the friends were gathered in the parlor, and I sat at the piano entertaining them. The medium was in the dining room with the hostess at the time. As I played, there was a piece of folded writing paper, as if thrown from the ceiling, fell upon the keys of the piano just where I was fingering them. It was distinctly seen to pass through the air by those sitting in the room.

Of course we were amazed.

I unfolded the paper and found it to be a communication purporting to come from the spirit friends that had assembled there with us. It was relative to the tea party, and contained some jocularity. I read it to the friends, as all in one way or other were named in its detail. That pertaining to myself was in the form of a joke, saying that the hostess had shown me favor, in that she had given me the largest cup of coffee, which latter was a fact.

A search was at once made to ascertain if possible the source of its coming, and to find where the spirits obtained the paper upon which to manifest. It was found that the paper exactly corresponded with some the hostess had, but it was in a writing desk, securely locked, and had been for several days unopened. So if the paper was there obtained, it was a case of passing matter through matter.

Finally the hour arrived for the home-going. I with my New Albany friends started for that city. We had gone in Chestnut street from 22nd to 14th, on the street car. We then had to walk several blocks in 14th street to the depot where we were to take the steam car for New Albany. When within about two blocks of the depot (the two ladies being nearly a block ahead of myself and the other gentleman), there came down suddenly, as if falling from the sky, a piece of china, which struck me on the left shoulder, fell to the pavement and was broken into several pieces. We were startled at its mysterious coming. I gathered up the pieces, put them together and found it to be an individual butter dish, with a piece of butter still on it. I, as well as my friend, noticed that it resembled those used upon the table at the tea party that evening. Being desirous to know if it were one of them, I returned the next morning, inquired of the hostess how many butter dishes she had in her set.

"One dozen, was her reply.

I said, "Will you please see if you have that number now?"

"Certainly," she replied.

She soon returned, saying, "Why, there are only eleven there now." I asked her to bring one to me, which she did. We compared the broken one with it and found it to be identically the same pattern. This was a case of conveying matter through space.

A few weeks later, I had an occasion to go to Jeffersonville, Ind., on business, and in the meantime intended calling upon a medium for a slate-writing seance. When I boarded the train at New Albany, I had both overshoes on, but when I arrived at Jeffersonville I discovered that one was missing. I thought that I had dropped it off my foot when boarding the train. Business through, I made the intended call on the medium, and we joked considerably regarding my coming with only one rubber on, but nothing was said from the spirit side regarding it. Upon leaving the house, and having walked away a few rods, my other rubber fell with considerable force on the walk directly in front of me. I found it to be the identical one I had lost. I was then about five miles from where I lost it. I was alone at both the losing and finding of the shoe. This was another case of handling, and conveying matter through space.

On another occasion when going to have a slate-writing seance with the same medium, just before entering her house, as I came up the walk, a folded note fell at my feet. I opened it and read the contents, which was to the effect that I need not go, for I would find the person very ill, and could not therefore see me. To this was added a postscript saying: "We dropped this note for you when you took the train, but you did not see it." I went on, however, and found the person ill as was stated in the note.

About two weeks later when having a seance with the same person, I asked where the spirits got the paper on which to write the note. The answer came, "Look in your memorandum book." I did so, found a leaf torn out the stub of which exactly fitted the leaf of paper on which the communication was written. I further learned that it was taken from my overcoat pocket as it lay on a couch in my room while I was preparing to go to Jeffersonville, a distance of six miles from my room.

A few weeks later while spending the afternoon at the home of a friend in New Albany, where we were to hold a slate-writing seance, the medium, myself and the friends in the home sat at a table near the window. After several communications had been received, we were startled by the noise of something falling from behind the curtains. The object fell to the floor, and rolled out in front of us. I picked it up and found it to be a small sea shell on which was written in black ink, "From Annie to Bengie," said to be from my wife and for me. Upon further examination I saw that it resembled a shell I had picked up on the beach of the Fernandina Island, Fla., and which I kept on a mantel piece in my room. I hastened home and found that the shell was gone from the mantel piece. No one had access to my rooms, as I cared for them myself, hence no one could have removed it thence, so the writing must have been placed on the shell at my room, conveyed through space a distance of six blocks, and dropped in the room by spirit forces.

These phenomena took place early in the 90's, and no more occurred until in 1905 in Buffalo, N. Y. On Thanksgiving morning, as is my custom once a week, I placed a vase of cut flowers on my typewriting cabinet, saying, "This is a thanksgiving offering to my spirit guides, relatives and friends in general"; at the same time sending out thoughts of thanksgiving to them for their loving care and aid in my work. The bouquet consisted simply of three carnations, and three fern leaves. These placed, I sat down to my writing, which was on spiritual themes. At the noon hour I went to my lunch, supposing that I had finished writing for the day, as I seldom do this kind of writing in the afternoon; but on returning I felt a strong impression to go back to the writing which I did. After a few moments writing, I had an occasion to get up and get my dictionary. As I turned around from my library to the cabinet, I stood facing the bouquet of flowers with my dictionary folded in my arms. I was startled by a singular formation that appeared about two feet above the vase of flowers, which resembled a little cloudlet of steam or mist. It began to descend upon the flowers, passed through them and down on to the cabinet top, thus causing a momentary quiver of the flowers. When the formation had reached the cabinet at the base of the vase, it developed into a beautiful lanceolate leaf with serrulate edges, green, waxy and fresh, as if plucked when conditioned with the dew of the morning. The stem gave evidence of fresh plucking. By the side of this leaf also developed four tiny leaves from the Asparagus Springari. I visited all the horticulture and floral places in the city to see if I could find a plant bearing similar leaves, but was not successful. Finally, I took it to a florist who told me it was a leaf from the Leocothia shrub, and was a native of Tennessee. I learned later from the guides that they had brought it from that locality through space in a dematerilized state, and that the process which I had witnessed at my desk, was that of rematerialization again to its normal state, and was done in recognition of my floral offering to them in the morning, and to show me that they had the power to aid me in my writing. At that season of the year there was no verdure on the outside of the house, nor were there any plants in the house, excepting the vase of flowers above mentioned.

A few weeks later, while giving a piano lesson to a lady pupil in her own home (who had previous to my coming, plucked a vase of tulips from her own garden, and placed them on a stand near the piano), she rose at my request to get a piece of music from the cabinet. Returning as far as the stand on which the flowers stood, and beside which I was sitting, she paused while we commented on the beauty of the flowers. Instantly one of the blooms was broken from its stem with a snap that could have been heard in any part of the room, and fell to the stand top. She was startled for the moment at the phenomenon. The bloom was variegated with three tints, and the only one in the vase so marked, each being of but one color. Soon I heard clairaudiently the mother's voice saying: "It was I who broke the flower. I wish my daughter to know that I am here, and that the three tints represent myself and her brother in spirit life, and she yet in the mortal. When I told her what I heard, she said, "Yes, my mother and brother are in spirit life."

A few weeks ago I had a vase of carnations and daffodils on my cabinet which stands not far from the alcove where I sleep. When I retired at night the flowers all stood in their normal conditions. When I arose in the morning I discovered that every stem was broken at the top edge of the vase, and the broken part of the stem and flowers hung withered at the side of the vase. This I learned from the guides was done by my spirit son Roy, and an Indian girl by the name of Sunrise, who were testing their power to manifest their presence in a visible manner, and a development for future purposes.

The last manifestation I have had with flowers was at the Easter time just passed. I went to the florist to purchase some cut flowers to send to a friend as an Easter offering or greeting. The store was filled with blooming plants, ferns and palms. In a glass enclosure various varieties of carnations stood in vases on elevated steps, the central one being all white. As the florist and I walked toward it the white blooms were shaken as if blown by a whirlwind for the moment, and then became as quiet as before. Not another bloom in the enclosure moved visibly. The florist looked at me in surprise. I simply said, "Give me flowers from that vase please." The guides wished me to send the pure white, and without my preknowledge of the fact, so expressed it by moving them.

I will give but one more example, as my communication is even now too lengthy. During the last year, when occupying my bed, raps would come upon the wire springs very much like the sound coming from a telegraph instrument when messages are being transmitted. About three months ago the raps ceased upon the bed springs, and I thought the influence had departed. One day as I lay on my couch, being laid up temporarily with the rheumatism, I noticed all at once the same phenomena had been transferred to an open front gas stove in the room. This continued at intervals until I was able to read from the sounds some disconnected sentences and names. I soon discovered from the language that the manifestation was being made by an earth-bound spirit, and ceased to give it further attention except to give it advice, and entreaty to get out of its low condition. I was then in a rooming house where frequent changes were made by the occupants, which mixed the conditions, and opened the door for imposing influences to step in. A move from there to a private home has completely shut off that influence, hence no more of that kind of manifestation has appeared.

Vast and varied have been my experiences with spirit phenomena or manifestation, through which I have learned that on the spirit side of life as well as on the material, two influences exist, the good and the evil, the developed and the undeveloped, which may enter the door or cross the threshold of manifestation by the aid of mediumship. It may be all good; all evil, or mixed good and evil in the effort of good to gain supremacy over evil; hence, genuine, fraudulent, helpful, or disastrous results are the outcome. The mortal side of life is largely responsible for these conditions and results, for there is an attraction between spirits incarnate, and those excarnate, and the vibrations of life will follow the line connecting them with individuality and its purposes, ultimating in influence according to the consciousness of the receiver. Much could be said along this line, but space forbids.

J. BEN LESLIE.

Buffalo, N. Y.

OTHER YOUNG WORKERS.

The Field Is Ripe, but the Workers Receive Insufficient Support.

In a recent article, I gave the names and ages of a few of our young workers now gracing our platform. Some names were inadvertently omitted and I beg leave to give them here.

Arthur S. Howe, president of the California State Spiritualist Association, and trustee of the N. S. A., is one who should not be overlooked. He is but thirty-three years of age, and possesses talent of a high order of excellence. He has many years of usefulness before him in which he will be privileged to do valiant service for the "good Cause."

This is also true of our recently ordained and gladly welcomed brother Rev. David A. Leisk of San Diego, Cal., who has passed some thirty summers in his present embodiment. Mr. Leisk is a man of marked ability and will do good work for the cause of truth for lo! these many years.

On the Atlantic seaboard, we find Rev. Albert P. Blinn, pastor during the last three years of the First Spiritualist Church of Norwich, Conn., and for ten or fifteen years the hardworking clerk of Lake Pleasant camp meeting. Mr. Blinn is not more than five and thirty years of age, a man of scholarly attainments, and signal forensic ability. He has done and is now doing a splendid work for Spiritualism.

The State of Maine presents two young workers of whom all Spiritualists may justly be proud. They are Mark A. Barwise and his gifted wife, Minerva, of Bangor. Mr. Barwise is not yet thirty years of age, but he has the wisdom of the sage, plus the devotion of the scientist. His wife is a trance speaker of marked ability and promise. Mr. Barwise is president of the Maine State Spiritualist Association, but cannot at present devote all of his time to public work. He is a newspaper man whose position yields him a living, and he is wise enough not to jeopardize it for the uncertain income of a Spiritualist minister.

Rev. Oscar A. Edgerly is not old in years yet is a veteran in public work. Rev. Thomas Cross of Fall River, Mass., is several years younger then Bro. Edgerly and the writer, but he toils with his hands in the factory for his income, knowing full well that he cannot trust the Spiritualist platform to yield a livelihood for himself and children. Even with these gifted and eminent workers enrolled the fact yet remains that there are not twenty-five persons in our pulpits to-day who are under forty-five years of age. There may be a dozen under thirty years, but

I do not believe it. At this moment I can recall but three. I am proud of all of our talented speakers, and feel especially proud of the young men and women who are now at the front as our speakers. We need more of them, and that is why I pleaded with my brethren to cease driving our young folks into the churches by lack of religion in Spiritualism, and want of support as speakers.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

Washington, D. C.

Good News From Wisconsin.

It is with great pleasure that I inform the Spiritualists of Wisconsin that the large note of $775, with interest, has been met, also a note of $100. This makes our debt much less, for which we feel most truly thankful. We shall endeavor to lift the entire debt this year. Whether it can be done remains to be seen, but I feel we can. I shall soon start out in the state, holding meetings, and raising money to free us from debt. I should like to hold grove meetings all over the state this summer. Am willing to hold any kind of a meeting, parlor, public, or grove meetings, and when it is best, organize our people into good working societies. I most earnestly ask the hearty co-operation of all our friends everywhere, and just as soon as possible the state will be in a position to do a work it has long wanted to do, but cannot until it is free from all obligations.

Come, friends, awake from your slumber, and let us be up and doing, and show to the world what we can do. Send your communications to either Miss Louise G. Loebel, 202 North avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., or to my home address, which will be for the present, 253 St. Charles street, Wauwatosa, Wis.

G. H. BROOKS, Pres.

Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association,

"DONALD M'LANE."

A Religious Novel by C. F. Cole of Dowagiac, Mich.—Reviewed by Hudson Tuttle.

The author has brought the study of religion and Spiritualism for thirty years to the writing of a story in which facts, experiences and philosophy are blended. The plot is quite complicated, yet is secondary to the aim of making it the means of instruction. The scene is laid in Riverton, a booming town in Michigan, where the Rev. Donald is called to preach. As Spiritualism is finding converts in the church the young preacher launches his bolts of wrath against it, and finds no terms strong enough in its revilement. Then he takes measures to oust the principal of the schools because of free thinking and gets a man with whom he once ran a gambling room, to take the place. Then he calls another pal who enters the scene as a missionary, having the welfare of the Africans at heart. The three concoct a gold mine swindle, under the pretense that while the stockholders are to receive fabulous dividends, the main profits are to go to the support of the African mission. The church members bit like famished pike, and had it not been for outsiders the scheme would been successful. The pastor had in view his marriage with the daughter of the leading member of the church, a millionaire manufacturer, but she was engaged, and in defiance of her father, would have her way. Through her influence in exposing his "indiacretions," a movement was started among the liberal people, which in the nick of time exposed the trio of rascals and landed them all in the penitentiary.

After fifteen years the Reverend has served his time and is free. He tries to lead a good life, but as an ex-convict no one trusts him and he becomes a tramp for some years. At Riverton the Spiritualists are in ascendant, socially and in business. One of their leaders finds the tramp, recognizes him, and in charity takes him into his business, where he makes good, and at length marries the woman he betrayed and deserted twenty years before.

The interspersed sketches of domestic life, the nobility of character of the working classes, are finely drawn. At times the plot turns of communications made by spirits, and at all times these communications are valuable for the insight they afford, of the spiritual philosophy. There are many deaths, but even this sad event is made glorious with the morning sun of promise, the coming and greeting of the departed. There are marriages, happy, joyous unions, and a general well being of the liberal.

The saying that the truth comes uppermost, comes true only when it is the bone of the strongest dog. If the weak defend it, they lose.

There is, however, a resemblance in truth that continuously recommends it, and sometimes it gets a strong and victorious champion. But let us never delude ourselves, that the "truth will make us free," on the contrary we are to make the truth free.

The story, however, of the training of the Spiritualists, and conversion of a whole community, is just what the outcome would be under like circumstances. Whenever anyone begins investigation, he is sure to land on the spiritual coast.

Mr. Cole has given our literature a book which will be read with pleasure and profit. The printing, paper and binding are unexceptionable. The half morocco, library style is especially of fine workmanship. Price, $1.

Address C. F. Cole, Dowagiac, Mich., and obtain the book.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Grand Ledge Camp.

Grand Ledge Michigan Spiritualist camp meeting opens July 21. The speakers and mediums engaged this year are among the best known on the Spiritualist platform.

The programme for the forenoons, Sundays and Mondays excepted, will be varied and interesting, consisting of mediums' meetings, conferences, etc. Mediums who are developing, as well as others, will have an opportunity to participate. These exercises are a great aid to those expecting to take up the work.

The fact that Oscar A. Edgerly is being engaged for the fourth season as speaker and chairman of our camp is sufficient warrant of his congenial and affable manner as chairman and entertaining and instructive as a speaker, to insure the successful direction of our present camp.

Mrs. A. E. Sheets, our former president and chairwoman for many years, is so thoroughly established in the hearts of the progressive and initiated public mind, that the mere mention of her name as the first speaker upon the list is an agreeable assurance of intellectual eminence in spiritual ethics and oratorical pleasures for the opening session. Her homely welcome to each and all will be a cordial and sympathetic feature in the social environments of the camp.

Mrs. R. S. Lillie, known throughout the length and breadth of America as the "Queen of the Rostrum," is comparatively a new speaker with the patrons of Grand Ledge Camp, but who has been in the spiritual field since (nearly) the advent of modern Spiritualism, but because of the unremitting demand in other fields for her labors have we been unable heretofore to secure the services of this far famed oratress. That her inspiratinal gems of thought will be a delightful treat, is forecast in her presence with us.

Elizabeth Harlow, who was a new speaker with us last year, proved to be one of our best and will be with us again. She comes highly recommended to the management as having been long in her appointed vocation of saving souls to higher and brighter spiritual aspects of life here, while the future of eternity will take care of itself, and none should miss hearing her.

Mrs. A. Atcheson of Buffalo, N. Y., with us last year for the first time, is a very good and true message medium, has acted as pastor of a Buffalo Society for several years and is highly recommended by them. She will give messages during the greater part of camp. They are always convincing and to the point.

Geo. A. Letford, known from North to South as the Drummer Medium, and one who has done some wonderful work in Georgia and Florida, where he travels, and has made the South more liberal towards Spiritualism, will also be in attendance and follow some of the lectures with messages.

Spiritualist, skeptic, and all friends are cordially invited to attend Grand Ledge Camp. Remember the date it opens, July 21st, lasting until August 18th. Don't fail to attend.

For programs write

J. W. EWING.

Grand Ledge, Mich.

*Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply [illegible] subject. Price, cloth, $1.

THE "COLONEL" IS VEXED.

And Upbraids the Editor for Not Publishing His Messages, Showing that in Spirit Life He Has Deteriorated and Become a Common "Scold."

To the Editor: I write this communication to you to let you understand just one thing, that I am here with Mary L. Delano, to do my work through her mediumship, and I want you to understand, too, that I have sent beautiful work to you to be printed in your paper, and I want you to understand that Robert G. Ingersoll does not wait forever to have you do as you promised his medium you would do a year ago. My work will stand on its own merits without your judgment being used on it, and I wish it distinctly understood that I will be listened to even as I would in earth life; if you are a man of your word you will do as you agreed to do. You need not wait for her to die, for you will lose the work entirely then, for she has a family who will protect my work from those who fail to treat her as a woman of truth and honor should be. Understand, you do not print the work of any medium who is her equal, for she is not a woman who craves public praise, nor who lives just to be popular. She has more brains than that, and I want you to understand that I have waited for her to get her life work done, taking care of a family of children before I undertook to finish my own work. Thus I have given you a little pointer about this business which you will do well to pay heed to. You need not answer this letter, but go to work and do as you said you would. Do not be afraid, for it is no other than the great Agnostic; he is a great Agnostic yet over the river, therefore, you must pay strict attention to my words or suffer the consequences, for I am here to help and protect my own medium forever. In all brotherly love I am as she is also your friend for the truth in Spirit, Robert G. Ingersoll, by the hand of Mary L. Delano (of Ionia, Mich.)

We would kindly say to the "Colonel" who writes the above that it does not "sound" in the least as if it came from the genuine earthly R. G. Ingersoll. We are inclined to think that a lying spirit has taken possession of the hand of the medium and is committing a "Psychological Crime." We have no recollection of ever having promised to publish what the bogus "Colonel" might write.—Editor.

Letter from Seattle, Washington.

To the Editor: After reading some of the letters in the issue of The Progressive Thinker of May 4th, I feel like dear old "Samantha Allen," so "I set down with a pan of apples to peel and fell to philosophizing" on "mediums here and elsewhere," and the way we look to other folks. Mr. Editor, seems to me it looks like sour grapes from Seattle. We have the very best society here—the First Society that can be found on the coast and are happy to-day to say that its members are now working harmoniously together for the good of our glorious cause and the advancement of Spiritualism. We have the largest membership roll. Our members come from all walks in life—some rich, some poor in material things; but all together on the same platform, seeking to know more of the great problem of life, and Spirit Return.

We have had the very best speakers here during the last year, and now we are ministered to by Wilson Fritch of Boston, and our message bearer, Mrs. Minnie Jenning, is honest, true, and promising. Our work is aided during the social and circle hour on Sunday by about fourteen or fifteen mediums. Some are now ordained ministers, and others are preparing for the future work, but all of these are members of this society.

The first thing taught to us after breaking the orthodox shell is to be free, and think and act for ourselves; to learn to develop and unfold individuality.

This is a beautiful world, and the people in it are beautiful. We should learn to adorn our minds with the best we can procure.

Do you know one can find just what he is seeking. Look for good and you will find it. Look for undeveloped good and you will find it, according to your own measure; for as you measure so shall you receive.

A new heaven and a new Earth is revealed to us; then what of the old forms? We simply hang them away in our attic, for they are too small; we have grown too large for them, but they are all right for those whom they fit. We must learn to freely give sympathy to those who live narrow lives. If we have found a better way, what, then, is our duty?

ERIN MARY CHASSÉE,

Spiritualist minister, member board of trustees of the First Society of Seattle and second vice-president of Washington State Spiritualist Association.

Seattle, Wash.

HE EXPLAINS ABOUT THE BLOCKS

And Claims to Have Seen the New Jerusalem Come Down and Settle on Its Old Foundation—a Perfect Fit.

To the Editor:—Seeing an article in The Progressive Thinker from New York City about a little child and its building blocks, I will give an explanation thereof. The lady spoken of lives on the east side of a street, running north and south, has black hair, medium height, rather on the slender order, blue-gray eyes, fair complexion, is of a family of five, father, mother and three children. One, a boy of about fourteen, has passed through the veil to spirit life. While playing on the floor with his little nephew, the idea came to him that he could communicate to the family by arranging these blocks to spell words. He has black hair, low, wide forehead, blue-gray eyes, fair complexion, wide, square shoulders, but narrow through the breast. He has a small mole near the left cheek bone.

I have been a Spiritualist since I was sixteen years of age, having at that time an experience which led me to know that there was a life beyond. I am now sixty-eight, and very much interested in your valuable paper. I have been shown the New Jelusalem. It came down and settled on the old foundation, a perfect fit in every way.

I am engaged in mining in the Wichita Mountains.

WM. B. DIXON.

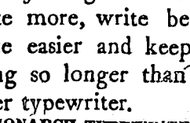
Cache, Okla.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

RHEUMATISM

CURED



Through the Feet

Anyone Can Try Without Cost This Great External Remedy Which Is Curing Thousands.

Send Your Name To-day and Get

A $1 PAIR FREE TO TRY.

We want every reader of this paper who suffers with Rheumatism to send us his or her name. We will send by return mail a pair of the celebrated Magic Foot Drafts, the new Michigan external remedy which has brought more comfort into this country than all the internal medicines we know of. If they give relief, send us One Dollar; if not, don't send us a cent. We take your word. You decide.

Magic Foot Drafts are worn as shown in the picture, relieving pain in every part of the body through the feet. Our Free Book is fully illustrated (in colors) so that anyone who reads it can understand the relation of the foot pores and nerves to nature's plan for ridding the system of pain-causing impurities. Don't delay, but send to-day for our Free Book, and the Free Trial Drafts. They are curing cases of 30 and 40 years' standing, after doctors and baths and medicines had failed. It costs nothing to find out whether they will cure you. Will you try them? Address Magic Foot Draft Co., X021 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich. Write to-day.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Science and a Future Life

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

"AS IT IS TO BE."

A Very Suggestive Work Which Beams With Spiritual Truths.

This is a beautiful book, by Cora Lynn Daniels, and it scintillates with grand spiritual thought. An idea of this work can be obtained by reading the titles of a few of the chapters therein:

The process of Dying; Light and Spirit; The Law of Attraction; Senses of the Spirit; What Is unconscious Will; Fear; Astrology; The God-Soul of Man; The Drama; A Day in Heaven. Price $1.00.

MEDIUMSHIP and its DEVELOPMENT, and how to Mesmerize to Assist Development. By W. H. Bach. Paper 25 cents;

The Influence of the Zodiac Upon Human Life, With Character Readings of Persons Born Upon the Cusp.

The principles found in this volume are both a science and a religion, for a better and a far happier humanity. It points to the planets as an index to the human character and liability to diseases; also gives the gems and colors suited to temperaments evolved under certain planets. But the author, ELEANOR KIRK, lays special stress upon the fundamental principle that "All maladies known to man can be entirely dominated, forever cast out, by those who realize that mind is the master and body the servant." Price, cloth, $1.00.

ORIGIN OF LIFE and How the Spirit Body Grows. By M. Faraday. Price, 10c. For sale at this office

WOMAN: Four Centuries of Progress. A Lecture delivered at the Progressive Thinker's International Congress, Chicago, Ill., October, 1893. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, 10c.

RADIANT ENERGY and Its Analysis, Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price, cloth, $1.75

JIM, or The Touch of An Angel Mother.

BY CARRIE E. S. TWING.

Her dedicatory lines are sufficient to show the spirit of the book as well as the author, it reads, "Because my own children are all under the tender care of the angels, and my heart is hungry for the love of the young, I most lovingly dedicate this book to the children of the world." This book is full of soul elevating and interesting thought. Price, cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

Apollonius of Tyana Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents.

WOMAN: A Lecture Delivered to Ladies Only. By Mrs. Dr. Hulburt. On the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. The divine law of true harmonial marriage, etc. Price, 10c.

COMMON SENSE By Thomas Paine. A Revolutionary pamphlet, addressed to the inhabitants of America in 1776, with explanatory notice by an English author. Paper, 15 cents.

Why I Am a Vegetarian. An address delivered before the Chicago Vegetarian Society. By J. Howard Moore. Price, 25 cents.

The Koran Commonly called the "Koran of Mohammed." The standard Arabian or Mohammedan Bible. Cloth, $1.00

Spiritualism in Calcutta.

From Advance Sheets of The Hindu Spiritual Magazine.

We give below the full text of the address of Dr. J. M. Peebles, delivered in the splendid and beautifully decorated palace-hall of Maharaja Sir Joteendra Bahadur to a select audience of some 400, comprising the elite and the cultured of Calcutta, as furnished by advance sheets of the Hindu Spiritual Magazine:

The proceedings were opened by Maharaj-Kumar Sir Prodyot Kumar Tagore, Kt., who introduced the learned and venerable speaker with the following:

"I have much pleasure to introduce on behalf of my father, whose indifferent health prevents him doing so, to you, Dr. J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., who, though not so well known in this country, is regarded with veneration and respect all over America and Europe as one of the foremost Spiritualists and an earnest worker in spreading the liberal principles of equality and brotherhood of man and the necessity for all men to lead a pure and saintly life for their good here and hereafter. He sought to befriend the slaves, and was therefore mobbed by the slave-holders of his country. He is a friend of the American Indians and Government availed of his services to win them over. He is a scientist and author of many valuable books. He was appointed Consul by President Grant in Asiatic Turkey. He is meek as a lamb, simple as a child, and his heart overflows with the milk of human kindness. He has come to us to prove that there is no such thing as death, that the soul is immortal and that there will be a reunion of the departed dear ones. He is one who has the proud privilege of declaring, "Oh! death, where are thy stings?" For he had studied the subject almost all his life and is in the habit of saying that it is not a question of belief merely with him, but he knows that it is true. With these words I beg to ask the venerable octogenarian to deliver his lecture which, I doubt not, will be heard with intense interest by many.

Dr. Peebles, rising and turning to the President, to the Maharaja of the palace, to the Rajas, the editors and gentlemen present, commenced his address with no apologies nor preliminaries. He spoke with earnestness, and yet with that ease and naturalness common to the best speakers of the Western world. He soon had a sort of psychic control of the whole assemblage. And it is only justice to say that he held his audience spellbound to the end. At the conclusion of the very able lecture, and the usual vote of thanks to the venerable speaker who had braved land distances and seas to proclaim the principles of Spiritualism, a dinner was given in his honor in the castle.

The Address.

It affords me unspeakable pleasure to be so eloquently introduced by His Highness Maharaja Bahadur, Sir Jateendra Mohun Togare, K. C. S. I., to this cultured audience in the magnificent auditorium, and in a wider sense to representative Indo-Arians, whose history of agriculture, architecture, poetry, ethics and civilization, is traceable to the very boundaries of remotest antiquity—traceable to the holy Vedas, and to those Rishis, those illustrious Sages and inspired Seers, whose words of wisdom, like golden sunbeams, have streamed in radiance down through all the intervening ages. This was the status of Aryan India in the dim and dust-buried past, with its six schools of philosophy and vast tomes of literature. Many pyramidal ruins and golden eras graced those pre-historic times. Recent excavations prove it.

Nations and Civilizations like the tides and the sea-waves rise and fall. The Greece of Socrates, Plato and Pericles is little more to-day than an illiterate, dusty desert. And Rome, imperial and proud, went down before the brawny muscular hordes of Norhern Europe. Serried hosts, hardy and war-like, may conquer, but they cannot subdue; neither can they evolve the noblest aspirations of human nature. Justice, wisdom and love are the only principles that can subdue or induce social trust and real abiding soul-affection. The "Survival of the fittest," pivoted upon selfishness and based upon the rankest injustice to the moral nature, puts the sword before the school, bayonets before highly developed brains and brute force on battle-fields before philosophy and the ennobling principles of peace.

It is not Europe, with her standing armies and maddened rage for conquests; but Asia, summering under perpetual suns, that gave to the world the seven great Saviors, Zoroaster of the Zend Avesta, Moses of the Jewish Torah, Sri Krisna, Gautama Buddha, Jesus Christ, Mohammed and Gauranga of Nadia, the city of erudition. All these saviors, or messengers, were once men, deified after their deaths. While vestured in their fleshly bodies they were persecuted, or crucified. Being misunderstood, vilified, damned to-day, and to-morrow deified and worshiped, was and is the compressed history of the world's Prophets and Saviors. And further, histories being the witnesses,and bibles, Vedic, Shastric, or Jewish, being the witnesses, all those dispensational Saviors Were Spiritualists. They consciously conversed with gods, angels, and spirits. They were also all of them religious. They all taught the ethics of justice, and mercy, and love.

God is no respecter of persons. All human beings under all skies are His children—all are sons of God, and He has sent His messengers to all without regard to country, race, caste or color, and His mantle of love encircles and enfolds them all—One God, One humanity, one vast brotherhood encompassing the world's visible and invisible, and ultimately one glorious destiny, we believe, for all conscious rational intelligences.

Sometimes when wrapped in meditation I have said, if I could speak but one great word to the world that should ministeringly vibrate and echo through all the incoming ages, that word would be Knowledge—knowledge of our inmost selves—knowledge of our mighty powers of unfoldment and how to wisely unfold them—knowledge of the finer invisible forces that enzone us—knowledge of the external and internal obsessional influences that environ us—and especially, a knowledge of what transpires beyond death. Immortality—eternity—words of tremendous meaning!

And Spiritualism, embodying in its curriculum, converse with the risen dead, clairvoyance, clairaudience, clairsentience, vision, trance, ethereal-ization, levitation, the gift of healing, the gift of tongues and other psychic phenomena—constitutes all the knowledge we have or can have of a life hereafter. Neither reason nor hope, nor faith, nor bibles can lift the curtain that conceals the dead.

Death is among us. Every clock-tick tells of its tales of tears and lamentations over the burials or burnings of the bodies of our loved dead—and what then? Where are our loved ones? Do they consciously exist? And if so, do they remember and know us—and will they know us when we all pass from the mists of mortality into the vast beyond?

What—who can satisfactorily answer these tremendous questions?

Appealing to material nature I fire-zone on high—speak, O, moon might say—speak, O, Sun, from your and stars, and tell us about the dead, but they are as silent and cold as the stony dens of adders—Speak, then, O, ancient Scrolls and Bibles; but they have no living voices; and then they have been translated and re-translated, revised and re-revised by priestly hands till they are as spiritually dead as the perishing parchments that first received their symbols—words and enigmas admitting of a thousand meanings. I turn away then, in thought, from suns and stars, from old, outworn, moth-eaten and priest-manipulated records, to the overshadowing, ever-present spirit-world—the real world.

We are spirits now, clothed in flesh. The spirit world is here and now. Our spirit friends are here, though unseen by the most of us as are the stars at midday. And so, I speak to my ascended mother, saying: Mother, Oh, beloved mother, do you still live beloved mother, do you still live beyond death? And sweet and soft as an angel's harp, I hear her voice in my inmost consciousness, replying, "Oh, My child, I live and love you still, for pure love is immortal. What you in your blindness call death, we call birth, birth into the spiritual world, where better opportunities abound for mental growth and moral unfoldment.

What is death, then? It is simply the severing the co-partnership existing between the coarser material body of flesh, and the interior spiritual body, with that still more ethereal centre of life and consciousness, the atma, the ego, the god-principle incarnate. Death then is the portal—the garden-gate that opens into immortality and may be compared to the rose that climbs up on the garden wall to bloom on the other side, where flowers never wither. In the spasms and gaspings of the dying there is no pain. The struggles are only the inmost spirits' efforts to break away from the imprisoning, perishing flesh.

Death therefore, at a ripe old age, and at the end of a good life is beautiful, just as beautiful as birth. It is the new birth into that higher, brighter realm of existence. A consumptive patient holding my hand while dying, exclaimed feebly, "I see—I see—oh how bright—how beautiful. I see my angel mother. She beckons me to come, I long to go—and breathing shorter, shorter, she slept into immortality."

Such is death, according to the teachings and principles of Spiritualism; and as aforesaid, Spiritualism gives knowledge for faith, and demonstrations for speculations. It is more-over the direct antithesis of materialism. It is a grand moral science, and the true wisdom religion, that proffering the key unlocks the mysteries of the ages. It was the vitalizing of all the past religions. It constituted the foundation stone of all the world's worthiest ancient faiths. It was the mighty uplifting force that gave to the world in the olden ages its inspired teachers and lofty-minded leaders.

What is denominated "Modern Spiritualism," so common in America and England, and first manifest in the Fox family, at Hydesville, New York, was neither an invention or a creation, but a re-discovery of the alphabet of intonations, of sound vibrations produced by unseen intelligences. These phenomena with their test communications startled sectarian churchmen and converted multitudes of materialists to the firm knowledge of a future existence.

Phenomenal Spiritualism has been and is of inestimable value to those requiring objective evidences of a conscious survival beyond the grave. These evidences—this knowledge having been attained, the momentous question arises, how shall I live? What shall I believe? What shall I do to hereafter obtain peace, happiness and beatific blessedness?

Similar questions were put to Jesus of Nazareth by one who went running after him, saying, "Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Jesus, rebuking him for calling him "good," said to him, 'keep the commandments—do not kill, do not defraud, do not steal, do not bear false witness," etc.

Then Jesus "beholding and loving him, said, one thing thou lackest yet, go thy way, sell what thou hast, give it to the poor, and then shalt thou have treasure in heaven."

And this earnest inquirer was sad and grieved, for he had "great possessions." Evidently this man was a sort of a selfish Palestinian Millionaire, not realizing that his material wealth was but mortal rubbish that would crumble and rot with his buried body. He did not seem to realize that he could take nothing iwth him but consciousness, memory; in a word himself—his real conscious self.

You will notice in the above very practical account, that the basic foundation of the promised "treasures" in heaven was based not upon belief, or sectarian faith, or atoning blood, nor a round of re-incarnations.

Neither Spiritualism nor Theosophy have any natural or necessary relation to re-births back into fleshly tabernacles. These are the perpetually repeated principles and objects of Theosophy.

1. To form a nucleus of the Universal Brotherhood of humanity without distinction of race, creed, sex, caste or color.

II. To encourage the study of comparative religion, philosophy and science.

III. To investigate unexplained laws of nature and the psychic powers latent in man." No person's religious opinions are asked upon joining; nor is interference with them permitted (The Theosophist.)

Surely there's nothing of re-incarnation—nothing of re-birth speculations in the above principles and objects.

Spiritualism has no Pope nor Bishops clothed in "purple and fine linen," and no iron-clad creed to crush the soul's progress. Accordingly I define Spiritualism for myself only; and thus:

I. God is Spirit, essential, omnipotent and immutable, manifest throughout all Nature's grand and stupendous works.

II. Men are rational, responsible, and spiritual beings, related to God something as the rays of light to the sun, or the crystal drops to the overflowing fountain.

III. The spirit, or Atma, made or evolved in the image of God, is immortal, being an infinitesimal fragment, or potentialized portion of God, who, to my conception, is the Infinite Consciousness, Energy, Life, Purpose, Will, Wisdom and Love of the Universe.

IV. Men, being intellectual, moral and spiritual beings, it is just as natural for spirits fleshed or unfleshed to converse, to respond as it is for the needle to respond to the magnet, or music to respond to harmony; and so Spiritualism is naturalism raised to the spiritual plane of consciousness.

V. Mortals enter the spirit world with their memories, their mental and moral attainments and tendencies, thus maintaining their real identities, the depraved, entering the lower Tartarean spheres of darkness and discipline, and the good, the higher heavens of blessedness.

VI. Salvation means soul-growth, aspiration, purity, of purpose, brotherhood, and the unfolding of the psychic powers within. And thus salvation comes not through any ecclesiastical faith, religious creeds or re-births back into the flesh through re-conceptions, re-uterine imprisonments, puling babyhood up to manhood and all this, without a glimpse of memory of their previous life or lives. Trans-migration, re-incarnation, or re-birth, not taught in the Vedas, the Zend-Avesta, or the Koran, is a theory in direct violation of evolution, and is not based on one well-established fact in science. It admits of no positive demonstration. It is a dreamy, dreary speculation, holding no legitimate relation to pure Spiritualism or pure Theosophy. Neither Madame Blavatsky nor Colonel Olcott knew anything of it while talking and writing "Isis Unveiled" in America. It was a subsequent scheme, a tag-attachment fastened to theosophy after their arrival in India, the motive for which is easily discerned by the psychometrist.

This re-birth doctrine hang like a cloud over fair India to-day, injuriously affecting the mental and spiritual atmosphere, for millions of Hindu spirits, taking with them into spirit life their tendencies, superstitions and beliefs in re-births instead of looking up to higher planes of consciousness, and asking for instructions from higher heavenly teachers, are earth-bound, watching the dying, hoping to resuscitate and re-live in the dead form; or they are haunting marital bed-chambers seeking for chances to re-incarnate. Seeing and conversing with over 2000 phychic sensitives and their inspiring intelligences during the past 50 years, I never heard an exalted ancient spirit teach or talk of the "wheel of re-births." Only recently Gautama, the Buddha, vibrated the important teaching down through intermediaries to the pure heavenly-minded sensitive:

"I would see the idea of reincarnation dismissed as an error that holds the soul to earth. * * Seeing how the errors of the past are being reproduced upon the earth plane, I have felt it incumbent upon me to return and so far as possible present their worst effects. And I would have my followers on earth re-cast their conceptions and expressions of the spiritual life," etc. (Upon this subject see a discussion upon re-births, pro and con, 100 pages, by Dr. Densmore and Dr. Peebles.)

Spiritualism is eminently eclectic, catholic, and religious Broadly stated, it is a fact, a truth, a philosophy, and more, it is a religion—religion itself, spiritually binding the finite to the Infinite; to the very heart of Divinity. All may know of its moral grandeur, celestial beauty and blessed consolations in time of mourning, if they will engage in concentration, form spiritual seances—be prompt in attendance, orderly, prayerful, and live spiritual, rather than selfish, material lives.

Some are born Spiritualists, from childhood they saw spirits and had visions. They were clairvoyant, and clairvoyance is a part of Spiritualism. The Apostle Paul called it the "discerning of spirits," (Cor. xii., 10).

Spiritualism must be differentiated from Spiritism. The terminologies of the two words absolutely necessitate different meanings. Ual in spiritual is a suffix and suffixes are modifiers. A conscientious, religious, and spiritually-minded man is more than a trafficking man.

Spiritism is related to Babylonian necromancy, and Spiritualism to the scholarship of ages and the Christianity of Christ—a living, comforting, uplifting truth. The Chinese, the American Indians, the Utah Mormons and some African tribes are necromancy spiritists, practicing it for amusement, fortune telling and the magical art, all of which is as far from that divine truth, Spiritualism, as darkness is from the light of the noon-day sun.

Spiritualism has not only given the most irrefragible evidences of a future life, but it has greatly liberalized the human mind, modified orthodox creeds, encouraged the philanthropic reforms, inspired the feeling of universal brotherhood; and further, it has given us a revised geography of the heavens and the hells, and largely explained the conditions and employments of our loved ones beyond the grave.

Human beings enter the future world with as absolutely substantial bodies as they have here. The form is complete, only infinitely more refined and etherealized. There are varied zones and different degrees of happiness over there. Memory is the undying worm. There are intense mental sufferings in those lower, darker spheres. Yet God builds no hells. He burns no man's fingers, damns no conscious spirits hereafter.

Men are the constructors of their own hells! They reap what they sow. Disciplinary punishment follows sin as cause and effect. There is no escape. Krishna, the Christ and other great martyred reformers, continue to teach—continue to preach in kindly tones to undeveloped, earth-imprisoned spirits. The principle of evolution never dies. Angels' calls never cease and multitudes in the unseen realms of existence, touched by the Christ—spirit of love and wisdom, and suffering from remorse, are coming up through deep tribulations to participate in the glories of the higher spheres. The door of mercy is ever shut. God is love and his mercy endureth forever.

God's universe is one of order and unfoldment. Heaven's rest is not idleness—not walking on golden streets, or psalm-singing around a great white throne; but by "death," the spiritual activities are quickened and intensified. The future life is a conscious life, a social life, a research life, a constructive life and a progressive life, where the aspirational spirit sweeps onward and upward forever in glory transcending glory.

Oh, let us rejoice and be glad that we live in these Easter years of Spiritualism, for it brings the music words of immortality into the palaces of kings and the humbler homes of peasants. Hindu sages, Theosophists and Spiritualists are all co-workers in the overthrow of that heart-chilling materialism which tells us that "death ends all."

Spiritualism is God's witness of immortality. Through the mediumship of its messengers it brings into our homes the conscious, living, speaking "dead," reminding us of the poet Longfellow's beautiful lines, when speaking of the numbered hours of day—

"Then the forms of the departed
Enter at the open door
The beloved, the true-hearted
Come to visit us once more."

When Spiritualism, the universal religion of love and brotherhood, shadowed in mellow twilight by Indian sages, seen in increasing sunshine by Syrian seers, and consciously felt to-day by the more illumined—becomes actualized in and outwrought practically in the personal lives of earth's surging millions, it will no longer be said, these hoarded millions are "mine"—these green fields, and gardens, and groves, and flowing fountains are "mine"; but ours—yours—all who appropriate them for holy uses.

In this good time coming when the Spiritual crowns and controls the material, our real country will be the universe; our home the wide world, and our rest wherever a human heart beats in sympathy with our own; and the highest happiness of each will be found to consist in aiding and blessing others. Then, as long prophesied, will, the soil be as free for all to cultivate as the air they breathe, over once-crimsoned battle-fields will wave the white banner of peace, gardens and orchards will bear fruit, for the most humble fountains will spring up along the roadside, the tanned brows of earth's toiling millions will be wreathed in ever-green church edifices will become seminaries, sanitariums and hospitals for the sick and the way-worn, orphans will find homes of tenderest sympathy in all houses, and the great family of humanity without regard to clime, caste or color, will be obedient to and trust in love, liberty, law and God.

At the solemn hour of "death," whether at the grave or burning-ghat, Spiritualism does not say—"Good night," but rather gives the glad assurance of a most welcome "Good morning," just across the crystal river. It does not look down into graves of dust and ashes for loved ones, but up to the elysian isles of immortality. It does not drape the mourners' house in the grim gloom of black, but decorating it with flowers, and rose-buds, symbols of life, lifts the dark curtain, allowing the sorrowing to see the forms and hear responsive words of affection from those who have moved up one step higher to meet the loved-ones gone before, and join them in the triumphant song— "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

FRATERNITY.

(Written for and Read to the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, Chicago, Sunday, May 19, 1907.)

'Twere good to grasp a brother's hand
And sense a spirit true,
And get in touch and close commune
with hearts we never knew;
'Twere sweet to taste the nectar rare,
that flows so rich and free,
From soul to soul and lip to lip in true
FRATERNITY.

Down underneath the human heart lies
pulsing Nature's law,
Through which all came and ever from her mother bosom draw
All the nurture, all the life force they must have to be,
And this cements us soul to soul in one
FRATERNITY.

When Spring-time flowers fill the air
with blooming life-perfume,
And resurrect in grand rebirth from
Winter's restful tomb;
When life and light seem bursting
forth from one Maternity,
It links all peoples and all things in one
FRATERNITY.

When Summer's sun has kissed the earth, fresh-bathed with morning
dew,
And all around in vibrant Life seems
lifted up anew;
When waving fields and feeding herds,
called through Paternity,
Mature for man, it seems to speak of
one FRATERNITY.

When Autumn winds and chilling frosts
combine across the earth,
And wilt and sear, and thus prepare
the souls of things for birth;
When beauteous gloom seems hovering
o'er, retinting in degree
Life's verdure, all things go to rest in
one FRATERNITY.

And as we watch the flakes of snow
that Winter brings to view,
From moisture that in springtime would have made the sparkling dew,
Down deep within the Seasons an intelligence we see,
In system, method, a brotherhood of
Soul's FRATERNITY.

Organic Nature could not be, nor earth,
nor finite man;
Nor Life, nor Death, nor growth without a great organic plan;
Nor nations born, nor worlds evolved;
no great Eternity,
No infinitude of progress without
FRATERNITY.

Fraternity! Fraternity! Thou mighty
force of life;
To thee we turn for aid and strength
in sorrow and in strife;
To thee we lift our voices in a spirit of
great glee,
To unite our scattered forces in true
FRATERNITY.

DR. T. WILKINS.

THE PATH.

I know a path that winds and winds,
Until it's lost in eastern hills;
A path by many roses strewn,
And bordered by fair daffodils.

In fancy, dear, now oft I tried
The winding path at hush of day,
And see your face to westward turn,
A happy light in eyes of gray.

Perhaps the time will sometime come,
When tears and sighs forgotten be
The path will shorten twixt us two,
What was fancy, be reality.

MARGUERITE L. MILLER.
Rochester, Ind.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

THOUGHT INSPIRING.

Such Is Hudson Tuttle's "Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas."

To the Editor: If it is good philosophy to say "A tree is known by its fruits," people of active mind and advanced thought will find fruits to their taste in a new book by that author-philosopher, Hudson Tuttle, styled "The Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas."

Of the many excellent, thought-inspiring volumes given the public by this fruitful writer, none exhibit more patient research. From those twilight ages when early man, failing to understand the many wonderful activities of nature witnessed in his surroundings, and looking upon them with fear and dread, he was wont to endow them with terrible mysteries, and as being produced by some powerful being, some personified though invisible human-like god. And following down through the ages this drift of man's early efforts to solve the mysteries of nature, in the course of time developed the astrology of the ancient, and various myths; hence we have the myth of "Man's fall," the myth of the "Sacred Virgin," and of her son "the Christ," and many others.

Would it not be a wise thing to do, for all those who at the present day feel the necessity of getting religion of the orthodox stamp, to make available as a chariot in which their souls may ride in safety throughout eternity, to studiously peruse that classic work, and therein find the origin of their religion, and of all the great bibles of the world, and the gradual enthroning of the gods in endless variety, whose favors could be gained and held only by constant sacrifices, resulting in the bloodshed of uncounted millions of innocent creatures, of both animals, and human beings, slain upon the bloody altars of those heathen gods, and forming, as it does, the most bloody record of any age of the human race? When once fully understood, we will hope this record will prove sufficient to blot out from all reasoning minds that religion founded in the ignorance, cruelty and bloodshed of those earlier ages of the human race.

From this record let us follow with the author to a period when evolution of the race will so develop the light of reason that humanity will see in the activities of the Great Eternal Forces only nature's methods of formation and creation caused by one only source of power and wisdom, which the author terms the "Cosmic Mind"—the impersonal—the all pervading Divine Mind of the Universe.

Col. Ingersoll, the great Agnostic, is credited with having declared: "The force that is in every atom, and in every star, that is in everything that lives, and grows and thinks, that hopes and suffers, is the only possible God."

This interesting and instructive book should reach the hands of all persons who dare use their powers of thought and of biblical research.

And now, that we may neither hunger nor thirst for the fruits of reason, again appears our always welcome writer above named, and presents for our entertainment and instruction, another of nature's many wondrous pages.

To this we are introduced only by the aid of the wonderful power of the microscope; and the new world of life there disclosed, seems appropriately termed by him, (see columns of The Progressive Thinker) "Protista, the Kingdom of the Unseen."

O mysterious life! What is it, and where look for its very earliest objective expression upon earth?

Mr. Tuttle presents to us the almost infinitesimal cell—the first only a single cell, manifesting life; to this nature adds more and more—infinite in numbers and variety, through periods of ages, and behold, the creation of the vegetable and the animal kingdoms of the earth—and Man

Was it a Spiritual-Electrical Principle, as the powerful Arm of the Creator, which first shaped, inspired, stimulated and animated that microscopical beginning cell-point of objective life, and thereupon built up and sustained those Kingdoms?

Is not our scholar and searcher with his microscope, and his ever present spiritual perception, now on the way to the solving of the great miracle of all the ages, the very beginning of objective life on earth?

Verily, "The tree is known by its fruits."

L. B. LYMAN.

Helena, Montana.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY'S HOME.

To Be Sold—Desk and Chair Go to Mrs. Upton— Biography to Be Completed by Mrs. Harper.

The Convention of the National Woman Suffrage Association will mark the 60th anniversary of the first meeting of this kind ever held in the world. That meeting was held at Seneca Falls N. Y., in 1848, and the table on which was written the "Declaration of Rights," promulgated by that gathering, was among the choicest possessions of Susan B. Anthony. It will be carefully preserved and finally placed in some public institution, probably.

Since the death of Miss Mary Anthony the home of these famous sisters, which was the property of Miss mary, has been dismantled and will be offered for sale.

Susan B. Anthony bequeathed her desk and chair to Harriet Taylor Upton, treasurer of the National Woman Suffrage Association. Those pieces of furniture will be sent to Mrs. Upton and used by her in the Headquarters of the National Association at Warren, Ohio.

Mrs. Ida H. Harper is now engaged in completing "The Life and Work of Susan B. Anthony." Mrs. Harper wrote the two volumes now in existence, which contain the record of Miss Anthony's life up to 1898, several years ago.

Miss Anthony looked forward to the 60th anniversary of the first "woman's rights convention" and expressed the wish that the 1908 meeting be held somewhere in New York State. In accordance with this desire Buffalo has been chosen as the Convention city.

"New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Drawings By Watson Heston. With critical and humorous comments upon the Texts. Heston's drawings are incomparable, and excruciatingly funny. Price, in boards, $1.00.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

ITEMS FROM NEW YORK.

It is very pleasing to the officers and members of the First Association of Spiritualists, as the season's work is advancing towards its close, to note the increasing interest in the same as as manifested by the constantly increasing attendance, notwithstanding the many allurements to attract not only "the faithful," but all others as well.

On Sunday, May 11th, after some very interesting and appropriate remarks by the president, Mrs. M. A. Newton, Mrs. Gaule-Redinger, in her preliminary remarks, alluded at some length to her visit to Hartford, Conn., on the previous Sunday, in response to an invitation from the officers of the State Association to participate in the deliberations of that body at its annual convention, which was as usual a pronounced success in every particular. It was Mrs. Gaule's first experience in Hartford and among the Spiritualists of Connecticut all former invitations, because of having previous engagements, she was obliged to reluctantly decline. She spoke of the cordiality and enthusiasm which was manifested, and of the spirit of harmony and good-will which characterized all the meetings during the convention.

Mrs. Gaule seemed to have brought with her from Hartford some of the enthusiasm before mentioned, for she was very happy in her remarks, going into minute details in many instances, which was very convincing. One was very noticeable when she described to a certain gentleman in the audience, a friend, who was residing in Mexico, giving names, etc., and then referring to a certain lot in a cemetery, of which some information was wanting, describing the lot as number eighty, was very gratifying to the recipient, who afterwards assured the audience that he was a stranger to the medium. So, with the many similar remarkable readings and messages she is constantly giving out to believers and skeptics alike, it need not be a surprise that her meetings are so largely attended.

In referring to my notes, I find I have neglected to mention a most remarkable reading given from a small packet which was placed with others upon the desk. A peculiar influence was experienced, when a deathbed scene was described, and the spirit appeared to the medium, who was herself a medium, but whose transition had been reported to Mrs. Gaule since her return. She said the funeral rites were then being said in a certain town (I think New London, Conn.,) giving loving messages to her friends in the audience, one of whom arose and said the packet contained a few flowers she had taken from the casket to bring there for a reading. The name of the spirit given was Mrs. Jacobs, which, with all the details were pronounced as remarkably correct.

Mrs. Gaule called attention to the Spiritualist papers on sale at the door, urging the audience to buy the same and circulate them among their friends. Our venerable friend, Titus Merritt, well and favorably known to the older generation of Spiritualists, has returned to the fold, and may be found at the bookstand as before he resigned to occupy a similar position at Berkeley Lyceum. His friends all give him a cordial welcome back to his old position.

It is the wish of the writer that the secretaries of all the camp meetings who wish to do so, would send to him the circulars of the same for distribution, as there are many of our people who desire to attend and enjoy the opportunity of hearing more of our gifted mediums, and to pass their vacation season among those who have enjoyed greater privileges than themselves along these lines.

It is pleasing to know that while the number of our church and other friends are obtaining satisfactory evidences of the truthfulness of our claims are constantly increasing, so is the attendance at our "Summer Schools" being augmented, and the glad tidings are in consequence being spread abroad so that all can perceive and know the truth as it is in Spiritualism, from the least to the greatest, and all may thus be made to rejoice and find pleasure in the very pleasant conditions, surroundings and associations to be found there.

DR. G. W. FOWLER.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

A SONG OF LIBERTY.

Across the land from strand to strand
Loud ring the bugle notes,
And Freedom's smile, from isle to isle
Like Freedom's banner, floats.

The velvet vales sing "Liberty!"
To answering skies serene;
The mountains sloping to the sea
Wave all their flags of green.

The rivers dashing to the deep
Still echo loud and long,
And all their waves in glory leap
To one immortal song!

One song of liberty and life
That was and is to be
Till tyrant flags are trampled rags
And all the world is free!

One song—the nations hail the notes
From sounding sea to sea
And answer from their thrilling throats
That song of Liberty!

They answer, and echo comes
From chained and troubled isles
And roars like ocean's thunder drums
Where glad Columbia smiles.

Where crowned and great she sits in state
Beneath her flag of stars,
Her hero's blood the sacred flood
That crimsoned all its bars!

Hail to our country! Strong she stands
Nor fears the war drum's beat;
The sword of Freedom in her hands,
The tyrant at her feet.
—Frank L. Stanton, after Cuban War

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent, Price 10 cents.

THE PRIEST, THE WOMAN —AND— THE CONFESSIONAL.

BY FATHER CHINIQUY.

This is a most valuable book. It comes from an Ex-Priest, whose character is above reproach, and who knows what he is talking about. Everybody should read it. Price, $1.00. It contains the following chapters:

CHAPTER I.
The Struggle before the Surrender of Womanly Self-respect in the Confessional.

CHAPTER II.
Auricular Confession a Deep Pit of Perdition for the Priest.

CHAPTER III.
The Confessional is the Modern Sodom.

CHAPTER IV.
How the Vow of Celibacy of the Priests is made easy by Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER V.
The highly-educated and refined Woman in the Confessional—What becomes of her after unconditional surrender—Her irreparable Ruin.

CHAPTER VI.
Auricular Confession destroys all the Sacred Ties of Marriage and Human Society.

CHAPTER VII.
Should Auricular Confession be tolerated among Civilized Nations?

CHAPTER VIII.
Does Auricular Confession bring Peace to the Soul?

CHAPTER IX.
The Dogma of Auricular Confession a Sacrilegious Imposture.

CHAPTER X.
God compels the Church of Rome to confess the Abominations of Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER XI.
Auricular Confession in Australia, America, and France.

CHAPTER XII.
A Chapter for the Consideration of Legislators, Husbands and Fathers—Some of the matters on which the Priest of Rome must Question his Penitent.

Sent Post-paid, Price, $1.00.

DR. J. M. Peebles' Works
Reduced Prices.

1. What Is Spiritualism and Who Are These Spiritualists? A book of 131 pages, elegantly bound in paper. Price 40 cents; postage 5 cents.

3. Spiritualism Vs. Materialism. This volume, cloth-bound, contains a series of essays and arguments against materialism from the point of Spiritualism. Price 50 cents; postage 8 cents.

4. A New Biography of Dr. Peebles, by Prof. E. Whipple. A book of 600 pages, bound in cloth, and giving a full history of the Doctor's eventful life and travels, now 85 years of age. Price $1; postage 18 cents.

5. Vaccination a Curse and a Menace to Personal Liberty. This, an illustrated volume, treats exhaustively of calf lymph, vaccine virus, "optional" vaccination or compulsory. Price $1; postage 12 cents.

7. Demonism of the Ages and Spirit Obsessions. A large volume of almost 400 pages. Treats of the angels, demons, obsessions, and evil spirits through all the historic ages. Price $1; postage 15 cents.

8. Spiritualism Commanded of God. A reply to Seventh-day Adventists. 30 pages. Price 10 cents; postage 2 cents.

9. Proofs of Immortality, the London "rejected" address. 49 pages. Price 15 cents; postage 3 cents.

10. The Pro and Con of Spiritualism. 24 pages. Price 10 cents; postage 2 cents.

11. Spiritualism in All Lands. 31 pages. Price 10 cents. postage 2 cents,

STARTLING FACTS, OR Deeds of Darkness Disclosed

This work devotes special attention to Auricular Confession and its relations to sacerdotal celibacy, convents, monasteries, morality and civil and religious liberty. It is intended to be an embodiment of facts and documentary evidence of the pernicious influence of the confessional; a trenchant showing up of Romanism, based upon standard Catholic authorities; an eye-opener concerning the methods and spirit, the moral turpitude and evil works of Romanism. Cloth, 75 cents.

Journeys to the Planet Mars
Or, Our Mission to Ento (Mars)

A Narrative by Sara Weiss, Illustrated With Thirteen Original Drawings by the Authoress.

A strangely attractive narrative does not assume to be either scientific, philosophic, or as advancing any special religious creed. It is a plain statement of facts based upon the experience of a woman whose highest aim is to acquire a knowledge of truth, to earnestly strive to live it, and to offer to others a stepping-stone which may aid them, in their progress towards the light

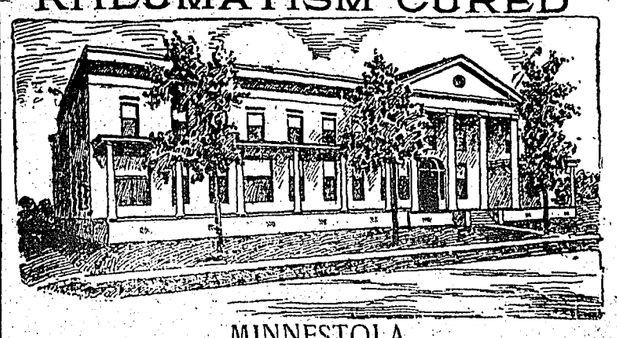
From the standpoint of Spiritualists this is a most interesting book, as Mrs. Weiss actually took these journeys in spirit and has given them in all sincerity, to the world. The book is uplifting and full of beautiful thoughts. 548 pages. Price $1.50.

MOLLIE FANCHER,
The Brooklyn Enigma.

An authentic statement of facts in the life of Mary J. Fancher, the psychological marvel of the nineteenth century. Unimpeachable testimony of many witnesses. By Abram H. Dailey. With illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

By the Editor of the National, with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorce, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.



ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration' If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

Womanly Beauty
ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for woman and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

Spiritualism in Calcutta.

From Advance Sheets of The Hindu Spiritual Magazine.

We give below the full text of the address of Dr. J. M. Peebles, delivered in the splendid and beautifully decorated palace-hall of Maharaja Sir Joteendra Bahadur to a select audience of some 400, comprising the elite and the cultured of Calcutta, as furnished by advance sheets of the Hindu Spiritual Magazine:

The proceedings were opened by Maharaj-Kumar Sir Prodyot Kumar Tagore, Kt., who introduced the learned and venerable speaker with the following:

"I have much pleasure to introduce on behalf of my father, whose indifferent health prevents him doing so, to you, Dr. J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., who, though not so well known in this country, is regarded with veneration and respect all over America and Europe as one of the foremost Spiritualists and an earnest worker in spreading the liberal principles of equality and brotherhood of man and the necessity for all men to lead a pure and saintly life for their good here and hereafter. He sought to befriend the slaves, and was therefore mobbed by the slave-holders of his country. He is a friend of the American Indians and Government availed of his services to win them over. He is a scientist and author of many valuable books. He was appointed Consul by President Grant in Asiatic Turkey. He is meek as a lamb, simple as a child, and his heart overflows with the milk of human kindness. He has come to us to prove that there is no such thing as death, that the soul is immortal and that there will be a reunion of the departed dear ones. He is one who has the proud privilege of declaring, "Oh! death, where are thy stings?" For he had studied the subject almost all his life and is in the habit of saying that it is not a question of belief merely with him, but he knows that it is true. With these words I beg to ask the venerable octogenarian to deliver his lecture which, I doubt not, will be heard with intense interest by many.

Dr. Peebles, rising and turning to the President, to the Maharaja of the palace, to the Rajas, the editors and gentlemen present, commenced his address with no apologies nor preliminaries. He spoke with earnestness, and yet with that ease and naturalness common to the best speakers of the Western world. He soon had a sort of psychic control of the whole assemblage. And it is only justice to say that he held his audience spellbound to the end. At the conclusion of the very able lecture, and the usual vote of thanks to the venerable speaker who had braved land distances and seas to proclaim the principles of Spiritualism, a dinner was given in his honor in the castle.

The Address.

It affords me unspeakable pleasure to be so eloquently introduced by His Highness Maharaja Bahadur, Sir Jateendra Mohun Togare, K. C. S. I., to this cultured audience in the magnificent auditorium, and in a wider sense to representative Indo-Arians, whose history of agriculture, architecture, poetry, ethics and civilization, is traceable to the very boundaries of remotest antiquity—traceable to the holy Vedas, and to those Rishis, those illustrious Sages and inspired Seers, whose words of wisdom, like golden sunbeams, have streamed in radiance down through all the intervening ages. This was the status of Aryan India in the dim and dust-buried past, with its six schools of philosophy and vast tomes of literature. Many pyramidal ruins and golden eras graced those pre-historic times. Recent excavations prove it.

Nations and Civilizations like the tides and the sea-waves rise and fall. The Greece of Socrates, Plato and Pericles is little more to-day than an illiterate, dusty desert. And Rome, imperial and proud, went down before the brawny muscular hordes of Norhern Europe. Serried hosts, hardy and war-like, may conquer, but they cannot subdue; neither can they evolve the noblest aspirations of human nature. Justice, wisdom and love are the only principles that can subdue or induce social trust and real abiding soul-affection. The "Survival of the fittest," pivoted upon selfishness and based upon the rankest injustice to the moral nature, puts the sword before the school, bayonets before highly developed brains and brute force on battle-fields before philosophy and the enabbling principles of peace.

It is not Europe, with her standing armies and maddened rage for conquests; but Asia, summering under perpetual suns, that gave to the world the seven great Saviors, Zoroaster of the Zend Avesta, Moses of the Jewish Torah, Sri Krisna, Gautama Buddha, Jesus Christ, Mohammed and Gauranga of Nadia, the city of erudition. All these saviors, or messengers, were once men, deified after their deaths. While vestured in their fleshly bodies they were persecuted, or crucified. Being misunderstood, vilified, damned to-day, and to-morrow deified and worshiped, was and is the compressed history of the world's Prophets and Saviors. And further, histories being the witnesses,and bibles, Vedic, Shastric, or Jewish, being the witnesses, all those dispensational Saviors Were Spiritualists. They consciously conversed with gods, angels, and spirits. They were also all of them religious. They all taught the ethics of justice, and mercy, and love.

God is no respecter of persons. All human beings under all skies are His children—all are sons of God, and He has sent His messengers to all without regard to country, race, caste or color, and His mantle of love encircles and enfolds them all—One God, One humanity, one vast brotherhood encompassing the world's visible and invisible, and ultimately one glorious destiny, we believe, for all conscious rational intelligences.

Sometimes when wrapped in meditation I have said, if I could speak but one great word to the world that should ministeringly vibrate and echo through all the incoming ages, that word would be Knowledge—knowledge of our inmost selves—knowledge of our mighty powers of unfoldment and how to wisely unfold them—knowledge of the finer invisible forces that enzone us—knowledge of the external and internal obsessional influences that environ us—and especially, a knowledge of what transpires beyond death. Immortality—eternity—words of tremendous meaning!

And Spiritualism, embodying in its curriculum, converse with the risen dead, clairvoyance, clairaudience, clairsentience, vision, trance, ethereal-ization, levitation, the gift of healing, the gift of tongues and other psychic phenomena—constitutes all the knowledge we have or can have of a life hereafter. Neither reason nor hope, nor faith, nor bibles can lift the curtain that conceals the dead.

Death is among us. Every clock-tick tells of its tales of tears and lamentations over the burials or burnings of the bodies of our loved dead—and what then? Where are our loved ones? Do they consciously exist? And if so, do they remember and know us—and will they know us when we all pass from the mists of mortality into the vast beyond?

What—who can satisfactorily answer these tremendous questions?

Appealing to material nature I fire-zone on high—speak, O, moon might say—speak, O, Sun, from your and stars, and tell us about the dead, but they are as silent and cold as the stony dens of adders—Speak, then, O, ancient Scrolls and Bibles; but they have no living voices; and then they have been translated and re-translated, revised and re-revised by priestly hands till they are as spiritually dead as the perishing parchments that first received their symbols—words and enigmas admitting of a thousand meanings. I turn away then, in thought, from suns and stars, from old, outworn, moth-eaten and priest-manipulated records, to the overshadowing, ever-present spirit-world—the real world.

We are spirits now, clothed in flesh. The spirit world is here and now. Our spirit friends are here, though unseen by the most of us as are the stars at midday. And so, I speak to my ascended mother, saying: Mother, Oh, beloved mother, do you still live beloved mother, do you still live beyond death? And sweet and soft as an angel's harp, I hear her voice in my inmost consciousness, replying, "Oh, My child, I live and love you still, for pure love is immortal. What you in your blindness call death, we call birth, birth into the spiritual world, where better opportunities abound for mental growth and moral unfoldment.

What is death, then? It is simply the severing the co-partnership existing between the coarser material body of flesh, and the interior spiritual body, with that still more ethereal centre of life and consciousness, the atma, the ego, the god-principle incarnate. Death then is the portal—the garden-gate that opens into immortality and may be compared to the rose that climbs up on the garden wall to bloom on the other side, where flowers never wither. In the spasms and gaspings of the dying there is no pain. The struggles are only the inmost spirits' efforts to break away from the imprisoning, perishing flesh.

Death therefore, at a ripe old age, and at the end of a good life is beautiful, just as beautiful as birth. It is the new birth into that higher, brighter realm of existence. A consumptive patient holding my hand while dying, exclaimed feebly, "I see—I see—oh how bright—how beautiful. I see my angel mother. She beckons me to come, I long to go—and breathing shorter, shorter, she slept into immortality."

Such is death, according to the teachings and principles of Spiritualism; and as aforesaid, Spiritualism gives knowledge for faith, and demonstrations for speculations. It is more-over the direct antithesis of materialism. It is a grand moral science, and the true wisdom religion, that proffering the key unlocks the mysteries of the ages. It was the vitalizing of all the past religions. It constituted the foundation stone of all the world's worthiest ancient faiths. It was the mighty uplifting force that gave to the world in the olden ages its inspired teachers and lofty-minded leaders.

What is denominated "Modern Spiritualism," so common in America and England, and first manifest in the Fox family, at Hydesville, New York, was neither an invention or a creation, but a re-discovery of the alphabet of intonations, of sound vibrations produced by unseen intelligences. These phenomena with their test communications startled sectarian churchmen and converted multitudes of materialists to the firm knowledge of a future existence.

Phenomenal Spiritualism has been and is of inestimable value to those requiring objective evidences of a conscious survival beyond the grave. These evidences—this knowledge having been attained, the momentous question arises, how shall I live? What shall I believe? What shall I do to hereafter obtain peace, happiness and beatific blessedness?

Similar questions were put to Jesus of Nazareth by one who went running after him, saying, "Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Jesus, rebuking him for calling him "good," said to him, 'keep the commandments—do not kill, do not defraud, do not steal, do not bear false witness," etc.

Then Jesus "beholding and loving him, said, one thing thou lackest yet, go thy way, sell what thou hast, give it to the poor, and then shalt thou have treasure in heaven."

And this earnest inquirer was sad and grieved, for he had "great possessions." Evidently this man was a sort of a selfish Palestinian Millionaire, not realizing that his material wealth was but mortal rubbish that would crumble and rot with his buried body. He did not seem to realize that he could take nothing iwth him but consciousness, memory; in a word himself—his real conscious self.

You will notice in the above very practical account, that the basic foundation of the promised "treasures" in heaven was based not upon belief, or sectarian faith, or atoning blood, nor a round of re-incarnations.

Neither Spiritualism nor Theosophy have any natural or necessary relation to re-births back into fleshly tabernacles. These are the perpetually repeated principles and objects of Theosophy.

1. To form a nucleus of the Universal Brotherhood of humanity without distinction of race, creed, sex, caste or color.

II. To encourage the study of comparative religion, philosophy and science.

III. To investigate unexplained laws of nature and the psychic powers latent in man." No person's religious opinions are asked upon joining; nor is interference with them permitted (The Theosophist.)

Surely there's nothing of re-incarnation—nothing of re-birth speculations in the above principles and objects.

Spiritualism has no Pope nor Bishops clothed in "purple and fine linen," and no iron-clad creed to crush the soul's progress. Accordingly I define Spiritualism for myself only; and thus:

I. God is Spirit, essential, omnipotent and immutable, manifest throughout all Nature's grand and stupendous works.

II. Men are rational, responsible, and spiritual beings, related to God something as the rays of light to the sun, or the crystal drops to the overflowing fountain.

III. The spirit, or Atma, made or evolved in the image of God, is immortal, being an infinitesimal fragment, or potentialized portion of God, who, to my conception, is the Infinite Consciousness, Energy, Life, Purpose, Will, Wisdom and Love of the Universe.

IV. Men, being intellectual, moral and spiritual beings, it is just as natural for spirits fleshed or unfleshed to converse, to respond as it is for the needle to respond to the magnet, or music to respond to harmony; and so Spiritualism is naturalism raised to the spiritual plane of consciousness.

V. Mortals enter the spirit world with their memories, their mental and moral attainments and tendencies, thus maintaining their real identities, the depraved, entering the lower Tartarean spheres of darkness and discipline, and the good, the higher heavens of blessedness.

VI. Salvation means soul-growth, aspiration, purity, of purpose, brotherhood, and the unfolding of the psychic powers within. And thus salvation comes not through any ecclesiastical faith, religious creeds or re-births back into the flesh through re-conceptions, re-uterine imprisonments, puling babyhood up to manhood and all this, without a glimpse of memory of their previous life or lives. Trans-migration, re-incarnation, or re-birth, not taught in the Vedas, the Zend-Avesta, or the Koran, is a theory in direct violation of evolution, and is not based on one well-established fact in science. It admits of no positive demonstration. It is a dreamy, dreary speculation, holding no legitimate relation to pure Spiritualism or pure Theosophy. Neither Madame Blavatsky nor Colonel Olcott knew anything of it while talking and writing "Isis Unveiled" in America. It was a subsequent scheme, a tag-attachment fastened to theosophy after their arrival in India, the motive for which is easily discerned by the psychometrist.

This re-birth doctrine hang like a cloud over fair India to-day, injuriously affecting the mental and spiritual atmosphere, for millions of Hindu spirits, taking with them into spirit life their tendencies, superstitions and beliefs in re-births instead of looking up to higher planes of consciousness, and asking for instructions from higher heavenly teachers, are earth-bound, watching the dying, hoping to resuscitate and re-live in the dead form; or they are haunting marital bed-chambers seeking for chances to re-incarnate. Seeing and conversing with over 2000 phychic sensitives and their inspiring intelligences during the past 50 years, I never heard an exalted ancient spirit teach or talk of the "wheel of re-births." Only recently Gautama, the Buddha, vibrated the important teaching down through intermediaries to the pure heavenly-minded sensitive:

"I would see the idea of reincarnation dismissed as an error that holds the soul to earth. * * Seeing how the errors of the past are being reproduced upon the earth plane, I have felt it incumbent upon me to return and so far as possible present their worst effects. And I would have my followers on earth re-cast their conceptions and expressions of the spiritual life," etc. (Upon this subject see a discussion upon re-births, pro and con, 100 pages, by Dr. Densmore and Dr. Peebles.)

Spiritualism is eminently eclectic, catholic, and religious Broadly stated, it is a fact, a truth, a philosophy, and more, it is a religion—religion itself, spiritually binding the finite to the Infinite; to the very heart of Divinity. All may know of its moral grandeur, celestial beauty and blessed consolations in time of mourning, if they will engage in concentration, form spiritual seances—be prompt in attendance, orderly, prayerful, and live spiritual, rather than selfish, material lives.

Some are born Spiritualists, from childhood they saw spirits and had visions. They were clairvoyant, and clairvoyance is a part of Spiritualism. The Apostle Paul called it the "discerning of spirits," (Cor. xii., 10).

Spiritualism must be differentiated from Spiritism. The terminologies of the two words absolutely necessitate different meanings. Ual in spiritual is a suffix and suffixes are modifiers. A conscientious, religious, and spiritually-minded man is more than a trafficking man.

Spiritism is related to Babylonian necromancy, and Spiritualism to the scholarship of ages and the Christianity of Christ—a living, comforting, uplifting truth. The Chinese, the American Indians, the Utah Mormons and some African tribes are necromancy spiritists, practicing it for amusement, fortune telling and the magical art, all of which is as far from that divine truth, Spiritualism, as darkness is from the light of the noon-day sun.

Spiritualism has not only given the most irrefragible evidences of a future life, but it has greatly liberalized the human mind, modified orthodox creeds, encouraged the philanthropic reforms, inspired the feeling of universal brotherhood; and further, it has given us a revised geography of the heavens and the hells, and largely explained the conditions and employments of our loved ones beyond the grave.

Human beings enter the future world with as absolutely substantial bodies as they have here. The form is complete, only infinitely more refined and etherealized. There are varied zones and different degrees of happiness over there. Memory is the undying worm. There are intense mental sufferings in those lower, darker spheres. Yet God builds no hells. He burns no man's fingers, damns no conscious spirits hereafter.

Men are the constructors of their own hells! They reap what they sow. Disciplinary punishment follows sin as cause and effect. There is no escape. Krishna, the Christ and other great martyred reformers, continue to teach—continue to preach in kindly tones to undeveloped, earth-imprisoned spirits. The principle of evolution never dies. Angels' calls never cease and multitudes in the unseen realms of existence, touched by the Christ—spirit of love and wisdom, and suffering from remorse, are coming up through deep tribulations to participate in the glories of the higher spheres. The door of mercy is ever shut. God is love and his mercy endureth forever.

God's universe is one of order and unfoldment. Heaven's rest is not idleness—not walking on golden streets, or psalm-singing around a great white throne; but by "death," the spiritual activities are quickened and intensified. The future life is a conscious life, a social life, a research life, a constructive life and a progressive life, where the aspirational spirit sweeps onward and upward forever in glory transcending glory.

Oh, let us rejoice and be glad that we live in these Easter years of Spiritualism, for it brings the music words of immortality into the palaces of kings and the humbler homes of peasants. Hindu sages, Theosophists and Spiritualists are all co-workers in the overthrow of that heart-chilling materialism which tells us that "death ends all."

Spiritualism is God's witness of immortality. Through the mediumship of its messengers it brings into our homes the conscious, living, speaking "dead," reminding us of the poet Longfellow's beautiful lines, when speaking of the numbered hours of day—

"Then the forms of the departed
Enter at the open door
The beloved, the true-hearted
Come to visit us once more."

When Spiritualism, the universal religion of love and brotherhood, shadowed in mellow twilight by Indian sages, seen in increasing sunshine by Syrian seers, and consciously felt to-day by the more illumined—becomes actualized in and outwrought practically in the personal lives of earth's surging millions, it will no longer be said, these hoarded millions are "mine"—these green fields, and gardens, and groves, and flowing fountains are "mine"; but ours—yours—all who appropriate them for holy uses.

In this good time coming when the Spiritual crowns and controls the material, our real country will be the universe; our home the wide world, and our rest wherever a human heart beats in sympathy with our own and the highest happiness of each will be found to consist in aiding and blessing others. Then, as long prophesied, will, the soil be as free for all to cultivate as the air they breathe, over once-crimsoned battlefields will wave the white banner of peace, gardens and orchards will bear fruit, for the most humble fountains will spring up along the roadside, the tanned brows of earth's toiling millions will be wreathed in ever-green church edifices will become seminaries, sanitariums and hospitals for the sick and the way-worn, orphans will find homes of tenderest sympathy in all houses, and the great family of humanity without regard to clime, caste or color, will be obedient to and trust in love, liberty, law and God.

At the solemn hour of "death," whether at the grave or burning-ghat, Spiritualism does not say—"Good night," but rather gives the glad assurance of a most welcome "Good morning," just across the crystal river. It does not look down into graves of dust and ashes for loved ones, but up to the elysian isles of immortality. It does not drape the mourners' house in the grim gloom of black, but decorating it with flowers, and rose-buds, symbols of life, lifts the dark curtain, allowing the sorrowing to see the forms and hear responsive words of affection from those who have moved up one step higher to meet the loved-ones gone before, and join them in the triumphant song— "O death, where is thy stingm O grave, where is thy victory?"

FRATERNITY.

(Written for and Read to the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, Chicago, Sunday, May 19, 1907.)

'Twere good to grasp a brother's hand
And sense a spirit true,
And get in touch and close commune
with hearts we never knew;
'Twere sweet to taste the nectar rare,
that flows so rich and free,
From soul to soul and lip to lip in true
FRATERNITY.

Down underneath the human heart lies
pulsing Nature's law,
Through which all came and ever from
her mother bosom draw
All the nurture, all the life force they must have to be,
And this cements us soul to soul in one
FRATERNITY.

When Spring-time flowers fill the air
with blooming life-perfume,
And resurrect in grand rebirth from
Winter's restful tomb;
When life and light seem bursting
forth from one Maternity,
It links all peoples and all things in one
FRATERNITY.

When Summer's sun has kissed the earth, fresh-bathed with morning
dew,
And all around in vibrant Life seems
lifted up anew;
When waving fields and feeding herds,
called through Paternity,
Mature for man, it seems to speak of
one FRATERNITY.

When Autumn winds and chilling frosts
combine across the earth,
And wilt and sear, and thus prepare
the souls of things for birth;
When beauteous gloom seems hovering
o'er, retinting in degree
Life's verdure, all things go to rest in
one FRATERNITY.

And as we watch the flakes of snow
that Winter brings to view,
From moisture that in springtime would have made the sparkling dew,
Down deep within the Seasons an intelligence we see,
In system, method, a brotherhood of
Soul's FRATERNITY.

Organic Nature could not be, nor earth,
nor finite man;
Nor Life, nor Death, nor growth without a great organic plan;
Nor nations born, nor worlds evolved;
no great Eternity;
No infinitude of progress without
FRATERNITY.

Fraternity! Fraternity! Thou mighty
force of life;
To thee we turn for aid and strength
in sorrow and in strife;
To thee we lift our voices in a spirit of
great glee,
To unite our scattered forces in true
FRATERNITY.

DR. T. WILKINS.

THE PATH.

I know a path that winds and winds,
Until it's lost in eastern hills;
A path by many roses strewn,
And bordered by fair daffodils.

In fancy, dear, now oft I tried
The winding path at hush of day,
And see your face to westward turn,
A happy light in eyes of gray.

Perhaps the time will sometime come,
When tears and sighs forgotten be
The path will shorten twixt us two,
What was fancy, be reality.

MARGUERITE L. MILLER.

Rochester, Ind.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

THOUGHT INSPIRING.

Such Is Hudson Tuttle's "Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas."

To the Editor: If it is good philosophy to say "A tree is known by its fruits," people of active mind and advanced thought will find fruits to their taste in a new book by that author-philosopher, Hudson Tuttle, styled "The Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas."

Of the many excellent, thought-inspiring volumes given the public by this fruitful writer, none exhibit more patient research. From those twilight ages when early man, failing to understand the many wonderful activities of nature witnessed in his surroundings, and looking upon them with fear and dread, he was wont to endow them with terrible mysteries, and as being produced by some powerful being, some personified though invisible human-like god. And following down through the ages this drift of man's early efforts to solve the mysteries of nature, in the course of time developed the astrology of the ancient, and various myths; hence we have the myth of "Man's fall," the myth of the "Sacred Virgin," and of her son "the Christ," and many others.

Would it not be a wise thing to do, for all those who at the present day feel the necessity of getting religion of the orthodox stamp, to make available as a chariot in which their souls may ride in safety throughout eternity, to studiously peruse that classic work, and therein find the origin of their religion, and of all the great bibles of the world, and the gradual enthroning of the gods in endless variety, whose favors could be gained and held only by constant sacrifices, resulting in the bloodshed of uncounted millions of innocent creatures, of both animals, and human beings, slain upon the bloody altars of those heathen gods, and forming, as it does, the most bloody record of any age of the human race? When once fully understood, we will hope this record will prove sufficient to blot out from all reasoning minds that religion founded in the ignorance, cruelty and bloodshed of those earlier ages of the human race.

From this record let us follow with the author to a period when evolution of the race will so develop the light of reason that humanity will see in the activities of the Great Eternal Forces only nature's methods of formation and creation caused by one only source of power and wisdom, which the author terms the "Cosmic Mind"—the impersonal—the all pervading Divine Mind of the Universe.

Col. Ingersoll, the great Agnostic, is credited with having declared: "The force that is in every atom, and in every star, that is in everything that lives, and grows and thinks, that hopes and suffers, is the only possible God."

This interesting and instructive book should reach the hands of all persons who dare use their powers of thought and of biblical research.

And now, that we may neither hunger nor thirst for the fruits of reason, again appears our always welcome writer above named, and presents for our entertainment and instruction, another of nature's many wondrous pages.

To this we are introduced only by the aid of the wonderful power of the microscope; and the new world of life there disclosed, seems appropriately termed by him, (see columns of The Progressive Thinker) "Protista, the Kingdom of the Unseen."

O mysterious life! What is it, and where look for its very earliest objective expression upon earth?

Mr. Tuttle presents to us the almost infinitesimal cell—the first only a single cell, manifesting life; to this nature adds more and more—infinite in numbers and variety, through periods of ages, and behold, the creation of the vegetable and the animal kingdoms of the earth—and Man

Was it a Spiritual-Electrical Principle, as the powerful Arm of the Creator, which first shaped, inspired, stimulated and animated that microscopical beginning cell-point of objective life, and thereupon built up and sustained those Kingdoms?

Is not our scholar and searcher with his microscope, and his ever present spiritual perception, now on the way to the solving of the great miracle of all the ages, the very beginning of objective life on earth?

Verily, "The tree is known by its fruits."

L. B. LYMAN.

Helena, Montana.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY'S HOME.

To Be Sold—Desk and Chair Go to Mrs. Upton— Biography to Be Completed by Mrs. Harper.

The Convention of the National Woman Suffrage Association will mark the 60th anniversary of the first meeting of this kind ever held in the world. That meeting was held at Seneca Falls N. Y., in 1848, and the table on which was written the "Declaration of Rights," promulgated by that gathering, was among the choicest possessions of Susan B. Anthony. It will be carefully preserved and finally placed in some public institution, probably.

Since the death of Miss Mary Anthony the home of these famous sisters, which was the property of Miss mary, has been dismantled and will be offered for sale.

Susan B. Anthony bequeathed her desk and chair to Harriet Taylor Upton, treasurer of the National Woman Suffrage Association. Those pieces of furniture will be sent to Mrs. Upton and used by her in the Headquarters of the National Association at Warren, Ohio.

Mrs. Ida H. Harper is now engaged in completing "The Life and Work of Susan B. Anthony." Mrs. Harper wrote the two volumes now in existence, which contain the record of Miss Anthony's life up to 1898, several years ago.

Miss Anthony looked forward to the 60th anniversary of the first "woman's rights convention" and expressed the wish that the 1908 meeting be held somewhere in New York State. In accordance with this desire Buffalo has been chosen as the Convention city.

"New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Drawings By Watson Heston. With critical and humorous comments upon the Texts.. Heston's drawings are incomparable, and excruciatingly funny. Price, in boards, $1.00.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

ITEMS FROM NEW YORK.

It is very pleasing to the officers and members of the First Association of Spiritualists, as the season's work is advancing towards its close, to note the increasing interest in the same as as manifested by the constantly increasing attendance, notwithstanding the many allurements to attract not only "the faithful," but all others as well.

On Sunday, May 11th, after some very interesting and appropriate remarks by the president, Mrs. M. A. Newton, Mrs. Gaule-Redinger, in her preliminary remarks, alluded at some length to her visit to Hartford, Conn., on the previous Sunday, in response to an invitation from the officers of the State Association to participate in the deliberations of that body at its annual convention, which was as usual a pronounced success in every particular. It was Mrs. Gaule's first experience in Hartford and among the Spiritualists of Connecticut all former invitations, because of having previous engagements, she was obliged to reluctantly decline. She spoke of the cordiality and enthusiasm which was manifested, and of the spirit of harmony and good-will which characterized all the meetings during the convention.

Mrs. Gaule seemed to have brought with her from Hartford some of the enthusiasm before mentioned, for she was very happy in her remarks, going into minute details in many instances, which was very convincing. One was very noticeable when she described to a certain gentleman in the audience, a friend, who was residing in Mexico, giving names, etc., and then referring to a certain lot in a cemetery, of which some information was wanting, describing the lot as number eighty, was very gratifying to the recipient, who afterwards assured the audience that he was a stranger to the medium. So, with the many similar remarkable readings and messages she is constantly giving out to believers and skeptics alike, it need not be a surprise that her meetings are so largely attended.

In referring to my notes, I find I have neglected to mention a most remarkable reading given from a small packet which was placed with others upon the desk. A peculiar influence was experienced, when a deathbed scene was described, and the spirit appeared to the medium, who was herself a medium, but whose transition had been reported to Mrs. Gaule since her return. She said the funeral rites were then being said in a certain town (I think New London, Conn.,) giving loving messages to her friends in the audience, one of whom arose and said the packet contained a few flowers she had taken from the casket to bring there for a reading. The name of the spirit given was Mrs. Jacobs, which, with all the details were pronounced as remarkably correct.

Mrs. Gaule called attention to the Spiritualist papers on sale at the door, urging the audience to buy the same and circulate them among their friends. Our venerable friend, Titus Merritt, well and favorably known to the older generation of Spiritualists, has returned to the fold, and may be found at the bookstand as before he resigned to occupy a similar position at Berkeley Lyceum. His friends all give him a cordial welcome back to his old position.

It is the wish of the writer that the secretaries of all the camp meetings who wish to do so, would send to him the circulars of the same for distribution, as there are many of our people who desire to attend and enjoy the opportunity of hearing more of our gifted mediums, and to pass their vacation season among those who have enjoyed greater privileges than themselves along these lines.

It is pleasing to know that while the number of our church and other friends are obtaining satisfactory evidences of the truthfulness of our claims are constantly increasing, so is the attendance at our "Summer Schools" being augmented, and the glad tidings are in consequence being spread abroad so that all can perceive and know the truth as it is in Spiritualism, from the least to the greatest, and all may thus be made to rejoice and find pleasure in the very pleasant conditions, surroundings and associations to be found there.

DR. G. W. FOWLER.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

A SONG OF LIBERTY.

Across the land from strand to strand
Loud ring the bugle notes,
And Freedom's smile, from isle to isle
Like Freedom's banner, floats.

The velvet vales sing "Liberty!"
To answering skies serene;
The mountains sloping to the sea
Wave all their flags of green.

The rivers dashing to the deep
Still echo loud and long,
And all their waves in glory leap
To one immortal song!

One song of liberty and life
That was and is to be
Till tyrant flags are trampled rags
And all the world is free!

One song—the nations hail the notes
From sounding sea to sea
And answer from their thrilling throats
That song of Liberty!

They answer, and echo comes
From chained and troubled isles
And roars like ocean's thunder drums
Where glad Columbia smiles.

Where crowned and great she sits in state
Beneath her flag of stars,
Her hero's blood the sacred flood
That crimsoned all its bars!

Hail to our country! Strong she stands
Nor fears the war drum's beat;
The sword of Freedom in her hands,
The tyrant at her feet.
—Frank L. Stanton, after Cuban War

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent, Price 10 cents.

THE PRIEST, THE WOMAN —AND— THE CONFESSIONAL.

BY FATHER CHINIQUY.

This is a most valuable book. It comes from an Ex-Priest, whose character is above reproach, and who knows what he is talking about. Everybody should read it. Price, $1.00. It contains the following chapters:

CHAPTER I.
The Struggle before the Surrender of Womanly Self-respect in the Confessional.

CHAPTER II.
Auricular Confession a Deep Pit of Perdition for the Priest.

CHAPTER III.
The Confessional is the Modern Sodom.

CHAPTER IV.
How the Vow of Celibacy of the Priests is made easy by Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER V.
The highly-educated and refined Woman in the Confessional—What becomes of her after unconditional surrender—Her Irreparable Ruin.

CHAPTER VI.
Auricular Confession destroys all the Sacred Ties of Marriage and Human Society.

CHAPTER VII.
Should Auricular Confession be tolerated among Civilized Nations?

CHAPTER VIII.
Does Auricular Confession bring Peace to the Soul?

CHAPTER IX.
The Dogma of Auricular Confession a Sacrilegious Imposture.

CHAPTER X.
God compels the Church of Home to confess the Abominations of Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER XI.
Auricular Confession in Australia, America, and France.

CHAPTER XII.
A Chapter for the Consideration of Legislators, Husbands and Fathers—Some of the matters on which the Priest of Rome must Question his Penitent.

Sent Post-paid, Price, $1.00.

DR. J. M. Peebles' Works
Reduced Prices.

1. What Is Spiritualism and Who Are These Spiritualists? A book of 181 pages, elegantly bound in paper. Price 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

3. Spiritualism Vs. Materialism. This volume, cloth-bound, contains a series of essays and arguments against materialism from the point of Spiritualism. Price 50 cents; postage 8 cents.

4. A New Biography of Dr. Peebles, by Prof. E. Whipple. A book of 600 pages, bound in cloth, and giving a full history of the Doctor's eventful life and travels, now 85 years of age. Price $1; postage 18 cents.

5. Vaccination a Curse and a Menace to Personal Liberty. This, an illustrated volume, treats exhaustively of calf lymph, vaccine virus, "optional" vaccination or compulsory. Price $1; postage 12 cents.

7. Demonism of the Ages and Spirit Obsessions. A large volume of almost 400 pages. Treats of the angels, demons, obsessions, and evil spirits through all the historic ages. Price $1; postage 15 cents.

8. Spiritualism Commanded of God. A reply to Seventh-day Adventists. 30 pages. Price 10 cents; postage 2 cents.

9. Proofs of Immortality, the London "rejected" address. 49 pages. Price 15 cents; postage 3 cents.

10. The Pro and Con of Spiritualism. 24 pages. Price 10 cents; postage 2 cents.

11. Spiritualism in All Lands. 81 pages. Price 10 cents. postage 2 cents,

STARTLING FACTS,
OR
Deeds of Darkness Disclosed

This work devotes special attention to Auricular Confession and its relations to sacerdotal celibacy, convents, monasteries, morality and civil and religious liberty. It is intended to be an embodiment of facts and documentary evidence of the pernicious influence of the confessional; a trenchant showing up of Romanism, based upon standard Catholic authorities; an eye-opener concerning the methods and spirit, the moral turpitude and evil works of Romanism. Cloth, 75 cents.

Journeys to the Planet Mars
Or, Our Mission to Ento (Mars)

A Narrative by Sara Weiss, Illustrated With Thirteen Original Drawings by the Authoress.

This strangely attractive narrative does not assume to be either scientific, philosophic, or as advancing any special religious creed. It is a plain statement of facts based upon the experience of a woman whose highest aim is to acquire a knowledge of truth, to earnestly strive to live it, and to offer to others a stepping-stone which may aid them, in their progress towards the light

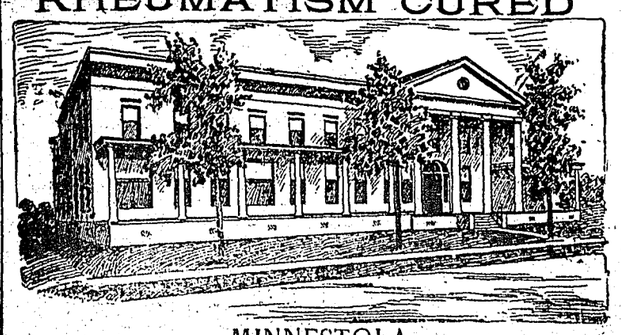
From the standpoint of Spiritualists this is a most interesting book, as Mrs. Weiss actually took these journeys in spirit and has given them in all sincerity, to the world. The book is uplifting and full of beautiful thoughts. 548 pages. Price $1.50.

MOLLIE FANCHER,
The Brooklyn Enigma.

An authentic statement of facts in the life of Mary J. Fancher, the psychological marvel of the nineteenth century. Unimpeachable testimony of many witnesses. By Abram H. Dailey. With illustrations. Price, cloth. $1.50.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

By the Editor of the National, with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wolstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorce, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.



ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration' If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

Womanly Beauty
ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street,

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year..... $1 00
Six Months..... 60cts
Thirteen Weeks..... 25cts
Single Copy..... 5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania Avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Lightning Superstition.

The ancient Romans avoided places struck by lightning. The houses, if damaged, were pulled down or fenced in so that no one could use the building on which the gods had set the mark of their displeasure. This feeling was probably deepened by the fact that certain localities are visited by thunderstorms more than others, the wrath of Jove descending in white flame time and again in the same spot. And it was the same superstition, lingering among Christians, in a slightly different form, which made it so difficult for Benjamin Franklin to introduce the lightning rod; for the pious Americans of that day declared, "It was as impious to erect rods to ward off heaven's lightning as for a child to ward off the chastening rod of its father."—

Every old superstition of the ancient Roman cult, like their sacred and festal days, was greedily absorbed by the Christians when they modified the pagan system and gave it a new name. But for the genius and skeptical thought of Franklin, by which he ventured to scale the heavens and, Prometheus like, stole its fire, possibly many centuries would have passed before another genius would have risen with the courage to send up his electric kite, by which he learned even lightning was obedient to law. Lightning rods, telegraphs, telephones, the dynamo, all machinery driven by electricity, with the trolley system of railroads, owe their being to Franklin's primal discoveries. The superstition of the age did not guide him when in pursuit of knowledge.

Notwithstanding the retarding influence of Christianity on science, followed by its astonishing rise and growth, the preachers delight to tell of the wondrous civilization and advancements in literature and arts which have followed on the Christian trail. Those who know the facts are conscious the progress of the centuries owes its rise, not to Christianity, but in spite of it. Obeying the direction of the alleged master, "taking no thought for the morrow," the condition of the wild Indian would be preferable to that of the Caucasian, because he would have gained something by the chase on which to subsist on the morrow, whereas the Christian could only provide for to-day.

Haunted to His Grave.

A telegram from Greenville, S. C., of recent date, tells of the hanging of a negro by Sheriff Mr. Caslin, of Greenwood county, who died a little later of physical collapse. The culprit hanged had murdered his brother. The sheriff shrank from the task of his execution, but the law imposed the terrible burden on him, and he determined he would not shrink from duty.

When the negro was pronounced dead the sheriff took the bed from which he never rose, the image of the victim haunting him continually until the end came.

The time will come when "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed," will not be accepted as authority for judicial murlers, even if some priest did give it as God's command.

On Its Prayful Way.

That endless prayer-chain is still doing service. It has leaped the ocean and is now doing business in England, more than half a million of letters having been distributed in the United Kingdom. Three times the good Bishop credited with setting the machinery in motion, has positively denied responsibility for it, but a lie once started may circuit the globe before it is intercepted.

Men are often capable of greater things than they perform. They are sent into the world with bills of credit, and seldom draw to their full extent. —Horace Walpole.

A NEW BILL IN THE CITY COUNCIL

SECTION 1. BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF CHICAGO, NO PERSON OR PERSONS SHALL ENGAGE IN CARRYING ON OR CONDUCT THE BUSINESS OF CARD READING, PALMISTRY, GYPSY CAMP, STORE OR CAMPS, OR FORTUNE TELLING OF ANY KIND OR NATURE WITHIN THE CITY, WHERE A FEE OF ANY KIND IS CHARGED OR ACCEPTED UNTIL HE OR THEY FIRST OBTAIN A PERMIT IN WRITING THEREFOR FROM THE POLICE DEPARTMENT. FINE, FIRST OFFENSE, $25.00; SECOND OFFENSE, $100.00.

Let Truth and Error Grapple.

In the early years of Modern Spiritualism converts to the faith labored to engraft their teachings on Christianity. They were generally members of some of the orthodox churches, and they saw no reason why an engraft was not a feasible proposition; but, fortunately for truth, the churches unanimously repudiated such proposed union, and denounced the communications from the unseen as the production of the devil, and to be shunned as such.

As time has advanced, and Spiritualists have had leisure to reason on the subject, it is found there is little in common between Christianity, as priest taught, and Spiritualism. The God of Spiritualists is not the jealous, repentant war God Jehovah, the tribal God of the Jews, hardly emerged from barbarism, which Christianity adopted. Its God is one and indivisible, with no virgin-born son, or an incomprehensible Holy Ghost. As man has never fallen, so he has no Savior to redeem him from a burning hell, which never existed, save in the imagination of its priestly inventors, and their shamefully deceived dupes. The whole machinery of the church, including the protracted slumber in the grave, and a bodily resurrection, and a general judgment, with a world on fire, and a yawning hell for all with sense to detect priestly guile and bravery to expose the fraud, with its symbols and sacred literature, are of pagan origin, stolen from older systems of religion, and in an uncultured age, when only the clergy were able to read and write.

At this time there are indications in many quarters that the churches are looking with favor on spirit teachings It seems to us probable they will ultimately embrace it, and will claim it was original with them. Stranger things than this have happened.

Spiritualism, in our estimation, would be greatly lowered were it to accept the horrible dogmas of the churches. Think of it! An innocent person, and he a God, dying on a cross to atone for the sins of another! The guilty escape punishment, while he whose life was faultless, assumes the guilt and suffers the torture due another.

It will require time and patience to mold and adjust divergent opinions, and bring all into harmony among Spiritualists; but this will finally be accomplished, and the outgrowth will be the noblest and best religious system, based on science, the world has ever known. There is no occasion for despondency, because of discords in our ranks. Division of thought leads to sober reflection, which culminates in establishing the truth on a permanent base.

Let Truth and Error grapple. Inquired Milton: "Who ever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter with its enemy?"

Broadening the Church.

"There is no doubt the tendency of the pulpit is to conduct church affairs along broader and broader lines. There is nothing like the narrowness in religious matters that was the rule a quarter of a century, or even a decade, ago. In fact every year shows greater liberality, and the prevalence of broader views in the church. The lines between the denominations are not so strictly drawn as they were even a few years ago, and within the respective denominations there is greater consideration shown for individual views and opinions.

The church has had to move forward in order to keep up with the people. The pulpit must be progressive, or the pews will be empty. That the pews are not empty is proof that the pulpit is going ahead, and not standing still nor going backward."

Thus far "The Woman's National" and correctly. And we hail with delight every relaxation of church bigotry and the uplifting of humanity. The Gods, whether many or one, need no care from man; but man has great need of the kindness of his fellows, and "he who serves man most, serves God best." Then down with the creeds, and up with humanity. The time will come when Spiritualists and churchmen can meet and join hands in a common cause.

If proof is wanted of church progress we have it in the hymn in Watt's collection, generally sung during the early days of revival services fifty years ago, when the evangelist was laboring to show the sinner's doom, unless he accepted Jesus as his savior:

"Far in the deep where darkness dwells,
There, in a land of deep despair,
Justice has built an endless hell,
And laid her stores of vengeance there.
Eternal plagues and heavy chains,
Tormenting racks and fiery coals,
And darts to inflict immortal pains,
Dipt in the blood of damned souls."

Such a hymn to-day would excite mirth instead of fright.

And Still They Come.

The Progressive Thinker would be unfaithful to its trust, and on a par with church organs, should it neglect to keep its readers well advised, as to the revelations superior learning is giving the literary world in regard to Christian origins and sacred literature. There has been no period when there was such an ambition to know the truth as now. No age has developed so much real learning, scientific, historical and ecclesiastical, as the present one. And though the subsistence of the clerics is contingent on church support, yet it is truly wonderful to see so many new lights of the ministerial class of all denominations, coming to the front and telling what they know of Christian frauds.

A Bruno, a Galileo, a Vanini, a Servetus, are but a very few of the vast multitude whose lives were sacrificed to secure that freedom of thought and expression we now enjoy. Scholars of the largest and most varied learning have told the truth in regard to olden literature, to be covered all over by the church with foul epithets, abuse and falsehoods, they hoping thereby to break the force of truthful revelations.

There are other thousands of learned and able clergymen now standing on the brink, feeling it their duty to give evidence of the frauds on which the church superstructure was built; but they hesitate, and dislike to make the plunge into the terrible maelstrom of slander and vituperation which they know will inevitably follow if they obey their honest promptings. Now and then a brave soul, regardless of consequences, with only truth to guide him, makes the plunge, and humanity is enriched by the knowledge he imparts. Such men and women have the thanks of all of us, and shall ever be held in reverence.

Our space is too limited to quote at length the many notices floating through the public press detailing discoveries made, but the most important of them shall be shared from time to time with our readers.

Rev. A. Kamprier has just published over his own signature, in "The Open Court," Chicago, an article headed "Pious Frauds," which must awaken thought with all who read it. The 2d Epistle of Peter comes in for his review. This Peter, the pretended author, was the one to whom Jesus is said to have delegated authority to found the church, against which the powers of hell, he assured his disciples, should not prevail. He was also given the keys of heaven with power to bind on earth and loose in heaven. Rev. Kamprier says:

"It has long been known this 2d Epistle of Peter is spurious. It got into the gospels because it supported the story of the transfiguration; but its Petrine authorship has not a leg to stand on. It seems to have been written in the last half of the second century, when Peter must have been dead more than a hundred years."

And John, the 4th Gospel, Rev. K. also pronounces a pious fraud. This, he says, could not have been written earlier than the year 140, yet it is presented as the authorship of him Jesus loved. Much of the contents of the other Gospels had woven into them, after they were written, and words were put into the mouth of Jesus he never uttered, to settle controversies which arose long after his death. Among the fraudulent matter are, probably, the accounts of the virgin birth, and of the resurrection after death; for there is the best of reasons for believing the oldest Gospel, as Mark is called, was written in view that Jesus was taken from the cross in time for animation to be restored. That any other belief is entertained is due to the frauds practiced by the artificers of the Gospels as we now have them.

Rev. Kamprier is of the opinion Christianity is based on the book of Daniel. In this we think he errs; for we are firm in the conviction that Paul's Epistles were written to the Essenean churches, certainly not later than 64 years before our era, long before a Christian church was dreamed of, and near a hundred years before Jesus entered upon his ministry, taking the Bible narrative as authority. Those Epistles furnished the material out of which all the Gospels, apocryphal as also canonical, were written. Wherein either writer followed Paul they substantially agree in statement. All additional attempts to round out and complete the central charatter, were drafts on imagination, and therein are the discrepancies and conflicting statements in the Gospels.

When Rev. Kamprier shall have wholly thrown off his sarcedotal robes, and he still continues his search, he may find the character Jesus is a myth as many other students of history have done; but from his present standpoint he is entitled to great credit for what he has already written.

WANTED! WANTED!

The address of every worker for Spiritualism in the State of Illinois. About ten in every hundred are unselfish workers. Many will donate liberally when asked. Some want to take the lead on State ocasions. Some are generous with advice, and nothing else; others see nothing but failure in every undertaking, but all do the best that is in them. What we want in order to start our Fraternal Camp Association, are the workers. If you are not one, send the address of those you know who are, and at the same time state what you wish, to be a charter member at $5 for the first year, or $1 annually. Let us hear from all.

ALEX CAIRD, M. D.,
598 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

In wonder all philosophy [say religion] began, in wonder it ends, and admiration fills up the interspace; but the first wonder is the offspring of ignorance, the last is the parent of adoration.—Coleridge.

The Good Work Accomplished

It Was Done by the State Association, Aided by a Few Faithful Assistants, one among the Number Being Dr. C. A. Burgess.

TO ILLINOIS SPIRITUALISTS.

Dr. C. A. Burgess Has Something of Special Importance to Say to You.

I pay taxes and will obey all the laws of my country, and when they are such that I feel I cannot obey, I will move to some other country that suits me, and make no complaint.

I am a Spiritualist. Why? That is my business!

I believe in the phenomena in all its phases, and the Spiritual philosophy is my religion. On this I have a few words to say: It is time for all Spiritualists and mediums to get to work, if we want to protect our cause. We must all as individuals labor and do not let go of the work until we accomplish something.

First, let me say if it had not been for the alertness and quick thought of the President of the Illinois State Spiritualist Association, to-day there would have been on the statute books of this State a law that would have practically killed our progress for a time. He called his lieutenants to his aid, fought for two weeks and KILLED THE BILL that was introduced to wipe the Spiritualists of Illinois out of existence, thus winning a great victory for our cause.

Can any one know what he suffered? I think not. I was with him in the fight and know it was one of the most perplexing duties he was ever called upon to perform. I know he does not care to pass through the same trying ordeal again; yet he would do so for the CAUSE, and every Spiritualist knows it. Why? Because he believes in the phenomena and philosophy of Spiritualism.

We must all, for our future protection, henceforth, work for organization and belong to the State Society or some smaller meeting that is an auxiliary of the State, and every day try to get some one to join. If each of us would do this, in a short time our force would be such that no one would dare to question. We can gain nothing for our cause as individualists. An individual may gather a following for a short time, but the meeting soon dwindles because it is not backed up by the State and National Associations. The forces that are working against us are gaining each day, and there are certain religious denominations that are becoming more and more alarmed at our power, and will leave no stone unturned to stamp us out by passing laws to that effect. I know this. I have been told this by parties who are high up in official standing; yet I must say that we have some very good, liberal-minded men in the House of Representatives and Senate of Illinois. But they are in the minority. If it had not been for the forcible argument of the recognized head of our State organization the bill would undoubtedly have passed the Senate as it did the House just to compliment some one backed by the certain religious denominations before mentioned who are gaining political strength each year. It is such work as this that we have to watch.

Dr. George B. Warne is a friend of all Spiritualists, and a believer in genuine phenomena in all its phases. He has done more for the cause during the past two weeks than any other person could have done, because he had his title to back him up, and he was the man to back up the title as President of the Illinois State Spiritual Association.

We as Spiritualists must discriminate. By doing this we must fight for our belief.

1. Condemn all advertising mediums, clairvoyants, and all professed Spiritualists who advertise what they can do before they do it. A medium needs no advertising, beside his or her card.

2. Be careful whom you recommend, until they can show they belong to some regular organized society, or are recommended by such.

3. We must not countenance the name of fortune-telling as belonging to our phenomena.

4. We must look up to the head of our little societies first; next to the head of the State Society, and lastly the head of the N. S. A.

By doing this we all work to build up the cause.

By killing the Bill Dr. Warne assisted palmists, clairvoyants, fortune-tellers and all other advertising fakers. This had to be done! Now we must classify ourselves, and let it be known what we are and what we stand for, by identifying ourselves with recognized associations of Spiritualists. And if you have your heart in the cause you will send your name, asking to join the Illinois State Association for its protection, and thus work for the cause of truth.

DR. C. A. BURGESS.
54 Pearce St., Chicago.

The Notorious Moores.

They Are Now in California Where the Fake Element Flourishes the Most.

The Light of Truth, in perfect harmony with the fake element, would not publish a communication exposing the Moores, but silently left its readers to regard as truth its fulsome praise of them, and be still imposed upon by Spurious Manifestations, and be swindled out of their money.

Letter From A. B. Peden to The Progressive Thinker.

To the Editor:—Now that you are presenting the Moores to Spiritualists in their "true colors," since the startling revelations made concerning their questionable methods by Mrs. Strickland, in the New York World recently, and also incidentally censuring the "Light of Truth" for not only remaining silent when possessed of the facts concerning Moore's expose, but also for seeking to defend him in what is now known to have been ONE OF THE MOST BRAZEN AND DEPRAVED EXHIBITIONS OF "FAKE" MEDIUMSHIP. It might further interest honorable Spiritualists to know, that the Light of Truth refused to publish the following communication concerning Moore's methods, and also INSOLENTLY RETURNED THE COMMUNICATION. Hope you will kindly publish it so that Spiritualists can "get a line" on the character of the man who undertakes to "radiate" the "light" of honesty and justice.

A. B. PEDEN.

New York, N. Y.

Letter to The Light of Truth, Which Was Insolently Rejected Because It Exposed Fraud.

Editor Light of Truth:—Dear Sir: In a recent issue of the Light of Truth there appeared an article in reference to the 'phenomenal mediumship" of certain mediums in this city, in which you took occasion to not only eulogize their seances, but also TO DENOUNCE THOSE who, thinking otherwise, have endeavored to expose what they believed to be a shameful imposition. If it can be proven that any mediums are using confederates in their materializing seances—that they are degrading and dishonoring the sacred religion of the angels thus, then, it seems to me, those who succeed in revealing the fraud to a "duped" public, are INDEED THE FRIENDS of TRUE SPIRITUALISM, and benefactors of mankind.

It is unfortunate enough to be swindled by the commercial "fakirs," without having one's high and holy impulses and aspirations cheated by unprincipled mediums. It does not follow that because a person has the courage to antagonize what they feel convinced is fraud, therefore, they are the "enemies of the cross" of Spiritualism, and only deserving of anathemas and condemnation. On the contrary, they alone ARE GENUINE, who, convinced that fraud is being perpetrated, declare themselves against it at every opportunity, and endeavor to rid the Cause of Spiritualism of these PARASITES OF INIQUITY.

It may, perhaps, be interesting to you to know that I have in my possession a piece of ordinary cheesecloth which was part of the garment of a so-called "spirit" at one of the materializing seances given by the mediums already referred to—the Moores. It matters not at present how I came to possess this material evidence of fraud. It is here, and being here proclaims condemnation in its every fibre of those who thus deliberately dishonored the sublime interests of Spiritualism, and deceived a confiding and credulous public, notwithstanding your enthusiastic eulogy of them. The splendid sentiment expressed by M. A. Esty, of St. Louis, in the September 29th Light of Truth is that of all sincere and honorable Spiritualists; and in order to rid the ranks of the defiling and demoralizing influence of imposition and fraud, it does seem to me that those who are convinced of the existence of fake mediumship ought to STRENUOUSLY AND PERSISTENTLY antagonize the impostors till they either renounce their sins and "live in newness of life," or cease to pose as Spiritualists.

A medium or mediums who employ methods so base as those referred to, in order to excite interest and make a livelihood, are certainly unworthy of that endorsement which you so lavishly bestowed, and deserve severest censure and condemnation.

Yours sincerely,

A. B. PEDEN.

New York, N. Y.

Most Astonishing!

What Next? The Roman Catholics have commenced to investigate Spiritualism! Occult subjects to the Catholic Clergy are extremely fascinating, as much so indeed as to any other class of people. In a few years Spirit Return will be as common in the various churches as it is now among Spiritualists. The lecturer, Dr. J. Godfrey Raupert, told Catholics of Spirits. He produced, spirit pictures and reported a talk with Saints. He says the Pope sanctioned it. St. Ignatius Loyola appeared to him as a Protestant, all constituting an amazing seance at Delmonico's. The following is a report from a New York Times of May 16. It will be read with profound interest.

THE FINAL STAGE OF THE LECTURE CONCERNED THE COMPLETE MATERIALIZATION OF A SPIRIT TO THE LECTURER. HIS INSTANCE OF HIS OWN EXPERIENCE CONCERNED THE APPEARANCE OF THE SPIRIT OF A BOY WHO HAD LIVED NEAR HIM, JUST OUTSIDE OF LONDON. DR. RAUPERT SAID HE HAD KNOWN THE FAMILY OF THE LAD WELL. THE BOY GOT INTO TROUBLE AND WENT AWAY. HIS MOTHER BECAME ANXIOUS ABOUT HIM, AND ONE MORNING HE CALLED ON HER, TO FIND THAT SHE HAD RECEIVED A CABLEGRAM READING: "DEAD; WILL SEND LETTERS." DR. RAUPERT SAID HE REMAINED WITH THE MOTHER ALL MORNING AND THEN WENT HOME TO HIS STUDY. HE WAS SITTING AT HIS TABLE WHEN THE HEAD OF THE BOY APPEARED ABOVE THE TABLE TOP, THEN THE SHOULDERS, AND THEN THE FULL FORM. IT DISAPPEARED, BUT REAPPEARED IN THE SAME WAY. THEN THE ASTRAL BODY SPOKE AND SAID IT HAD BEEN STANDING BEHIND THE CHAIR OF THE DOCTOR WHEN HE WAS SPEAKING TO THE MOTHER, BUT HAD BEEN UNABLE TO GET INTO COMMUNICATION.

Declaring that it was at the request of Pope Pius X that he should fully acquaint the Catholic clergy of the United States with the results of his studies of the occult, Dr. J. Godfrey Raupert, a member of the London Society for Psychical Research, lectured at Delmonico's on "Spiritism" last night, and, incidentally, told of having had personal and verbal communication with the shade of St. Ignatius Loyola.

The greatest efforts were made by the Catholic Library Association and Father Joseph H. McMahon, its moderator, to keep out of the lecture hall all outsiders, non-Catholics, reporters and professional Spiritualists. The audience of 200 was made up mostly of priests and Catholic scientists and students. Every person inside had to be vouched for by a member of the association. The highest dignitary of the Church present was Bishop O'Gorman, who is in charge of the diocese of Sierra Leone, West Africa. Dr. James J. Walsh of Fordham College, considered one of the brilliant Catholics in the professions here, was also in the hall.

A Catholic woman who begged hard to get in, pleading that she was interested in the study of the soul and any tangible evidence which might be obtained to prove its existence, was barred out. She complained bitterly that she had often been tempted to attend Spiritualistic seances, but because it was against the mandates of the Church, she had not done so.

"And now, the Church has sanctioned a lecture on this subject," she cried almost tearfully to the doorkeeper, "and you won't let me in."

Father McMahon found her with her ear to the door later, and ordered her away, telling her that if she did not go he would have the authorities remove her.

The reason for the lecture was a subject of the most earnest controversy after it was over. It was learned that Dr. Raupert is not only engaged in lecturing to the Catholic clergy on the occult, but is also delivering lectures at the Dunwoodie Seminary. After seeing him display photographs which he asserted to be actual reproductions of the astral body, hearing him tell of spiritual communication with the departed and of spiritual communications in writing to him, all with the sanction of the Pope, and this under the auspices of the Catholic clergy of New York, priests left Delmonico's bewildered and parishioners dazed. Many of the Catholic clergy took notes of the lecture.

The lecture opened just before 9 o'clock. The room was darkened that the lecturer might show his ghost pictures with the stereopticon. To devout Catholics, forbidden to venture within the realm of Spiritualism, the very opening of the discourse was strange and uncanny.

Dr. Raupert began by saying that he had visited the Pope recently and had been requested by him to tell the truth about his investigations of psychic phenomena.

Then he showed seven pictures in a series giving the development of a photograph of an astral body materialized by himself and a number of associates, who were pictured as sitting about a table, their fingers touching. The picture of the lecturer was recognized in the group about the table in the first picture. A second picture showed a spot of dim light over the centre of the table. This light grew with each successive picture, blotting out the fingers of the mediums one by one, until the plate was nothing but the suffused light of the strange thing conjured up, as the lecturer asserted, by the minds of the mediums. Finally the picture showed the astral body in the shape of a woman.

Dr. Raupert told the audience that these experiments were actual, as the camera reproductions showed. He said it would take many lectures for for him to tell all he had learned in his study of the spirit world and communication therewith. He began, he said, with experiments in spirit writing, which he classified as direct and indirect.

Here Dr. Raupert told of an "indirect" experiment, in which a sheet of paper apparently illumined, had left a table, floated in the air and had dropped to the table again with many scratches and dots upon it. When the experimenters found that they were unable to decipher the message and expressed their disappointment, he said another try was made, and a message came to use a magnifying glass. This was done, and the original message was read clearly.

In the rear of the audience there was a display of skepticism when this was told, despite the assertion of the lecturer that he had been asked by the Holy Father to tell of these things. The audience was stiff and cold at first, but later became more interested, so much so that some expressed regret at having gone there to listen.

Save for two or three overimpressionable men who left the room, the audience remained. Those who were fortunate enough to get in had been warned in a circular from the Catholic Library Association that it was to be "strictly understood that the lecture was to be strictly scientific, and that only those not of morbid tendency or disposition are invited."

After treating of manifestations from the spirit world by writing, Dr. Raupert told of "spirit voices," and gave as his own experience his seance with St. Ignatius. The lecturer, it seems, is a convert from the Anglican to the Roman Church. He was a Protestant, he said, when St. Ignatius appeared to him. He first "became cognizant of a predominating intellectual presence," and then the saint appeared. He wondered and voiced his wonderment at every appearance of the saint to a Protestant, and then St. Ignatius told him it was easy to get in communication with him, as he had been reading his work every day, and had drawn the spirit of the saint to him.

The final stage of the lecture concerned the complete materialization of a spirit to the lecturer. His instance of his own experience concerned the appearance of the spirit of a boy who had lived near him, just outside of London. Dr. Raupert said he had known the family of the lad well. The boy got into trouble and went away. His mother became anxious about him, and one morning he called on her, to find that she had received a cablegram reading: "Dead; will send letters."

Dr. Raupert said he remained with the mother all morning and then went home to his study. He was sitting at his table when the head of the boy appeared above the table top, then the shoulders, and then the full form. It disappeared, but reappeared in the same way. Then the astral body spoke and said it had been standing behind the chair of the doctor when he was speaking to the mother, but had been unable to get into communication.

Dr. Raupert said also that the spirit informed him that other spirit influences had told him that it was easy to get in communication with him, and that the spirit had come to him in his study to tell him that in life he had destroyed himself. The boy, it was found afterward, had committed suicide.

In closing Dr. Raupert advised Catholics to keep away from the study of the spirit world, because it involved great injury to the medium. He quoted a scientist and statistician as having said that 10,000 persons were in insane asylums as the result of efforts to get in touch with the spirit world. He told of a medium who took written messages, who was called upon so constantly that he was wrecked by the effort to meet the demands of the spirit message senders.

For the limit of the audience's spiritualistic experiences Dr. Raupert showed two pictures. One of them was of the doctor standing with an astral form beside him. The doctor explained that he felt the presence of the spirit, but could not be sure of it and he had asked it to move over to the other side of him. The next picture showed the spirit form on the other side. The form was that of a young woman in white holding a rose. The picture showed the doctor endeavoring to reach out and take the rose from the shadowy hand.

One Catholic, after leaving the lecture last night declared that this spirit lecture before the clergy and select laity of the Catholic Church was the most radical and remarkable thing that had ever occurred in the history of the Church in this country, and that if Dr. Raupert was lecturing at the request and with the acquiescence of Pope Pius the Whole Roman Catholic people of America would be amazed.

The world is continually growing better to all who are honestly trying to make it better.—Everett McNeil.

Drinking water neither makes a man sick nor in debt nor his wife a widow.—John Neal.

Thomas Paine.

An Eloquent Tribute Paid to the Man in an Address by Mrs. H. L. P. Russegue, at Hartford, Conn.

I will read a poem by William Brunton, entitled, "With What Vain Rites We Worship God":

With what vain rites we worship God,
In all the places of the earth,
As if a demon there had trod,
Or wished to rule with iron rod,
And strike from out our hearts all worth.

We've robbed our life of every good,
And put ourselves in servile chains,
We've fastened men in servitude,
When only love and brotherhood
Should have been ours to end our pains.

How wondrous strange this common sight,
That we observe in every land,
Men wish to know and keep the right,
They seek the day from shades of night,
And priests should lead them by the hand.

And, lo! they set our God afar,
And led astray from rites and book,
They look to sun, they look to star,
And then set up some mystic bar,
Lest men for God in self should look!

We have the temples of the East,
Cathedrals of the countries old,
We have the monk, the nun, the priest,
And sacrifice has never ceased,
And yet the way has not been told.

We have commandments men obey,
Submission to or loss, or pain,
The priest for ages has the way,
And men dared not to answer, Nay,
But man, as man, we fail to gain!

These outer things of form and rite,
Are but the child in senses' school,
The savage in his tent at night—
That cheers it with the feeble light—
While in the Heaven God's stars have rule.

To be a man, with man's intent,
And knowledge how to do and dare,
To use all wisdom to us sent,
And have pure kindness in us blent,
Is what will give joy everywhere!

There's nothing sacred on the earth,
But man—the image of the truth,
He has in liberty his birth,
He has in common-sense his worth,
And duty gives eternal youth.

Oh let us leave our idols old,
And take in life a sweeter part,
Give up false gods, and lust of gold,
Give up all fear, be kind and bold,
And live the justice of the heart!

I shall take for my subject this evening, "The Influence of Thomas Paine Upon Civilization."

Thomas Paine's influence still is working for the betterment of man. Our politics, our religion, our commerce, if you please, are better for his having lived. He came before the world a helper, a leader, a guide; he came to the world to help men to think, to liberate them from the thralldom of prejudice, and superstitious awe. He came to bring to the world the spirit of godliness, because he taught the value of human rights; he recognized the God in man, the divinity of human souls, the righteousness of morality, the purity of individual aspiration. No one can hardly appreciate to-day the great influence that has gone abroad. Not only in America, but over the old world everywhere it is felt, it is realized, Religious cults have grown broader; they have absorbed more of divinity; they come closer to human needs; idols have been razed to the ground, and temples where vain rites were held, have gone far, far away into the past.

The liberties that we are now enjoying in our land, the liberty of free thought, are to be largely attributed to the work and life of this godly man, because in his life the spirit of godliness made itself manifest. His sympathies were with the down-trodden; a universal brotherhood inspired him to nobler thoughts, and to a higher helpfulness. He was in himself a light in darkened places, until men were made glad because of his spiritual presence.

Surely no man of the last century or the preceding century has ever left an influence over the earth so marked, so universal, so wide-spread, so profound, so inspiring, as the spirit that impelled Thomas Paine in his noble life. He knew no fear; he recognized no harm that could come ho him, that would amount to anything, when comparable to the universal helpfulness that he could give. Men have been inspired by his noble conduct; they have been quickened in thought by the light of his reason. If he had accomplished no more than to awaken in man a desire to worship God by noble living, and by the recognition of noble rights, his life would have been a benediction to all the world.

Surely no one man has ever accomplished for American liberties more than Thomas Paine. He was the right hand advocate, the inspirer of Washington. He was the man who came as if ordained of Heaven, to fill a place that was then ready to receive him. He was quick to see. He did not confine his influence to America, but when France was in need of his services, he freely left everything, and flew to its aid. England has appreciated his work—America will some day. He has been too near for the appreciation of humanity here, because the thralldom of Orthodoxy, the thralldom of belief, the thralldom of that power that has held in fetters human intelligence, has not yet faded away, but it is passing rapidly, until temples and altars are becoming undermined by his spiritual presence.

His influence upon civilization is universal. It is everywhere made manifest. It is recognizing not only the rights of men, but the rights of every individual. He not only preached and believed in God, but the one God. He was the man who refuted the idea of the Trinity. He could not accept such bad mathematics, that three times one made one. Instead, he recognized one Deific law, the law that swings to and fro through this universe, and carries with its power the higher activity to higher levels, the holier altars. The Government of the United States has never paid its obligations to this wonderful man.

The influence of Thomas Paine has been recognized upon politics, upon the army, upon religion, upon the every-day relationship that exists between individuals. The man who sowed the seed from which the tree of human righteousness is growing, is the man who has carried good to the remotest points of earth. We are hardly able to measure his influence to-day. While he has passed from earth, he is too near for us to realize the fulness of his powers. It is time that we begin to see, hear and know the power of this wonderful man upon the conditions of this country. We owe much of our liberty to him; we owe much of our religious thought to him.

His "Age of Reason" in which he taught of the higher morality, the independence of human thought, the exercise of intellect, was in itself an inspiration to human society. The world has here and there in its cycles, as they have come to the front, brought men who have carried forward the wonderful work of this great man. He has liberalized the religion of the day, he has broadened the thought; he has inspired men to scientific investigation, because he inspired them to know the reason why, pertaining to everything. The commerce of the land owes much to him, because he taught justice—justice for justice's sake, righteousness for righteousness's sake, pure communion between man and man, because it was right to be honest and true. Thus his influence cannot die. It is illumining the world to-day.

Here and there upon the altars of human society lights are burning that are brightening the world. Religion has grown broader, higher, sweeter and truer. It has absorbed the thoughts of men until the world is standing upon a higher level than ever before. To-day the world does not realize the roots as they go back into the past that are developing the tree of life that is growing in our midst. They do not realize how deep in the soil of the intellect the very thoughts and laws that Thomas Paine taught are taking hold of human intelligence. They do not realize how his spirit is spreading over the earth. Had it not been for his teachings, the bars and chains and fetters that held us in universal bondage might have held us in their thralldom, and we would have been groping in the dark. He has inspired thought, and he has inspired men and women to a higher truth, to seek a larger life, a better spirit, to come closer to God, because, whether he called it God or not, he recognized the divinity of human souls, and in the presence of the universal law.

These are the principles, friends, that are redeeming the world. They are the powers that are uplifting humanity. It seems as if every age had produced its teachers. Now and then a man is born and brought up in our midst, as though he was ordained of Heaven to carry the mists away, and elevate the thoughts of men to higher conceptions of God, and godliness.

It seems as if there were eras in human thought. Think, if you will, of the wonderful powers of Carlyle, Emerson and Bronson Alcott. Think of the universal spread of the influence of their thought, until to-day a local hell is destroyed, and a personal God is hardly recognized. There is so much ennobling in the nature of man that we are coming to believe in his Divinity, and are coming to hold his kinship between him and the universal spirit as one.

These are the lessons that Thomas Paine taught us, these are the principles that he advanced to us. He knew no such things as fear. When on his way to prison, he issued his volume of "Rights toMen," and in it was that independence of thought that intellectual vigor, that characterized his whole life. His inspiration to our army was in itself enough to record his fame, and uplift him in the esteem of men and women, who know anything of American history. It is important that we do not decry the name of individuals until we know something about them. Those who proclaim the evils of his temperament, the evil influence of his life, will tell you that he was a drunkard, that he was immoral, that he did not believe in the divinity of life.

You who did not know him, I would advise you to read his first proclamation in his "Age of Reason"—"I believe in one God, and my religion is to do good," and who needs a higher altar on which to place his religion than to make his religion to do good. Nothing can be more uplifting, nothing can be more purifying, nothing can be more exalting. His influence has gone out over the land, and although he may not live in every denomination, yet every denomination has been broadened by his influence, because he taught them how to think, how to receive inspiration from on high. He recognized in every individual, religion of God, and godliness. He gave the spirit of justice to all men. Surely there is no man who stands before the altars of the world as a redeemer from the fetters of superstitious awe, who is comparable in the work he has accomplished, to Thomas Paine. There is no man who carried over the whole earth a beacon light, bidding man up the heights to a higher level of thought and usefulness. There is no man who ever taught the world the importance of seeing, and hearing, and feeling the spirit vibrating, that quickens him. There was no man in the world whose religion was more universal than his. It was a religion that inspired him to go everywhere, to sacrifice everything, and had he been a Christian, or recognized as a Christian by the Christian Church, it would have been called an inspiration of God that prevented him from being taken to the guillotine. The door of his cell had swung to, but thenumber on it was hidden, and it was a Providence of righteousness that thus enabled a good man to live and carry the light on up the heights of human necessity.

It is needless for us to consider for a moment the scandals that have been attached to his memory. We must look to the virtues, not to the vices, of any man. But there are no recorded vices against him that are not the outgrowth of prejudice or superstition; there is no testimony that is authentic which can place a Crown of Thorns upon him, except that of prejudice, and he who carries the light of truth along the highways of life may expect to be persecuted wherever he may be. All reformers, men and women, who have held the light of truth higher than their fellows, have had to encounter prejudice and superstition that has tried to quench the light.

Look to your own land. When slavery existed here, the slavery of the African race, those who labored for the emancipation of the negro were persecuted all over the land; they had to partake of the same spirit; they had to receive the same fiery furnace through which they must walk, and just so with every reformer who invades old opinions. Every man who desires to live according to the higher dictates, who desires to be independent in the higher walks of life, must expect to receive the crown of thorns. No one escapes it, and you are only laboring here upon this earth to plant seeds for other generations.

Thomas Paine has tilled the intellectual soil of human souls. He has tilled the earth, and sown the seeds, and to-day you are reaping the harvest; you are uplifted and broadened by that harvest, you are exalted in your conception of mankind. His work never can be limited; it is infinite in its influence, infinite in its goodness, infinite in its uses, infinite in its development, infinite in its advancement, until ultimately there must come a universal brotherhood that embraces all races, all men, all kinds, no matter whether they be black or white. He knew no poor, no rich. He knew no evil, no good; all were human, all were to be redeemed, and assisted to a higher level. He kindled fires that are burning still, and they are burning on and on, and the world is illumined by their light, and humanity is richer, stronger, better and truer to itself. Learn for yourselves how great this man was. No man can read his works without thinking upon broader lines, and without living more righteously than ever before.

It is time, friends, that we lay aside our prejudices or we are looking through a glass darkly. It is time that we forgot envy, the superstition, the ignorance and the creeds that bind the world. It is time that we are emancipated, and in our emancipation we cannot be satisfied until the world is redeemed.

SPIRITUALISM REQUIRES SERVICE

There is Progress of the Human Soul and Progress of the Universe—Not Only This Earth, but Other Worlds Are Unfolding Step by Step in Process of Evolution.

Madam Helen Stuart-Richings, Spiritualist lecturer, was greeted with a large audience in Odd Fellows' temple, Meadville, Pa. The speaker defined Spiritualism as a religion, and explained many of the points in which it differs from other beliefs, giving special emphasis to the fundamental principles of her own faith.

She said our conception of God has been continually changing, because man's power to comprehend spiritual things has been growing. God is too loving to condemn man for ever and ever to eternal torture, for there is not a normal parent in the world who would deal thus with their children. How, then, can man be more tender and loving than God?

Jesus was a messenger from God, and one with God in precisely the same way as man to-day may become one with God. The Spiritualist's idea of immortality is one of continual service. Even in the spirit world there are the ignorant and the helpless that need to be raised up, and to these unfortunates the angels from the higher spheres turn their attention. They are also interested in the progress of affairs on earth and the spirit communications received through mediums are not the only kind of spirit communications, for there is a subtle influence continually being exerted, by spirits, over man.

Even as we can cause the critical thought of one with whom we associate, though not a word is spoken, so in the same manner may we be influenced for good or evil by the kind of spirits we attract to us. If the spirits about us are low in grade, the only way they can be raised is by the purification of our own lowest nature. Guardian angels are also about us doing what they can by this same power of spiritual suggestion to quicken the higher life within.

With regard to the vicarious atonement, one's redemption is not found here, but only by self-purification and the unfoldment of man's talents does he receive salvation. Man must live the life, do the deeds and be master of himself. He must take up his individual responsibility and thus only does he come into at-one-ment with God.

Finally, there is not only the progress of the human soul, but there is the progress of the universe. Not only is this earth unfolding step by step in the process of evolution, but other worlds also. Thus the whole universe is filled with the presence of God who is working out His eternal purpose.—Tribune Republican.

ADMIRES THE WORKS OF DR. A. J. DAVIS.

He Thinks that Nature's Divine Revelation Should Be Circulated as the Spiritualists' Bible.

To the Editor: I am glad you are trying to arrange for the publication of the work of Andrew Jackson Davis. I never shall forget the influence that "NATURE'S DIVINE REVELATIONS" had on me when I was a boy, not yet in my teens—it must have been as long ago as 1848—and my father read the book aloud during a succession of winter evenings to a few of the neighbors who happened in occasionally at our house in Northern Ohio. My father was a regularly ordained Unitarian minister at the time; but, I might say, he was infatuated with the volume. I think we had the book before the "Rochester knockings" began, or at least before much was said or known about them in that part of Ohio. My father, during this winter, paid more attention to this volume of Davis' than he did to the Bible itself, which occasioned much talk among the strict church members. Many of the older Universalists will remember him as Rev. Hiram S. Marble, who preached throughout Ohio and Indiana from about 1836 till 1852. The reading of the book led him into such liberal paths that he was finally expelled from the ministry for heresy. The book is a marvelous one. I think no other book ever had such a strong influence over me. In later years, when I have seen so much deceit and humbuggery among so-called Spiritualists, I often go back in memory to "Nature's Divine Revelations" for rational religion and honest sentiments. It would be a good thing to have the volume generally circulated as a SPIRITUALISTIC BIBLE, so to speak, to serve as a guide in lieu of the wishy-washy stuff we are too often served with to-day. It contains the true Spiritual philosophy which should serve as a foundation for a genuine, high-class Spiritualism, as distinct from the fortune-telling phase of it. EARL MARBLE.

Chicago, Ill.

"The Light or Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge, as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.

How I Became a Spiritualist.

By the Great Criminalogist, Cosare Lombroso—Translated Irving R. Bacon, for the New York American—An Interesting Communication.

Until 1890 I was the most violent opponent of Spiritualism. To those who would invite me to investigate the phenomena in this field I invariably replied: "To even speak of a spirit animating a table or a chair is simply ridiculous. A manifestation of energy without matter is no less unthinkable than are functions without organs."

The major part of my life had been devoted to positive science; to the effort to prove that thought is a direct emanation of the brain, and that the expressions of the brain (just like those of crime) rest upon anomalies produced by the over-development of certain parts of the brain with coincident deteriorations of other parts. And, besides, I was approaching that period of life when one is prone to dismiss innovations, no matter how luculently their truth may shine forth.

And then, too, I must admit that many years of dispute with the opponents of my theory of pellagra (the Lombard disease) and the origin of crime had well-night exhausted my energy, and what remained of it I desired to husband in defence of the problems with which the greatest part of my life had been bound up. To enter upon a path which could but lead to fresh strife repelled me.

Still more was I repelled from making investigations of phenomena to the study of which there were almost wholly lacking any tools or other exact experimental means and the direct observation of which was rendered absolutely impossible, as one was compelled always to operate in the dark. A thing, the exact inquiry even into which appeared impossible, seemed to me to be but a paltry object of science.

In 1891 it happened that I was vainly trying to unravel the most mysterious case that I had ever encountered in my medical practice. I was treating the daughter of a high official in my native city. The girl had, at the age of puberty, fallen into a pronounced hysteria with accompanying manifestations which could not be accounted for physiologically nor pathologically. Her eyes, for the time being, lost their sight entirely; but, instead, the patient was able to see with her ear. She was able, with blindfolded eyes, to read a printed page held to her ear, and when the sunrays were focussed on her ear by a magnifying glass, she screamed aloud that it was blinding her and that they were trying to make her blind.

Later her sense of taste migrated to her knee and the sense of smell to her toes.

Now and then she would manifest the most wonderful indications of clairvoyance and premonitions. She saw her brother, who was more than a mile away from her room, behind the scenes of a variety theatre. She described the costumes of the dancers, although the surroundings were altogether unknown to her. Sometimes while in bed and with the windows closed, she would feel the approach of her father when he was still several hundred of yards from the house.

She prophesied especially with mathematical exactitude whatever was to occur to her personally. So, for instance, she once predicted: "Fourteen days from now, at noon, I shall completely lose my ability to walk." This was fulfilled.

Once she said that within a month and three days she would experience an irresistible desire to bite. I watched her and endeavored to distract her attention. I had all the clocks and watches in the house stopped to deceive her in regard to the time. And yet, at the precise hour of the designated day she was seized with the impulse to bite, and did not grow calm again until after she had torn several pounds of paper into shreds with her teeth.

The patient said that her attacks could be cured by the application of aluminum. We sought to achieve a result with metals which bore a resemblance to aluminum, but she could not be deceived. It was only after the genuine aluminum, of which there was but little in the city, was applied that she recovered.

Although these facts were nothing new (for similar ones had already been recorded by Petetin, Despine, Franko and others), they were, nevertheless, most amazing.

I cudgelled my brain in vain for an explanation. I confess that they appeared to me to be wholly inexplicable in the light of all existing theories of physiology and pathology. There was one thing, however, which I believed to be perfectly clear—that hysteria had set free in this previously entirely normal girl new and remarkable forces based upon the existence of unknown partial senses. And in this way I reached the conviction that spiritism might possibly bring me nearer the truth.

One year later, 1892, I came in contact with several admirers of Eusapia Palladino at Naples, where I was engaged in a professional tour of inspection. They begged me to make at least one experiment with this celebrated medium.

I declined then, as I had before, to conduct any investigation either in the dark or in connection with any public seance, but was assured that the seance could be arranged in a room at my hotel in broad daylight and without the presence of any strangers. I decided to accept the invitation under these circumstances, and especially as I had already been favorably predisposed by the strong impression which the occurrences I have described had made upon me.

In broad daylight in my own room at the hotel, and while I was alone with Eusapia, I saw the table raise itself and a small trumpet fly from the table to the bed and then back to the table. I was filled with consternation and expressed my readiness to make further experiments of a more detailed character in the same room in conjunction with three fellow-practitioners.

In this second seance I again saw objects change their disposition and heard knocks which had apparently no cause, etc. But what astonished me most of all was the following: The portiere of the alcove suddenly raised itself and, coming toward me, enveloped me in a tight embrace. For several seconds I made fruitless efforts to extricate myself. The portiere felt like a metallic board. An equally strong impression was made upon me by a plate containing flour which was discovered to have been turned upside down without the spilling of any of the flour. It appeared to have taken on the consistency of gelatine. This lasted more than a quarter of an hour.

In conclusion, just as we were about to leave the room, an immense, heavy wardrobe which had been in a corner at a considerable distance from us began to glide toward me like some enormous pachyderm that intended attacking me.

At a subsequent seance, which also took place in daylight, we placed upon the table about two feet from the medium a dynamo-meter (strength-test machine). We then requested the medium to exert the utmost strength of which she was capable upon the machine. Suddenly we saw the index swing around and stop at about 90 pounds. Eusapia's normal exertion of strength would not have exceeded 72 pounds. She declared that she saw her guiding spirit, "John," and that it was he who was exerting this pressure; and made a great effort to reach the dynamometer with her hands, which she stretched and strained to loosen from our grasp.

The following was similar: A small bell was placed upon the floor some two feet from her and we requested her to ring it. Immediately the medium's skirt began to bulge out in the direction of the bell and assumed an appearance not unlike that of a flexible tube filled with gas. When I attempted to seize the skirt, the balloon like part suddenly reached the bell before I could prevent it and rang it.

At another seance in Milan I saw slowly sprouting from the sleeves of my coat a twig with perfectly fresh roses which appeared to have just been cut.

Eusapia was requested to write her name on a paper pad which Schiaparelli had placed upon the table. The medium seized Schiaparelli's finger and then declared that she had written. We had observed nothing of the kind; but as she kept insisting that it was so, we searched and found her signature on a page in the middle of the pad. Another time we found her name on the page before the last. And a third time on the curtain pole seven feet above the floor.

When we put Palladino upon the scales we observed that she could reduce or augment her weight by twenty pounds. The same happened in regard to a chair which was put upon the scales. It was invariably required, however, that a small segment of her skirt be in contact with the lower frame of the scales.

The possibility of deception or fraud was out of the question, for we always held the hands and feet of the medium and occasionally even bound her feet. In addition, we made sure that Eusapia had nothing on except clothes which we ourselves had at each seance provided for her. Despite all of which the reader will interrupt me pathetically and ask: "Whence do you get all this rigmarole?" Or, what's worse: "Are you sure that you have not permitted just plain ordinary swindlers to take you in?"

In truth, the first impression (and I myself have had it) is that the whole thing is the result of a trick, an explanation which is to the taste of most people, in view of the fact that it saves the trouble of thinking, of investigating and of reminding the layman that under certain circumstances he is a more conscientious and shrewder observer than one who is a trained scientist. And, moreover, there is no phenomenon that leads itself so readily to both doubt and fraud as spiritism.

This is principally because the most important and most remarkable phenomena of it are almost invariably conducted in the dark. And then, too, the mediums themselves are often dupes against their own will. They are for the most part hysterical, and like all hysteria subjects, are seized with a desire as soon as they miss the spiritistic energy within themselves to substitute for it sleight-of-hand. In this connection I do not take into consideration at all the bogus mediums, cheats by profession and for gain.

In opposition to these objections one might say: Nobody doubts that there is an art of photography notwithstanding the fact that the photographer is not able to develop his plate without darkness. This comparison is especially good because it gives one a palpable idea why under circumstances light may be an obstruction to the phenomena of spiritism. On the other hand we know of mediums like Slade and Home who are able to operate in the broad light of day. And daylight, too, is used in the strange miracles of the Hindoo fakirs, which are so astonishing that of themselves they should "give us pause."

And Eusapia, too, allowed the sunlight to shine upon a long series of extraordinary manifestations of which I myself was a spectator, such as the experiments with the dynamometer and the scales and when she set the big wardrobe in motion.

It may be mentioned in passing that the experiments with the dynamometer and the scales prove that, although these things are exceedingly prudish when a scientific treatment is attempted, they are nevertheless amenable to exact means toward a given end.

One thing is certain, mediums dislike engaging in any mechanical experiments and often refuse flatly to do so. But this can be readily understood when we consider how humanity in general is disinclined to innovations of any sort.

Richet says expressly that seances have often terminated abruptly when the table which had been used was displaced by another or when a stranger has entered the circle. But equally certain it is that in the case of Eusapia absolutely infallible precautions were taken to prevent fraud. Her hands and feet were tied, or she was surrounded with electric wire, which at the least motion on her part would have set a bell ringing.

The medium Politi was placed nude in a bag during the experiments of the Society for Psychological Research in Milan, and although Miss d'Esperance was enmeshed like a fish in a net, the phantom Yolande appeared.

In the face of my ignorance of spiritism and pursuant to my studies in hysteria and the pathology of genius, I had hit upon the hypothesis that all these phenomena, like those of hysteria and of hypnotism, rested upon the activity of the psychomotor centres of the medium in a state of trance.

The energy of some of the nerve centers is increased while others are weakened by the neurosis and the trance condition. In this manner the creative inspiration of genius consists of a lessening of the whole "consciousness," and even of the moral feeling.

Eusapia, who, in consequence of an injury sustained in her childhood on her head, was neuropathic, lost consciousness altogether during the period of the spiritistic manifestations, and often convulsive jerks took place.

This theory seemed the more plausible to me because I felt convinced that even the loftiest idea is no more than the product of a molecular movement in the brain. I observed moreover that the more important spiritistic phenomena always manifested themselves in connection with persons or objects nearest the medium, and that another influence upon objects outside the brain, was open to an explanation similar to that by which wireless telegraphy may be accounted for.

It was discouraging that not everything which had been brought to light up to the present day in the spiritistic domain was adequately explicable. This was also the view of one who was a great deal better versed in spiritism than I, namely, Ermacora.

Ermacora proved to me that telepathy operates at enormous distances, while the reagent of the apparatuses for wireless telegraphy grows less in the ratio of the square of the distance, and moreover that the brain is not, like Marconi's apparatuses, an instrument on a stationary basis.

My favorite theory was finally brought to a totter when in the past few years I encountered cases of psychic operation at a distance in families in which there were members possessing mediumistic tendencies; while on the other hand persons who were reputed to be mediums were not gifted with telepathic powers.

Several months before his death Chiasa showed me reliefs which had been made by Eusapia during her trances. She had always employed this method: A small basket of easily kneaded clay was put into a chest, which was closed tightly with a board. A heavy stone was placed upon the board, the medium put her hand beneath this stone and the moment she lost consciousness she would say, "Ready!" The chest was then opened and there were found impressions of a hand or of the face of a person whose facial expression was that of one suspended between life and death. I was not present at these seances, but the testimony of Chiasa and of a celebrated Neapolitan sculptor, who further elaborated the clay impressions, satisfies me that the occurrences were as they have stated. According to the judgment of Bistolfi, who was able to achieve within a few seconds similar results of plastic art, which seen at close quarters, appeared insignificant but from a distance made a terrible, depressing impression, the medium would have had to possess an extraordinary degree of artistic skill to produce any such objects.

In reality Eusapia Palladino did not have the first rudimentary notion of the art.

When in addition to all this I attended sessions in which Eusapia Palladino in a trance responded wittily to the point in languages with which she was not conversant, such as English; and when in conclusion I witnessed the experiments of Crooke, with Home and Katie King and others (one German medium painted most astounding pictures in the dark), I became convinced that although spiritistic phenomena are in great measure due to the influence of the medium, they must at the same time be ascribed to the existence of superterrestial beings in the possession of forces for which the properties of, let us say, radium present some analogy.

The solution of this problem will be one of the most tremendous events of our new century.

LET US HAVE FREEDOM.

That is the Wish of Rev. R. E. Coon.

Perfect knowledge will set you free. Under date of February 2, 1907, I have just read an article headed, "What is religion?" This article was written by Mrs. Clara Watson, directed mostly to the Hon. Harrison D. Barrett, whose answer accompanied the article in the same issue, and as my name was used freely by both writers, I feel that it is my duty as well as my privilege, to say a few words in answer to both writers.

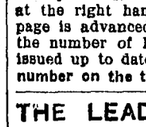
First, to my most honored and worthy sister, let me thank you for your kindly interest in me and my welfare. I cannot find words to thank you enough for your wish in regards to my freedom, and in order to let you know just how I stand in this respect, I will say for your benefit that I am indeed free, and independent as well, for he who has been set free through an increase of knowledge and experience is one who has no idols to worship, or man-made Gods, or man-made religions, or kings or queens, presidents or rulers of any organized bodies of any kind or cult, whatsoever it may be, but I do have honor and respect for all leaders and rulers who rule with love and charity, with equal rights for all, and special privileges to none. Of this class of rulers I have a special respect, and I am willing to be led by them.

I could vindicate my character through the columns of the paper, but all I deem as necessary, is to say that after I have served one year under my qualification ordination in this State and adjoining State, my good brothers and sisters of the Clackamas County Religious Association of Oregon on the last Saturday of the New Era camp meeting, (which day was set apart for a business meeting, and my case was brought before the meeting) voted as to my final ordination papers, and out of 28 votes I got 23, which gave me my papers complete.

This organization is independent, and it owns the New Era Camp Ground, is a beautiful plot of five acres, with buildings suitable for the purpose it was calculated for, and is a very valuable piece of property. Its members are good honest men and women, whose hearts are in the cause, and it is the oldest spiritual society in the State of Oregon.

If all the things done and said under the name of religion was religion, I would not want to be called religious any more than my honorable sister, and if all the miserable things done and said under the name of Spiritualism was Spiritualism, neither would I want to be called a Spiritualist, but, thank God, all that is called religion is not religion, neither is all that is called Spiritualism, Spiritualism. You have no doubt seen my article written about the same time that the article came out in the Progressive Thinker, which you speak of to Brother Barrett. It was in answer to Brother Loveland of Los Angeles. That article fully explains my position on orthodox gods and the immaculate conception, and other points of interest. I still hold to those views. You can learn from reading that article, that I do not hold to any orthodox notions.

Yours for spiritual Spiritualism.



Thanking you once more for your kindly interest in me, I am your brother and co-worker, for a spiritual Spiritualism.

REV. R. E. COON,
State Organizer and Missionary of Oregon.

Eyesight Restored.

Eyeglasses May Be Abandoned.

A Wonderful Discovery That Corrects Afflictions of the Eye Without Cutting or Drugging.

There is no need for cutting, drugging or probing the eye for the relief of most forms of disease, as a new method—the Actina treatment—has been discovered which eliminates the necessity of former torturous methods. There is no risk or necessity of experimenting, as many people report having been cured of failing eyesight, cataracts, granulated lids and other afflictions of the eye after being pronounced incurable, through this grand discovery.

Mr. A. O. T. Pennington, special agent Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "Having used Actina for several years, I cheerfully recommend it for the cure of eye, ear and throat affections. It cured my mother, of cataracts."

Susan Cardwell, Lincoln, Kan., writes. "I am 78 years old. I was so blind I could only know persons by their voices. After using Actina I can now thread a needle without glasses."

Mrs. T. F. Moyle, Waterford, Wis., writes;—"About two years ago I was taken with iritis in both eyes and nearly went blind and it was thought an operation would be necessary. I sent for an Actina last April and it has taken all the inflamation out and my eyes are now well.

Hundreds of other testimonials will be sent on application. "Actina" is purely a home treatment and self-administered by the patient, and is sent on trial postpaid. If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept 842B, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive absolutely free a valuable book, Professor Wilson's Treatise on Disease.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.
Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address
DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

913

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

THE LEADING WORKS OF
E. D. BABBITT, M. D.

The Principles of Light and Color.

Superbly issued, royal 8vo, with over 200 engravings and colored plates. Price, $5.00; in massive binding, imitating half Russia, 50c. extra. "An imposing volume of nearly 600 pages. Shows a great amount of research on the part of the author. Will prove a great acquisition to Scientific Libraries."—N. Y. Herald.

Human Culture and Cure.

In six parts, five parts being already issued.
PART I. The Philosophy of Cure, including Methods and Instruments: 75 cents.
PARTS III and IV in one volume; $1.00. Parts III treats of Mental and Psychological forces; Part IV of the Nervous System and Insanity. "This work discloses for the first time the chemical mystery of mental phenomena, throws the first clear light upon the nature and processes of hypnotism and all kindred psychological phenomena which have never before been explained or understood. Dr. Babbitt has here not only given the rationale of hypnotism, psychometry, clairvoyance and mental science, including the mysterious subject of memory, but has furnished abundant illustrations of their working. The subject of Phreno-physiognomy alone is of priceless value as enabling us to understand our fellow beings around us."—Prof. W. C. Bowman.
PART V. "The Bodily Organs, their Diseases and the Great Natural Methods for Their Cure," aims to be the most practical work on healing thus far given to the public. Price, $1.

Health and Power.

Brief Natural Treatment for 110 Diseases. Price, 3 cents. "Worth its weight in diamonds."
SOCIAL UPBUILDING, Paper, 15 cents.
RELIGION.—A most thoughtful and excellent work. Price, cloth, $1.10; paper, 60 cents.

The Psychic Riddle.

By I. K. Funk, D.D., LL.D., Editor-in-Chief of "The Standard Dictionary"; Author of "The Widow's Mite, and Other Psychic Phenomena," "The Next Step in Evolution," etc.

A book full of psychic suggestions, supported by startling experiences, all told in a wonderfully conservative way. It harmonizes with the judgment pronounced by The Review of Reviews, New York, on the author's previous publication of this subject: "A very sensible, cautious, level-headed piece of work all through;" and also with the judgment on the same book pronounced by the Cleveland Record: "There has never been so fair and painstaking a book put forth on this subject as this one." Price, $1.00.

A MASTERLY WORK.
Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth
By Prof. W. M. Lockwood.

A masterly presentation of an important subject. A powerful argument along new and scientific lines, establishing on a scientific basis the fact of the continuity of personal individual conscious selfhood after laying aside the physical body. A book of rare value. With several fine illustrations. Cloth. $1.00.

THE SOUL: ITS NATURE, RELATIONS AND EXPRESSIONS IN HUMAN EMBODIMENTS.

Third edition now on sale. Price $1.00. This is one of the best books given by the guides of Mrs Cora L. V. Richmond. They are really lessons, published primarily, as a book of reference for those who have been members of the classes receiving them. This volume is a careful compilation from reports of lessons, containing the bases of the teachings.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns, Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man; Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How It Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives Its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Finer or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morality, Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary: "What Must We Do to Be Saved." For sale at this office.
Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper 50c.

ASTRAL WORSHIP By J. H. Hill, M.D. A valuable contribution to the current discussion of religious problems. The author by illustrations and a planisphere (a representation of the celestial sphere upon a plane with adjustable circles), traces most of the myths which lie at the base of Christianity to their origin in sun and star worship. The astronomical facts given possess great value, the illustrations rare and curious. The book is bound in only one style—heavy boards. Price $1.

A Conspiracy Against the Republic
By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. Price, paper, 25 cents.

The Development of the Spirit
After Transition. By the late M. Faraday. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. Price, 10 cents.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

It is pleasing to know that Prof. W. M. Lockwood has been engaged at Buffalo, N. Y., for another year. Every Spiritualist society in the United States should hear his Spiritualistic lectures, along scientific lines.

Mr. Hill writes: "The Golden Rule Spiritualist Society held its usual services Sunday afternoon and evening, May 12. At the afternoon services quite a large collection considering the size of the audience, was taken up to help reimburse the State organization for the expense it was put to last week, and to show our appreciation of the valuable and important work done at Springfield by that trusted and efficient officer, Dr. Geo. B. Warne, and his indefatigable lieutenant, Dr. C. A. Burgess, in defeating that obnoxious bill aimed at destroying all spiritualistic gatherings in Illinois. In the evening we were disappointed by our regular advertised speaker, Dr. Randall, failing to make his appearance, but what we lost one way we gained in another, for our always reliable pastor, Mrs. Nora B. Hill, came to our rescue and delivered, under spirit control, one of the best sermons ever heard in our hall. It was a treat that her appreciative audience will not soon forget. The speaker for Sunday evening, May 19, is ex States Attorney, Chas. Hughes, and something fine may be expected. There will also be a christening and those who have never seen that beautiful and impressive ceremony should avail themselves of this opportunity. Sunday, May 26, the speaker will be Miss Brean, and following her discourse the Ladies of the G. A. R. will hold memorial services. All are invited."

Frances E. Bonney, president of the First Spiritualist Society, Conneaut, Ohio, writes: "The work of Mrs. Richings is of a character to interest, instruct and charm, and cannot fail to do good. Societies that would like to reach a high ideal, to grow spiritually and mentally, cannot fail to be benefited by the incomparable lectures of this gifted psychic. She is preeminently fitted for effective work on the spiritual platform, and should never be allowed to leave it except for needed rest and recuperation."

W. J. Colville has just completed nearly five weeks' work in Toronto, where he has been welcomed by fine audiences, and made many friends. On Sunday, May 12, he spoke to two very fine audiences in St. George's Hall, at 3 p. m. and in the Unitarian Church at 7. Closing lectures were given at Parkdale, May 13, 14 and 15, and created much interest. Mr. Colville started for London from Montreal, (via Havre) on "Parisian," May 18. His present address is in care of Mrs. Paulet, 24 South Molton street, London, Eng. Owing to important lecture engagements already made in America, for the coming summer, his actual stay in England will be limited to 7 weeks, during which period he will speak several times in London, Manchester, and other large cities, and introduce his new book, "Universal Spiritualism," to the British public. Mr. Colville's first engagement after returning to America, is at Queen City Park, Vermont, beginning July 28, after which he goes to Lily Dale for August 11, and several days following.

R. E. Fielding writes from Washington, D. C.: "The Temple League will continue its meetings during the month of May. Mrs. M. A. Price is the speaker for the month. The First Spiritualist Association has discontinued meetings until October. The Auxiliary meets at Mr. Wood's residence. J. C. F. Grumbine, the tireless worker, gave two lectures in Gude's Hall, which was well filled. He holds private classes in Mr. and Mrs. Hooker's parlors, 1714 14th St., N. W.

Correspondent writes from New York: "Frank E. McKinley, the trumpet medium, has been doing a fine work in New York during the past year through his gift of mediumship. Many have been comforted and brought to a realization of the continuity of life through communion with their loved ones who have passed from the physical body Mr. McKinley will sail for Europe the 17th inst., on the S. S. Cedric of White Star Line, having received a special call to visit a number of the principal cities in England, France, Germany, and desires to announce that he will endeavor to visit Lily Dale in September, during the last ten days of the camp-meeting; after which he will visit his home in Toledo, Ohio, before returning to New York."

Ella J. Wood of Bay City, Oregon, writes of the transition of a veteran Spiritualist: "I am inclosing a clipping from on of the County papers, with the obituary of W. N. Vaughn, who has been a Spiritualist for 40 years, and also a medium. Saturday, the day before he was stricken down, he told his family that the spirits told him he was going to have a very severe sick spell, and he was taken down the next morning and only lived one week. You will notice the paper never mentioned his religion. If he had been a Methodist you would have seen something about it. He was a good old man, and has been a subscriber to The Progrssive Thinker for a good many years."

W. F. Schumacher writes: "The Spiritualistic Church, Students of Nature, 461 W. North ave., corner Robey street, had a large audience Sunday evening, May 12, to listen to a lecture delivered by our pastor, Mrs. M. Schumacher, on "Earth-Bound Spirits." A license was granted Sister Buntrock as a Spiritual Message bearer. Many mediums gave spiritual communications. The society will close its meetings May 26, and open September 1, for another term. We hope to see all our friends at the opening."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

BASKET PICNIC.—The Junior League of German-American Spiritualists will hold a Basket Picnic on Sunday, May 26, 190, at Jestram's Grove, Hillside, Ill. All Spiritualists with their families are heartily invited to this re-union of young and old. Bring your baskets well filled. No admission charged. Take Aurora and Elgin line to Bellwood, or Garfield Park Metropolitan Elevated line to Jestram's Grove. Cars leave Marshfield avenue Station every 30 and 15 minutes.

Correspondent writes: "The Psychical Research Society, Rockford, Ill., reports an interesting meeting on the evening of the 12th. Mr. H. L. Church, a young man of brilliant ability, gave a fine lecture on comparative religions, running parallels between Buddhism and Christianity, concluding by showing that Spiritualism complements both of these old systems, and is destined to supersede them. The discourse was well prepared along historical lines, and was admirably rendered, and added another laurel to his growing fame as a rostrum lecturer. Mrs. Caird, of Chicago, followed with messages from the unseen, which were welcomed by the recipients as authentic. Mrs. Lichtig, of Chicago, will be the messagebearer at the meeting on the 19th of May."

Dr. T. Willis writes: "In the November 24th number of The Progressive Thinker is an article from Denver, Col, Judge on how parents should bring up children, that is worth a year's subscription, at least. Then there was a letter from A. J. Davis, the greatest of living seers in America, that interested me more than a little. Forty-five years ago I read his great book called "Nature's Divine Revelations," and I thought it the grandest work I ever read.."

Carl A. Sollenger writes from Cleveland, Ohio: "At the Temple G. W. Kates and wife are doing extraordinarily well The message work of Mrs. Kates is wonderful. She has better power now than she was ever known to have before. "

Mrs. W. M. Farrow writes from Washington, D. C.: "Mrs. May A Price will end her engagement with the Temple League of Washington, D. C., May 26. Her work has been very satisfactory to the society, resulting in a well filled hall each Sunday night. The lectures were instructive and spiritual; the tests and messages always recognized by those to whom they were given. President Barrett will be with us May 26, our last meeting, and make the occasion of still greater value to all."

S. B. West writes from Elgin, Ill.: "The Progressive Research Society of Elgin is in its infancy, but with good nourishment we expect to have a strong and lusty one in the course of a short time. We have good willing workers for the cause, and that means success in the end. We had Dr. Geo. B. Warne with us on the 12th of May, and his soul-stirring talk left a lasting impression on the audience, and we hope that we can be fortunate enough to have him again in our midst in the near future. Our home message-bearer, Mrs. D. L. West, was called upon, and a good many in the audience received spiritual advice and consolation. Our officers at the present time are as follows: President, S. B. West, 317 Douglas avenue; Vice-president, Henry Overman; 563 Lillie street; Secretary, Miss Ella Widemann, 416 Jefferson avenue; Treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Cole, 62 Seneca street. All of our Spiritualistic friends will always find a good hearty welcome here.

"Rev. Alice Baker, lecturer and message medium, also Oklahoma State Spiritualist Missionary, has just finished her two months' work for the "Church of Spiritual Light," of Lawton, and left for other parts of Oklahoma to fill her engagements there. Mrs. Baker is to return the first of September to serve our church as pastor until next camp season. She has done excellent work during her stay here and we expect more during the next year's work." So writes M. Parmenter of Lawton. Okla.

There is much truth in the following paragraph written by Dr. Funk: "There is an indescribable something in the makeup of some people that wins other hearts, and in others that repels; so, for aught we know, it is with the inner world, and here may be a determining element why some men are good psychic investigators and why others are not."

Miss Ada M. Came writes from Cambridge, Mass.: "The Cambridge Spiritual Industrial Society held its regular meeting in Cambridge Lower Hall, May 10. Mrs. Katie Ham was the speaker, and entertained a large audience, who, as usual, were loud in her praise. The last meeting for the season will be held Friday, May 24, and Mrs. Ham will be the speaker. The meetings are held the second and fourth Fridays of the month in Cambridge Lower Hall, 631 Mass. ave."

Mrs. Ella Dare writes from Austin, Ill.: "The Progressive Thinker keeps steadily on the upward course, proving ever worthy of its suggestive name which stands for just as much freedom as each individual reader is able to make his own."

Mrs. Augusta Grant writes from Elkhart, Mich.: "The Elkhart Spiritual Society is glad to announce that Will J. Erwood and family have become residents of our beautiful city. Mr. Erwood has been speaker for the society three days each month since October, and our present engagement with him closes with our meeting of June 2, 3, and 4. We hope to claim a part of his time during the coming fall and winter. Mr. Erwood is a teacher of the higher philosophy, and of the science of right living, and we feel that a great work has been done here and that people are thinking as never before. Your correspondent feels that the forecast is brighter for a greater progress for the Spiritualists and liberal thinkers of Elkhart. Our thoughts often go out to those who in days past have helped and aided us in this progression by the grains of truth that have been sown. Our home workers are earnest in their search for truth and knowledge, and we hope to put forth greater efforts when we begin the fall and winter work."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Ferd C. Suhrer writes: "The regular Sunday services of the Fraternal Order held on May 12, were attended by congregations of generous proportions. Brother McDougal, president of the Psychic Research society of Rockford, provd an interesting speaker, as he is an earnest student of nature and a scientist. Our mediums were unusually successful in reading the sealed letters which called for words of praise from many visiting mediums and others. Our lunch was well patronized, as was the song service and concert in the evening. Brother McDougal's subject at 8 o'clock was on 'The Origin and Evolution of Man,' which contained many good points. We were convinced of the speaker's knowledge of his subject, by the constant flow of facts and illustrations. Brother McDougal's geniality endears him to all with whom he comes in contact. He was well pleased with our society, and did not hesitate to so express himself. We have for distribution 1,000 copies of The Progressive Thinker of May 11th, containing an article on the organization of a Fraternal Camp Association to establish in Illinois a Spiritualist camp. We have every facility and convenience for having the largest and best camp in the world. The plan as set forth in this article is easily understood, and if you have not read it, you can get a copy at our hall, 406 Ogden avenue, top floor, corner Robey street, on Sunday. This issue contains many other interesting articles from the brightest minds, making it one of the most attractive of this popular paper's editions. Do not fail to get your tickets for the 'Spiritualist Day at the Chutes.' Almost every meeting in Chicago has a supply to distribute gratis, but if you have none we can supply you. We expect fully 10,000 people to take advantage of this generous offer. Tuesday, May 28, is the day, and each one presenting a ticket at the Chutes will be given a check entitling them to a free ride on some of the concessions. Bring your lunch and have a basket picnic and enjoy the music by the band. Let us show the Chutes management that we appreciate their thoughtfulness. Plans for the furtherance of the Fraternal Camp Association will be discussed. Make your arrangements now to have a day's outing and bring the little ones, as preparations have been made to take care of them also by providing a safe wading beach and other attractions. This is the only amusement park in Chicago prohibiting the sale of liquors, dancing, and other objectionable features usually found in places of this kind, making it absolutely safe for ladies and children to attend. On Sunday, May 26, we will hold a general jubilee. Special talent is now preparing a musical program of unusal merit. The heroes who have passed to the higher life fighting for their country on land and sea will be given special attention by speakers of ability."

Mrs. Maud Ernest writes from Los Angeles, Cal.: "Mrs. Esther Dye of 1127 18th st., entertained a few of her friends in honor of two noted speakers on the Spiritualistic platform, Mrs. Mattie Hull of Whitewater, Wis., and Mrs. R. S. Lillie of Monticito, Cal. The parlors were beautifully decorated in poppies and ferns. A delicious three-course luncheon was served."

Mrs. A. A. Averill writes from Lynn, Mass.: "The Lynn Spiritualists Association will open the Summer season at Unity Camp, Saugus, Mass., on Sunday, June 2nd., continuing every Sunday to September 29. The opening Sunday will be 'Medium'sDay,' a large number of visiting mediums having promised to assist in the exercises. June 9, Mrs. Nettie H. Harding will be the speaker and Rev. Oscar A. Edgerly on the 16th and 23rd. Miss Elizabeth Harlow will be with us on July 7 and 14; Mrs. Kate H. Ham the 21st, and Rev. May S. Pepper, the 29th. Mrs. A. J. Pettengill, Dr. Edgar W. Emerson and other good talent have been engaged for later in the season. Admission to all Sunday services will be free. Collection taken. Visitors from Boston can come direct to the camp gate on the electric car without change. Refreshments will be served as in former years."

The Illinois Sunflower club will hold a teaparty on May 28, at Lincoln Hall, Fraternity Building, 70 E. Adams St. Mediums will read the cups. We expect to hold our teaparties the 4th Tuesday of each month through the Summer.

The Official Board of the Illinois State Spiritualists' Association will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. Ella Johnson Bloom, 896 Turner ave., next Thursday, May 23.

President H. D. Barrett was at Whitewater, Wis., last week, attending to official business. On Sunday last he lectured for the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, Dr. Caird, President. Large and enthusiastic audiences greeted him. He went from here to Indianapolis, Ind., and thence to Meadville, Pa., to fill engagements at both places; then on to Washington, D. C.

E. H. Thompson writes: "The Fraternal Daughters held their semi-weekly meeting Wednesday, May 15, with readings in the afternoon, and supper at 6 p. m. The evening session consisted of a short talk by Brother Weir, a Poem by Sister H. L. Lichtig, and tests by Mrs. Dr. Caird, Mrs. Knapp, Mrs. J. S. Adams, and C. T Thompson. We also held our business meeting and decided to discontinue our semi-weekly meetings at 406 Ogden avenue, and hold them the first Wednesday in each month, at the home of some member. Our next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ada M. Knapp, 1151 W. Monroe street, June 5, 2 p. m.; one of the main features of this meeting will be a 'Lemon Squeeze,' something that will please everybody. Brother Weir has offered a prize to the one who can bring in the most members into the Fraternal Daughters between now and our fall meetings. Let us all get busy. The annual due is 25 cents a year. Our meeting came to a close with a duet by our President, Mrs. Alice Sexsmith and Mrs H. L. Lichtig. Watch The Progressive Thinker, each week for our notices."

The address of Margarite Mack at the present time is 179 University avenue, Toronto, Canada.

Edward G. Janse, Secretary, writes: "At the annual meeting of the Church of the Soul, Sunday, May 5th, the secretary was instructed to extend to you on behalf of the Church, a tribute of thanks for your valuable service in the publication of the discourses of our beloved pastor, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond."

Mrs. Lizzie Beals writes of the Worcester, Mass., Association of Spiritualists: "Mrs. Emma B. Smith of Lawrence, served our society very acceptably the first and last Sundays in April. On account of illness, Rev. Julitte Yeaw of Leominster, was unable to be with us, April 14, and Mr. Fred B. Niles of Marlboro, filled her place very acceptably. April 21, Mrs. Yeaw occupied our platform. Her lectures are fine, and all well worthy of publication. Rev. F. A. Wiggin of Boston occupied our platform Friday evening, April 26, and was greeted by a large and appreciative audience. He gave a short address full of interest and instruction, followed by a seance. His communications were accurate in every particular, and all readily recognized. We hope to welcome him again to our platform in the near future. April 11, Miss Blanche H. Brainard of Lowell, gave a seance at the residence of Miss F. A. Harrington for the benefit of the Woman's Auxiliary. Monday evening, April 22, Mr. Edgar W. Emerson of Manchester, N. H., gave a benefit seance at the residence of Mrs. S. H. Prentiss. Both seances were well attended and netted a goodly sum to the treasury. In behalf of the Woman's Auxiliary, I would extend a vote of thanks to Miss Brainard, and Mr. Emerson, in grateful appreciation of their kindly services."

TO THE EDITOR:—WISHING TO ASIST IN RAISING ENOUGH MONEY TO RE-IMBURSE THE ILLINOIS STATE SPIRITUALISTS' ASSOCIATION FOR THE EXPENSES INCURRED AT SPRINGFIELD IN DEFEATING THE BILL AGAINST THE SPIRITUAL MEDIUMS, I WILL GIVE TWO PUBLIC TEST CIRCLES AT MY HOME, 181 SO. HOYNE AVE., CHICAGO, ON TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 21, AND 28. ALL SPIRITUALISTS AND FRIENDS SHOULD ATTEND THESE CIRCLES TO SHOW THEIR APPRECIATION OF THE WORK DONE BY THE STATE BOARD. ENTIRE PROCEEDS WILL BE DONATED TO THE STATE ASSOCIATION.

MRS. C. KIRCHNER.
181 SO. HOYNE AVE., CHICAGO.

Thanks, Mrs. Kirchner.—Every Medium in the State should contribute something to replenish the Treasury of the State Association. This office Contributes $25.00.

Letter From John W. Ring.

To the Editor:—Very cordial greetings from the sunny Southwest, the land of the Golden Sunset.

It has been my privilege to visit San Jose, where I attended the often reported Lyceum, conducted by Misses Merle Muntz and Linda Zink, the latter a former Galveston Lyceum girl, but now a talented musician. Here Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker and other tried workers keep the movement before the public. In Los Angeles there are several societies, each seeming to do a work especially adapted to itself. It was my privilege to serve the Truth Seekers, the Camp Meeting Association, a band of valiant workers who own a tract of land which they are improving, that it may become a center for our spiritual work.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Mary C. Vlasek, an enterprising Society holds regular meetings, including a Lyceum ((the angels bless them everyone), and a Young People's Society, of which I was kindly made honorary member. Here in Los Angeles are Mrs. Adalaide K. Brooks, Mrs. Esther Dye, Mrs Kate Hoskins, Mr. Fred Evans, State President, Arthur S. Howe and estimable wife, Mrs. M. E. G. Howe, State Secretary, John L. Dryden, and a host of good workers.

At Summerland and Santa Barbara, through the kindness of John T. and Mrs. R. S. Lillie, I met many kind and loyal friends of our cause. The power and beauty of inspiration which has possessed Mrs. Lillie for so many years remains the same, and she soon starts on her way east to proclaim the glad message of great joy. Here in San Diego, nestling between the mighty sea and lofty mountains, I have found such conditions as hold me, and I shall remain here to do my little part along with the many earnest workers for several months to come—until August, when I go (praying that our arisen Moses may attend me,) to meet the Christian Clergyman in debate.

I take this means of acquainting my friends of my whereabouts and with many good wishes to each and all. JOHN W. RING.

1431 E. St., San Diego, Cal.

The Good Work at Winnebago City, Minnesota.

To the Editor:—Last week this community was favored with some demonstrations from the Spirit realm. We have no organization here, but there are some ardent Spiritualists, who always welcome genuine talent, and appreciate the efforts of our friends in the spirit realm to educate the mortal.

Those elect ladies and genuine mediums, Mrs. Catherine McFarlin of Plainview, Minn., and Mrs. Paul Buehler, of Minneapolis, under the auspices of the State Spiritualist Association of Minnesota, came as missionaries, and we held three public meetings in the G. A. R. Hall to large, increasing, and intensely interested audiences, consisting of the best element in our city.

Mrs. McFarlin, as a medium for the presentation of the philosophy of Spiritualism, its teachings and its workings as a science, and as a religion, has few equals and no superiors. Her methods are not antagonistic to the surrounding elements, excepting so far as the truth antagonizes error, and when this is a necessary consequence there is no bitterness engendered by her manner. She was very successful in her work here.

Mrs. Buehler, the message-bearer, succeeded in reaching everyone to whom the spirit world directed their message, and all were recognized, much to the comfort of the believers and to the amusement of the skeptical. In addition to the public meetings, one parlor meeting was held at the residence of the writer, at which both mediums demonstrated their mediumship, to the great satisfaction of all present. If the State Association shall keep such workers in the field, much good will be accomplished.

ANDREW C. DUNN.
Winnebago City, Minn.

"An Infamous Dynamite Roman Catholic Conspiracy Detected and Exposed." "Romanism Exposed." Two pamphlets by Rev. J. G. White, author of "Startling Facts." Price, 10 cents each, or two for 15 cents.

KANSAS STATE CONVENTION.

The Kansas State Convention will be held in Topeka, June 7, 8 and 9. All friends invited.

A. SCOTT BLEDSOE,
215 East 7th St., Topeka, Kansas,
President.

The Temple Fund Society.

I would like to give my testimony to the value of the work which has been inaugurated, and is being carried forward by that faithful, unselfish worker, George W. Kates. His stirring appeals to Spiritualists should meet with cheerful and ready response from hearts and pocket books. This work is so palpably for the good of the many and such a large factor in the problem for extending the gospel of Spiritualism and thereby helping our fellowmen to gain a more accurate knowledge of its beautiful truths, that it should have the support of every true-hearted Spiritualist in the land.

FRANCES E. BONNEY.
Conneaut, Ohio.

TO THE EDITOR:—THE ANTI-FAKER'S LEAGUE OF THIS CITY HAS THIS DAY BEEN BEQUEATHED TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS BY A SPIRITUALIST TO HELP IN THE GOOD WORK, AND THE ANTI-FAKER'S LEAGUE HEREBY WISHES TO MAKE KNOWN TO THE WORLD THAT IT WILL GIVE TO ANY MEDIUM THE SUM OF FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS WHO WILL PRODUCE ONE BONA FIDE MATERIALIZED SPIRIT FROM THE SPIRIT WORLD.

VERY TRULY YOURS,
A. J. JACKSON.
123th Avenue, 64 South, Los Angeles, California.

Crysttola, "The Beautiful."

To the Editor: Not seeing any letter in your paper for some time from Beautiful Crystola, and as the writer is from a Southern and distant state, and is charmed with the favored location, he takes the liberty of offering a few reflections for the many readers of your valuable paper to peruse.

While the Spring has been a little later than usual, we are now enjoying fine sunshine, which, when modified by the cool mountain breezes, makes Summer ever a delight.

While the beautiful evergreens, alike in all seasons, remove the coarse appearance of the rugged hills, the babbling mountain brooks, with clear, cool and sparkling water, are ever enticing to the lover of nature.

The beautiful town site of Crystola, which is East of the Crystola depot, and has a southern slope, within plain sight of the beautiful snow capped Pike's Peak, is to be ever charming to the inhabitants, both as a health and pleasure resort.

From what the writer can learn, the development of this beautiful estate is now at hand. Progress in that line is now almost assured.

Settlers are now coming from various parts, and improvement has already begun.

Our brother and benefactor, Henry C. Childs, is always alert to the best needs of the community, and it is the wish of all present, for the co-operative development for the good of all.

For within this sphere below,
We form our future state;
Be it high or be it low,
Be it humble, be it great.

EDWIN S. BROWER.
Green Mountain Falls, Colo.

TAKE NOTICE.

Mass-Meeting of Spiritualists and Liberalists.

A New York State Mass-Meeting is to be held in the City of Buffalo, at Spiritualist Temple, corner Jersey and Prospect streets, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, May 17, 18 and 19, 1907.

Many prominent speakers and mediums, including several officers of the State Association, will take part in the meeting. A fine musical program fill be rendered at each sesion.

Each and every worker in the Spiritualist field is invited to unite with the State Association in making this will be rendered at each session.

H. W. RICHARDSON, Pres.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

Martha E., wife of William R. Hogg, passed to the higher life from her late home in San Jose, Cal., May 2. The transition came without a moment's warning, naturally. The event was a shock to the family and friends. The departed left a companion, two sons and two daughters, who are blessed with such comfort as Spiritualism alone can give them. One of the daughters possesses fine mediumistic powers. The transition services were held at Woodrow's undertaking parlors, the 5th. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. The services were conducted by the writer. Interment was at Oak Hill.

MATTIE E. HULL.

On April 25, 1907, Mrs. Ida Maude, wife of F. L. Reynolds, passed to the higher life from her home in Aberdeen, Wash. The last services of respect were held on Sunday, April 29, in the Congregational Church, the writer officiating assisted by the pastor, Rev. McDermot. Our Sister had spent but thirty-eight years on this plane, and had known more of sorrow than joy. She was one of the quiet workers in the Cause, ever ready to lend a helping hand or give a message of comfort. Garbed ever in the mantle of unselfishness, carrying the Torch of Truth into darkened places, she drew around her a host of appreciative friends. She was a native of New York, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox. A devoted husband will miss her cheering presence and influence. Her mother and a sister reside in Portland, Oregon.

EVELYN L. POMEROY.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

"Spiritual Fire Crackers, Bible Chestnuts and Political Pin Points." By J. S. Harrington. A pamphlet containing 79 pages of racy reading. Price 25 cts.

"The Truth Seeker Collection of Forms and Ceremonies for the Use of Liberals." Price, 25 cents.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.
2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.
3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.
4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.
7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.
8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.
9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.
10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.
11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.
12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.
13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of
FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.
CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary,
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM; A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 286 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights, Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

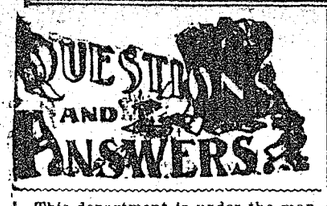
FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.



By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

H. A. Varga: Q.—I have been reading with deep interest the articles on the "unseen world," and am more than anxious to know if it is possible to so build up the constitution of my children that they will be exempt from attacks of disease germs as you say it is possible to attain a state of health that is immune. What food, medicine, and care do they require?

A.—Nothing I have ever published in The Progressive Thinker has called forth a tithe of the interest that has been awakened by the articles on the "unseen." The foregoing represents a large number of similar import. If it is possible to gain and maintain a state of health which is immune to all germs of disease, above all things this is most desirable, and if possible should be the great object of life. For health is the chief factor of success and happiness. At present, unfortunately all that enters into the achieving of such a state is not known, but we can put in practice what we do know, which will carry us a long way toward the desired result.

In the first place, the weaknesses and tendencies cannot be overcome in a single generation. These can only be partially overcome. We cannot start on anew; we have to build on the old foundation.

Aside from this spirit impress resultant of unnumbered ages of heredity, we may be assured that the physical body is like the material of which it is built. There are three sources of material for its constitution—food, water, air. The food should be balanced, that is, so diversified that there is no excess of one essential element, or want of another. The system can not assimilate such excesses, and they pass off as waste, digestion is imperfect, and bad digestion means poor material for body repairing.

This is a very important point, and to illustrate, take a food that has the exact ratio of mineral salts, nitrogen and carbon. It is all digested and assimilated. Now if twice the necessary carbon goes into it, it must either pass off as waste or be retained in fatty secretions. If there is deficiency in phosphates and mineral salts, more food must be taken—enough to supply this—or the health suffers. The extra food taken in order to gain the small quantity of phosphorus, not only is waste, but a menace to health. Hence the necessity of a mixed diet, which contains all required elements, and being governed by the desires of the appetite which normally craves what the system most demands.

Grains, fruits, nuts, vegetables, fish, some flesh, should be included in the wide list. Milk is one of the most perfect foods, while baker's bread is one of the most faulty.

To a diet of pure foods well diversified, should be added pure water, which is the universal solvent and purifier.

And last pure air. Many are afraid of it. They close the windows, and think it, especially "night air," deadly poisonous! They think cold air pure, and close up ventilation with the falling temperature. There is one rule, from which there should be no deviation, however warm or cold: Make the air in the house as nearly like that out of door as possible. Especially in sleeping rooms, the ventilation should be so perfect as to give rise to no sense of closeness on entering. During sleep the system has not the same power of resistance that it has while waking, and hence should be better protected.

I said last as to air, but there is another lastly, and this refers to light. Of all germicides and purifiers, of all the forces which invigorate life in plant or animal, light is far in the lead.

An illy ventilated room, from which the occupant often closing the blinds or curtains, passes out leaving it in darkness is an ideal place for the growth and multiplication of all forms of germs. Mildew by its odor makes its presence known as it gathers on the walls. Dampness and darkness are essential to their growth. Let in the air and sunshine and soon the room becomes safe and sweet.

Children should be allowed freedom to romp in the open air. Once used to it they will be in no danger of "taking cold." Colds are not taken in that way: they are taken in the heated foul air, of halls and rooms.

They should have exercise, some pleasant work and not overworked. If parents would see that their children formed the right habits, there would be no departure from it in after years.

With these attentions to food, air, light, activity, and well known hygienic laws, all is done that can well be. There should not be reliance on medicines. There are times and occasions when they have great value, but the prevalent idea that a physician can repair the body, as a mechanist can a machine, and that there are specific remedies for all the ills of the flesh, is one of the most erroneous and harmful.

Medicines at most can only assist nature in her restorative work, and if not correctly administered antagonize instead of help.

The conditions of health, as far as it is practical to maintain are light, all that can be secured; pure water, for the bath and drinking; and by the way, the best and most healthful "mineral water," is that which is free from mineral matter; air as fresh as that which sweeps over the fields; generous, blended food.

C. L. Blair: Q.—(1) What is the number of prisoners in the prisons of the United tSates? (2) How many are Roman Catholics, and how many belong to other sects? (3) How many Spiritualists and materialists are there?

A.—I have endeavored to gather the information required, and the partial results already published in this column. There is however, great and unexpected difficulties in the way of accurate statistics. A few of the prison records attempt to give the reby the most none is made, the excuse being that the criminals are so untruthful that such reports are valueless. In comparing the reports where the religious matter is attended to, a better reason for the omission is gained. The showing is overwhelming against the religious side. At least nine-tenths claim to have been reared under religious instruction and members of some of the sects. About one-seventh of the population of the United States are Catholics, yet there are more Catholics in the penitentiary than of any other sect—nearly as many as of all others combined.

If the statistics of this country cannot be given, those of England fortunately can be, and there can be no appreciable difference between that country and this, in the criminal record.

The Home Office last year reported that the number of prisoners in his majesty's prisons in England and Wales numbered 21,580. Of these 16,089 were Church of England, 4,397 Roman Catholics, 257 Jews, 352 Wesleyans, 8 New Methodists, 65 primitive Methodists, 5 Bible Christians, 8 United Methodists, 2 Methodist Free Church, 29 Calvinistic Methodists, 53 Congregationalists, 79 Presbyterians, 132 Baptists, 11 of the Salvation Army, 13 Unitarians,1 Quaker, 1 Plymouth Brethren, 1 Christian Brethren, 4 Greek Church, 19 Lutherans, 1 Waldensian, 3 Mohammedan and Buddhist, 22 Atheists, 26 with no religion, 1 not ascertained, and 1 SPIRITUALIST!

In Scotland by the same day's report, there were in prisons and police cells 1,724 Presbyterians, 918 Roman Catholics, 146 Episcopalians, 1 Lutheran, 5 Jews, 2,857 in all and not one Spiritualists!

These statistics appear to have been gathered with great care, and are remorseless in the evidence they furnish. It would be well for Spiritualists to preserve these figures, and hold them up when the opposition charges their Cause with being demonic and leading to imbecility and crime.

They can do this, and emphasize with the further statement, that however crowded, state prisons, penitentiaries, county and police prisons may be with those who were brought up under church institution and as Sunday School attendants, the reports, so prejudiced that they omit, the religious tendencies of the criminals, rather than publish the unpleasant showing, do not claim a single Spiritualist, within prison walls in the United States! England has one!

There is a reason for this. Spiritualism, even if only tentatively taken, leads away from selfishness and crime. Its loftly ideal is for self-centered control of the lower by the higher nature. The most remarkable feature in this movement is the spiritual tendency of those who accept it, and the quickness of its acquisition. It comes on the seeking soul, like a sunburst from a darkened sky.

Spiritual Meaning of Faith.

I observe that the several writers on your paper when they have occasion to speak of Faith do so, using the material or earthward definition and meaning, instead of the spiritual meaning, though they may be using the term in reference to spiritual things, in which case confidence would be a better word.

Whenever Jesus used the word he always, or very nearly always, used it in regard to interior or spiritual conditions and things; and when Saint Paul gave his memorable definition of the word, he had entire reference to spiritual conditions. The statement "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen," has in it no hint or suggestion of earthly things. Then when spirits on a high plane take up the idea and go further they state, as I have heard them, "Faith is the conscious conviction of internal Truth," and discourse upon it with that understanding in the foreground at all times; and when the discourse comes from a still higher plane of spiritual vibrations the statement comes "Faith is the intuitive perception of the trend of the creator's design to establish results," the soul thus being in a condition of faith-vibrations so that it will have perfect confidence that the perceived results will be established; if then the faith is to become such as to "remove mountains," it will do so by arising into the vibrations of the Creator's will, that is competent to remove mountains, and act in accord therewith.

Again upon a still higher plane of soul appreciation, faith becomes the soul's knowledge of the Creator's established designs, which are thus merged in destiny, and a soul thus developed can stand upon the key-stone of the arch of time, one side of which has its foundation builded in the eternal past and the other in the eternal future, and from that standpoint in the eternal now, it can recognize the established designs of the future, with the same confidence that it recalls, in review, the recorded facts of the past, thus is unfolded its prophetic vision.

E. R. ROCKWOOD.

Fruitvale, Cal.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies." A Review of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated articles upon Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

GOOD RESULTS ACCOMPLISHED.

Status and Work of the California State Spiritualist Association.

The California State Spiritualist Association has been, and still is, at work for the grand truths of Spiritualism, as an organized movement. Mass meetings have been held throughout the southern part of the State as follows: Two in Los Angeles of one day each, a three days' meeting at San Diego, 120 miles south of Los Angeles, where the 1st Society own a beautiful temple; an all day meeting at San Pedro, 30 miles south; two days' meeting at San Bernardino, 60 miles east. Every one of these meetings was attended by from three to five members of the State board, and they were a grand success in every place, not only financially but as an added strength to the local society visited.

On March 31, the local societies of San Francisco united in a grand union meeting for the benefit of the State work. Over $40 was raised. Other societies are planning for from one to three days' session in the different parts of this enormous State. The expenses of the mass meetings are contributed by the local society donating place of meeting free, and where meals are served, free to the officers and talent present. The expense of advertising, circulation of dodgers or cards, printing of programs, and badges, and actual R. R. expense of talent, is taken from proceeds of meeting. None of the officers of the State Association, or speakers and message bearers ask remuneration for their work.

This plan has brought excellent results, larger attendance, and greater interest in the work is manifested in every city, visited and our cause is more clearly placed before the general public, by our best workers.

Five societies have asked for charters since our State Convention in September last, making a total of 41 now on our list, with nearly all of them in good working order. We hope to have at least five more before our next convention. We have now chartered with our State Association six lyceums, seven Ladies' Auxiliaries, two camp meetings and four temple buildings, with two more being planned for.

While it is to be regretted that not all good Spiritualists in California are interested in the organized movement, and that many are complaining of non-recognition, those who have united are reaping the benefit and protection of the same, and with a greater systematic co-operation, much more could be accomplished.

Members of other State Associations and Auxiliaries should register with the State Secretary, J. L. Dryden, 323 Temple St., Los Angeles, and have their papers endorsed and proper introduction, to the Societies in California, could then be made, no matter where located. Most of the societies in California, place only those on their platform who are local workers affiliated in their respective cities, or those who hold papers, endorsed by the State Secretary.

This we have found has been the best means of preventing those who worked for self alone, and never would join a work for organization, from taking the place of those whose every effort was for the upbuilding of the same; as well as the tramp medium and speaker who may be a good speaker and medium, but whose moral living is not such that as an organized religious body, we can point to with pride, and honor for our most worthy cause. I will acquaint your readers from time to time.

MRS. M. E. G. HOWE.

Los Angeles, Cal.

PERTINENT QUERIES.

Searching for More Light on Some Important Subjects.

I read with much interest Mr. Barrett's views of Dr. Hidden's address as published in The Progressive Thinker, and wish to ask the writer to explain a few points that seem to be obscure in his otherwise most excellent article. He says, "No intelligent Spiritualist presumes to claim that psychic phenomena or demonstrations prove the immortality of the soul. They assert with truth that such phenomena only prove that men and women as intelligent entities survive the change called death. No living being can prove the soul's immortality until it can be shown that at least one intelligent entity has lived eternally. This is a mathematical impossibility."

That is a truth well stated. Then follows this statement which I ask Brother Barrett to subject to the same test and report results:

"Spiritualism does however affirm the eternality of God, and declares that man is the child of God, hence is as old and will continue to live as long as his parent lives."

I want proof first that there is a God. I have been looking for it ever since I tried to give such proof to a man soon after I became a Spiritualist, and utterly failed. I have never tried it since. I have heard others make the same signal failure, that did not seem to know it. I do not say there is no God. There may be one or many as some believe. I have no proof of any.

Second, I want him to explain how "man being a child of God is as old and will live as long as his parent lives." Judging the unknown by the known, we would scarcely conclude a child would be as old as his parent and live exactly the same length of time.

Perhaps I can not see the point for lack of intelligence, as we are told "To all intelligent Spiritualists Spiritualism is a religion."

I have been a Spiritualist over half a century, but have always held the opinion that Spiritualism being a demonstrated fact was a science upon which is based a philosophy of life and a great world movement for the betterment of mankind here and now, as the basis of a higher, more developed condition in the life beyond.

To me it is not a religion but a great all-inclusive philosophy based upon scientific date; and I deplore the tendency of late to make of it another religious denomination with the forms, ceremonials and superstitious beliefs of the past that I had fondly hoped we had outgrown.

JULIET H. SEVERANCE, M. D.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 25 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

THE DEMAND OF THE HOUR.

Concerning Legislative and Other Action Against Frauds in Spiritualism.

It has been deemed very urgent to invoke the aid of legislation for the framing of adequate laws for the suppression of the glaring fraud which is constantly perpetrated and flourishing under the cloak of Spiritualism and mediumship? In consequence thereof its many interested factions are in lively commotion as to what will the outcome be? Where will the line be drawn, if any? If mediums are doomed to suppression then all will suffer alike; and if they are licensed, then the frauds will thrive all the better under such protection. In fact, this is their present aim and effort; they clamor for a high license, for the sole purpose to drive the honest mediums out; as they cannot compete with the frauds, they could not afford to pay such license and would be forced to clear the field.

It is a lamentable fact that the frauds are the best patronized, and fairly Honized, not alone by the ignorant, silly-gullies among the poor, but more often by the highly intelligent of the fashionable society, because they can give them such stunning tests and readings, of positive facts and information about their own personality which the great fake by means of divers tricks and his system of espionage, was able to gather beforehand.

It is difficult to see how even the honest medium can claim immunity from taxation on the ground of religious freedom, for, while the science and true philosophy of Spiritualism would justify such a claim, yet much of its current literature and platform orations seem not calculated to uphold such a claim, and it would not be fair now, in the hour of trial, to seek shelter under the cloak of religion, by the alarmingly large numbers of honest Spiritualists who ignorantly or otherwise have openly denounced religion, as undignifying, degrading and slavish. Nor would it seem just or desirable to table the bill or bills now pending consideration in Springfield, and thereby leave the whole matter in its present deplorable and deteriorating condition.

The question is now, What can be done about it? The answer was given over a year ago through The Progressive Thinker: "If Spiritualists will not clean out the frauds in their own ranks, outsiders will some day do it for them in a way that they will not like at all."

While astrology, palmistry and card-reading are included in the bills in question, they have really nothing in common with mediumship or Spiritualism. They are simply sciences travestied and exploited by a class of smattering impostors whose unmitigated nerve is their only stock in trade; many of them with the prefix "Rev." or "Prof." to an assumed name. I have in mind one who had posed for years among us as the best all-around medium, and despite his revocation of ordination for shameful conduct, he draws big crowds. He boasted in private of being the biggest fraud in town, and that the people cannot get along without him; and to judge by his crowded meetings it seems to be a fact.

He has still the "Prof." prefixed to his name, painted in large gold letters on his front windows, though he may not wish to have it known that the title was conferred upon him by the demi-monde in a sporting house, where he had been a regular inmate.

Neither of those mentioned above, nor the professional boosters of professional fakes and their incorrigible victims, nor the real medium who is such for revenue only, could hardly claim religious toleration under Spiritualism.

The pretentious and glaring promises as advertised by many of the above type, without restraint or control by the authorities, in newspapers, magazines, circulars and handbills, which on their very face bear the stamp of fraud, and with which the country is flooded, has opened a wide field for their operation. This is a point for our law-makers to consider and for our lobbying friends to push.

The City and State authorities are willing and even anxious to rid us of the frauds, provided we furnish the evidence, in other words, co-operate with them. And it should not be difficult to establish a Volunteer Bureau of Justice, with a few volunteer detectives to assist the City or State officers. It is safe to say that a few convictions only will spread consternation among the rest of the fakes, and they will quit or move out.

Whatever the legislature will do, let the honest Spiritualists and mediums wake up and do their duty. The sooner you do it the better it will be.

G. A. WOLTER.

A Prominent Spiritualist and Humanitarian Passed to Spirit Life.

Cyrus Avery, for many years well known in Chicago where he resided, as a Spiritualist, passed to spirit life May 6th, 1907, aged 81 years, 4 months and 27 days.

The writer has known Mr. Avery about 25 years. He was a quiet unassuming man. In the early years of his life he affiliated with the Presbyterian Church. He was a man who deeply sympathized with the unfortunate and was ever planning and doing something to assist them. For many years he resided in Erie, Pa., where he conducted Sunday services in the City Jail, striving to point the way to its prisoners by which they might make a new start in life. Into this work he threw all his energy. His experience in it made him realize how ineffectual were the orthodox creeds in helping those who most needed material, moral and spiritual aid. His whole life was modeled on the Golden Rule, and he unfolded into Spiritualism naturally because of the larger ideals of human destiny suggested by its teachings. The primary thought that animated him was to do to others as he would have them do to him. This principle led him and made him a devoted husband, a loving father and a true brother to all of his kind.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer in the Chapel of Graceland Cemetery, and his remains, in accordance with his wishes, were cremated, Thursday, May 9th, 1907. The services were attended by a large circle of relatives and friends.

DR. J. H. RANDALL.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

SPIRITUALISM IS NATURAL LAW.

E. W. Sprague Preaches It As Conforming to Natural Science—Wireless Telegraphy Prepares the Mind for the Reception of Truth of Telepathy—Expert Science to Develop a Way by Which the Physical Eye May See Spiritual Bodies.

An interested audience heard Wednesday evening's lecture by E. W. Sprague, in the Odd Fellows' temple, on Spiritualism, and the subject was ably handled. Mr. Sprague made a forceful argument to show that Spiritualism holds to natural science. He affirmed that Spiritualism was the only religion which corresponds with science and can demonstrate its own claims, and that one of its cardinal teachings is that there are no miracles, but that all things happen in accord with natural law.

The new discoveries of science are leading the people to understand the truth of psychic facts. Wireless telegraphy prepares the mind for the reception of the truth of telepathy. As two instruments out of a large number may be so attuned to one another that messages may be transmitted and received without affecting any of the other instruments, so two minds may stand in such relation to each other as to be open to telepathic communication. The X-ray, which has enabled me to see a jack-knife and a silver dollar through a quarter-inch steel plate and a hemlock plank, is clairvoyance; for the X-ray is nothing more than mechanical clairvoyance. There will no doubt be discovered before long a new way by means of which we may see with our physical eyes the spiritual bodies of departed friends.

Mental clairvoyance or the X-ray of the mind is a sense which has been possessed by most of the world's seers and prophets. It was prominent in Zarathustra, Jesus, Joan of Arc and Swedenborg, and by means of this sense men may perceive the spirits of the departed.

Spiritualism is scientific because every phase of mediumship works in accord with natural law. If a stand tips independently and intelligently answers questions we know that this thing is true though we are as yet unable to tell how it is done any more than we can tell how light illuminates the atmosphere, or how the mind thinks. We can demonstrate many things without knowing just how it is done; and any fact is simply a thing which can be demonstrated, while science is the sum of demonstrated fact.

Spiritualism teaches that truth is the savior of the race. It develops gifts not found in any other religion. It does not belong to any sect or creed but it is the heritage of the whole of humanity.

The lecture was followed by platform tests given by Mrs. Sprague which were exceptionally good.

Two lectures, followed by spirit messages, will be given next Sunday in the Odd Fellows' temple at 10:45 a. m. and at 7:45 o'clock in the evening.

CO-OPERATION AND BROTHERHOOD.

"We Must Establish Harmony in Our Industrial Relations, Before We Can Hope to Have the Best in Human Life."

To the Editor:—Spiritualism, or the agency of intercourse between the world material, so-called, and the world spiritual, cannot do its perfect work under conditions of strife and competition.

Co-operation and brotherhood in the multifarious affairs of human life must be established before we can hope to have pure and incorruptible relations with our friends in this or the other sphere of life.

While the conditions obtain in which sham and shoddy can only be purchased in the industrial sphere of life, there will be fraud and shoddy palmed off on a needy world as the genuine commodity from the celestial sphere.

Hence, I desire to remind you and a waiting world, that the best way to work for the grand consummation of the ages, the era of universal illumination, "when no man shall say to his neighbor, know the Lord," but when all shall know him from the least to the greatest, is to do away with those conditions of common life which darken the understanding and corrupt the products of industrial life. In an age of commercialism, when a man can make profits and gain material advantage by palming off on his customers sham and shoddy, we must expect to find hypocrisy in the pulpit and fraud in the manifestations in which all classes work for a living, we are only surprised that there are so little sham and shoddy, hypocrisy and fraud.

I am a Minister of the Gospel of Co-operation and Brotherhood in the affairs of common life, and I preach that we should work together as loving members of one family in our efforts to provide the necessaries of life, which include food, clothing and shelter, and the bread of God which feeds and satisfies the soul of man.

In working to promote co-operative manufacture—the manufacture of clothes, for instance, by machines owned by the people who wear the clothes—we tap the stream of co-operation at its fountain, and drink of the pure waters of life, and wear no more shoddy, and have left competition and corruption, and have "come out of great tribulations and have cleansed our robes and manufacture them out of the pure fleece of the lamb."

We rejoice to know that thousands are now enjoying the benefits of this co-operative work, and it will not be long, judging from the way the membership is growing, when the hundred and forty-four thousand will be sealed. And with a large membership scattered all over the United States, wearing pure fleece clothes at less than half the retail price, the membership will speedily become "the great multitude which no man can number."

We must establish harmony in our industrial relations. We must change the formula from "the survival of the fightest," to "the survival of the best," before we can hope to have the best in human life as the natural product of the forces of life.

Those wishing to know more about the benefits of co-operative work and participate in them, and live without fighting in providing necessaries, may command me to furnish the evidence.

REV. T. W. WOODROW.

Crystola, Green Mountain Falls, Col.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.

By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two hundred illustrations. Cloth, $2.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

MARY ANNE CAREW.—By Carlyle Petersilea. Price, $1.00.

MEDIUMSHIP AND ITS LAWS.—A most valuable book, by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents.

MEDIUMSHIP AND ITS DEVELOPMENT, and How to Mesmerize to Assist Development.—An every-day useful instructor in Psychic Science. By W. H. Bach. Price, 25 cents.

MOLLIE FANCHER, or the Brooklyn Enigma.—Giving an account of the most marvelous case of spirit control on record. By Judge Abraham H. Dailey. Price, $1.50.

MORALITY WITHOUT GOD.—By M. M. Mangasarian. Price, 10 cents.

MYSTERIES OF THE SEANCE, or Tricks and Traps of Bogus Mediums.—By a life-long Spiritualist. Being an expose of how fraudulent mediums perform their tricks. Price, paper, 25 cents.

MYTH OF THE GREAT DELUGE.—A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. A very interesting pamphlet. By Jas. M. McCann. Price 15 cents.

NATURE CURE.—This is an excellent book for suffering humanity. It simply tells how to prevent and cure the ills of the flesh in a natural way. By Drs. M. E. and Rosa C. Conger Price, cloth, fancy, $2.; common $1.50.

NEW TESTAMENT STORIES COMICALLY ILLUSTRATED.—By Watson Heston. Price, cloth, $1.50; board cover, $1.00.

NO BEGINNINGS.—By W. P. Maple. Price 75 cents.

OBSESSION.—How evil spirits influence mortals, and how to guard against the same. A very necessary and interesting study for sensitives. By M. Faraday. 23 pages; price, 10 cents.

OCEANIDES.—A story of spirit life, by Carlyle Petersilea. Price, paper cover only, 50 cents.

OLD TESTAMENT STORIES.—By Watson Heston. Price, boards, $1.00; cloth, $1.50.

ORIGIN OF SPECIES.—By Charles Darwin. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

OUR CHILDREN.—Hints from Practical experience for parents and teachers. By Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS INTO THE LIGHT.—This little book will be read with intense interest by thousands. By Samuel Bowles; Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing medium. Price 25 cents.

OUR BIBLE, WHO WROTE IT? and a Few Thoughts on Other Bibles.—By Moses Hull. Price, $1.00.

PAST AND PRESENT.—By Thomas Carlyle. Price, 50 cents.

PERFECT MOTHERHOOD, or Mabel Raymond's Resolve.—Dedicated to woman everywhere, that children may cease to be born accursed. By Lois Waisbroker. Price, cloth, $1.00.

PHILIP CARLISLE.—By Carlyle Petersilea. Price, $1.10.

PALMISTRY.—By Comte de Saint Germain, A. B., L. L. M. Practical palmistry, or hand reading simplified. Price, 75 cents.

PEARLS.—Brave thoughts from brave minds. Selected and arranged by M. M. Mangasarian; 75 pages, neatly bound. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth 35 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF PHENOMENA.—Physical and Metaphysical. Matter phenomena and life phenomena. Objective and subjective phenomena. Hyperbole metaphysical. By Geo. M. Ramsey, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.00.

PIONEERS OF PROGRESS.—Dr. T. A. Bland. Price, $1.00.

POEMS OF PASSION.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

POEMS OF POWER.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

POLITICAL WORKS OF THOMAS PAINE.—Containing the three volumes, "Common Sense," "The Crisis," and "Rights of Man," three volumes in one. Just the book for patriotic Americans. Price, cloth, $1.00.

POWER OF SELF-FORMATION.—By Leroy Berrier. In two styles of binding; paper cover, 50 cents; cloth cover, 80 cents.

PRACTICAL BUNGALOWS AND COTTAGES for Town and Country.—By Fred T. Hodgson. Price, $1.00.

PRACTICAL METHODS FOR SELF-DEVELOPMENT.—Spiritual, Mental, Physical. By Elizabeth Towne. Price, $1.00.

PRACTICAL METHODS TO INSURE SUCCESS.—A valuable little work, full of practical instruction in matters pertaining to the physical, mental and spiritual health. Worth many times its cost. Price, 10 cents.

PSYCHIC RIDDLE, THE.—By I. K. Funk, D. D., LL.D. A book full of psychic suggestion. Price, $1.00 in cloth.

PROPHETS OF ISRAEL.—Comprises in the main popular sketches from Old Testament History. By Carl H. Cornill, Doctor of Theology and Professor of Old Testament History. Price, 25 cents.

PSYCHIC LIGHT.—Continuity of Law and Life.—By Maud Lord Drake. This book is from the pen of an acknowledged leader in psychic philosophy and a successful demonstrator of its phenomena and one of the oldest advocates of New Thought and Higher Education. Cloth bound; price, $1.50.

PSYCHOMETRY.—Its Science and Law of Unfoldment.—By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 50 cents.

PULPIT, PEW AND CRADLE.—Second paragraph in book, last two lines reads "Christianity is one thing for grown men. It is quite another thing for women and children. By Helen H. Gardner. Price, 10 cents.

RADIANT ENERGY AND ITS ANALYSIS.—Its Relation to Modern Astro-Physics.—By Prof. Edgar L. Larkin, director of Lowe Observatory. Containing numerous illustrations and diagrams. Price, $1.75.

RATIONAL MEMORY TRAINING.—By Rev. B. F. Austin. Price, 50 cents.

REALIZATION.—A course of lessons upon the "Inner Nature of the Self." By Loraine Follett. Price, 50 cents.

REINCARNATION.—By Walker and Wood.—Price, leatherette, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

REINCARNATION, or the Doctrine of the Soul's Successive Embodiments. Examined and discussed pro and con by Dr. J. M. Peebles, versus Dr. Helen Densmore and W. J. Colville. Paper cover; price, 30 cents.

RELATION OF THE SPIRITUAL TO THE MATERIAL UNIVERSE, and the Law of Control.—New edition, enlarged and revised and greatly improved. By M. Faraday. Price, 15 cents.

RELIGIOUS AND THEOLOGICAL WORKS OF THOMAS PAINE.—Here is a book that should be in the library of every Spiritualist and Freethinker in the land. Price, cloth, $1.00.

RELIGION.—A profound philosophical treatise on this world-wide subject of contention. It is a good book for students preparing for the spiritual rostrum. By E. D. Babbitt. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

RESEARCHES INTO THE PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM.—By Sir William Crookes. Illustrated. Price, 50 cents.

RIGHT LIVING.—This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long felt want of an ethical text-book adapted to the comprehension of children. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, cloth, $1.00.

RIGHTS OF MAN.—Being an answer to Mr. Burke's attack upon the French Revolution. By Thomas Paine. 276 pages. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

ROMANCE OF TWO WORLDS.—By Marie Corelli. Price, 50 cents.

SCHOPENHAUER'S ESSAYS.—Translated by T. B. Saunders. Price, 75 cents.

SCIENCE AND A FUTURE LIFE.—By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price, postpaid, $1.60.

SCIENCE OF SPIRIT RETURN.—By one of the scientific minds of The Progressive Thinker corps of contributors. Rich with profound thought. By Chas. Dawbarn. Price, 10 cents.

SIX HISTORIC AMERICANS.—By John E. Remsburg. Price, $125.

SIXTH AND SEVENTH BOOK OF MOSES.—Translated from the ancient Hebrew. Price, $1.00.

SOCIAL UPBUILDING, including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price, paper, 15 cents.

SOME GLIMPSES OF OCCULTISM, ANCIENT AND MODERN.—A series of lectures by C. W. Leadbeater. Price, $1.50.

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.—By Mattie E. Hull, containing 38 songs. Price, 10 cents each, or $7.00 per hundred.

STARTLING DEEDS OF DARKNESS DISCLOSED, Relative to Auricular Confession, and Its Relation to Sacerdotal Celibacy, Convents, Monasteries, Morality, and Civil and Religious Liberty.—By Rev. J. G. White. Price, 75 cents.

STUDIES IN THE OUTLYING FIELD OF PSYCHIC SCIENCE.—How to investigate, form circles and develop mediumship. A test of genuine mediumship. By Hudson Tuttle. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

SUPERSTITION IN ALL AGES, or "Le Bons Sens." Testimony of a Catholic priest who abjured the Christian religion and asked God's pardon for having taught it. Price, cloth, $1; postage, 14 cents.

TALLEYRAND'S LETTER TO THE POPE.—This work will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. Price 25 cents.

TEACHINGS OF JESUS, Not Adapted to Modern Civilization.—With the true character of Mary Magdalene. A book full of truth. By Geo. W. Brown, M. D. Price, 15 cents.

TEN COMMANDMENTS ANALYZED. By W. H. Bach. Price 25 cents.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.—A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. A splendid work by the seer and philosopher, Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

THE ARISTOCRACY OF HEALTH.—A study of Physical Culture, and Our Favorite Poisons. A masterly work on the subject, by the gifted writer, Mrs. Mary Foote Henderson. Price, $1.50.

THE A, B, Z, OF OUR OWN NUTRITION.—An excellent work and guide to perfect health. By Horace Fletcher. Price, $1.00.

THE CANDLE FROM UNDER THE BUSHEL, or Thirteen Hundred and Six Questions to the Clergy.—Nuts that are hard for them to crack. An interesting book. By Wm. Heart. Price, 40 cents.

THE CONSTITUTION OF MAN.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 cents.

THE CRISIS.—By Thomas Paine. Price, 25 cents.

THE DEMONISM OF THE AGES.—Spirit Obsessions so Common in Spiritism, Oriental and Occidental Occultism. By J. M. Peebles. Cloth bound. Price, $1; postage, 10 cents.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SPIRIT—After Transition.—The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. By the late M. Faraday. Price, 10 cents.

THE DIVINE PEDIGREE OF MAN, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God.—By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price, $1.50.

THE DREAM CHILD.—Reads like an inspiration. Treating clearly upon the laws of affinity, love and the attendant pain and sorrow invariably experienced therewith. By Florence Huntley. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE CHRIST IDEA.—By Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

THE FAIRY LAND OF SCIENCE.—This beautiful book fills a niche in the hearts of the young people. Lyceum Library Literature. By Arabella B. Buckley. Price, 50 cents.

THE GREAT PSYCHOLOGICAL CRIME, which claims that subjective mediumship is injurious, is edited by Florence Huntley, author of "The Dream Child" and "Harmonics of Evolution." Price, $2.00.

THE GREATEST THING EVER KNOWN.—A dainty, helpful book. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, 35 cents.

THE GREAT WORK.—The Constructive Principle or Nature in Individual Life. By the Author of "The Great Psychological Crime." Price, $2.00.

THE IDEA OF GOD.—By Dr. Paul Carus. Fourth edition. 32 pages. "An effort to purify our idea of God that it may be greater, sublimer, and more awe-inspiring to future generations than it has ever been yet."—Literary World, London. Paper cover, 15 cents.

THE KINGSHIP OF SELF-CONTROL. Full of most helpful ideas, and bound in white covers with pretty floral design. By William George Jordan. Price, 30 cents.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—By Ernest Renan. Translated from the original French. Price, cloth, gilt top, 75 cents.

THE LIFE RADIANT.—For everyone in every walk of life. By Lilian Whiting. Cloth binding. Price, $1.00.

THE LIVING DECALOGUE.—From Sinai to Zion.—By W. J. Colville. Price, 50 cents.

THE MOLECULAR HYPOTHESIS OF NATURE.—Demonstrates the continuity of life and our environment of spiritual influences. Free from all theories of superstition. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Price, 25 cents.

THE LOVER'S WORLD.—A Wheel of Life.—Treating on the subjects of love, marriage and parenthood. By Dr. Alice B. Stockham. "The Lover's World, garnered sheaves from the wisdom of books and life's experiences, is now returned to the heart of humanity." Price, silk cloth, $2.25.

THE MAJESTY OF CALMNESS.—By William George Jordan. Price, 30 cents.

THE MYSTIC THESAURUS.—By Willis F. Whitehead. Leatherette. Price, $1.00.

THE NEW LIFE.—By Leroy Berrier. Price, 50 cents.

THE PRIEST, THE WOMAN AND THE CONFESSIONAL.—This is a most valuable book. It comes from an ex-priest, whose character is above reproach. By Father Chiniquy. Price Important Question.

Will Spiritualism Continue to Exist as an Organization?

A question which is ever recurring to the thoughtful mind is that one of the continued existence of Spiritualism as a corporate body. To find a correct answer to such a question is in our judgment not altogether an easy task; yet it is possible from the trend of events within the Spiritualist ranks to prophesy with some degree of certainty just what the ultimate must inevitably be unless some kind of change speedily takes place.

In the early days of Modern Spirit Manifestations, organization was not thought of as a concrete question; in the abstract it may have been considered as a possible event. Early Spiritualism presented to the world a distinct message in the demonstration of unusual phenomena, irrespective of the religious beliefs of the people who were the agents of its manifestations. It had little or no philosophy. The understanding of the great truths underlying these phenomenal manifestations was not realized by the great majority of its votaries. However, as its messages became more distinct and its teachings (mostly in opposition to the misty creeds and dogmas of Christendom) were received, the need for organization became apparent. The churches were violently opposed to the new gospel, and endeavored to crush the growing child of a new humanity and an honest divinity. To protect themselves from unjust laws and the persecution of an effete religion, Spiritualists all over the States had to join hands and incorporate themselves into an organized unit. Freedom to think for themselves and to worship according to their own ideas was obtained by legal status.

Dark clouds swept over the glorious horizon of Spiritualism, and for a time its message was obscured by the immoral practices of its so-called exponents. Some thought the movement would never recover from the miasma and the incubus of the foul practices committed under the sacred name of Spiritualism, but such were mistaken. The mighty truth of spirit communion could not be so easily crushed, its import was of too great moment to the world to be allowed to remain long under the damning weight that men put upon it. For the last twenty-five years it has made steady progress, and to-day it stands respected more or less in common with other religious systems.

Some, not very wisely, have made a great deal of the various frauds masquerading under the guise of Spiritualist mediums. They continue to hunt down, expose and execrate fraudulent mediums, but they never really get to the fundamental cause of the existence of such frauds, and give the needed remedy.

The serious condition now existing inside the organized movement is calling loudly for adjustment. Frauds constitute a very minor portion of this serious conditions of affairs which we are now going to lay bare. The surgeon's knife is sometimes necessary, particularly if mortification has set in, and though the operation be temporarily severe, yet if we save a life by such severity, then let us have the operation by all means.

One of the most important issues to be considered in relation to the adjustment of our organized work on an equitable basis, is the question of calling ourselves a religious organization; yet we call it the gospel of Spiritualism, are incorporated as a religious body of people and enjoy all the usages and privileges that are accorded to other religious denominations. The worker in the Spiritualist ranks has two great sections to reconcile—that of the phenomenal Spiritualist, and that of the religious philosopher.

One claims that Spiritualism is not a religion, but is simply a demonstration of a fact in nature, does not require to be organized, and if organized cannot be called a religion. The other side holds that organization is essential to the protection and growth of pure Spiritualism, and that is man is naturally a religious being, and that this part of his nature requires to be constantly built up through religious and ethical instruction. The non-religious Spiritualist we have found usually densely ignorant as to true nature and meaning of religions, and therefore intensely bigoted when any reference is made to that aspect of the question. Pure and true religion, which was of the soul, never injured mankind or hindered the advancement of the world, for the nature of pure religion is humanitarian, not sectarian.

Our interpretation of religion may be ever so far astray and our practice unworthy of emulation, but however far we may wander from the true path of religion does not alter the usefulness and power of its moral and ethical standard.

The corruption that has existed and yet exists in the Spiritualist ranks is a clear evidence of the lack of the application of pure religious principles to the life. To lower the standard of the Spiritualist message to the dead level of purely materialistic phenomena and intellectual philosophical sophistry, would be to invite disaster in a very short time.

We have kept out of our ranks the religious and spiritual type of mind to a great extent through our lack of due presentation and appreciation of this aspect of our work. So materialistic and selfish have we become, that the man who directs that attention of the people to the cultivation of his higher nature is considered orthodox, and not a true Spiritualist; yet we welcome the political element in the form of Socialism, and in a number of cases our conferences and society work have developed into a purely political socialistic effort. Abstract social and economical questions are entitled to be discussed in our meetings, but concrete political party questions are best left outside; with them we as an organization have nothing whatever in common.

It would seem as if all the "flotsam and jetsam" of life drifted into the Spiritualist societies and made up a heterogeneous multitude which nothing definite could be made out of.

Societies are organized and go along for a time, and then they become indifferent or get quarrelsome and gradually go to pieces. They subscribe to nothing, take no vows as to the performance of duty; in fact there is no religious backbone, and the fear of hell being eliminated, we become careless and selfish.

The missionary spirit is practically dead abong us. The grand old enthusiasm of the early pioneer days has to a great extent practically disappeared, and we sit rusting amidst the trophies of the past.

We are continually meeting "half-baked mediums" whose ignorance is only equaled by their conceit; who are held in bondage through the influence of undeveloped spirits, and rarely if ever attend the instructional courses given by the different public workers along the lines of Spiritual unfoldment.

What are we going to build the future of Spiritualism upon? We do not produce from among ourselves those cultured, educated psychics whom the advanced intelligences consider it a pleasure as well as a privilege to co-operate with.

Is there anything inside our organized work to induce the brainy, intelligent, cultured mind of the outside world to enter our ranks and devote himself or herself to the advancement of Spiritualism? Let us be practical for once in our lives; perchance we may never condescend that way again.

Can we as an organized movement ever hope to instruct our people, build up our societies and keep together the necessary machinery of our organization except on an eminently practical basis?

People of ability need inducements in the way of financial support, encouragement and conditions in which to do their best work. Are we going to remain behind in the advance movements of to-day because we were either too lazy or too ignorant to organize our forces properly? Or are we going to build up our work on a sound financial and practical basis, so that we can attract and hold the best of human thinkers within our ranks, or are we going to allow our ship to drift down stream without helm or compass, to be dashed to pieces on the rocks?

The future of our Spiritualism as an organized unit will depend on our present action, and woe betide us if we let the child of our care grow up wild and untrained, a wholly disorganized and impracticable thing, driftwood on the current of human life.

Our National body should be endowed with sufficient of the sinews of war in the shape of the dollar so as to be able to have its own training colleges and to be able to build their own temples. The work of the different States should be under the direct care and jurisdiction of the N. S. A. The present haphazard and unsatisfactory methods of ordaining workers and organizing societies is highly detrimental to the future welfare of our cause. The N. S. A. should supply the different societies with their own specially trained workers, and see that these workers are properly cared for financially. Societies requiring aid to build temples should receive such aid after due consideration from the N. S. A. Temple Fund; but they should be directly under the paternal care of the headquarters association. It should be seriously taken into consideration, the advisability of dispensing with the president of societies officiating at the public meetings of such societies, other than board meetings, the resident speaker being duly qualified to perform all the necessary duties.

We should distinctly stand before the people as a religious organization, and we should demand from members of our societies adherence to some statement of principle as well as to some standard of morality. Avowed free-lovers, living in the practice of this abomination, should not be permitted to the close fellowship and association of full membership in any society; neither should we permit on our rostrums workers of this type. Don't complain about the lack of respect and consideration that the outside world metes out to us, but begin and "clean house." When we as a people respect ourselves, our organized work and our ordained representatives, then the world will respect and honor us. First have an organization worthy of respect; have representatives of our movement worthy of respect, and present to the world a whole-souled religion, and we will then need to have fear of nothing, but will be able to look all the world square in the eye.

Spiritualism is yet in its infancy; it has lots of time to grow, but we must lay the foundations solid now, so that its future growth will be on a sound practical basis, without the danger of collapsing at the first break of a storm. It rests with the individual unit who professes to be a Spiritualist to do something practical for his cause. Stop grumbling, you who have never yet put your shoulder to the wheel of our spiritual movement and help it on just a little! Stop dreaming about the "home over there," and the kingdom of heaven sometime in the future. Realize that here and now is the place and time to build. Your future heavenly home, that heaven is within ourselves and grows as the resultant of persistent effort, the continual doing of good in the now of our existence.

We expect, many of us, to clasp hands with our loved ones when we cross over the border between the two worlds, and forget that they have been actively working and progressing through strong humanitarian effort, while we have been selfishly sitting still, dreaming of an unrealistic future.

The message from our loved ones just across the way is to be up and doing with a heart for any fate. To dream less and to work more will surely bring the kingdom of heaven nearer to us all. Some of us will surely be disappointed when we "get over there," because of our many wasted opportunities and the workings of conscience which will then beset us, will be hell enough without any old-fashioned brimstone added in.

DAVID A. LEISK.

San Diego, Cal.

HAECKEL'S LAST WORDS ON EVOLUTION.

A popular retrospect and summary. By Ernst Haeckel, Professor at Jena University. Translated from the second edition by Joseph McCabe. With three plates and Haeckel's latest portrait. Price, cloth, $1.00 net.

CONTENTS:—Introduction. Preface. Chapter I. —The Controversy about Creation; Evolution and Dogma; Plate I; Genealogical Tree of the Vertebrates. Chapter II.—The Struggle over our Genealogical Tree; Our Ape Relatives and the Vertebrate-Stem; Plate II.; Skeletons of Five Anthropoid Apes. Chapter III.—The Controversy over the Soul; The Ideos of Immortality and God; Plate III.; Embryos of Three Mammals. Appendix.—Evolutionary Tables; Geological Ages and Periods; Man's Genealogical Tree—First Half; Man's Genealogical Tree—Second Half; Classification of the Primates; Genealogical Tree of the Primates; Explanation of Genealogical Table I. Postscript.—Evolu-

HOUSE BILL NO. 756.

Defeated by the Timely Vigorous Action of Dr. Geo. B. Warne, President of the Illinois State Spiritualist Association, and Dr. C. A. Burgess, President of the Chicago Spiritualist League — The following Trenchant Communication Was sent to Each Member of the Legislature:

To the Honorable .....

On behalf of thousands of your fellow citizens, who are law abiding and tax paying residents of Illinois, we appeal to you to oppose by voice and vote the enactment of House Bill No. 756, prohibitive of Genuine Mediumship, as well as all imitations thereof, into a statute.

Spiritualism is a RELIGION to the people we represent, and Honest Mediums are to them the Prophets and Seers of our time. This proposed measure violates the Bill of Rights of this State, which provides that "the free exercise and enjoyment of Religious profession and worship, without discrimination, shall forever be guaranteed."

This proposed measure is a discrimination in favor of the doctrines of one, or more, of the older denominations, and violates that equality of belief established by the provision of the Constitution of Illinois, which reads: "Nor shall any preference be given by law to any Religious Denomination, or Mode of Worship."

It further seeks to annul the vested rights of the Illinois State Spiritualists' Association under a Certificate of Incorporation issued July 16th, 1896, by W. H. Henricksen, Secretary of State, which declares that body legally authorized to appoint Mediums to teach the Philosophy and exemplify the Phenomena of Spiritualism.

It seeks to forbid all practice of true Mediumship, thereby denying real consolation to bereaved hearts, and prohibiting residents of Illinois from joining with citizens of other States and all Nations in unfettered study of the problems of Psychology and Psychic Science along with the eminent foreign Scientists, Sir William Crookes, Sir Oliver Lodge, Camille Flammarion, or such American Scholars as Prof. William James, of Harvard, and Prof. James H. Hyslop of Columbia University.

You are asked by this bill to assume on the ipse dixit of the enemies of Spiritualism that there is no honest Mediumship, while truth loving people both Catholic and Protestant, from every walk in life, give overwhelming evidence as to its existence.

Spiritualists, through their Illinois State and National Associations, have taken a pronounced stand against all fraudulent practices in the name of Mediumship. They do not recognize, as belonging to them, the horde of grafters who prey upon the unwary by means of advertisements displayed for gain in the columns of daily newspapers.

We ask, as an act of equal justice to all Religious Systems, that you will aid in defeating House Bill No. 756.

GEORGE B. WARNE,
President Illinois State Spiritualists' Association.

C. A. BURGESS,
Pres. Chicago Spiritualists' League.

An Act to Regulate and License Persons Acting as Clairvoyants, Trance Mediums, Palmists and Fortune Tellers.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person hereafter to advertise himself or herself as a clairvoyant, trance medium, palmist or fortune teller, or to practice the same, without having first obtained a license so to do, as hereinafter provided. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 2. Before any person shall advertise himself or herself as a clairvoyant, trance medium, palmist or fortune teller, or to practice the same, without having first obtained a license so to do, as hereafter provided. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 3. Before any person shall advertise himself or herself as a clairvoyant, trance medium, palmist or fortune teller, or practice the same, they shall make written application to the city or village council or the town board of the city, village or town wherein they propose to so advertise themselves or practice the same, giving their name, age, residence and place where they propose to carry on such occupation, and shall file the same with the clerk or other like officer thereof. Thereupon license may be granted so to do by such city or village council or town boad.

Sec. 3. Upon the issuance of such license and as a condition therefor the person applying for the same shall pay to such clerk in cities of the first class the sum of fifteen dollars ($15), in cities of the second class ten dollars ($10), in cities of the third class seven dollars fifty cents ($7.50), in cities of the fourth class and villages and towns five dollars ($5), and each license so granted shall expire at the end of thirty days from the date of such payment. Provided, that nothing in this act shall apply to ordained ministers and recognized workers in the cause of the religion of Spiritualism, who are affiliated with the National Spiritualists Association of the United States and the State Spiritualists Association of Minnesota, and who are holding ordination papers or certificates of competency from the State Spiritualists Association of Minnesota.

The above bill did not come up for for final action in the Minnesota Legislature.

THE PATHWAY OF THE HUMAN SPIRIT.

Or, the Pathway of the Spirit Traced.

By J. M. Peebles, M. D., M. A.

Did it pre-exist and does it reincarnate again into mortal life? When did it enter the body? What is its form—how does it relate to the soul body? Can it leave the human body and return again? Can it live in and control another mortal body? These questions and many others are asked and answered by the Doctor in this, his latest book, of two hundred pages. Price 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

FATE MASTERED

And Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville.

A dainty book of 52 pages, bound in heavy white cover with cat-tail decoration.

Contents: Fate Mastered. Interior Force. Its Practical Evolution. Thought as a Shield. The Human Aura. For sale at this office. Price, 30 cents.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.25.

A Memorable Event—Transition of Mrs. Fidelia Barnsdall.

For fifty years the Barnsdall home in Titusville, has been the rendezvous for spiritual wanderers, and for the poor and unfortunate of whatever faith or no faith. No one was turned away. Spiritualism, to them, was humanitarian. It was the gospel of good will, and helpfulness. Originally Universalists, it was an easy gliding step into Spiritualism. They illustrated it in their home and daily lives.

Five years ago the 29th of last December, Wm. Barnsdall quietly, joyfully, left his physical body, saying with his last breath, "It is all beautiful, beautiful." He would have been 92 in about six weeks more of life. On the first day of January, 1902, we commemorated his transition in the spacious home which for 40 years has been a center of attraction for spirits of both worlds, and many profitable and happy reunions, and spiritual outpourings have dedicated it to love, wisdom and mutual helpfulness and intellectual improvement. Within the last decade at Lily Dale we have made the 22d of August the occasion for congratulation and spiritual welcomes from the world of love and light in memory of the advent in this world of Mrs. Fidelia Barnsdall, wife of Wm. Barnsdall, who survived him, and last August, 1906, was her 80th birthday. We all enjoyed these occasions, and all who knew Fidelia Barnsdall respected, honored and loved her.

Always a lady, and always aglow with the spirit of innate goodness, and seeking to use her opportunities to help, comfort and bless all who came within her sphere, she made her life rich and sweet with divine benediction. She raised a family under the same generous inspiration, and their lives are creditable to her gentle ministrations of filial love.

On Monday, April 29, 1907, she passed peacefully away, and the memorial services were conducted, according to her expressed wishes, Thursday, May 2, by Rev. O. P. Kellogg, and the writer, each paying the highest tribute to her noble character, and congratulating all with the bright outlook before her in the sphere for which her life has prepared her, and where the good works and gentle ministrations of her nature will continue with extended opportunities and greatly increased capacities. The attendance was said to be the largest ever seen at a funeral in Titusville; and they came as they were drawn by the radiant character of the woman they knew, honored, and loved. Her family, each and all, revered and loved her, and felt the solemn shadow that covered them as her gentle life was hidden from their mortal vision by the veil of death.

To her youngest daughter in the flesh — Mrs. Rose Snakard — the change will be most realized as she was with her in the home and cared for her as only a loving daughter could, to the last. The two sons, T. N. Barnsdall of Pittsburg, Pa., and Wm. Barnsdall of Bradford, were in sweet agreement with her life and did all that love and money could do to sweeten her declining years, and soften all her pain. Besides these there were two step daughters—Mrs. Olivia Winthrop of Titusville, and Lucy Cleeland of Providence, R. I., both of whom revered and love her.

Besides these there were Dr. J. Thornton Barnsdall, a nephew, and his mother from Buffalo, who I believe, share the sustaining faith built upon knowledge, that comforts in the darkest hours of trial.

The floral contributions were elaborate, and beautiful beyond words to describe. As the form rested amid the glowing wreaths and breathing flowers, she appeared as if in a quiet restful sleep, with her life expressing some gentle blessing for the weary sin-sick world, and encouraging the sad hearts to trust and hope and work for the good of being, and the fruits of the bye and bye. Coleman's full orchestra rendered most fitting and tenderly inspiring music, in keeping with all the attendant conditions. Mrs. C. W. Snakard (Rose) received a dispatch dated at San Jose, Cal., as follows:

"Noble wife, mother, friend, crowned with immortality.

"In loving sympathy,

ELIZABETH L. WATSON."

When I first went to Titusville in 1861-2 Mr. Watson was a commanding presence in the business world, estimated worth ten to seventeen million dollars, and he and Wm. Barnsdall were the pillars of the Spiritual Society, as well as the Universalist Church. The memory of those two families, and their generous support of liberal religion, and also of many charitable efforts, and the enthusiasm that led the spiritual movement, is an immortal oasis in the desert of selfish scheming, trickery mediumship, insane assumptions, and metaphysical fog, that have clouded the bright skies that Spiritualism opened to the world 59 years ago. Visions of such beautiful, steady, spiritual characters as Mrs. Fidelia Barnsdall reflect a rainbow light, rich and mellow, over the clouds of doubt that have shadowed the later years.

LYMAN C. HOWE.

MODERN ARCHITECTURE

PRACTICAL BUNGALOWS AND COTTAGES FOR TOWN AND COUNTRY

This book contains perspective wash drawings and floor plans of one hundred and twenty-five choice homes, ranging in price from $500 to $2,000, and is invaluable to the home builder, furnishing many new and up-to-date ideas and suggestions in modern architecture. Every plan advertised is made by a licensed architect and been built from to the entire satisfaction of the builder and within the estimated cost, invariably. Blue prints are furnished at moderate cost, ranging from $5.00 to $10.00 according to the cost of erection, consisting of floor, roof and foundation plans, front, side and rear elevations, with complete typewritten specifications. Arranged and edited by Fred. T. Hodgson. 12mo. Cloth, 250 pages, 300 illustrations. Price, $1.

Psychic Light

BY MAUD LORD DRAKE.

Mrs. Maud Lord Drake has a national reputation as a medium. The manifestations given through her mediumship have been most marvelous. She has written a book with this title: "PSYCHIC LIGHT—THE CONTINUITY OF LAW AND LIFE." It is a ponderous volume of 600 pages. It will hold your attention from the beginning to the end. It is chockful of stirring incidents. Price of this large volume, only $1.50, postpaid.

"The Kingdom of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world. Cloth. Price, 75 cents.

LIST OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Send in Your dates and Names of Secretaries at Once.

Interest in the various Spiritualist camp-meetings has commenced, and secretaries of the same should report at once to this office, so that proper announcement as to dates and officers can be made.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Semi-Tropic Spiritualist Association desires to correspond with speakers and mediums for engagements at Camp-meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, from August 15th to September 15th, 1907.

GEO. E. LYON, Sec'y.
1974½ E. First St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

The twentyfifth annual camp-meeting at Mt. Pleasant Park, opens July 31, and closes August 28. Programs and information given to all who write to Mrs. M. B. Anderson, secretary, Clarkesville, Mo.

Onset Camp.

Onset camp commences its thirty-first annual meeting, July 21, and closes August 25. For full programs address the Secretary, Onset, Mass.

Ocean Grove Camp.

This camp is located at Harwich, Mass., and opens July 28, and closes August 25, 1907. For programs and information, write Mrs. Mary B. Small South Harwich, Mass.

New Era Camp, Oregon.

The New Era Camp-meeting begins July 6 and ends July 29. For full programs, address Geo. H. Luzelle, president, Oregon City, or F. F. Dunton, secretary, Liberal.

Forest Home Camp, Mich.

This camp opens Aug. 4 and closes August 25. Any person desiring programs of information regarding campgrounds or camp work, will please write to the secretary, who will answer all inquiries. Mrs. Millie Mitchell, president; Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich.

Chesterfield Camp.

Begins July 25 and ends September 1. Mrs. Flora H. Millspaugh, secretary, Chesterfield, Ind. Send to her for full programmes.

Grand Ledge Camp, Mich.

The Grand Ledge Spiritualist Camp-meeting opens July 25, and closes August 18, with Mr. Oscar Edgerly as presiding chairman. For full particulars address J. W. Ewing, Grand Ledge, Mich.

Summerland Camp.

The Summerland Spiritualist Association will hold its annual camp-meeting the last week in June, beginning June 24. Mrs. F. Lee, secretary.

Winfield (Kansas) Camp.

The Winfield Camp Association will hold its fourteenth annual camp-meeting commencing June 30, and closing July 14. Mrs. A. McAlister president, North Manning street, Winfield, Kan.; Mrs. M. C. Sailing, secretary, 1602 South Church street, Winfield, Kan.

Lily Dale Assembly.

The season opens at Lily Dale N. Y., July 13, and closes September 3. For program address Laura G. Fixen, Secretary, 1047 Carmen ave., Chicago, Ill.

Sunapee Lake Camp, N. H.

SunapeeLake Spiritualist Camp at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., commences August 4, and closes September 1. For programs and information, write to John W. Clay, Sutton, N. H.

Verona Park Camp.

The Verona Park Camp-meeting, Me., will open August 18, and close August 25. A. F. Smith, president, Bangor, Me.; F. W. Smith, secretary, Rockland, Me.

Wonewoc Camp-Meeting.

The Western Wisconsin Camp Association holds its annual camp-meeting in Unity Park, Wonewoc, Wis., July 15 to August 13. For particulars and programs write Gertrude Spooner, secretary, Wonewoc, Wis.

Ottawa Camp.

Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, Forest Park, Ottawa, Kansas, August 17 to 27 inclusive. Write for programs. H. W. Henderson, president, Lawrence, Kansas; Mrs. May Cook-Pearson, secretary, Spring Hill, Kansas.

Camp Progress.

Meetings are held at Mowerland Park, Upper Swampscott, Mass., every Sunday, beginning June 3, and closing September 30. B. H. Blaney, president, 150 Elm street, Marblehead; Mr. H. S. Gardiner, secretary, 28, Cabot street, Salem.

Vicksburg Camp.

Vicksburg Camp, Mich., opens July 30 and closes August 20. For full particulars address Mrs. Jeanette Fraser, Vicksburg, Mich.

Edgewood Camp, Wash.

Commences July 29, and ends Aug. 19. For full particulars address Geo. E. Knowlden, 955½ Tacoma avenue, Tacoma, Wash.

Delphos (Kansas) Camp.

Opens August 9, closing on the 25th. Address all communications to T. D. Rice, Secretary, Delphos, Kan.

Island Lake Camp.

Island Lake Camp, Island Lake, Mich., opens July 14, extending until August 30. For programs or information write to the secretary, N. G. Swarthout, Fowlerville, Mich. At Brighton after July 1st.

Lake Brady, Ohio.

The sixteenth annual session of this camp will commence June 30, and end September 1. For full particulars address A. G. Keck, Akron, Ohio.

Unity Camp, Mass.

Opens on Suday, June 4, and continues every Sunday until the last of September.

Harmony Grove Camp

Harmony Grove Camp-meeting Association will hold its annual camp, July 22 to August 5. This camp is located three and one-half miles from Escondido, Cal. For further particulars in regard to the camp, address T. J. McFeron, secretary, 528 Fir st., San Diego, Cal.

Niantic Camp, Conn.

The Connecticut Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, at Niantic Camp Ground, Niantic, Ct.; season of 1807, commences June 12, and continues until September 11. For full particulars address George Hatch, South Windham, Ct.

Haslett Park, Mich.

The twenty-fifth annual assembly of Spiritualists at Haslett Park, Mich., commences August 6, and continues to September 3. For programs address E. F. Spross, Okemos or D. R. Isenop, Williamston.

Mantua Camp, Ohio.

This camp, located at Mantua Station, Ohio, will open July 9, and continue to August 27. For further particulars, address F. H. Sherwood, secretary, Mantua Station, Ohio.

Queen City Park Camp, Vt.

QueenCity Park Camp, South Burlington, Vt., commences July 29, and ends September 3. For programs address A. F. Hubbard, president, Tyson; S. N. Gould, vice-president, Randolph, or Effie L. Chapman, Campbridge, Vt. After the camp opens address each of the above at Queen City Park, Vt.

Freeville Camp.

The Freeville Camp, N, Y., opens July 22 and closes August 19. For programs write to Miss Victoria Moore, Dryden, N. Y.

A NEW BOOK.
Science and Religion.

By Benjamin F. Loomis, 307 Pages, $1.50, Cloth.

Showing the harmony of the Sciences and their relation to Religion, or the relation of Man to the Universe.

The Macrocosm and the Microcosm.

Showing the harmony between Phrenology and Astrology, or the Influence of the Planets on the Human Mind; and containing the Horoscopes of Jesus Christ and of Adam. Progress of the World explained by the principles of

PHRENOLOGY.

A Cosmic View of Christ.

The Rise and "Fall" of Man

Scientifically Considered, and many other things not commonly found in other books. Address

FOWLER & WELLS CO.,
24 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitaints of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth. 75 cents.

Science and a Future Life.

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

Works of Thomas Paine

A new edition in paper covers with large clear type, comprising:

Age of Reason.....25 cts.
Rights of Man.....25 cts.
Crisis.....25 cts.
Common Sense.....15 cts.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure these standard works, as the price is within the reach of all. For sale at this office.

The Rosicrucian Brotherhood.

Mr. S. C. Gould of Manchester, N. H., editor of the magazine, "Notes and Queries," has just brought out a quarterly magazine entitled "The Rosicrucian Brotherhood."

This gentleman is remarkably well posted historically on the world's occult fraternities, and having an extensive library of rare and valuable books on the subject, has produced a most interesting magazine.

We are glad to recommend this work received.

Price one dollar per year. Address
Eulian Publishing Co.,
Salem, Mass.

Prayer; Its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Taber. Price 10 cents.

Mrs. E. M. Hitchcock will answer 3 questions by yes or no for 25 cents; business questions preferred. Send own hand writing. Full reading, $1.00. Fern Hill, Wash. Send date of birth.

NOTICE.

"If anyone has a full clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill. and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same."

TRUMPETS:

Infallible Fibre Trumpets! Better than metal! Insulated top and bottom. Tangible with spirit forces. Cardinal Enamel Color. Dark seance, T P., $1.50; light T. P., $2.00. Self-developing Cabinet and Physical Battery Combination Cabinet. Special revised book governing every phase of development. A to Z Trumpet and Cabinet work in full. Book postpaid, 17 cents. Write for Circular.

JAS. NEWTON, 453 Dorr St., Toledo, O.

WHNTED—A clean elderly woman, Spiritualist for housework in small family. Mrs. Oswald, 5823 Aberdeen St., Englewood, Chicago.

NOTICE.—If anyone has a full or test clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill., and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same.

Astrological Horoscopes.

Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Walrond, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years' study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Business and Family Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

FRED P. EVANS.

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,

FRED P. EVANS.
2938 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.

From an angel's viewpoint including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Short of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

PHOTOGRAPHS . . . . . of Your Spirit Friends.

can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.

FRANK N. FOSTER.
Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all etters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Hary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 60 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.

FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
230 North Sixth St.
San Jose, Cal.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

OUR CHILDREN.

Hints From Practical Experience for Parents and Teachers.—By Paul Carus.

In this little book "Our Children," Paul Carus offers a unique contribution to pedagogical literature. Without any theoretical pretensions it is a strong defense for the rights of the child, dealing with the responsibilities of parenthood, and with the first inculcation of fundamental ethics in the child mind and the true principles of correction and guidance. Each detail is forcefully illustrated by informal incidents from the author's experience with his own children, and his suggestions will prove of the greatest possible value to young mothers and kindergarteners. Hints as to the first acquaintance with all branches of knowledge are touched upon—mathematics, natural sciences, foreign languages, etc.—and practical wisdom in regard to the treatment of money, hygiene and similar problems. 207 Pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., JUNE 1, 1907 NO. 914

CONSOLING MESSAGES.

As They Come From Different Mediums on the Delphos Camp Grounds.

To the Editor:—Thinking that the loving messages and remarkable tests received by us at the Delphos camp last August would be of interest to your many readers, we will try and write them as given to us by the different mediums during the last days of the meeting.

We lost our youngest child, a boy, aged three years and five months, April 5, 1904. On the first day of last August our oldest daughter, aged 23 years, passed to the great beyond, from which, we thought, "no traveler e'er returns." This dear child is the one that made us know that the above quotation was not true.

After weeks of suffering, and when we realized that the end was near, on the morning of the first of August, she said "Raise me up quickly!" We did so, and she was dying. We then lifted her into a rocking-chair, and while the family were at her side, we remarked, "Isn't this a sad scene." Then we held our hand over her heart which became faint, like the light of a flickering candle, and finally beat no more—the body was dead.

It seemed then that sometime we would meet again our darling.

With aching hearts we sought the Delphos Camp for comfort or knowledge of the truth of spirit return.

On reaching the grounds we knew that if we received a message, it would be genuine, as no one present ever saw our faces before. We got on the ground late in the afternoon, and went into a trumpet seance held by a Mrs. Wagner. Everyone present got convincing messages. When the trumpet came to us a voice spoke, and we thought it said "Harry." We know of no one by that name. Mrs. Wagner said: "I see an old grey-haired lady, and she don't say Harry, but Perry."

"Yes, this is our name." We then asked if this was Mother, and the voice said, "Yes, we are all here." The voice continued, and gave a loving message.

After bidding us good night, a coarse Irish voice said: "Faith, and there is a young lady here who is just over in the spirit world, and she wants to talk. She is weak yet. I will do all in my power to help her." Then the voice in the trumpet said: "Dear Mamma and Papa, this is Stella. We are all here." The message we received was short, but in every way satisfactory.

The next morning after a lecture, Mrs. Bledsoe of Topeka, gave some tests from the platform. She said: "I see a young lady standing here; she is slim, has dark hair and dark eyes. I judge she is about 20 years of age. Then Mrs. Bledsoe came down from the rostrum towards us, saying: "Oh! mamma and papa, this is Stella." She came to us among two or three hundred people, and called us all papa, mamma, sisters, and brother.

In the evening we went to see Mrs. Skinner, of Cawker City. She was a trance medium, it was claimed, and gave some wonderful messages.

She was controlled by Stella, and her looks, actions and voice were that of our daughter, and it seemed to us as if she was there. Throwing her arms about our necks, she said, Oh! papa and mamma, this is Stella. I am so glad you are here. I wanted to talk to you." Here she cried, and we were all in tears, and it was some little time before she continued: "I was home to-day, and it was so lonesome. The boys were all right, but they couldn't stay about the house, it was so sad there. Mamma, I am not going back until you do. Mamma, don't wear the black; take it off. When you are sad it makes me sad. When you are cheerful it makes me happy. I could not be happy to leave you, dear mamma and papa, and the children, but I am all right, and when you go home do what you can to be cheerful and make home pleasant, and and that will help me to be happy.

Here she gave us a full account of her sickness, and said: "Papa, that Doctor did not know what ailed me or caused my death, and dear mamma, I will never forget how you looked when I died."

"Now, dear mamma and papa, I must go, and I want to tell you to be good and kind to everybody. Every good deed and kind act by you will help make you happier when you come here. You no doubt will live to a good old age, but when you do have to cross the dark river called death, I and little Victor will be with you. Good-bye."

Is there anyone who can read these lines and have the heart to say that they came from any other source than as represented? To us they were dear, loving messages, and lifted a load from our sorrowing hearts that no belief could possibly do.

Since the meeting at Delphos we have been holding meetings in our own home. Stella controls her mother's hand and writes messages.

MR. AND MRS. P. L. BROOKS.
Clyde, Kansas.

SHE NEVER WAS A BOY.

When I come home the other night,
With an ugly lookin' eye
That I had got into a fight,
Poor ma commenced to cry;
But when I told pa how it was,
He clapped his hands for joy,
An' told me I had done bully, 'cause
Once he had been a boy.

"Boys will be boys," I heard him say,
"They won't be otherwise,
And the one that learns to fight his way
Is the one that wins the prize;
When I was his age fightin' was
My greatest earthly joy—"
But ma, she kept on cryin', 'cause
She never was a boy.

By golly, but I'd hate to be
A girl with fluffy hair,
And always prim as A B C,
With clothes too clean to wear!
When ma was small I s'pose she was Red-checked and sweet and coy—
But, oh, the fun that missed her, 'cause
She never was a boy.

—S. E. Kiser.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be treated yourself.—Chesterfield.

Nothing destroys authority so much as the unequal and untimely interchange of power, pressed too far and relaxed too much.—Bacon.

Taxation of Church Property.

France and Mexico Are Far in Advance of Our Nation in Some Respects.

The February number of "The Philistine" is full of meat. "Fra Elbertus" has presented a live issue to his thousands of readers, and his suggestions ought to sink deeply into every thoughtful soul. His analysis of the situation in France, where Premier Clemenceau has succeeded without one riot, or even noteworthy protest on the part of the people, in the complete separation of Church and State, is most masterly. His suggestion that the United States should emulate the praiseworthy example of the Sister Republic strikes the average reader as very singular at first glance, but it ought to lead all readers, as it will those who think, to realize that this nation is far behind France in its dealings with matters of an ecclesiastical nature. In some respects our nation is far behind Mexico in regard to the same issue. "Fra Elbertus" wants the first Republic in the world to be first in all things, reform work, religion and politics not excepted.

Public sentiment in France is sustaining the daring Premier in all of his dealings with the dignitaries of the Church. The Government has been compelled, in harmony with the laws of the nation, to expel the priests, prelates, monks and other representatives of the Church, from their old-time homes, and take possession of them as perquisites of the State, in doing this the Government has been careful not to trample upon the rights of the people with respect to the church buildings near their homes, hence, freedom of worship has not been infringed in the slightest degree. Catholics and Protestants have had to come under the same wholesome discipline. Their rich denominational holdings and ecclesiastical school properties have passed into the hands of the Government.

There were twenty-one thousand or more nunneries, monasteries, etc., in France, all enjoying immunity from taxation. When trouble came up between the Roman See and the French Government, the latter decreed that these institutions (all churches likewise) should incorporate and pay taxes. The church authorities refused, and now we have the pleasure of knowing that the State forced the Church to yield. It took over all of these valuable church properties, and the churches as well, yet in no way interfered with the people's rights to worship just as they may feel inclined. Catholics and Protestants alike must take certain legal steps to open their churches and assemble the people therein for the purpose of religious worship. Catholic France, as a nation is sustaining its Government in this radical move. There have been no riots, no incendiary speeches, no outbreaks of any kind on the part of the masses. The Church dignitaries have expostulated and declaimed at length against the enforced change in their respective positions and conditions. Their remonstrances have been in vain, and they have had to submit to the authority of the law, and the Government.

"Fra Elbertus" asks why a similar move should not be made in America? I echo his question. Ever since I have had anything to do with Spiritualism, I have been a zealous advocate of the equal and uniform taxation of all church and ecclesiastical school property in this country. So far as I know, all Spiritualist teachers, with few exceptions, have advocated the same reformatory measure from 1848 down to the present time. I believe that every writer and speaker, who may have a word to say for Spiritualism to-day, should put in an earnest plea for this much needed reform. "Fra Elbertus" tells us that there are five thousand millions of dollars invested in these two divisions on which not a cent of taxes is paid. Five billions of dollars! Quite a sum of money, isn't it? Why should it be exempted from taxation when the widow's cottage and the worn-out farm of an old soldier must pay double what should in equity be required of them?

In one of his messages to Congress, President Grant called attention to this very issue. He showed by actual figures, the rapid increase of values in church and denominational school property since 1850. It doubled every decade! Judging from the reports of 1880, 1890 and 1900, by the three preceding, President Grant, declared that the valuation in question would be up in the billions when the twentieth century opened.

"Fra Elbertus has proved President Grant a prophet. These two men, thirty-five years apart, have told us the same startling truths, and given us something over which we should ponder in sober silence. Five thousand millions of untaxed property means that every humble home, every small amount of real or personal property must bear a heavier taxation than they ought. They must make up to the Government what this stupendous exemption takes from it. Spiritualists as lovers of right and justice, what say you? As for myself, I declare for taxation of all property associated with the church, not excepting Spiritualist churches or temples. I am a believer in the doctrine of "Equal rights for all, special privileges for none!"

Let me at this point, call attention to some special privileges enjoyed by the clergy. They are exempt from jury duty; they can enter prisons as "spiritual advisers" of inmates; they are employed at generous salaries, paid out of the people's money, in halls of legislation, in all eleemosynary institutions, in the army and navy of the nation, and are permitted to unite people in marriage. As for for myself, I am opposed to everyone of these perquisites of the clergy as a body. There is no reason of any validity whatever that can be advanced for exempting a preacher from jury duty, unless said preacher be a believer in capital punishment, or the "divine right" of a husband to rule and control the person of his wife.

As for the clergy rates, I am opposed to them from principle, yet so long as the ministers of other denominations receive them, I can see no good reason why our speakers, who travel more in one year than an orthodox minister does in ten, should refuse to avail themselves of them. The societies employing them always get the benefit of the reduction—never the speakers themselves. But this privilege is doomed to certain overthrow in the near future. Several States have passed laws fixing the maximum rate of passenger traffic within thir borders at two cents per mile. This will soon be the law in all the States. When it is, all permits, passes and other gratuities will be abolished, by the railroad authorities themselves. May that day soon come! At present the railroads make this reduction in rates as their offering to religion, hence, discriminate against no denomination whatever. It is gratifying to be able to report that there have been fewer abuses in the use of clergy permits on the part of Spiritualist ministers, than of any other denomination from which returns are at hand.

I would not deny any prisoner the right to see a minister if he wants on, but I do protest against that minister being permitted by reason of his priestly office to enter that prison uninvited, with authority to compel all prisoners to listen to his sermons, or to force himself unasked upon some unfortunate creature, who has enough to do in communing with his own conscience, without being obliged to be flagellated mentally by one who has no sympathy for or with him in his present plight. This is an evil to which the American people, especially our Spiritualists, have shut their eyes altogether too long. Spiritualists, my brethren! Awaken! There is work for you to do! Break away from partisanship! Vote for principle! Be patriots first—Democrats and Republicans afterwards!

While it may be true that no people need praying for, in all our land, so much as do our legislators, I yet object to having those prayers paid for out of the people's money. To have salaried chaplains is to tax men to support a religion in which many of them do not believe. The Patriots of all ages and nations have protested against this form of taxation, and have not hesitated to call it tyranny. Why should an honest Catholic be taxed, directly or indirectly to pay the salary of a Unitarian, or Spiritualist chaplain of a State Legislature, or vice versa? It is tyranny, tyranny in Republican America! It is an approach to the Union of Church and State, and is fraught with danger so long as it is tolerated by the American people. Spiritualists, let us rise in our strength and declare that "Legislative chaplains must go!" More than this—let us demand with forceful emphasis that all army and navy chaplains must keep them company.

The marriage question comes last, but is far from being the least of the reforms now so greatly needed. The State, in giving to a preacher of any denomination the right to unite people in marriage, tacitly yields to the influence of creedalism, and, ecclesiastical domination. For many decades, the Catholics and Episcopalians were the only sects whose preachers had the right to perform the service of marriage. This right has gradually been extended until to-day even Spiritualist ministers and Salvation Army preachers have been given legal power to solemnize marriage.

In law, marriage is a civil contract in the last analysis. Why should there be two sides to that law? If the State has the right to divorce people, why should it not have the exclusive right to unite them in marriage? In giving preachers the special privilege of obtaining fat wedding fees, is not the State making marriage a religious ceremonial, rather than a civil function? Mexico is far ahead of our nation in this respect. In that country all couples must be married by an officer of the State, authorized by law to perform such services. The people can then go to a priest if they wish to do so. I admit that the majority of them do go, but I also happen to know that, while the civil marriage service costs them not more than three dollars, the priestly one costs them at least nine times that sum. The priest's service is absolutely illegal unless preceded by the civil one. It is a good law and Catholic Mexico lives up to it.

What is the matter with our own Nation? The words "Until death shall part" have become meaningless to all classes of people. "A mental reservation" is held by thousands when they speak them, behind which is the thought "Until we are divorced."

The claim that marriage is a religious rite is rank nonsense. How much "spirituality" or "religion" is there in the worthless roue and a spotless young girl kneeling at the same altar, exchanging the vows that will make them husband and wife? Without doubt, he is thinking of what he will do with her money when he gets it, while she is thinking, even though she be free from sensual taint, of the title or position in society that she is gaining by her marriage. It is one of the subtle holds that the Church still has upon the State. It is not in keeping with the laws of progress, and the remedy lies within the people. Let them pass a law forbidding the ministers of any and all denominations the right to perform marriage services, and this evil is removed forever. If need be so on the part of some people that they must have a priestly blessing, then let us have the wholesome law of Mexico—a civil service first, all necessary papers to be issued at cost, and then the priestly service, for which the priest shall be prohibited by law from making any charge whatever. This provision would soon remove all priestly interest or interference in marriage ceremonies.

The writer is called a "conservative" by many of his brethren. He does not disclaim the label. He is in favor of conserving everything that is good now held by the Church, but he is not in favor of Churchianic rule, nor priestly domination in this republic of ours. He therefore, favors all of the above-named reforms, urged at such length in this article. At the same time, while pleading earnestly for the total separation of Church and State, he yields nothing of his belief in religion, and recognizes its absolute necessity in the lives of men. He objects to being taxed for the support of a religion in which he does not believe, and does not wish to tax any man to support one to which that man may object. Freedom, fellowship, and character in religion mean much to the writer. Churchianity, Sacerdotalism, ecclesiasticism, are menaces to progress, foes to civilization, enemies to God! They must give way to spirituality, fraternity, character. Spiritualism has come to take the lead in this work. It gives us the Universal Brotherhood of the race, the Universal Fatherhood and Motherhood of the Infinite, the revelations of Science, the demonstrations of reason, the deductions of logic, the inspirations of intuition, all of which can be summed up in the one word, RELIGION, by and through which we are led—not to Nirvana—but—to THEISM.!

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

Facts Wanted.

We have no falsehoods to defend,
We want the facts.
Our force, our thought, we do not
In vain attacks. [spend
And we will never meanly try
To save some fair and pleasing lie.

COL. INGERSOLL.

A fool in revolt is infinitely wiser than the philosopher forging a learned apology for his chains.—Rebellion.

CURIOUS PHENOMENA.

Spirits Seen Simultaneously by Different Persons.

An experience wherein phantoms present themselves to view in prodigious numbers simultaneously is related by a young lady whose name, at her request, is withheld, the narrative being endorsed by her sister, who was with her at the time. She writes:

"One autumn night my sister and myself, with our maid, were returning from evening service in the village church. There was a thick fog; the moon was full, but it made a sort of steam in the fog, instead of shining brightly. Suddenly I saw a man at my sister's side, who had come there without making a sound. I pulled her sleeve, whispering, 'Let the man pass.' As I spoke the man disappeared. In another moment we were all bewildered at the sight around us. It was as if we were in a crowded street, innumerable figures surrounding us. Men, women and children were moving briskly about, some singly, others in groups, but all without a sound. Some seemed to rise out of the grass on either side of us, others to pass through us and to come out on the other side. The women were dressed in bygone fashion, with high bonnets and shawls, and large flounces on their dresses. There was one very tall man who took great strides, though perfectly noiseless; he wore a kind of cape. We approached our own gate, where we should turn in, and then we had a long driveway to walk up before we could reach the house. I think that by the time we had reached the gate all the figures had disappeared except this one tall man. He had quite a different look from any of the others—more horrible altogether. As we entered our gate, to our intense relief, he passed by along the road and vanished. Of course, we were all very much frightened. The maid and my sister were crying aloud."

In a case like this, where the same spectral phenomena are witnessed by several persons, the value of the testimony, obviously, is multiplied a hundredfold. For, while one individual may be the victim of a hallucination, such an illusion can hardly be shared by many. What, then, is to be said in answer to such evidence, furnished by deponents of unimpeachable character and reputation for truthfulness? To suppose that they are combining in the manufacture of a lie is scarcely reasonable.—Joseph M. Rogers in Lippincott's.

GOSPEL OF LOVE.

Go to the highways and byways of life,
And teach the glad tidings of love,
Of peace and good will, which leadeth from strife,
To the happier realms above.

Go down to the slums where poverty reigns,
And dire distresses prevail,
And list to the pitiful plaint of the pains,
Such lowly conditions entail.

Down to the dens where the vicious and low,
In drunken debauchery dwell,
Insane in their ravings, their misery and woe,
'Mid the flames of their own earthly hell—

Who know not nor care for anything higher
Than foulness and filth of their own.
Go! strive to uplift by love's saving power,
To heights they have never yet known.

Go forth into all the broad fields of life,
To the halls and haunts of the proud,
Where rev'ling rivalry, envy and strife,
The brightness above them becloud.

Not only in mind and print go ye forth,
But gird on your armor of love,
And meet face to face the needy of earth,
And sow from the gardens above.

Arise to the call! Earth's sleepers awake
To the dawn of this bright, new day,
The wheat will be sifted, and truth it will shake
And sweep all the chaff far away.

The sun is far up, ye workers must go
To the north, south, east and the west—
All classes alike, the high and the low,
By Love's saving power must be blest.

JULIA M. JOHNSON.

THE MYSTERIOUS M. B.

A Peculiar Prophecy and One that Proved True.

On reading in The Progressive Thinker, No. 906, of the account of the romantic courtship and marriage of William A. Harkness and Nellie Ingebrand, it carried me back many years ago to my own somewhat romantic marriage.

In May, 1849, I left my old home in Central Vermont for the West—objective point California; too late for the California trip that year, but the next March I started overland for the much desired objective point, arriving at the mines August 20th, and remaining in California until December 1, 1852. I then started for the old home in Vermont, expecting to return the next spring as sure as I ever expected to live, and make California my home, as I had fallen in love with that State.

I went home with no expectation of marrying, as I knew of no girl among all of my old acquaintances whom I wanted to marry, expecting to return a single man; but the fates, or some occult power that I little dreamed of, ordered otherwise.

After being at home about one month, chance threw me in company with a young lady that I had never met before, and the acquaintance seemed to be mutually agreeable, and we soon became quite companionable, and were finally married in November, 1853, and now comes the romantic part, if it can be called such.

The girl I wed had a married sister living in Walpole, N. H., 80 miles distant, which she used to make a visit of several weeks every winter. Her sister and husband (Mr. Stearns) were Spiritualists, and a family, near neighbors, were also Spiritualists, and a young boy in that family was an excellent writing medium. One evening they were holding a circle at the home of Mr. Stearns. The girl I afterwards married was sitting in the circle, and Mr. Stearns asked, "who is she going to marry?" The medium picked up the pencil and wrote, "M. B." and that was all they could get. No one in the circle knew me, and I was then in California, and it was a great puzzle to them who M. B. was, as they knew of no one with those initials, and she then had a fellow waiting upon her and every one thought he would marry her, but soon after I came upon the scene, she dismissed him, to his great disappointment. I knew nothing of the episode of M. B. until after marriage.

Now I will give a little history of how I became a Spiritualist. It has a little connection with my marriage. I was reared a Baptist. When at the age of 14 the members got up an old-fashioned revival of hell fire and brimstone, and under the excitement, hoping I was converted, I joined the Baptist church. However, I was never converted until I was converted to Spiritualism.

I remained in the church until leaving home for the great West, but church duties soon became very irksome to me, but the environments were such I had not quite strength of mind enough to break away; but when the break came the pendulum swung clear to the other extreme, and I came very near, or quite, an agnostic—a great admirer of R. G. Ingersoll, Tom Paine and others of similar belief.

Soon after my marriage we made a visit of several weeks with Mr. Stearns' people in Walpole, and while there I got hold of a book, A. J. Davis' "Divine Revelations," which Mr. Stearns had in his house, and read it through, and when finished I said: If there is a future life after this, I think he has revealed it. His views are the most reasonable of anything I have ever read." I had never known any thing of Spiritualism until reading the book. It set me to thinking, and I soon drifted into Spiritualism.

I will say here that my wife never became a Spiritualist. She was born and reared a Universalist, and remained in that faith until she passed away something over 9 years ago.

When I cut loose from the old theological creed, I cut the bridges behind me, and divorced myself entirely from the old damnable theological creeds and everything that squinted that way, and why any Spiritualist preachers want to attach "Rev." to their names or adopt any of the old mythical pagan ceremonies, is beyond my comprehension. I say, cut everything out that smacks of the old dogmas. I am a radical; perhaps too much so.

MARTIN BURNHAM.

Watseka, Ill.

SELF-LUMINOUS IDEA.

Which Reflects the Idiocy of the St Louis Circuit Attorney's Office.

In the case of the "materializing medium" who was seized in her own properly materialized person while impersonating a spirit, the Circuit Attorney's office is reported to make a legal distinction so nice that it can hardly be classed except as spiritual in the ethereal delicacy of its immateriality.

It is nothing more nor less than that a person who pays a dollar or other sum in evidence of his good faith in expecting to be defrauded, cannot prosecute in the public interest the fraud that did not actually deceive him, because he was not foolish enough to believe in it.

In the case of materialized spirits, this reason may not be specially material. But its immateriality applies, or has been applied in the past, from that same source to prosecutions of bucket-shop operators, Ice-Trust managers, race track combinations of get-rich-quick financiers and to other "material interests" with a cinch, a pull or something else which appeals to the holders of an office who seem to have concluded that they were put into it to let as many lawbreakers alone as the law allows, when construed for that purpose.

The acute reasoning this sort of thing calls for at a crisis is likely to appear all along the line, as in this present case. It does not need to have phosphorus rubbed over it to make it luminous.—Post Dispatch, St. Louis, Mo.

Some impose upon the world that they believe that which they do not; others more in number, make themselves believe that they believe, not being able to penetrate into what it is to believe.—Montaigne.

DR. A. B. SPINNEY.

He Is a Self-constituted Missionary in Michigan.

On December 9th, my partner and dear earthly companion passed to the higher life. In less than ten days I resolved, as never before, to do more work for Spiritualism, and the article I published in your paper opened up courses for me all over Michigan. Since that time I have lectured twice in Grand Rapids, three times in Paw Paw, once in Kalamazoo and three times in Jachson, and lectured there again last Sunday, and speak when I am in Owosso, also in Fenton and Detroit. At every point I make in Michigan on my business trips where there are any Spiritualists, I intend to lecture, and each place that I go. I am asked: "When can you come again?"

I am encouraged at the spiritual outlook. I believe a new era is dawning for Spiritualism, and the old boundaries will be broken. The people all over the land are crying out: "Show me the way, the truth, the purity, and the grandeur of spirit communion;" and these words give one courage in the great fight.

I have planned that every day from July 25 until August 27, I would like ot be busy attending camp-meetings. I have my hospital so arranged that I can attend the camp-meetings during this time, and I will speak at any of them in Michigan, or in any part of the United States, if they will pay my expenses and entertain me.

I realize that, at the most, my years are few for me to do what I feel I would like to do before I lay down the work here, and pass on to the higher spheres. I am pleading for spiritual lives, pure mediumship, honest phenomena, and the true Christ-life, the only salvation for Spiritualism or any other ism.

I am not catering to please officers or camps, or trying to be a sensationalist. The world needs intellectual, scientific and spiritual growth.

There are hundreds of speakers and mediums in the same boat that the orthodox ministers are; they have to preach and teach in a way to please the masses to get the money to "keep the wolf from the door," and dare not strike at the root of evils for fear of losing engagements for the future. That is the reason why I constitute myself a missionary-at-large, and do not ask the sanction of any board or of any person. That is the reason I will not speak on any rostrum that is not absolutely free, and all I ask is, that my expenses be paid.

Hoping that there are many in our ranks who are fighting along these lines, I send you this article for publication. DR. A. B. SPINNEY.

Belding, Michigan.

To My Own in Spirit Life.

Dearest one, can you come to my heart once again,
To bind up the great wound and to ease the dread pain?
Now the joy of my soul and the light of my home,
Have gone out, I am left in the dark all alone.
When I look through my tears for your sweet smiling face,
When I reach out my hand your dear form to embrace,
When I listen in vain for a sound of your voice,
When I long for some sign over which to rejoice,
When I fail to detect a response to my cry,
I feel sure if not now, you will come by and by.
The pure love of your heart will still cling to its own,
By no act, plan or scheme can it be overthrown.
The good Lord joined our hands and in love made us one;
We rejoiced every day in this work so well done.
In our home on the hill in our sweet meadow nest,
How our hearts glowed with love with the purest and best,
How we dwelt there in peace, perfect peace, day by day,
How we gazed at the flowers in beauty arrayed,
How we thanked boundless Love in our hearts as we prayed,
How we joyed in the songs of the birds and the bees.
How we talked of the fine growing fruits on the trees,
How we sat by the fire in the cold winter days,
And enjoyed the choice fruits giving God all the praise;
How we sang lovely songs, how our hearts beat as one,
Never storm cast a shade o'er our lives; the bright sun
Ever shone in our hearts, through the day and the night,
No dark clouds ever dimmed, and the way was all bright.
Our own life was so sweet, so like heaven on earth,
We were sure we had come from out God's holy birth.
From our own loved retreat we communed with the wise,
Who had gone to their home in the blue balmy skies.
I recall how you saw in the far away height,
The white temple of wisdom and truth all so bright;
Have you viewed the fine wires leading down from the same,
On which musical tones, soft and sweet, went and came,
Thus we learned that a track and a line had been laid,
And communion with earth was with certainty made.
Oh the joy and the peace, and the love of those days,
When we sat side by side singing God's holy praise,
While the blessings of angels so bright and so fair,
Wafted down to our souls through the pure evening air.
Can it be, dearest one, you are now in that land,
All enshrouded in love by that pure shining band?
Now your own waits alone with his hand holding tight
To the hand you bestowed, to be led into light.
He is waiting and willing to be led on the way
To that bright summer land of perpetual day.

FREEMAN W. SMITH.

Rochland, Maine.

When any one of the prouder passions are hurt, it is much better philosophy to let a man slip into a good temper than to attack him in a bad one.—Thomas Paine, in Crisis.

THE ONE DIVINE BOOK.

The Aim and Object of Angel Ministry.

Nature's volume of externalized and demonstrated wisdom and will of the Supreme Creator is the one divine book. The sincere student who, by natural and cultivated receptivity, partakes freely of the influx of heavenly light and inspiration, learns to read this book as he turns leaf after leaf in his effort to grasp that which has long been hidden from view and understanding. He realizes a drawing nigh unto God, and as this at-one-ment with God becomes a conscious truth with him; his vision becomes clear, for his spiritual faculties are quickened, he sees mentally and understands intuitively the many wonderful things spread before man in nature. He dives deep into primal world history of which this divine book furnishes the records, and he marvels as he beholds how man is created in the image of God and per mechanism in conformity with nature's mechanism. He learns, too, these facts about man mortal and man immortal contained for a period of time in one form, that the outer is man begotten, the inner spirit begotten. He is a son of God and a son of man, but the earthly passes away and the divine endures throughout eternity. He sees, he knows how man became a living soul by the quickening breath of the spirit.

Life is an inbreathing and exhaling process, but its vitality is an abstract of all that the cosmos yields. In one sense life is fed by death and death in turn feeds upon life, but is is only so in this alternately grinding over and over of the old grist of raw materials in the mills of the gods, each turn bringing forth a finer quality of the chemical and material substances to supply the many forms of life in their orderly advancement of natural evolution.

This grinding process of cosmic substance is wonderful to behold, as only by combat and repulsions force is able to clasp to itself that which is of its grade or reflex. As we behold these universal operations, we wonder, for they are all in a measure paradoxical as advancing and receding is the order of all force currents, giving and receiving belongs to creation's order from its first electrical induction to cause motion.

Assimilations and cohesions of substances welded by forces result in forms and behold it is growth, decay, resurrection and glorified eternal life.

Death of the mortal man or form rather, is one of those grand paradoxes for which every child of earth should ever praise their Divine Creator, for truly it is so, that as the mortal life recedes and ebbs away, there is an advancing of the soul out of mortal form and oh, life grand, immortal, undying life fills the arisen soul. A new man, woman or child is born—that which had been quickened and nourished by the spirit in the outer form, a spirit man, an eternal soul hath birth. Thence the march onward is naturally pursued as if nothing had occurred.

We behold in the expended energy for and in form life, the orderly successions of all evolutionary processes, hence to the mortal student all this seems natural, a result of the inherent law, etc., yet it is all supremely governed and is under the strict supervision of wise and competent angels whose desire it is that humanity rise in spirituality and attain to a higher consciousness of what is about, beneath and above them and how they are a part of it all.

To this end, the world's brain is filled with higher thought currents and ideas. Men's souls are stirred to action and while evil in mankind is seemingly in excess, it is only so because it is thrown out to the surface and its place filled with purer desires and better conduct, so that it is soon possible that all mortals will recognize each other as brothers and sisters whose father is God, and that they should therefore live in peace with each other and truly promote the welfare of all. This is the aim and object of angel ministry.

MRS. M. KLEIN.

Van Wert, Ohio.

AS THE FLOWERS APPEAR.

Beloved, as the flowers again appear
In sunny nooks bedight with nature's green,
And daffodils all golden-crowned are seen,
And promises of beauty everywhere;
How sweet to hail the Springtime of the year;
And though the heart disconsolate hath been,
Seraphic voices in their earthward flight
Transmute the outward scene to one within
That fills the grateful being with delight!
Thus, gentle friend, in tranquil spirit find
Thy days all touched with beauty, and the years
Replete with sheaves of wisdom's gold refined,
And heart so full of love for humankind
It hath no room for self or thought of tears. —Consider B. Carter.

JUST TO BE TRUE.

Oh, larger life! oh, power so strong and true!
Oh, stream in fullness flowing to an open sea!
Oh, rich, rare vintage from the press so pure!
Oh, opalescent light that shines transcendently!

Oh, height of heaven, grown bright and beautiful the whiles!
Oh, length of days in preciousness secure!
Oh, fragrance of the balms of sunny southern isles!
Oh, Eldorado riches of a safe and subtle lure!

Oh, grasp of all that lifts and magnifies!
Centering the poise for victories grand and new,
Bowing to none, by apotheosis to rise,
And all included in the wonder of "just to be true!"

MRS. M. A. CONGDON

Hood River, Ore.

Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated.—Mohammedan.

COMMERCIALISM IN SPIRITUALISM

As Exploited by the New York Telegraph—Letter from Harrison D. Barrett.

To the Editor: I hand you herewith a clipping from the New York Telegraph, which speaks for itself. I hope you will find space for it in the columns of your valuable paper from the fact that it throws much light upon the subject concerning which I have spoken so frequently and at such length during the past six months. If Spiritualists can read the facts stated below and still feel that it is their duty to defend commercialism and to apologize for fraud, then I must confess that it seems to me there is very little hope for their redemption while here on earth. It is such practices as are condemned in the Telegraph, that bring our cause into disrepute and tinge with shame, the cheeks of all self-respecting Spiritualists.

Yours for Spiritualism,
HARRISON D. BARRETT.

Spiritualism Grips New York.

By a most fortuitous combination of circumstances, Spiritualism in New York is to be investigated by the Medico-Legal Society. The results of this happy alliance of ghost hunters should be beneficial in a city where some of the most audacious get-rich-quick schemes are promoted by Spiritualistic mediums.

No plan of campaign has been outlined yet, but it should be suggested that the doctors confine their efforts to an investigation of the so-called psychic phenomena of Spiritualism and the lawyers to an investigation of the character of the stock companies floated by the leading Spiritualists. This latter phase of the Spiritualistic cult has received but little attention in New York, although it is known that thousands and perhaps hundreds of thousands of dollars are decoyed from the pockets of believers every year by the leading mediums.

This combination of creed and business is unique in its way and has not been developed in the criminal courts solely because of the refusal of the victims to prosecute even when fortunes have been lost. It is this extremely favorable condition that makes the medium-promoter the most envied of all the stock-certificate dealers in New York.

Some slight light was thrown on this phase of Spiritualism a year ago when a young Virginian raided a Spiritualistic seance and carried away an armful of the phosphorus-paint covered paraphernalia used by the medium. He announced that he was prompted to this act by the fact that his mother, a believer in Spiritualism, had been robbed of thousands of dollars through investments made on the advice of materializing mediums in this city.

The next day another victim, who had been present when the raid was made, renounced his belief in Spiritualism publicly, stating he had lost $7,000 in five years through the advice of mediums.

The raided medium was at it again the next Sunday, however, and her advertisement appears regularly each week.

The immunity of the medium is something to cause one to marvel. Sing Sing is crowded at present with get-rich-quick artists who have been convicted during the past four years, but the mediums who operate along identical lines are in no fashion disturbed.

In fact, something of actual protection is extended to them. It was learned last year when an attempt was made to prosecute one of the most notorious of these business Spiritualists that it was impossible to procure a warrant from a Magistrate. Evidence was presented showing that she was engaged in promoting one of the most glaring get-rich-quick frauds in the city and that she was not only receiving thousands from those in attendance upon her seances, but had arranged to sell $25,000 worth of the stock to a young Englishman. It was only the fact that he found it necessary to consult his attorney before he could secure the money that saved him from making an investment that would have made buying a gold brick look like a Russell Sage transaction.

The lawyer began an investigation and attempted to procure the arrest of the medium, but without the slightest trace of success. Every Magistrate to whom he applied returned the same answer. The mediums were conducting "religious services," and it would not only be illegal, but extremely indelicate to interfere with them in any fashion. In this case the medium was the secretary and treasurer of a company controlling a process which had been patented, but which was alleged to be the greatest producer of the century. The method was only vaguely outlined, the victim depending for enthusiasm upon the repeated assurances of the spirits in the cabinet that it was a secret entrusted to the medium by a relative who had "passed over," and would make all the stockholders rich beyond their wildest dreams.

Several widows invested their entire fortunes in the bubble and entire families were drawn into the scheme without having investigated it in the slightest degree. Not one of the investors has ever received a penny of dividends, but this has not in any way broken their faith in the future of the company.

The president of the company lived in the same house with the medium and shared in the spoils. He was not known as a Spiritualist and admitted to the lawyer engaged in investigating the affair that he was not fool enough to take any stock in the spirits who were acting as agents for his company. He was afterward identified as a man who had been well known on the Pacific Coast as a promoter of fake mining companies.

The spirits that whispered their messages from the cabinet of another medium in New York last winter were engaged in selling stock in one of the worst mining swindles ever perpetrated in this city. The concern evaporated one troubled day last spring, leaving nothing in the way of assets but a typewriter, hired by the month and a cheap roll-top desk. Hundreds of victims loitered about the place for a week or so and the police attempted a perfunctory investigation, but there was nothing done. The promoter had left for the West and an investigation showed that there had never been a mine in the possession of the company. A piece of fine grazing land worth about $10 and a hundred miles from the nearest gold producing section was the sole real asset.

Nine out of every ten stockholders were Spiritualists. They had all been advised by the Indian control of the medium to purchase this stock as the Indian knew of the mine when on earth and could assure all good Spiritualists that there were millions in it. After the flight of the promoter, however, there was nothing of angry protest on the part of the Spiritualists against the medium or the Indian control. The explanations given were accepted as readily as are the explanations of the exposures that are made periodically by skeptics.

Calvert Berwick, the Virginian who raided the seance of the "Rev." Mrs. Henry Hermann a year ago, stated that in not a single case had he found anythink but flesh and blood in the cabinet when he seized the spirit impersonating his relatives still living. In each case he brought away a trophy in the shape of some theatrical "prop" used in the deception of the seance victims. These consist of sheets of cheesecloth coated with phosphorus paint, pasteboard stars and crowns made luminous in the same manner and the rim of an old felt hat so painted, which was used to produce the effect of a halo around the head of a dear departed.

After the disclosures following the swindling of Luther Marsh by the notorious Diss De Bar Spiritualism declined in popularity in New York, but at this time it is gaining new adherents every week. The mediums have been wise enough to lift a feature from Christian Science and the healing by spirit doctors is now one of their strongest lures. — New York Telegraph.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $2.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

A LIBERAL CHURCH IN BOSTON.

It Is Doing a Grand Spiritual Work, Somewhat Akin to Spiritualism, in Taking Care of Invalid Souls.

Emanuel Church, in Boston, is carrying on an interesting work in an interesting way, and while it is yet too early to know just how effective it will be, it at least points a possible method of dealing with a very prevalent evil.

Life is becoming more and more complex, and the burden of adjusting oneself to conditions is breaking many a spirit and leaving many a straggler on the march, whose courage has failed, and whose part in the general movement has become a drag instead of an impulsion. Such are folk whose nervous systems are in continuous conflict with the scheme of the universe; and the firmness and ruthlessness of the establishment of the universe being more fixed than the individual nervous system, they are inevitably pushed to the wall. The result is the great army of the vanquished; people hopelessly a prey to melancholy, to hysteria, to depression and drugs. There are many attempts to deal mentally with these diseases—methods fair, unfair, and half fair—but the attempt of the pastors of Emanuel Church to cope spiritually with such invalids and yet to have the careful advice of physicians, is a most hopeful sign.

It seems to be a rational and a wise attempt to enter a field too often rashly and foolishly entered. The nice adjustment of spirit and body, the training of the spirit to take charge of the body, and the training of the body to obey the behests of the spirit, are difficult, but surely not insuperable matters. It is no wonder that in the multiplicity of objects and ideas many individuals should stumble; rather it is a wonder that so many find an anchor and remain steadfast to some ideal of truth and self-sacrifice and fair intent.

So the pastors of Emanuel Church are attempting, with great precautions and much care, to gather together these invalids, preyed upon by diseases of the will and the personality, and by encouragement and kindly suggestions, by brave thoughts and healthful words, by repeated infusions of wisdom, to lead them from the bonds of self, and renew their relations to life and effort.

"Happiness," an old German writer has said, HAS NO PRIVATE BUSINESS TO TRANSACT." Indeed, hard as it is to realize, happiness comes in those moments when most we are rid of ourselves. Whether in a disinterested love of art, whether in a faith or work of human service, it is when we consecrate our energies to something beyond ourselves, and grow to feel, as well as to say, that our little personal success or failure does not matter, that we are on the road that leads to happiness. This is a hard lesson to teach even normal man, but to teach it to the abnormal man, who has thrown up his hands and given up the game, who has submitted to the thraldom of a diseased self, is one of the noblest and greatest of works. For no one can be spared. "Not a sparrow falleth to the ground," is one of the most difficult of scriptures to believe, and to bear in mind THAT THERE IS NO COMPLETION ANYWHERE WHILE SO MUCH AS ONE SOUL LINGERS IN THE VALLEY OF DESPAIR IS AS HARD TO REALIZE AS IT IS INDUBITABLY TRUE.

The antidote to being born IS VIRTUE; the antidote to destiny IS WISDOM. There is no suffering, no struggle, no shame that may not justify itself, provided the issue be virtue and wisdom; and it is probably to enforce just this truth, and the old adage that while there is life there is hope, that the work in Emanuel Church has been established and is being systematically carried on.—Harper's Weekly.

Notes About Women.

The next international meeting in the interest of woman suffrage is to be held in Holland, in 1908.

In Iceland women may vote for all elective offices except members of Parliament, and more than 7,000 women in that far-north country belong to the Woman's Political League.

The 1908 Convention of the National Woman Suffrage Association will be held in Buffalo, N. Y., and will mark the 60th anniversary of the first "Woman's Rights Convention" ever held in the world, and which occurred at Seneca Falls, N. Y. Mrs. Charlotte L. Pierce of Philadelphia, is the only person now living who attended that meeting in 1848.

The absurd story which has been going the rounds of the press, of the reincarnation of Susan B. Anthony in the person of Julia Foster Avery, is causing the little girl's mother and the suffragists generally a great deal of annoyance. As a matter of fact, when Miss Anthony passed away Mrs. Avery and her daughter were in Germany; therefore the death-bed incident so graphically described could not have taken place. It is true that Mrs. Avery's daughters are deeply interested in woman suffrage, have organized a young people's league at Swarthmore, and speak French and German. Aside from these statements the "reincarnation story" is a fake pure and simple. It is past belief that anyone who knew that eminently sensible and always practical woman—Susan B. Anthony—should place any credence in it.

IS THERE A GOD?

Some Trenchant Reflections As to His Existence.

"Is there a God?" is a question that has always puzzled the mind of the most learned men of every age, and as yet has not been settled either way to the satisfaction of all, and doubtless never will be. Nevertheless it is a fit subject for discussion and we may obtain some new ideas thereby.

The article in No. 905 of The Progressive Thinker by Mr. A. H. Nicholas is right to the point on the subject in hand. He states many facts that are obvious to us all, but I believe that most of us differ from him with respect to the existence of a God.

While theology has been the cause of much bloodshed and suffering in the past, that does not prove or even indicate that it is impossible for man to evolve a line of thought that will reveal God as he is. Wiser men than we tell us that we should place no limit to the power of man, either in the accomplishment of things or in the discovery of truths in nature.

While it cannot be expected that all men will ever arrive at the same conclusion with respect to the powers and attributes of God, yet it cannot be denied that there is a general tendency in all civilized countries to regard God as a more benevolent and exalted being than formerly. The idea of a malevolent and villainous God as taught by the bible, is becoming tempered by modern theism until we think of him more as a being possessing those qualities with which we would wish our god to be endowed, and which will win the love of mankind instead of filling him with fear or disgust.

Mr. Nicholas seems to regard the religion of Theism as very little improvement, if any, over the old mythological systems or orthodox belief of the present day. Theism teaches us of a God more benevolent, righteous and just than any system of mythology or orthodoxy that ever existed. Theism does not rely on the statements of any man, neither on tradition nor so-called "divine revelations." Consider the words of Thomas Paine: "Do we want to know what God is? Search not the book called the Scripture, which any human hand might make, but the Scripture called the Creation."

The fact that the leading minds of this country have been Theists cannot be disputed, and is of itself the strongest testimony in favor of that belief that can be produced.

It is not necessary in order to be a Theist to be a believer in either an anthropomorphous or personal God. Theism does not give such a conclusive definition of God as to deny man the privilege of accepting or outlining a belief that will be in harmony with his highest conception of the powers, attributes and personality of God as revealed to him in the bible called the Universe. Theism does deny all claims of so-called "special revelation" to man by God, of His will, believing that God reveals through His works all that is necessary for man to know of Him to teach him the power, wisdom, munificence, mercy and love of God.

If, as Mr. Nicholas states, we cannot prove our "relationship to a God" because "it does not exist" then it is indeed a sad plight that we are in. But I am happy in the belief that the gentleman is in error.

Convinced as I am that Mr. Nicholas believes in the existence of the soul, and also in its immortality; and yet denies the existence of a god, there is no question but that his beliefs are inconsistent with themselves.

Are we to suppose that at the birth of a child the soul springs from nothingness into an immortal entity? That would be impossible. That which has no end can have no beginning. It must have always existed in some form. It is not necessary to believe that the soul always existed previous to the birth of the child as a distinct entity.

Our friend, being a disbeliever in the existence of a god, could not advance the theory of "special creations" and claim that God makes a soul every time a child is born, and it is certain that the parents do not. The child is flesh of their flesh and bone of their bone, therefore, physically, a part of themselves, but they have not the power of endowing it with an immortal soul. That is not for them to give.

If none of the above theories can be accepted as explaining the origin of the soul, we must seek elsewhere, for to suppose that any intelligence possessing immortality and other characteristics of the soul, could come into existence without some general source of origination, would be the height of folly.

The soul as revealed to us through psychic research, gives evidence of being an entity or force which is never at rest. It is always exerting itself in an endeavor to accomplish some desired end. In this respect it is like the soul of the universe. Everything in nature goes to prove that there is a power or force of some kind, which is never at rest. It permeates all things, filling them with light, life and energy. It makes the world beautiful, comfortable and enjoyable; fills the heavens with millions of worlds, moons and suns; in fact makes the universe one stupendous miracle, which we can never cease to study and admire.

Why is it that when we behold a beautiful landscape or picture, or take a stroll in a beautiful garden or park—in fine, why is it that when in any way or manner we come in close contact with the beauties of nature, there seems to be an indefinable "something" which permeates our whole being, body and soul, and seems to carry us away from, and above, the usual plane of life?

There can be but one answer. It is the soul of man coming into harmony with the soul of the universe, and thereby gaining an opportunity to express itself naturally, which means that there must be some sort of relationship.

Summing up the foregoing deductions, namely, that the soul of man did not spring of its own accord from nothing; that the parents could not endow the child with a soul; that it was not created by the divine intervention of a god; that it is an entity or force of ceaseless activity, and that it is closely and divinely related to the soul of the universe, we find that, as yet, there has been no conclusion drawn to prove the existence of a god. Nevertheless I believe that we have evidence that justifies us in drawing a conclusion.

In studying the powers and attributes of the soul of man and the soul of the universe, we find that they are possessed of very similar powers, in fact the same powers, differing only in degree. The soul of man may be likened to the soul of the universe in embryo.

Now it is plainly evident that at the birth, or preferably, previous to the birth, of the child, Nature has endowed it with a portion of this all-pervading life, energy or soul, call it what you may, and that henceforth it becomes a distinct entity instead of remaining directly a part of the Great Soul.

We thus see that the soul of man is divinely related to, and direct product of, the soul of the universe, which is source of all life, light and power.

There now remains but one question, namely: What is this all-pervading force or energy that renders the universe such a beautiful, magnificent, stupendous whole? Lo! the answer, 'Tis God.

R. L. ABOLT.

Casper, Wyo.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

DR. FUNK'S DIFFICULTIES.

As Explained by Light of London, England.

In his book, "The Psychic Riddle," Dr. Funk sets forth certain "difficulties" which prevent his unreserved adhesion to the Spiritualistic explanation of the phenomena—"whole classes of which," he says, "point clearly to the operation of intelligent forces that exist outside of what we know as human bodies," but, as yet, he has "seem no sufficient reason for believing" what these "intelligent forces," or intelligences "identify themselves as those who once lived in the flesh." "Never once," he says, "in a clearly-defined way—wholly free from the possibility of collusion or coincidence or thought-transference—have I, in an interview with a second medium, had described with exactness a previous interview."

Through one medium Dr. Funk was told that spirit Theodore Parker wished him to do a certain thing; three days later, through another medium, Theodore Parker reported himself, "but denied all knowledge of the previous interview, saying he was not there and had said nothing of the kind"—yet both mediums were honest. Since that time Theodore Parker has not been reported as present, through different mediums, but Dr. Funk says, "I have not yet been able to have him recognize any previous interview that I have had with him."

That this may be due to "elements of confusion" on the spirit side, which we do not understand, or to the present imperfect development of sensitives, Dr. Funk admits. Many instances of corroborative manifestations by individual spirits through independent mediums have been reported in "Light" from time to time, and Dr. Funk's unfortunate failure to obtain such evidence does not invalidate the positive experience of those who have had the proofs he seeks.

Then again, Dr. Funk is in difficulties, because, through one reputable medium, a spirit described with great particularity, from alleged personal observation, the inhabitants of the planet Mars, their civilization, etc., but, at another time, through an equally creditable medium, another spirit told of his trip to Mars and said that "he found it wholly uninhabited and practically destitute of animal and vegetable life. Dr. Funk further says:

"Some spirits assure me there are animals and flowers and trees galore on the spirit plateaus connected with earth; others tell me there are not. Some tell me they have there hospitals, schools and churches; others the reverse. Some tell me that no one in the spirit realm believes in what we call God; others that He is preached and believed in far more than here. * * * I inquired of a spirit concerning a Mr. S., a friend of mine, whom both the spirit and I knew well, but from whom I had not heard for years, and was assured that the man had "passed over" and was then present; but shortly afterwards, through another medium, another mutual friend in spirit life declared that Mr. S. was still in the flesh."

While admitting that the spirit hypothesis is the easiest all-around explanation, and that others are inadequate, Dr. Funk asks, "While there are such Himalayan difficulties in the way of one's acceptance of the identity hypothesis, is it quite fair for our Spiritualistic friends to question our sanity if we do not accept this hypothesis as wholly proven—just yet?

In one of his "chips" Dr. Funk says: "The burdens which the unseen Intelligence of the universe puts upon us are so many compliments to our courage, devotion, strength. We should run towards them with glad feet and take them up with joyful hands." So here, what he regards as Himalayan difficulties are "compliments" to be accepted, utilized, and overcome, and if courageously faced they will prove to be but mole-hills instead of mountains! If all spirit communications were perfect, reliable and consistent there would be very little to challenge investigation, and we should be in danger of succumbing to authoritarian and oracular utterances from the other side. But where there are such infinitely varied states and conditions, and such different people going to and returning from the other side, what can we expect but divergent statements, theories, and personal experiences? A Laplander and Hottentot if called upon to describe life on this earth would give very different stories, and yet both would tell what they knew. A street arab, a nun, a criminal, a savant, a stockbroker, a member of the "smart set," and a millionaire, if asked to describe London, would give very different and seemingly contradictory pictures of this amazing city, and yet they might all tell, or think they were telling the exact truth. When, too, we recollect the difficulties in the way of perfect transmission of information from the other side—our own limitations and those of the communicants, and their immensely varied conditions and states—it is unreasonable to look for flawless messages or perfect revelations.

The real point to establish is the identity of the communicators, and Dr. Funk himself gives good evidence of this in the "Widow's Mite" test. He also reproduces Hyslop's testimony to the evidence of the identity of Dr. Hodgson, upon which he fully relies, and gives his account of how Dr. Hodgson manifested through several mediums, together with Ella Wheeler Wilcox's account of what she regards as conclusive proof that she received a communication from her husband's mother.

As Hudson Tuttle frequently remarks: 'It must be borne in mind that if in all the countless communications that have been received, a single one proves identification, the verdict is decided!"

We do not question Dr. Funk's "sanity," as he suggests. We await his further progress—for "success is certain if energy fail not"!

A JESUIT FATHER ON SPIRITUALISM.

In connection with the disestablishment of the Church in France [as set forth in the Harbinger of Light, Australia], is due in large measure to the persistent self-sacrificing work, extending over nearly forty years, of a Spiritualist, the following article is of exceptional interest. It is from the pen of our distinguished contributor, Cavalier James Smith, and is an indication of the growing alarm in ecclesiastical circles of the rapid advance of Spiritualism.

Speaking on the 18th of January—it was the fourth occasion of so doing since the 27th of July, 1903—to a gentleman in this city, the spirit of the late Pope Leo the 13th said, amidst much else that was deeply interesting: "The Roman Catholic Church is being permeated by Spiritualism, and let me tell you that the recognition which the Church will shortly make of the truths of Spiritualism is going to be the means of holding that venerable institution together. The Jesuits are wise, for they perceive what a hold Spiritualism is gaining upon the public mind, and that steady growth and expansion of its truths threaten to undermine the foundations of the church, and to deprive it of its power and influence. Therefore, they have decided in the interest of the church, to recognize Spiritualism up to a certain point, and to countenance whatever issues from the Vatican on this point."

Twelve days later, namely, on the 30th of January, the arrival in Melbourne of the California mail placed in the hands of the recipient of the foregoing communication a New York literary journal containing the translation of an article written by Father G. G. Franco, S. J., published in the "Civilta Catholica," the recognized organ of the Vatican, confirming the statement of the late Pope in every particular with startling accuracy. It sets out by observing that the Roman Catholic Church believes in the facts of Spiritualism, but condemns its claims and practices as contrary to the commands of the Bible. Its phenomena, however, are admitted to be "real and genuine," and, observes Father Franco, "no one but a fool can withstand the testimony of such men as Sir William Crookes and Professor Lombroso, which testimony fully establishes the reality of what is called materialization. And then, unconsciously echoing statements which have been made over and over again in the "Harbinger," the reverend writer goes on to say, "Spiritualism is one of the recorded facts of history. It is found in the Old and New Testament, and among the early Christians and Neo-Platonists of Alexandria. Any attempt to confute the genuineness and authenticity of all this testimony in favor of Spiritualism is simply absurd." Warming with his theme, Father Franco presently becomes its ardent champion and defender, for he says: "In our time (1906) no one denies the real existence of spiritualistic occurrences, excepting certain men whose feet are on earth, but whose wits go wool-gathering in the moon. Among these latter I am surprised to find several university professors in Italy, men in other respects admirable specialists. It is well to remind these gentlemen, and others who have not studied Spiritualism, that spiritualistic phenomena are not the productions of pure and lofty metaphysics, or astronomy, but are objective acts, that fall under the cognizance of the senses and can easily be observed by all men. When such phenomena have been testified to by very many men of learning and good faith, it is useless, even foolish, and ridiculous, to reject such well-proved facts. These facts are accepted as certain by all reasonable men. The phenomena of Spiritualism, it may be added, from the moment when they were first observed up to our own time, have become more and more palpable and objective, and therefore have furnished opportunity for better and more unmistakable authentication by the senses."

Father Franco then proceeds more remarkable phenomena of Spiritualism, and to ridicule the folly of attributing these to individual or collective hallucination, especially the latter, because, as he remarks, "the uniform hallucination of a multitude is impossible." Therefore, he says, "how can we doubt their reality, when we witness them in all such seances, and our impressions are confirmed by what an infinite number of other persons have seen and heard there? How can we doubt their spiritualitic character—that is, a character transcending human activities—when we recognize that such phenomena are plainly contrary to the laws of nature as we know them? We know that the whole human race, including savants and philosophers, have always regarded such things as superhuman and supernatural, and have styled them magical. Under the name of magic are comprised the doings and appearances which the forces of nature were not sufficient to produce, and always and everywhere it has been admitted that such works were wrought by the assistance and the influence of an agent superior to nature. Magic was universal in the world, and still prevails in pagan countries." But the worthy Father fails to comprehend that there is, and can be, nothing supernatural, and that to assert its existence is tantamount to an impious declaration that there is some Power above God, because what we call "Nature" is simply His mind in visible operation, and if we are brought face to face with phenomena which are inexplicable by any known law, those phenomena cannot be above or outside of the reign of law, but happen most assuredly in strict obedience to some law of the nature of which we are at present in ignorance. The magicians of old acted in strict conformity with natural law; for it is absolutely impossible for any human being to do otherwise; but they had learned from spiritual sources the existence and efficacy of laws unknown as yet to their fellow creatures; and the practicers of "white magic," instructed by good spirits, applied their knowledge to beneficent purposes, while "black magicians," consorting with and impressed by evil spirits, turned their acquisitions to maleficent ends; just as, at the present moment, the great bulk of the crimes perpetrated in the world are prompted by the spirits of men who have lived badly.

Leo the Thirteenth's statement that the Jesuits, with the approbation of the Vatican, have determined on recognizing Spiritualism 'up to a certain point," is confirmed by the guarded language in which Father Franco has couched the following passage: "Were we certain that the spirits who profess to be this or that person were good, serious, and beneficent spirits, such as saintly souls must necessarily be, were they permitted to perform the great miracle of return from the other world, and manifest themselves to us, and work wonders at the seances, contrary to nature, and therefore inexplicable, the case might be different. But the opposite is the case. Worse than this, the spirit which presents itself at seances often shows plainly that he can be no other than the being branded a hundred times by Jesus Christ in the Gospel as "the unclean spirit.'" In due time we may confidently expect that the Church will be sagacious enough to recognize that hundreds of the communications which are being received from the other world do emanate from "good, serious and beneficent spirits," that they inculcate the everlasting elements of true Christianity, purified from the dross of mediaevalism, and teach the two great commandments promulgated by Christ; and then we may hope to witness the conversion of the Church to Spiritualism; or, to put it in the words of Leo the 13th, speaking on the 18th of January last, when "with the purified doctrines of that Church will be incorporated the principles of the Spiritualistic philosophy," one Faith, one "sure and certain hope," and one God.

J. S.

"New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Drawings By Watson Heston. With critical and humorous comments upon the Texts.. Heston's drawings are incomparable, and excruciatingly funny. Price, in boards, $1.00.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

THE GOOD FIGHT.

As Comprehensively Illustrated by a Liberal Thinker.

Man is apparently naturally belligerent. There always is a ready response to the call to fight. The chief pleasure many people get out of their religion [as set forth by Henry F. Cope in the Chicago Tribune] and their church life is in the opportunities afforded to buckle on their armor and go forth to the fray. It does not matter much who the foe may be so long as there is a prospect of fight.

IT IS ONLY NATURAL THAT WHERE RELIGION HAS BEEN MADE TO CONSIST IN CREEDS AND OPINIONS THE LINES OF BATTLE SHOULD BE DRAWN ACCORDING TO THE SCHOOLS OF THOUGHT. It is marvelous how warlike the most mild mannered can become when an opportunity appears to belabor some thinker who has had the temerity to strike out for himself. The warriors who fight against so-called heretics scarcely should go to heaven; they get so much happiness out of their campaigns here.

Has not the day come when men can forget their differences? No matter how important their opinions may seem to be, no matter what traditions are behind them, how insignificant all these things must appear when we turn and face the great fight that is worth the fighting, when we at last hear the clear call to stand shoulder to shoulder and take up the stupendous task that Christianity gives to the church.

What is the good fight, the warfare really worth the waging? What and where is the battlefield where all these great regiments, some with names adorned by the centuries, some perhaps with no name at all, may stand together in common cause, with one mighty spirit sweeping through all and nerving all to splendid, united endeavor?

There is a common cause, a common purpose, that which will serve as a common denominator for all. It is the cause of life, the fight for character, the conflict of the higher against the lower. The great Master said that he came that men might have life; his followers have no other or better gift for the world than this, to give men the power of a new and endless life.

The call is for those who will fight against the foes of life, the forces that sell the life, the spirit, the worthy and enduring in man, for the base and ignoble. Let the church fight against the greed, the lust that robs babes of their lives for a larger margin of profit, that steals from manhood the flower and glory of his being, that debauches the intellect and undermines the will — all for a few dollars of gain.

We need to fight against the tendency of every age to settle down to grossness, to make eating, or pleasure, or possession of things the end of living, that scoffs at ideals and bids men made for things divine be satisfied with the dust, that blinds itself to spiritual realities and knows only things tangible and of the flesh. Let this gross content with things base settle upon us and death is our portion.

ONLY AS WE PUT DOWN THE TEMPTATIONS WITHIN OURSELVES, THE SLOTH AND LUST AND COWARDICE, CAN WE BEGIN TO FIND LIFE; only as we are willing to pay the price, to lose the lesser, can we attain the higher. The evolution of man as a spirit comes only through struggle; being and becoming involve a magnificent battlefield; we win our way up with pain and labor.

Only as we are willing to be good soldiers, enduring hardships, striking valiant blows, bearing wounds, can this world be led into the large life for which it was created. The better day waits for the hosts willing to fight in high faith that truth and right, the high and worthy, must win, that each day reveals a nobler destiny for man.

Here is something worth fighting for, not the worsting of heretics, but the bringing of all men to their full heritage of life, the opening up of every door long sealed by selfishness and sin, the letting in of heaven's light to every dark place, the making of life to be life indeed, with the breath of heaven and the beauty of the divine springing up with the freshness of the morning and borne on by the music of the spheres.

Christ and Confucius.

A collaborator of the "Forum" asked a Chinaman why his nation did not accept our "gospel of peace," and received the following reply:

"It is not because we would not accept a gospel of peace, but it is because you who in its name trample it under foot and drench it with blood. There are people from all Christian nations who come to teach us by the sword and by fire that reason counts for nothing in this world if it is not supported by force. Do not doubt for an instant that your lesson has been well learned: and make way, Europe, when it shall be put in action!

"You have been the cause that a nation of four hundred millions of inhabitants is in train to arm themselves—a nation who before you came to her had no ambition but to live in peace. It is in the name of Jesus Christ that you called us to arms, and it is in the name of Confucius that we reply."

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill

THE PSYCHOGRAPH
OR
Dial Planchette.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than twelve years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by, its aid, and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the FORMATION OF CIRCLES AND CULTIVATION OF MEDIUMSHIP
with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gifts have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

BOOKS BY—

LILIAN WHITING.

THE LIFE RADIANT.—Cloth, $1.00 net. Decorated cloth $1.25. In this, her new book, Miss Whiting aims to portray a practical ideal for daily living that shall embody the sweetness and exaltation and faith that lend enchantment to life. It is, in a measure, a logical sequence of "The World Beautiful," leading into still diviner harmonies. "The Life Radiant" is characterized by the same essential qualities that have marked "The World Beautiful."
CONTENTS—The Golden Age Lies Onward; Discerning the Future; The Ethereal Realm; The Power of the Exalted Moment; The Nectar of the Hour.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE; or Death as an Event in Life, cloth, $1.00. A book from her pen means new flashes of insight, a revelation of Spiritual truth almost Emersonian in kind.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL; First, Second and Third Series. Three volumes, $1.00 per volume.
CONTENTS OF VOL. I.—The Duty of Happiness; Nectar and Ambrosia; Believe in the wings; The Vision and the Splendor; The Enlargement of Relations; Friends, not made; A Psychological Problem; The Supreme Luxury of Life; Exclusive and Inclusive; Through Scorning Nothing; The Woman of the World; The potency of Charm; Fine Souls and Fine Society; The Laws of Our Country; In Newness of Life; The Heavenly visitors.

AFTER HER DEATH.—A Story of a Summer. Price, $1.00. The ideas in the book will afford comfort to many, and should bring positive aid in sorrow to such as will receive its message.—Hartford Post.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT—Verses of the Life to Come. New edition, with additional poems. $1.00. Decorated cloth. $1.25. Lilian Whiting's verse is like a bit of sunlit landscape on a May morning.—Boston Herald.

KATE FIELD; A Record, with several portraits of Miss Field, including one by Elihu Vedder. Decorated cloth. $2.00

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning. With Portraits. Decorated cloth, $1.25.

RIGHT LIVING
— BY —
SUSAN H. WIXON,

Author of "Apples of Gold," "All in a Lifetime" "The Story Hour," "Summer Days at Onset," "Sunday Observance," etc., etc.

"Living is an art, a method of expressing great conceptions; in fact, the highest method, the noblest of the arts."—THOMAS STARR KING.

This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long-felt want of an ethical text-book especially adapted to the comprehension of children, as well as older persons whom it is wisely and appropriately designed to interest while teaching them valuable ethical lessons.

The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principles of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in children's lyceums. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful, and could not be better gift to a child.

Golden Nuggets of Truth.

Illustrating the Mistakes of Orthodoxy—A Striking Summary as Set Forth by R. A. Dague.

Orthodoxy for many hundreds of years contended that the bible was inerrant and infallible, therefore, because the "Holy Scriptures" so taught, the orthodox believed that the world was flat, that there were three days and three nights before the sun was created, and that the sun was especially made for the earth.

Astronomy, after a hard contest, drove the church from this position. Orthodoxy said the world was made out of nothing about six thousand years ago.

Geology and philosophy disposed of that fable.

Orthodoxy said God did not originally intend to make a woman—in fact, never thought of it until he noticed that Adam became tired from asociating with animals, and was lonesome; then God made a woman from Adam's rib.

Physiology and philosophy demonstrated that the male and female principle is inherent in vegetables, birds and animals as well as humans, and the church had to surrender that position.

Orthodoxy said that man was first made in a day, an adult fully endowed with mental and moral faculties.

Charles Darwin and other heretical scientists have about driven the church from that mythological belief.

Orthodoxy said death came into the world because Adam ate of a forbidden fruit growing in the Garden of Eden.

Science shows that death, so-called, is as natural as birth, and that there could be no birth without death; that there is both birth and death from the protoplasm to man.

Orthodoxy said Joshua caused the day to be lengthened, to the end that he might have daylight in which to finish the brutal slaughter of his enemies in a terrible battle.

Astronomy has proven that no such event ever occurred. Had General Joshua stopped the revolution of the earth, the whole universe would have been thrown into chaos and ruin.

Orthodoxy said Noah housed in an ark a male and female representing all the animals and fowls on the earth.

Mathematics has demonstrated that, according to the dimensions of the ark given in the bible, such an event could not have taken place, as there would not have been room for a fourth of as many passengers in the ark as is claimed went into it.

Orthodoxy said God set a rainbow in the clouds after the flood, as a reminder of his pledge that he would not again destroy the earth by water. Science proves that there has always been rainbows ever since the sun shone on falling water.

Orthodoxy said God forbade the children of Israel to eat "meat that dieth of itself," but authorized them to sell such diseased meat to strangers. Philanthrops, infidels and agnostics said such an act would be most diabolical, unworthy of the act of an untutored savage, and they drove the orthodox into definitions of their deity in which he shows up a little more creditably.

Orthodoxy long taught and practiced polygamy, and said God sanctioned it. Modern law forced orthodoxy to abandon the practice.

Orthodoxy taught on the authority of the "sacred scriptures," that God was so vexed and angry with his children that he repented that he had made man, and he became so provoked that he put "lying spirits in the mouths of his own prophets" to influence the people to do certain things so he would have some excuse for killing them. He hardened Pharaoh's heart that he might slay all the eldest children of a nation. He authorized Moses to execute wholesale murder and ruin. Moses, under the guidance of God, ordered all the wives and mothers of conquered nations put to death, but the young virgins were divided up among the soldiers. Jehovah himself declared that he was filled with jealousy and wrath, and was "a man of war." He "moved King David to number the children of Israel," and because David did so, he slew 70,000 innocent people.

Voltaire, Thomas Paine, Ingersoll, and other infidels so ridiculed this and other orthodox doctrines and beliefs, that the modern church no longer burns men and women at the stake, gouges out their eyes, and tears out their tongues for disbelieving those old fables.

Orthodoxy taught for thousands of years, that God demanded the shedding of much blood of animals and fowls to appease his wrath, and that on one occasion the incense of a burning bullock "ascended into heaven," and that God, smelling the sweet savor thereof, "repented of the evil which he had intended to do unto the children of Israel," and refrained from perpetrating the wholesale massacre which he had sworn he would execute.

Orthodoxy taught that in no way could the consuming anger of God be appeased except by the shedding of blood. Up to about two thousand years ago, there was no escape far man from endless hell except as he industriously propitiated God's wrath by the frequent killing of animals, doves, etc., and burning the dead bodies on an altar to the end that Jehovah might sniff the sweet savor of the burning flesh. Then God and his son Jesus had a consultation, and evolved a "great plan of salvation." Jesus, more tender than his father, volunteered to have his own blood shed if his father would soften a bit. The agreement was entered into, since which time, God saves a few from eternal burning—those who have heard of the "Plan" and accept it by faith. Those who have not heard about it, or who, having been told about the "Plan" have some doubts as to its reliability or its reasonableness, will be tortured in hell forever and ever.

Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, Theodore Parker, Horace Greeley, Hosea Ballou, and scores of other heretics and scholars, have shown that this bloody sacrifice custom and belief were Pagan doctrines, and came into Christianity from Paganism. They assailed the "Plan" so vigorously and convincingly that within the past one hundred years the church has been so hard pressed and so overwhelmed with historical facts, that the clergy no longer insist strenuously on the "Plan" except on revival occasions, or in the back country districts.

Orthodoxy said God and Jesus are one and the same, and the Holy Ghost is as much God as either one or both of the others, and that Jesus is as old as his father, and that this is a mystery, but if you do not believe it you will be damned forever.

Bruno and Servetus, and hundreds of honest, intelligent men expressed a doubt as to the correctness of this line of reasoning. The orthodox arrested them, starved them to death in dungeons, tore off their finger-nails, bored holes through their tongues with hot irons, and burned them alive by slow fires.

The heretical thought of modern times drove the church into a corner on these contentions, and have it caged, but orthodoxy still beats upon the bars and growls, and exhibits its teeth and claws, and says that God will torture the heterodox after death more severely than they have done.

The church said that God had foreordained and predestinated a part of the human family to eternal hell for his own glory, and that millions of elect infants yet unborn were predestinated to eternal damnation. The growing intelligence of the age shamed Orthodoxy till that diabolism is now rarely preached.

Orthodoxy said kings are ordained of God to rule over their fellowmen, and when the attempt was made to establish the American Republic, and it was proposed to guarantee religious liberty, and the free exercise of the right of everyone to worship God according to his own conscience, the clergy throughout Europe denounced the movement with vehemence, and said God would eternally damn the infidels who sought to thus establish a heretical government.

Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, the Adamses, and other non-orthodox men, out-generaled the clergy, and this great Republic was established.

Orthodoxy contended that both the old and the new scriptures authorized the slave trade, and the the slavery of unbelievers, and the church practiced this awful iniquity throughout the world.

Garrison, Sumner, Phillips, Wade, Greeley, Gerrit Smith—heretics all—with other brave heretical souls, fought the church to a finish, and forced it, inch by inch, to abandon this position.

Orthodoxy, for centuries, imprisoned, burned, and hung ignorant old women as witches, and quoted the "sacred scriptures" as authority for such practice.

Liberal, intelligent heretics, enacted laws to prevent the church from perpetrating such insane cruelties.

Orthodoxy said that King Solomon was the wisest man that ever lived or ever would live, because the bible said so, yet he had many hundreds of wives and more mistresses than wives.

Orthodoxy has held women in bondage for centuries, as wife and member of the church and of society, because Paul said: "Let women keep silence, and if she wants to know anything, let her ask her husband. Wives obey your husbands."

To Mrs. Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony and other heretics is due whatever liberty women enjoy to-day.

The Church, whenever it has had the power, has imposed fines and other punishments upon those citizens who "desecrated Sunday," or the first day of the week. This they did on the ground that God, after working six days in making the world out of nothing, was fatigued, and rested and refreshed himself on the seventh.

Learned historians have proven that Sunday, or the first day of the week gets its sacredness—its sanctity—from Paganism instead of from primitive Christianity. It is a pagan instead of a Christian day.

Orthodoxy claims it is the true representative of the life and teachings of Jesus Christ.

Scholars of profound learning show conclusively that the greater portion of the cardinal doctrines of the orthodox church were borrowed from Jewish and Roman Paganism, and that neither by doctrine nor practice is the so-called Christian church in any essential particular truly Christian.

The doctrine of the "fall", the "flood", the angry Jehovah demanding bloody sacrifices, the Virgin-born God, the atonement through which sins are transferred from sinner to savior, the Trinity, the war in heaven, an all-powerful and ubiquitous Satan who often defeated God, an endless, fiery hell, the resurrection of the physical body, the burning of incense, baptism by water for the washing away of sins, and many other doctrines and ceremonies, were either Jewish or Roman pagan teachings and practices, carried from paganism into the Christian Church. Jesus taught but few if any of these things. He healed the sick and practiced communism and commanded his followers to do the same. Orthodox churches do neither. They are more paganistic than Christian.

Since the days of Constantine, who did much to "paganize" the Christian church, the organized Christian church has been a mammon-worshiper, often to such an extent that governments were compelled to put a stop to the greedy exploitation of the church to save the people and the state. To-day, in America the freest country in the world, it is found that with few exceptions the most conspicuous grafters and robber barons are professedly pious and orthodox to the core. They have been taught to believe by the pagan doctrine of the "atonement," that they can rob their fellow-man of his last dollar, and then, any time before they die, can buy eternal salvation and heavenly bliss, and win a crown of glory, by donations to the church, and by unloading their sins on Jesus.

But does not Orthodoxy teach good morals?

There are many moral, honest individuals who are orthodox, or who think they are, but their standard of morality is no higher than that taught by Masonry, or Odd Fellowship, or other fraternal societies—no higher than taught by Confucians, or Buddhists, or the "Heathen Japanese." Russia is orthodox to the centre, Japan is "heathen", and yet the former horrifies all civilization by her atrocities, while the latter has challenged the admiration of the world by her high sense of honor and her humanitarian spirit.

For a thousand years the so-called Christian church governed all Europe. Civilization degenerated; the "dark ages came on; education was discouraged; the clergy taught that the chief aim of man was to save his soul; heretics were beheaded and burned at the stake; gross immorality was seen everywhere; libraries were burned, as it was taught by the church that all wisdom was contained in the bible, and all other books were "profane." Had not orthodoxy been combatted by "heretics," civilization would have been blotted out. Even in this day the doctrine of the "blood-atonement" is still the chief corner-stone of orthodoxy.

It is within the memory of middle-aged people when the clergy taught that the "unconverted, moral man, was the worst man in the community—that man's morality is filth and rags in the sight of God." It is a fact, well known, that the vilest criminals, the most depraved men, are very largely, soundly orthodox. Scaffold and penitentiary statistics will prove this to be so. This is not hard to account for. These men have been taught, by the church, to believe they were conceived in iniquity and born in sin, because of Adam's transgression—that they are as prone to do evil as the sparks are to fly upward." They are taught that, at any time before death, though overloaded with heinous crimes, they can escape all punishment for thir evil deeds, and become as pure as the angel of light by accepting pardon bought for them through the shed blood of a God, slain about two thousand years ago. Why should they not sow their wild oats, and gratify their animal instincts, and rob, and murder, and steal, and eat, drink and be merry? All they have to do to escape all the consequences, is to shift these sins on to the Savior and go to glory, and bask forever in the sunlight of heaven. They can join the orthodox in singing the good old religious hymn:

"Jesus died and paid it all,
All the debt I owe;
Nothing either great or small Remains for me to do."

This teaching is immoral, false, paganistic and vicious. It has in the past encouraged, and does now encourage evilly-disposed persons to do wrong. It puts a premium on crime. It is still the chief corner stone of the orthodox church. Many of the more enlightened and honest of the clergy avoid preaching this paganism, but it is there all the same in the confession of faith. Infidels, Spiritualists, Unitarians, Universalists, Christian Scientists, and agnostics have so effectually combatted this immoral and false church-foundation, that within the last few years the clergy either put another interpretation upon the dogma, or refuse to discuss it.

Orthodoxy represents God as a being not unlike an earthly king sitting on a throne; austere, jealous, changeable, and greatly pleased by flattery and worship. He has to be ceaselessly told how great he is, how kind and good he is; how we poor worms of the dust would have been in hell long ago if he had dealt justly by us, etc. He is so jealous that he will sometimes kill little babies because their mothers love them better than they do him. With this conception of God, pious orthodox get on their knees and down in the dust, and they weep, and plead, and cajole, and entreat, and supplicate, and flatter the monarch of the skies.

"Heretics" (so-called) no longer fear that they will be burned here or hereafter for saying they believe there is an Infinite Intelligence at the helm of the Universe, and that every human being lives, moves, and has his being in this Infinite Life—this Over-Soul—this Omnipresent Spirit, and that every man, woman and child is a part of this Omnipresent Spirit, and that no part can be irretrievably lost. We are students in the school of the Infinite Universe. We all have lessons to learn here or hereafter. When we shall have learned the lesson of one grade we will be promoted to the next, and not before. No spilled blood of animals, or gods, will enable us to skip hard lessons and sneak into higher grades on the merits of another person, be he God or man.

To the doubters, the heretics, the brave seekers for truth, is due all the blessings of civil and religious liberty we enjoy to-day.

Orthodoxy looks backwards for all its wisdom. Liberalism, while not ignoring the past, looks forward for more light. R. A. DAGUE.

Tacoma, Wash.

Reincarnation—A Reply to L. P. Wheelock.

Certainly, I gladly share the crumbs of knowledge I have been able to gather, but will L. P. Wheelock be able to eat at my table?

What is one man's food may be another man's poison; or, in other words, our different mentalities and organisms require, and find, different experiences.

My experience can never be exactly like the experience of any other person, neither can anyone have just the same experience as mine, consequently it is not the working out of the problem that is of such importance, as the result attained.

How many there are who believe in re-birth, but I have yet to compare notes with one who has traveled just the path I used. Certain points, broad in themselves, are identical. Our experience perhaps I should say MY EXPERIENCE has been such as to declare matter to be in evolution, or under the law of change. I cannot find any point on this objective plane that can be held stable; all move, change. The seasons come and go—re-birth of vegetable life followed by decay, yet within this change there is something that brings about the same result, a dominant power, a principle that never fails. Once we might have questioned as to this power, and been dependent upon our own experience for the reply, but to-day it is scientifically demonstrated that LIFE IS CAUSATION; and again, that all life is one. We find life intelligent power, order, law—the compelling principle of all manifestation. Life is immutable, it is the stable part of the universe. But what do we know of life except as we see its expression in matter? There is a compelling principle in life that demands expression; it is the law of being, and universal.

Now, when matter is under the law of change how can continuous expression be accomplished except through re-birth? Can certainty be assured by one cycle of time? And cycles are measured by expression in matter!

My experience has shown me that spirit-matter is under the same law of change as physical matter. The child in spirit life grows to maturity the same as here. All that grows, must decay. Our demonstrations of a continuity of life after the change called death, deal only with one cycle of time. Immortality is dependent upon re-birth, and continuous re-birth, for who can measure or encompass eternity? Finite life, being one with the Infinite Life, is in its nature immortal, and the law of being compels expression; take this statement, add it to evolution of matter, and we find the result is RE-INCARNATION.

JESSIE S. PETTIT-FLINT.

Corvallis, Benton Co. Oregon.

THE NEXT STEP.

After Passing into the Sphere of Spiritual Existence.

Coming into the atmosphere of spirit existence is like being born again. This you will readily understand when you call to mind the condition of those who have, as you say, died a natural death. You will have observed that consciousness more or less gradually departed until finally there was nothing left, apparently, but the inert body and for a time that is all that is observable anywhere.

Now the length of time which elapses before there is something seen elsewhere depends upon the conditions which have surrounded the new comer where he came from. We refer to his power of recuperation. Until this will enable him to begin life herein a conscious degree there can be no evidence of any life whatever.

Being now atmospheric, he partakes of the environments with which he is surrounded when he first comes to consciousness, and these in turn correspond to his spiritual conditions at the time of his "taking off." For you will understand that previous views on this subject have much to do with the acceptance of these new conditions. When one is held in bondage, so to put it, with views of a future life so different from the reality, he has to overcome much that some others are prepared to receive almost immediately.

Coming to consciousness is an act of the will of the individual in the sense that he is capable of becoming conscious so soon as his mind is directed to the fact of there being any consciousness to attain. By which is meant that, being in what you might terms a state of somnambulance he may so far reflect upon his condition as to be able to comprehend that any action of his mind will bring forth recognition of his being some sort of entity.

To be more definite: Let us suppose that you fall asleep. There is always more or less sub-consciousness and by an involuntary action of the mind, occasioned perhaps by some movement not especially directed toward yourself; this sub-consciousness takes to itself the movement caused by its surroundings, or whatever has caused the sensation to exist, and you wake up. This is as near as we can interpret to you the meaning of our saying that one can, by an effort or act of his mentality come to full consciousness in this spirit world. For there is movement about him here; not noise as perhaps it would be that awakened you, but a movement which his new condition renders him capable of recognizing. Upon further coming to this conscious condition one naturally wonders where he is, as did you when awakened suddenly from a distant land of dreams.

Now then comes the wonderment. It is all so visionary, so now, and nothing seems real. You are, however, impressed to follow your desires. And what are they? Why, to have some motion; to be relieved of this silent, quiet inertness which is becoming oppressive. And it being a rightful and necessary desire, you forthwith have the sense of motion, for in this spirit world desire is creative.

You are so taken up with the delight of this free motion, which is almost like passing through clouds, that you can think of nothing else for a time. But at last the strangeness of it all, the sense of motion with no body to move nor no object to pass, is overpowering in its loneliness and a desire for help, for companionship is almost forced from you. And then you discern a movement of a, as it were, lighter cloud, advancing toward you. You will be attracted thereto and behold it has form, a spirit form full of personality.

You then begin to feel the emanation of that form. You feel it because that is the way you are now able to recognize anything. So, by the sense of feeling which is the emanation of the spirit form projected to you and received by you in like manner; your two magnetisms recognize, the one a helpful hand, the other a requirement of that help, and there it is. In many instances the desire for companionship comes before the desire for motion, and in these the spirit guide teaches the new comer to move—walk, as you would say.

This is a rather lengthy statement of a simple process, a simple fact, but I have allowed myself to portray this operation because I know that one of the first things desired to be understood is how, when and in what manner you first appear in your new life.

You know that the mind of the material man can and does project itself wherever it will without its material envelope. This process is momentary, immediate, to the farthest distance known to it, and frequently to imaginary distances and places.

So then it can easily be understood that the mental man has power of projecting himself through space here in this spirit world, and how when his first desire is for movement — he moves. The law as to this movement of the mind is the same here; for the inherent power of the mind is electric. It is in fact itself an electric force.

The shining personality who appeared to the new comer before referred to was an advanced spirit who had chosen for her life work the sphere of spirit humanitarianism.

And let me say right here that all must sooner or later help others in a greater or less degree.

Later we shall proceed to develop the soul in its passage toward greater things, but now, with best wishes, will bid you good by.

Written inspirationally by N. D. A. SAWYER.

FORWARD.

Up, my brothers, be a-working!
On! our Cause must we upraise!
Ever laboring—duty shirking
Never fits one for God's praise.

Know you not that in the heavens
Brightly beams a guiding star,
Beckoning us onward, upward,
To attain those heights afar?

Dream not of the bright to-morrow,
Better labor for to-day,
Filling souls with song and sunshine;
But do not forget to pray.

Do not tarry to be finding
Fault with all who pass your way,
For the life, so brightly burning,
May not last another day.

May not last to bless a comrade
When the morning sun doth rise;
So make all you can be happy
By the brightness of your eyes.

ELSIE RUSSELL.

Murphy, Cal

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

"Spiritual Fire Crackers, Bible Chestnuts and Political Pin Points." By J. S. Harrington. A pamphlet containing 79 pages of racy reading. Price 25 cts.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

"Ignorance is the Greatest Foe of Man"—Selected from the Writings of A. J. Davis, by E. T. Dickinson, as Being of Special Importance.

Ignorance, the greatest foe of man, hath filled the world with martyrs. Thousands have "died on the cross" in every department of human experience, because the people have not known how to read the laws of God inscribed in nature, on her tablets of stone. The human frame, when its functions are not violated, obeys the laws of its constitution; it comes into being, advances through the youthful stages of development, blooms into manhood, retires into the folds of age, and then like a flower in autumn, it decays and dies. This is accomplished by no inscrutable law. It is all simple. It is easy to see that man is provided with a system of organs of respiration; with a heart and blood vessels; with a stomach and other organs of nutrition; that each of these organs is endowed with a definite constitution; that there are definite relations subsisting between each of them and all the others, and between each and all of them and the objects of external nature. It is easy to see also, that life and health accompany the harmonious action of the whole; and that when this action becomes deranged and disproportionate, the consequences are—pain, disease, and premature death! Every premature death is manslaughter. Children should never die. The plea set up by old theology, that God sees fit to take the young babe from its mother, is a plea in behalf of ignorance, a miserable excuse for a palpable violation of Nature's laws.

In almost every family I see an altar of ignorance sanctified by some ordained teacher of popular theology. On each altar almost every mother has placed her babe, and allowed it to be sacrificed by disease. The clergyman comes, sees the infant, cold in death, sees the parents weeping, lamenting, yearning for the balm of consolation; and so the preacher commences plea of justification. He speaks of "the inscrutable ways of Providence," "the Lord giveth and taketh away"—and advocates a system of mysterious fatalism in striving to justify the ways of God to man, which offends Reason, and perpetuates the universal practice of crucifying little children on the cross of ignorance!

You may not know, kind reader, how much every human soul needs to be ushered into life naturally; to grow naturally; to have a natural experience; and to die naturally; and naturally to glide away into the Spiritual Universe!

God arbitrarily takes no children from earth; he never causes premature deaths; never plucks flowers half unfolded; never violates the immutable laws of progressive development; for the harvest is good only when the grain is fully matured. Natural deaths are sweet as the breathings of truth; but unnatural deaths are embittered with the noxious vapors of ignorance and error!

The doctrine that this life is "a vale of tears," "a fleeting show," "a place originally designated to try men's soul's," is, as I see it, the doctrine of ignorance, having no indorser except the dark and mythological past.

In obedience to this doctrine (but in disobedience to every law which God has written on the physical constitution of man), the mother consigns her first born to the grave; just at a time when the mental powers and physical attractions are expanding to view; when the maternal affinities begin to cluster about each other, and then all are disturbed, and the Christian parent, like the Hindoo mother, throws her infant into the murky waters of the "Ganges of ignorance, and the priest, with a species of conscientious sympathy for the bereft, throws his religious opinions over the stricken soul, and begets the wicked faith that God killed the child for some beneficent purpose. I say wicked faith, because it reconciles man to his ignorance of Nature, and justifies, also, the constant constant violation of reproductive and physiologic principles. There are no scriptures more plain, more sacred, more infallible, than the laws of life, health, and of a progressive experience.

The early dead, those who die martyrs to ignorance and disease, although they go to the fairer land, where better circumstances surround them, yet they are deprived of those elementary lessons and experiences which lie at the base of all true spiritual culture!

The sacred Scriptures of Physiology (which we know that priests did never write), and which, therefore, required no legislative act to render them canonical) declare that the organism of man is designed to convey the soul through "three score years and ten," with their summers and winters of experience, and as many more years as the righteousness of the person will produce. Hills of granite are not more immovable than the truth of these organic evangels. How long, O how long, must the human race still wait for the advent of Nature's own Religion?

The brotherhood of man is capable, through the laws of experience, of becoming a sanctuary of joy. The history of music is the history of the soul and of the race. The undeveloped mind has a life of discord within itself, which is, after all, but the prelude to future harmony! The uncultivated music of the Indian causes him to make a frame of dry pine sticks, across these he tightens a thin fox-skin, and upon this rude discordant instrument beats out the music of his mind. So man's life begins!

Man's life begins in discord, but harmony is his destiny! God has written this glorious truth on everything. Behold! nature is full of music! This is the positive principle. Discord is negative. Everything which moves, feels, thinks in the Omnipresent spirit of God, is impregnated with music! What a gospel is this! The Alpine cottage on the mountain's side is a sounding-board for the encircling winds to play upon, and the majestic oak whose stalwart frame hath stood the blast of a hundred winters, spreads forth its boughs, and becomes the harp of the hurricane! * * *

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

CORPUSCLES NOT THE LIMIT.

He Who Would Discern the Soul, Must Know No Limitations.

The article of Prof. Larkin, the eminent scientist, published in The Progressive Thinker, No. 902, is of much interest from a scientist point of view. While I am not a scientist, I have a positive knowledge of the existence of an Energizing Activity that scientists from a scientist point of view know nothing about. To me it is positive as well as a blessed assurance, and I have reason to believe that thousands of others in all parts of the world share with me in this wisdom. Prof. Larkin's statements do not shatter it one iota. I reached the point of his limitations long ago, but not content with that I penetrated deeper.

The State of California is in a few days to execute a murderer in the State Prison of San Quentin. The prison officials together with some doctors of San Francisco and Oakland have conceived of a plan which they think will demonstrate whether or not the soul exists. The following is the plan for the test:

Unbeknown to the unfortunate victim, they are going to have him stand on delicately constructed scales and record his weight but a moment before the trap springs; then after life is extinct they will again weigh the body and if they find a less weight they will announce to the world the existence of soul and also its exact weight. If the weight is the same they will wire Prof. Larkin that they agree with him that the soul does not exist. If the body should weigh more they will be mute until they concoct something to announce.

However, if the experiment is carefully carried out they will find the body does weigh a fraction less after life is extinct. But it will not be due to the departure of the soul. If they will only carry the experiment farther they will find that the body in death is less charged with electricity than it was in life, therefore some of the weighable electron corpuscles have escaped and have harmonized with their respective congenial vibrations of life in other bodies.

Prof. Larkin weighs electron corpuscles and tells us how many are required to weigh a grain, and also tells us that it is the limit; in which I am inclined to think he is not far wrong, in so far as weight is concerned, but electrons are many million times grosser substance than soul.

Soul is free from gravitation, therefore how in the name of common sense and reason can that which is free from gravitation be subject to weight and quantitative determination?

A peculiar feature of Prof. Larkin's article is, in his forty years of laboratory research he has failed to get a "clew or hint that an entity called the soul exists." And of course in a scientist way refutes anything as a fact scientifically demonstrated unless he has analyzed it. No matter what effects might demonstrate, he must analyze the cause.

On my watch chain I carry a small compass or magnetic needle, which always points to the one direction — the source of its attractive power. Wherever I go—in the deep mine, on the mountain top, or on the high seas, I know that power which attracts the little needle exists and is ever around and about me, though I have not analyzed it, have never seen it. Yet I know it exists, having most every hour of every day of my life comprehended its effect.

As the Professor has not been able to get a soul or a piece of one to analyze, he concludes it does not exist. NOTE: His failure to analyze the soul, and his achievement in analyzing "Morality" — "Nothing theological about this, it is rigidly scientific and of mighty import," though he fails to make clear from what source he gathered his sample of morality for his critical analysis. I presume in his solitude he took it from the snow capped peak of Echo Mountain. But had he taken it from certain streets in some city where the oscillating corpuscles are more or less polluted, the results of the analysis might have been the opposite, "Immorality." Then, the world would have been without morality (from a scientist standpoint).

For thirty-six years Prof. Larkin based his standard of wisdom on atoms as the smallest bodies in existence, requiring 62,500,000 side by side to make a row an inch long. Thirty-six years Prof. Larkin published his thousands of learned articles from that standard. Alas! four years ago, a woman, Madam Curie, in her work on Radio-Activity, exploded that standard and divided the atom 200,000 times into electrons or corpuscles requiring 12,500,000,000,000 in a row to make a line an inch long. Electrons did not come into existence four years ago, they have always existed.

If in Prof. Larkin's thirty-six years of analytical research he failed to discover this, is it by any means astounding that in forty years he has not discovered the soul?

For thirty-six years Prof. Larkin was confined to a wall, the atom—a limit that some of his ancestor scientists had told him of. But that noble woman, not satisfied with any limit, broke it into an average of 30,000 pieces. And now Prof. Larkin boldly asserts that "Corpuscles have reached the limit of human scrutiny," and that "Nothing whatever exists but corpuscles." And only four years ago it was atoms.

I venture the prophecy that before many years hence, the corpuscles or electrons will be divisible many thousand times into (if I may be permitted to coin a word) THOUGHTONS, which will prove the origin of thought, and many things relative to mind, spirit and soul.

Thoughtons to me are realities, which move or vibrate with raging, terrific speed—distance or time offering no hindrance to instantaneous communications from souls of friends living in body as well as those living in the spirit.

But fearing my article is already too long, I will reserve relating some of the instances until some other time, which to me and many others are not theological but rigidly scientific, and of mighty import.

In conclusion: To me thought is a finer substance than the corpuscles or electrons of matter, spirit finer than thought, soul finer than spirit, Infinite finer than soul. Or in other words, matter is the materialized expression of thought; thought the materialized expression of spirit; spirit the materialized expression of soul; soul the materialized expression of Infinite; Infinite, God, the materialized expression of the whole of all.

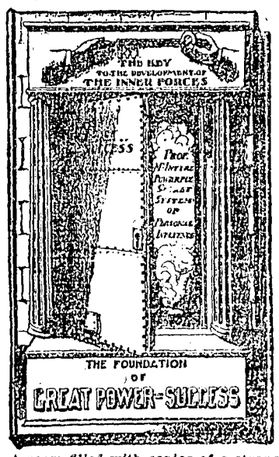
Professor, if thou wouldst discern the soul, build no wall, know no boundaries, no limitations. Be in oneness, in harmonic rapport with THOU ALL.

C. M. CARTER.

Washington, Cal.

(Advertisement.)

Who Wrote This Wonderful MYSTERIOUS BOOK?



Tells of Startling Secrets Jealously Guarded for Ages by Adepts.

Reveals the Marvelous Effects Produced in the Minds and Bodies of Sick and Unsuccessful People Through the Use of a Strange Force That Has Been Overlooked by the Public for Centuries Past.

Shows In Simple Language and Vivid Pictures How Men and Women May Cure Diseases and Habits as if by Magic and Wield a Powerful Influence Over the Minds and Lives of Others.

Why Some Succeed Where Others Fail.

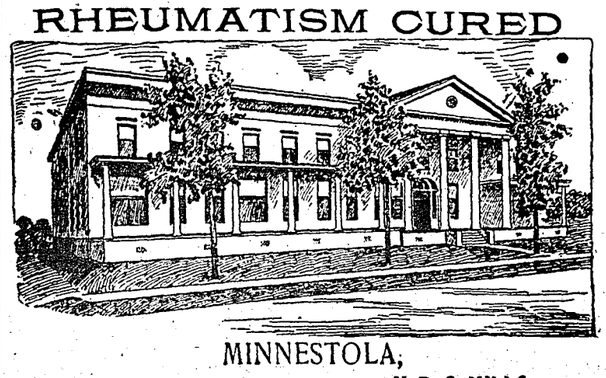
Peculiar Arrangement by Which 100,000 Copies Are to Be Given Away by Mail—Absolutely Free.

A room filled with copies of a strange and mysterious book that contains startling and almost unbelievable evidence of psychic achievements is on exhibition at an institution in New York City. Copies of it have been read with amazement; speculation is rife among the author's friends as to who wrote it; some contend that no mind of this age could describe the possibilities of these carefully guarded systems of the wise old sages and secretive psychic adepts in such simple language and wonderful photographs.

Professor Frederick T. McIntyre, who claims authorship of the work, offers to send a copy free to any person who will, in his own handwriting, send the following peculiar lines to him:

"I want power of mind,
Force and strength in look,
If my writing is satisfactory
Please send me the book."

Professor McIntyre says that he can tell by examining the specimens of handwriting he receives just what the one who penned them is best fitted for in life; what the writer's strong and weak characteristics are, and whether the writer will succeed in using to advantage the many powerful systems of personal influence and healing described in the book. Should the writer be sick or run down physically or mentally, and give the particulars of the trouble in a letter, Professor McIntyre claims he can tell what to do to get well quickly. He does not wish to send this book to any person who would use the system of personal control for any other than honorable purposes free. Like Andrew Carnegie, he believes in the distribution of valuable books.



This book is full of startling explanations and strange pictures proving that any one can master, in a short time, the power to control and sway the minds of others. It describes the strange phenomena of Psychic and Hypnotic Influence; Mystic Healing; Psychic and Suggestive Therapeutics; Personal magnetism, and a combined, simple system of reading the characters of others, though thousands of miles away. It gives you the key to the development of the inner or dormant forces of concentration, force of character, will power, memory, determination, ambition, enthusiasm inspiration, continuity of thought and the ability to throw off the evil effects of diseases and habits through an inner, subjective power, as the Hindoos banish disease and despondency.

It is, indeed, one of the most amazingly interesting books of the age, beaming with interest from cover to cover, and all who receive free copies of it can be thankful. It points out the road to financial and social success; it reveals astonishing facts that have been eagerly sought by the public for many years; proofs that almost carry one back to the days of great miracles.

If you wish a free copy of this wonderful book sit down and write the above verse and send it to Professor F. T. McIntyre, Dept. 1648, No. 126 West Thirty-fourth street, New York, N. Y.

All who write will receive it; no one will be disappointed; it will be sent by mail, postage paid and absolutely free.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street,

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year	$1 00
Six Months	50cts
Thirteen Weeks	25cts
Single Copy	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

A Fraudulent Name.

Some years ago it was the fortune of this writer to make the acquaintance of an Episcopal clergyman. A genial gentleman, we always loved his almost daily calls. Religious matters were not made the subject of conversation. On one occasion our visitor incidentally used the term Christ as a proper name. We inquired: "Is there authority for thus designating Jesus?"

"Most certainly," he replied, "that was his sur-name."

We were surprised at the expression, and said:

"There were no family names in the time accredited to Jesus, among the Eastern nations. A description of the person was frequently used, as John, the baptizer; Mary, the harlot, or untranslated: magdalene. Sometimes, though rarely, the city a person inhabited was used, as Paul of Tarsus, or Jesus of Nazareth; David the king; Isaiah, the prophet. Kitto, article "Proper Names," says: "In reality, there is always only one single name which distinguishes a person." Christ comes to us as Anglicised Greek: christos, and means anointed. It should have been so rendered into English, but the translators capitalized it and made it appear as a proper name, of course for purpose of deception. I have searched diligently to find when and where this personage was officially anointed, as kings were when crowned, or priests when inducted into their sacred office, but find no time when Jesus was anointed, save that related in Luke 7: 37, 38, where 'a woman in the city, which was a sinner" washed Jesus' feet with her tears, wiped them with her hair, and anointed them with ointment. The same affair is mentioned in John 11: 2, which gives the name of Mary, who Luke named "a sinner," who did the anointing. Who else could she have been but the magdalene? A title thus acquired can hardly be called a "sur-name," and to scholars who stop to think, it is hardly complimentary to so designate a person by such a title.

The dominie had remained silent. When we concluded he arose in great anger, too excited to express himself in words, and hurriedly left our presence.

Full two weeks passed, when he again entered our office. An hour of pleasant conversation followed. We chanced to have Liddell & Scott's Greek-English dictionary on the table, with a mark at christos, to which we opened and asked him, as he was about leaving, to read the definition—"From chrio, to be rubbed on, used as an ointment or salve." The good parson had evidently reviewed his classics during his two weeks' absence, and our pleasant relations were again established. He soon after resigned his ministerial charge, removed to an adjoining state and engaged in another occupation, which he followed until his death. We always thought his discoveries, growing out of that vexatious conversation, set him to thinking, and drove him from the ministry.

Persons who designate Jesus as Christ, either do not know, else do not stop to think they are using a verb meaning anointed, oiled or greased, instead of a proper name.

Whilst christos appears in the Greek lexicons, the most learned classical scholars say it is not originally a Greek word, but it probably came into use from the East. Some have suggested it came from the Brahminical 8th Avatar, Crishna. Come from where it may, it has no business in our language, and only appears there with fraudulent intent, as its capitalization and use as a proper name fully demonstrates.

When we have but the will to do it, that very moment will justice be done; that very instant the tyrants of the earth shall bite the dust!—Peter Kropotkin.

AN ENTIRELY NEW DEAL.

The POSTAGE on papers has been increased to all the British possessions on this continent. On a single paper we are compelled to pay ONE CENT each week, amounting to 52 cents a year, whereas previously we only paid the pound rates—a mere trifle. Hence, to all the British possessions on this continent the paper hereafter will be $1.50 per year.

The Dark Ages.

"The period designated as 'The Dark Ages,'" says Hallam, in his View of the State of Europe During the Middle Ages, "span a little more than a thousand years, commencing with the invasion of France by Clovis, A. D. 486, to the invasion of Naples by Charles VIII, in 1495." It was a period in which the learning and literature of the remote past seems to have been swept away, destroyed by ecclesiastics, and the little that remain to later times was preserved by peoples who were obnoxious to Christianity, as the Arabs and Moors.

The article entitled Renaissance in the Encyclopedia Britannica gives a brief outline of that period of ignorance and despotism, of which the church was the parent.

How very different the facts from what are generally supposed when we learn this new birth, the re-awakening of Europe to a new life, dawned when Constantinople, chosen by the so-called first Christian emperor as the seat of his empire, fell into the hands of the Turks. Says the Encyclopedia: "The shadow of what had been the Eastern Empire now passed suddenly away." This was in the year 1453. It was an emergence from ecclesiasticism and gave promise of the great revolution which was ushered in by the Reformation under Luther a hundred years later.

There is scarcely a date or an event occurring during the Dark Ages in which the historian can place implicit trust. The Crusades, said to have been set on foot to rescue the holy sepulchre from the Saracens, are now said, by able scholars, to have been in truth only a movement to prevent Europe being overrun by the Turks. All beyond this is declared an exaggeration of history. Certain it is, soon after the Saracens regained control in the East the attempt of the Turk to establish himself on the ruins of ancient Greece was successful, and there he has remained for five and a half centuries.

The knowledge the West gained in the Orient during the long contest with the Saracens, and the literature stolen from the Moors when they were expelled from Spain at the close of the 15th century, seems to be the base of modern learning.

With the revival of learning came the ecclesiastic with his forged history, to make apparent a condition of the past that never existed. The whole literary world has been deceived by the scholarly monks, shut up in their cloisters, who assumed ancient names and wrote at their leisure, giving accounts of persons and events that never existed. Later authors have fixed dates to these imaginary occurrences, and thus our medieval history.

A large volume would be required to give a feeble conception of that period when, as one writer expressed it, "Religion fenced in all crimes." A few very brief extracts from Hallam will interest the reader. Of this period of a thousand years, when Christianity was supreme, he says:

"An inconceivable cloud of ignorance overspread the whole face of the church, hardly broken by a few glimmering lights, who owe almost the whole of their distinction to the surrounding darkness. * * Indeed I am not aware that more than two really considerable men of learning in the republic of letters appeared, from the sixth to the middle of the eleventh century. * * One might justly say, ignorance is the smallest defect of the writers of these dark ages. * * Such is the complex reciprocation of good and evil in the dispensation of Providence, we may assert, with only an apparent paradox, that, had religion been more pure, it would have been less permanent, and that Christianity has been preserved by means of its corruptions."

Chambers' Encyclopedia says of the author of the above quotations: "England never produced a man who loved truth more disinterestedly than Hallam."

Uneasy Churchmen.

The Presbyterian General Assembly in session at Columbus, Ohio, urge ministers to discourage funerals on the Sabbath. They insist on the omission of Monday recitations in seminaries and colleges to enable students to observe God's holy day. They want a half holiday on Saturdays for all workers, so as to prepare for Sunday observance, and they condemn Sunday newspapers. They claim six millions of laborers are now employed on the Sabbath in the United States.

This movement of the church is an attempt to steal another day each week from labor in the interest of the priesthood.

Sacred days, holidays, festivals, and days in commemoration of heroes, are increasing at terrible rate, and the indications are idleness will soon be rampant, and labor out of fashion. It is presumed the preachers will use their influence with God to prevent dying the last of the week, so as to prevent the necessity of burial on Sunday. In this all hope they will be successful.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond.

She Goes as a Delegate to the Peace Congress to be Held at The Hague.

We take great pleasure in announcing that Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, one of the ablest speakers, secular or otherwise, before the world to-day, and distinguished as an author, seer, and improvisatrice, has been selected by the Peace Congress invisible, as well as by different clubs, cults, individuals and leading societies, to attend, as a delegate, the Peace Congress to be held at The Hague, commencing June 15th. She will take passage on the La Bretagne June 1st, and then by rail by the way of Paris to The Hague.

Mrs. Richmond bears credentials from the National Spiritualist Association, the World's New Thought Federation, the World's Unity League, the Church of the Soul, the Morris Pratt Institute, The Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, Dr. Caird President, and other bodies working in the interest of peace and good will among nations.

No better selection could have been made in the whole ranks of Spiritualisms. Besides her remarkable spiritual gifts, she is a natural-born diplomat, and will always have something pointed and impressive to say at the proper time and place. She will make no mistakes.

Mr. Richmond, highly cultured, always genial and happy, and in harmony with the great work in hand, will accompany Mrs. Richmond as the Special Correspondent of The Progressive Thinker, and he will have something specially interesting to say in the future. They will return to New York about August 1st, in time to fill engagements at the Eastern camps.

What Does It Mean?

During the last few weeks nearly every daily paper we have taken up the eye has fallen on accounts of preachers arrested for some great crime. Most generally they are of a social nature, in which some unfortunate girl is involved, though frequently it is wife murder. From the large number it would seem a clerical epidemic of crime is prevailing.

Though indulgences are no longer on the market virtually licensing crime for a small reward, St. Peters, at Rome, constructed from the proceeds of such sales being an illustration, yet the preachers from their pulpits each Sunday tell their congregations that "Jesus paid all the debt they owe," and that his great merit passes to the credit of each believer in his divine sovereignty.

With such teaching, if believed by those who promulgate the terrible error, is it a wonder they go astray?

Reconstruct your creeds, gentlemen, if you wish to save yourselves and your parishioners from the penitentiary and the gallows.

G. SUBBA RAU.

G. Subba Rau, a distinguished gentleman from India, called at the office of The Progressive Thinker a few days ago, on a tour of investigation in connection with spirit phenomena. In consulting mediums here, he was brought in contact with certain manifestations that he thought certainly originated on the spirit side of life, yet he is inclined to investigate further, or until fully convinced.

Mr. Rau has been attending, during the past year, the college at Meadville, Pa., familiarizing himself with the liberal thought of this country. Before returning to India he will probably spend a year in Boston. Mr. Rau is profoundly interested in occult subjects, and will no doubt return to his native country with much valuable information.

Soul.

(From "Queen Mab.")

Throughout this varied and eternal world
Soul is the only element, the block
That for uncounted ages has remained.
The moveless pillar of a mountain's weight
Is active, living spirit. Every grain
Is sentient both in unity and part,
And the minutest atom comprehends
A world of loves and hatreds; these beget evil and good;
Hence truth and falsehood spring; Hence will and thought and action, all the germs
Of pain or pleasure, sympathy or hate,
That variegate the eternal universe.

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY.

The Birth of an Expression.

Daniel Webster, so early as about 1834, spoke of "The people's government, made for the people, made by the people, and answerable to the people."

Theodore Parker, a distinguished Unitarian preacher of Boston, a few years later, in crystallizing the idea, said: "A government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people."

President Lincoln, in his famous Gettysburg speech, 1863, immortalized the expression by pithily saying: "A government of the people, by the people, for the people."

Thus the growth of laconism.

Religion must always be something emotional; and the culture of emotion is not carried on advantageously in ordinary school-teaching. The system that is best for securing the intellectual element is not best for securing the emotional element.—Bain.

More Stinging Evidence.

It Is Hurled Against the Moores, Who for Several Years Carried on Their Deception in New York.

The fake element in Spiritualism is confined almost exclusively to the cities. Hugh Moore, Elsie Reynolds, Mr. Maybee, and a score of others will not in the future be allowed at any Spiritualist camp or grove meeting. They will be carefully excluded from the same. In the large cities, however, they will find enough gullibles to patronize them, thus enabling them to carry on their nefarious work, just as the counterfeiters of our National currency do. After awhile, however, they will not be permitted to carry on their work even there. The end of their career is not far in the future.

To the Editor:—The Spiritualists of New York and Brooklyn have been amazed and dumfounded at the audacity of the mediums, Rev. Hugh R. Moore and wife, in having been able to carry on successfully, for so long a period, THE MOST STUPENDOUS FRAUD, apparently, under the cloak of Spiritualism. For hypocrisy they have few equals. To face a public audience in the Lyceum Theatre in New York, Sunday after Sunday, and with lectures and tests, as a chartered organization, knowing that they were faking their seances at home, was, to say the least, the rankest hypocrisy. It does not excuse them or lighten the severity of the condemnation that Mr. Moore is believed to be a genuine medium in certain phases. On the contrary, GREATER IS THE CRIME. It is through this power of mediumship that he has been able to mislead and command the confidence of his victims.

Before closing this article the writer will explain how and why Moore is regarded as genuine for independent writing.

In the seances for materialization the evidence that confederates were employed has long been too patent to deceive any but the most credulous.

The main features of the exposure have all been explained in the columns of The Progressive Thinker, and to a certain extent in the secular press, and it is unnecessary to repeat the same at this time. The fact of having total darkness at the seances, and full access to the back room, as well as door leading to the hall, screened by the large pipe organ adjacent to the cabinet, was, to say the least, suspicious, and afforded every opportunity for crooked work.

Then there was no attempt at materialization or dematerialization," except in total darkness, all of which could be performed with a supply of luminous lace. That, and by the aid of confederates, was the method employed, without doubt, as has been so clearly shown. I have avoided attending these seances, with rare exceptions, the past two years, because they would not change the location of the cabinet or hold the seances under better or more satisfactory conditions. One sitter assured me that he got his hands ALL DAUBED WITH LUMINOUS PAINT FROM THE GARMENTS OF A SUPPOSED SPIRIT, AND WAS DISGUSTED.

One, Paulsley, a young man in close touch with the Moore's, is known to be a confederate, and took part in performing as a spook.

If the Moore's consented to give a seance at a private residence, as on one occasion in Brooklyn, when the writer was present, this young man Paulsley came there unbidden by the host, but announced he was invited by Mr. Moore, and admitted. The latter assigned him a seat near the cabinet, and in the semi-darkness his seat was discovered by the writer to be vacant. There is but one explanation for that: playing spirit from the cabinet! The people were slow to believe there could be such trickery at that time.

It goes to show that it is quite possible to have their confederates, and apparently innocent parties in collusion with them right among the guests at a private residence, all unsuspected.

The writer is fully aware how often innocent mediums are accused, unjustly, through the ignorance or prejudice of inexperienced investigators, and after many years of experiments and careful study of the phenomena, has learned to feel very hospitable toward the chosen instruments of the spirit world. All honor is due to true and honest mediums, without whom we would have no direct evidence of a future life; but too much cannot be said in condemnation of a pervert, who, having prostituted his mediumship for material gain and been badly exposed on several occasions; such forfeits all respect. And it is well to place the public on their guard against future imposture.

And what can be said as to those who have been so closely allied with these mediums in this business that they should have known something of their character? People are judged by the class of company they keep! The lady employed to perform at the organ for a considerable period of time is presumed to be of unblemished character, yet it is passing strange that she should have been unaware of the doings back of that organ.

The old gentleman, Titus Merritt, a life-long Spiritualist, had charge of the library, and the sale of books and papers for many months, and also collected the door fees; he certainly must be very obtuse not to know that all was not straight. He was always present at these seances, and was supposed to have free access to the apartments. Glowing descriptions of these seances have appeared in press over his signature. HE ADMITS NOW THAT HE MUST HAVE BEEN GROSSLY DECEIVED. He is not charged with duplicity, that I am aware of, and if misled and beguiled, by reason of old age and extreme credulity, the mantle of charity should be thrown around him. Nevertheless, many followers who might otherwise have been in doubt, and saved money by it, have been misled into acceptance by too much reliance upon examples like the above, and that is the point to be emphasized. Because one possesses genuine psychic powers his ill deeds should not be condoned, but, on the contrary, the condemnation is all the greater and the injury to the cause more irreparable.

In conclusion, I add my testimony in support of the fact this medium has real psychic gifts. I have yet to hear that any reflection can be cast on the independent writing. I know of many who have had private sittings with Mr. Moore for this phase, as likewise the writer on several occasions, and the results were invariably unique, wonderful and eminently satisfactory. Until someone can come forward and is able to explain away the method, it is but reasonable to accept the same as genuine.

The sitting is held alone with the medium, at a table in full light. Questions addressed to spirit friends may be written at home and sealed in an envelope. This never leaves one's sight. It may be touched a moment by the medium, or in fact held by sitter. Blank paper, cut to fit slates, is stacked on the table. The sitter alone selects from this, and places same, some forty or fifty sheets it may be, between two slates. One surface of these sheets is black, the better to see the writing to follow, and after holding the slates thus prepared, with the medium, always above the table and in full light, about six minutes after they are closed messages are found on these sheets, the pages numbered consecutively, and written either in gold or white ink.

There can be no possibility of deception apparent. The messages answer fully the questions submitted, and in addition subjects are treated known to the sitter only. These messages often cover from twenty-five to forty sheets. In the writer's experiments the sealed questions have never been left there, but invariably brought away with the messages.

I do not deem it necessary to condemn every phase because a medium has proved false in some for the evident purpose of acquiring graft.

How long will it take for intelligent Spiritualists to learn that they should not accept everything that passes under the name of spirit manifestations, without they are given under strict test conditions, or when there cannot be a shadow of a doubt, as in the case of well-attested mediums long and favorably known as such?

We know so little of the difficulties in the way of our departed friends to communicate through our mediums, that we can well afford to be charitable; but it is to the interest of the latter that the FIELD SHOULD BE CLEARED OF THOSE WHO WOULD BRING DISGRACE ON THE CAUSE, SO THAT THE COLUMNS OF OUR PAPERS DEVOTED TO ENLIGHTENMENT MAY BE FILLED WITH INTERESTING AND ENCOURAGING REPORTS, INSTEAD OF HAVING TO DIG INTO THE MIRE TO ROOT OUT EVIL.

CHAS. P. COCKS.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

TO THE ILLINOIS SPIRITUALISTS.

And to All Genuine Mediums in Particular.

It is time to rally round your standard bearer, the Illinois State Association. Do you know what the President and his assistant did for you at Springfield, recently? Do you realize what that bill meant to every medium in the State, had it passed and become a law? Do you know that if there were times when organization was needed it were upon just such occasions as these? And it should impel every society in the State to become auxiliary, and every true blue Spiritualist, not a member of an auxiliary society, to join the State Association at once, and see that their names are kept upon the roll in support of this important institution. We cannot successfully fight so great and so concentrated and desperate an enemy from ambush, and unorganized. There are enough of us, with honesty and conscientious scruples, to make a grand showing if properly organized, and with the right spirit—self-protection and justice—we can accomplish all that is our free-born right.

It only costs $1.00 a year, 2 cents a week, to become an individual member of the State Association, and every true-hearted, pure-spirited Spiritualist can certainly afford this much towards the cause. It is not giving something for nothing. Your conscience will tell you so if you consult it for a moment in the silence.

DR. T. WILKINS, Sec'y.
15 Park Ave., Chicago, Ill.

In wonder all philosophy [say religion] began, in wonder it ends, and admiration fills up the interspace; but the first wonder is the offspring of ignorance, the last is the parent of adoration.—Coleridge.

Men are often capable of greater things than they perform. They are sent into the world with bills of credit, and seldom draw to their full extent. —Horace Walpole.

The practice of self-restraint and renunciation is not happiness, though it may be something much better.—T. H. Huxley.

Beautiful Home.

O, where shall I seek for my beautiful home?
In lands far away shall my eager feet roam?
Shall I seek for its beauty in fair Southern isles,
Where the breezes e'er soothe, and the sun ever smiles?
Home, home, beautiful home,
O, where shall I seek for my beautiful home?

Shall I seek for my home in the Orient land?
Shall I seek for an Eden where man never sinned?
Over land and o'er sea I may restlessly roam,
But where, tell me, where is my beautiful home?
Home, home, beautiful home,
O, where shall I seek for my beautiful home?

There are bowers of beauty, and gardens most fair;
There are scenes of enchantment to lull earthly care;
There are groves of delight where the weary may rest,
But where is the beautiful home of my quest?
Home, home, beautiful home,
O, where shall I seek for my beautiful home?

In vain, all in vain, is this wandering quest
For a home in the spirit of beauty all drest:
Over land and o'er sea never more need I roam,
For 'tis Love in the heart makes the beautiful home.
Home, home, beautiful home,
It is Love in the heart makes the beautiful home.

Love spangles with beauty its home in the heart,
Ever moulding the mind with Love's wonderful art:
Nevermore far away will I wearily roam,
For here, in my heart, is my beautiful home.
Home, home, beautiful home,
For here, in my heart, is my beautiful home.

O, why should I wander o'er land and o'er sea,
For that home where my heart may in peace ever be?
O, why seek a home on some far away star,
When sweet thoughts and angels my company are?
Home, home, beautiful home,
With the beautiful souls is my beautiful home.

Bright visions of beauty before me arise—
They are glimpses of beautiful homes in the skies:
Then joyful I wait till the angels shall come,
And bear me away to that beautiful home.
Home, home, beautiful home,
They'll bear me away to that beautiful home.

JAS. C. UNDERHILL.

Hammond, Ind.

BLUE LAWS OF IDAHO.

Puritanical Intolerance Rampant in "The Free West."

Sixty-five blithe summers have passed over my head, but yesterday was the first puritanical Sunday ever experienced, and that, too, in what is termed "The Free West."

Is the world becoming more creedal and intolerant, or do Western preachers run the legislatures? In my roaming from Maine to California, through Australia, South America, Africa, the Indias and China, the Mediterranean and Northern Europe, in dear sunkissed Idaho have I seen for the first time all business places closed by prevailing statutes—except cigar stores with card-playing annex, and dives where young men resort!

Are those statutes intended to drive young men to these places and to the "amen corner" in the church, to listen to stories chewed over thousands of times, about a fabled Eden and ancient legends about impossibilities—unscientific and void of facts—wholly forgetting the eleven days' change in our calendars, which would have made our Sunday a Wednesday if the Julian calendar had not been superseded by the Gregorian?

As for closing the saloons and stores, it does not interfere with my comfort, as I am not a drinking man, and am well provided with food and clothes to last over Sunday; but the compelling of free people (Lord save the mark), who intend to be law-abiding and self-respecting, to act under a blue-law regime! Just think of it!

Hypatia was torn limb from limb in the streets of Alexandria by the early Christians, because of her educational advocacy of things against mental slavery; and Christians have since then killed more people than there are Christians alive to-day, simply in their intolerance against freedom. Freedom is liberty governed by law, but all liberty can be legislated out of a country where hypocritical intolerance holds sway.

In Speaking to our legislators, who are supposed to represent their constituents, they invariably excuse foul legislation by saying, "Well, it was all worked up, cut and dried, before the legislative session." By whom, they avoid mentioning, but the world knows. If the influx of modern Christianity, which is influencing our legislators to enact puritanic laws in the west, would make men truer, better and nobler, I would say, God speed! But where do we find to-day a nobler class of men, as a rule, than we did forty years ago? Their words were as good as their note then, and their cabin door was ever open to a stranger, be he ever so poor; their handshake was an earnest grip of friendship, and as electric as the grip of the Rosicrucian brotherhood. While to-day, when a poor rancher has driven a dozen miles for supplies, or a miner for provision, comes to town, the town is dead to him; he cannot procure necessities, even though a starving family awaits his return, simply because our legislators have allowed a certain class of non-producers to lead them around by the nose, and enacted laws which could not be surpassed in puritanic times.

The early Romans compelled women to wear long skirts as an emblem of servility, the Puritans put gag-laws against the Quakers, and the same ilk of spirit seems to have entered our great west, which we firmly believed in early times to be beyond the reach of bigotry and intolerance. But thanks to the Central Power of the Universe, and the progressive age, freedom in its true sense will soon dispel intolerant creeds, which are fighting a death struggle, and upon their ashes rear a nobler, better and truer manhood, with self-respect sufficient, who will need no blue-laws to order to make them good citizens.

C. J. JOHNSON.

Pocatello, Idaho.

Sacred are the lips from which has issued only truth. Over all wealth, above all station, above the noble—the robed and crowned—rises the sincere man. Happy is the man who neither paints nor patches, veils nor veneers! Blessed is he who wears no mask!—Ingersoll.

Fame is not got by seeking it. All such pursuit is vain. It may very well come about that a man will succeed through tact and various artifices in making for himself some sort of name. But if there is no inner worth, all will prove empty and ephemeral.—Goethe.

THE RED, WHITE AND BLUE.

General Grant's Reception in Spirit Life.

To the Editor:—I am an old medium, and not now working in public, I believe most of my work now is done in silence. I used to help out in the halls in Boston years ago in tests and reading, which were mostly in rhyme. Well, to come to the point, I had a strong impression to send two or three of my little works to different papers; I thought you might like one. It was written soon after Grant passed to the great beyond. I gave it from the platform in Cobb Hall at the time, and the organist said that it would be set to music and sung on Decoration Day, which was near, but I declined, and among all my little verses I have never given away or had published one, unless it was written for a friend by a spirit, for them personally. I like your paper the best of any Spiritualist paper. I enjoy it. I wish you good luck in all you do for the good of all.

I saw in a circle, the fall before Grant passed on, the room trimmed with flags and bunting and spread-eagles, and I said "a great person in the nation is to go soon," and it was General Grant.

HARRIET A. CHASE.

Onset, Mass.

General Grant's Reception in Spirit Life.

You may strew the bright flowers
Where our bodies are laid,
The drum and the fife
By our comrades be played;
We treasure the music
And the blossoms' bright hue,
But love best the flag
Of Red, White and Blue.

You may speak of the battles
In life we have won,
In the fierce bitter strife
Of a war that is done;
But it were better for us
Could you say we were true
To the flag of our Union
Of Red, White and Blue.

The boatman is busy
Plying his oar,
For many are coming
To land on this shore.
They miss not a welcome
When we know 'tis their due
To come under the folds
Of Red, White and Blue.

We have our great leader
Ahead of us all;
You may build o'er his dust
A monument tall.
He marshals his army
In uniform new,
And he's proud of his banner
Of Red, White and Blue.

His banner was waiting
For him to unfold;
It was blue like the sky,
With stars shining like gold.
Such splendor on earth
Mortal never can view
When the breeze caught the folds
Of Red, White and Blue.

We joined all our forces
To welcome our chief;
Our meeting was joyous,
Your parting was grief;
There were thousands of soldiers,
The tried and the true,
Who stood on the shore
With the Red, White and Blue.

Each soldier stood ready
His chief to salute,
While the bands played a welcome
As soft as a lute,
And the song they were singing
As they filed out of view,
Was the Star-Spangled Banner
Of Red, White and Blue.

HARRIET A. CHASE.

WANTED! WANTED!

The address of every worker for Spiritualism in the State of Illinois. About ten in every hundred are unselfish workers. Many will donate liberally when asked. Some want to take the lead on State ocasions. Some are generous with advice, and nothing else; others see nothing but failure in every undertaking, but all do the best that is in them. What we want in order to start our Fraternal Camp Association, are the workers. If you are not one, send the address of those you know who are, and at the same time state what you wish, to be a charter member at $5 for the first year, or $1 annually. Let us hear from all.

ALEX CAIRD, M. D.,
598 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

The Triumph of the Soul For Everlasting Peace.

Delivered Through the Speech of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Chicago, April 20, 1907.

Infinite Life and Light, Love and Wisdom divine and perfect, at the altar of Thy visible universe we bend in praise. Now that the springtime of earth is here, now that these Thy children are welcoming the song birds and the bursting buds and flowers, that afar from the city's noise and din make glad the wonderful beauty and glory of nature, may they learn more and more to appreciate the blue dome of the bending sky, and the green forests and fields and the dancing waves and the waving grasses and grain; back unto the nature that they have forsaken may Thy children turn, more and more realizing that the abundance of life and light are there. Unto Thy temple of the spirit we turn with great thanksgiving for the life-tides that are flowing toward the earth from the realm invisible, from the realm above whereunto the loved ones have passed, from the realm within that cometh forth to meet the light that is beyond and above. Oh! may Thy children know of that deeper and larger realm; may they know of that which holds greater fulfillment, more perfect victory and greater beauty. And unto that realm of the soul that abideth forever, supreme and perfect, allied ever unto Thee, may Thy children ever turn, knowing that there all hopes and prophecies and fulfillments abide, and knowing also that they will one day conquer the clouds of sense and time and selfishness that encompass them here. May they realize more and more each day and hour that every step leadeth unto this higher victory, every pathway leadeth unto that perfect height, and that there shall be ultimately the supreme victory. Amen.

Discourse.

"I come not to bring peace, but the sword."

"Behold, I show you a more excellent way."

The "Prince of Peace" of Christendom knew quite well that the nations of the earth were not ready to abolish war. He also knew quite well that the very word of peace would invoke strife. He knew that Truth is a two-edged sword that pierces, morally and spiritually, the shadowy realm of those who are in a state of warfare.

Now we do not consider that peace is a thing that can be superficially applied, or that nations in a state of war can agree to abolish war and abide by it. The drunkard signs the pledge; it pleases the temperance people, and possibly makes him think he is going to be sober, but remove those external restraints and he drinks again, because he has not personally and individually gained the victory.

Besides, there are a great many states of war where there are no fire-arms, no weapons of bodily destruction, no armaments, no soldiers, no war ships. It was just as much a state of war when the colored people were kept in chattel slavery as if there had been soldiers guarding every one of them, for the government of the United States that represented peace and the equal right of every human being to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," was helping to keep them in slavery; if you released any of the slaves the soldiers of the United States were after you. That mysterious "underground railway" participated in by Quakers and all peace-loving people was a matter of great concern to the government of the United States, for valuable property was being sped away to Canada by methods only known to those connected with this "underground railway." There was a little house in Rochester, New York, the home of Isaac and Amy Post—two of the most simple, earnest and peace-loving Quakers to be found anywhere, in which there was not a closet, nor a corner in the cellar or attic that had not held refugees from slavery. Sometimes they would go out dressed in his clothes and sometimes in hers, and in all kinds of clothes and disguises and be helped to Canada. It was said they were violating the laws of the land. So they were. But they were obeying the laws of peace. The soldiers and officials of the government would have arrested them as officers of the law; yet the Law of Peace was the liberty of these men and women.

Privateering on the high seas is no longer lawful, excepting when nations are at war, or excepting when nations wish to conquer territory. But it is no longer a private enterprise; you cannot go out as a pirate, but you can join the army or navy and go out and conquer some innocent people.

So long as the spirit of aggressive warfare and oppression is in existence, the technical signing of peace treaties or agreements will no longer prevail, or will not prevail; we mean until there is sufficient sentiment or growth of the people to insist upon it, and that if the Court of Arbitration that is to be permanently established shall be in a position at all times to dispose of the disputes and causes of war among the nations of the earth, and if there is the moral support of the people behind it it will prevail, and if there is not it will not prevail.

When we talk about the existing state of affairs or the growth of nations we are not talking to your personal prejudices, we are not talking in favor or against your personal political party, we consider one political party just as corrupt as the other, excepting that the one out of power promises reform, and when in power does not fulfill the reforms promised. That is all the difference. But a state of war exists whenever and wherever by any individual or collective strength any man or combination of men oppressess his or their fellow man, whether it is in the workshop, the store or the counting room, or whether it is at the polls when you are voting; but wherever it may be, that is a state of war, and the state that produces peace comes when you rebel against it.

Revolution is not war. War is before the revolution, in the state of oppression and injustice and force that preceded it. In the war between Russia and Japan, which was war on both sides, both were on the material plane; there was no particular moral problem in the question, it was simply two giants fighting for supremacy. Japan had the advantage in ages of physical and mental training and obedience. Russia had great power, but it was physical, and though it had a trained army it was crude compared to the army of Japan. Every man in Japan is made of iron; it is the trained, the accustomed, the obedient nerve and muscle. It was a great physical conflict; it also was a great moral conflict, for it revealed what Russia was pining for.

The revolution in Russia is not ended. Revolutions do not go backward, and the revolution for liberty is not war, it is the result of all those years of imperialism and oppression, years of war. There is a cartoonist who lately happily hit upon the three causes of war, "the army, the navy and the diplomat." Where these do not exist wars are very few. Even the aborigines of this country, as they are called, did not wage destructive wars with one another very often. The army of your nation on the frontier was the prolific cause of war: the aggressive act of our encroaching civilization, whiskey and soldiers. When we talk about the "ways of peace," we do not mean these ways that increase the price of your living day by day with encroaching firmness, and does not increase your wages. It is not a peaceful measure when every necessity of life is higher and when there is no more money in the hands of the consumers to pay for it.

We fully believe that the intelligence, the growing intelligence and unity of the Trades Unions, the Labor Unions and Federation of Labor Unions will make it possible to have an adjustment by and by; but so long as there are oppressive combinations of capital there will be hostile strikes, and so long as there are lockouts Labor must resist; and the sympathy must be with labor, because here are millions of men, and on the other side simply millions of dollars. One man with a million dollars has no right to control a million men with one dollar apiece. That is the plain proposition. But if he does make it inevitable that he must have the larger part of the value of their work, and of course they must work, they must have their daily bread, and if their daily bread must be had at such a cost, that is an act of war.

Now all these capitalists are praying for peace. When the Czar of Russia and Andrew Carnegie join in issuing a call for a Peace Congress it means, that either the Czar of Russia wants to control the world, or is afraid of his counselors, afraid of his soldiers, afraid of his personal attendants. He is not seeking for the peace of the world. Andrew Carnegie may be. He has made, through warfare, many millions of dollars, and now he wants to distribute it—distribute it in books that no one can afford to read, because they have not the time, and in building libraries for towns which the towns cannot keep up because they have no perpetual endowment funds. Neither will a Peace Congress be of any use when the world is engaged more and more in making the armaments of war.

Notwithstanding this (all this that we say) the peace of the world is surely coming. It is an accomplishment, a result. That little seed that is down there in the sod is not slumbering, though it seems to be, but it is putting forth every energy to come forth, the sun is winning it to appear; but you put a stone on it and it will not grow; there must be all accessories for helping that growth. Sometimes the storm comes and destroys it, sometimes there are outward things that interfere and the germ does not yield its right growth and fruitage; but after the struggle of the springtime and the summer if you look at the fruit-laden orchard, if you look at the vineyards loaded with fruitage, if you see the fields of harvesting grain you may know that the time of peace has come. The struggles of growth and storms have been in vain to prevent the harvest. It is because of this fruitage that the people and nations are more kindly; because they worship at the time of the harvest; "The Harvest Home," the thanksgiving time of the year. You all remember how in your childhood the children and the grandchildren gathered around the ancestral hearth, and the thanksgiving was for the fruitage of the year.

The Harvest of Peace comes as the result of growth, and that there may be the seeds of peace planted in the spirit it must begin with the individual, with society and with the nation. External appliances will not answer. People cannot win you to it now by saying "this is the acceptable time, this is the year of the Lord." Put your house in order, put your community in order, put your society in order, disband your law courts, do not fight with your neghbor about an inch or foot of land he is in possession of which you think belongs to you. Every time a dispute is transplanted to the law courts instead of an individual or personal adjustment it is an act of war. There it becomes an intellectual contest between the lawyers. Whether you are right or wrong you expect to succeed. If you are accused of any crime, whether you are guilty or not guilty, you expect your lawyer will succeed in winning the fight for you.

Of course the true state of peace, is not to encroach upon the rights of your neighbor; is not to take advantage of anyone in business. You close the gambling houses and you leave open the Stock Exchanges and Board of Trade. But the "Bucket Shops" are closed because, they say, the small dealers cannot afford to lose. But the greatest gambling of the world is in Stock Exchanges and Boards of Trade, the speculation in options and the hypothecating of stocks. Whatever you may choose to call this, it is gambling. It does not relieve the great pressure upon the world that under certain conditions it is legalized. The man who turns the wheel of fortune in a little policy or lottery shop knows what he is doing, but if he buys your watered stocks he does not, he does not know what the conditions are. When a prominent judge in this city was once blamed for not closing the gambling saloons, he simply replied, "I am not adjudicating in that way. If I am required to wipe out gambling, I will begin by closing the Board of Trade." All this system of speculation is a state of war, but it is not called so by the public.

Every act that grinds a man down to ten or twelve or sixteen hours of labor every day in order that he may gain a living is an act of war. Every act that prevents him from having equal opportunities with others to earn his daily bread is an act of war. And everything that so constrains human life, that the garret, the cellar, the space under the sidewalk of the store or shop, and the stall in the stable are possible places of human abode is an act of war. The children that perish every year under the warfare of the industrial system are thousands more in number than those soldiers who perish on the battle fields during the period of what is called actual war. Women who bear the burdens of oppression go out, leaving their little ones to the mercy of the flames or whatever, to win their daily bread and such scant support as they can give their children. More people die during the time of so-called peace than ever are slain during the time of battle.

The Indians along the frontier die in greater numbers when there is no war, because they are debauched and corrupted by the whiskey and immorality of the army that is near them. Peace has its terrors; and the time that people say a nation is most "prosperous" there are records of more of its people dying of starvation and want than at any other time.

We deplore the killing of those Russians who went up to the palace, men, women and children, simply to ask for a change in the laws. We deplore the massacre of the Jews, men, women and children. Have you calculated the statistics of death in times of so-called peace? Do you know what is transpiring in your city day by day? Are you aware of the children under fourteen years of age who are toiling day after day; who are the victims of this warfare against the right of children to grow? Do you know what is transpiring around you in the midst of your delightful friends, the going to the theaters, places of amusement, and the palaces of the millionaries, of the great pageant that is unseen which passes invisibly into the world of spirits?

We say to you, that the way of the Soul is the way of Peace; that it begins with these little ones, that the way of the Soul is here for these helpless ones who struggle and labor but cannot rise above their environment because of these human conditions. We say to you, that the way of peace is here and now, to begin with individual or personal things, individual social states, individual cities, individual commonwealths and finally with the nation. We approve of a great many things that your chief executive has done, we think he has taken a great stand in many directions, but we do not approve of the stand he has taken with reference to those union men, those laboring men in the West who are under trial for murder. We believe it is a political measure and we do not approve of it, we think it is a stamp of oppression. We think no man in the chair of the Chief Executive of this country should ever condescend to do any political work, either for re-election or for the election of any other man to succeed him. We think the time will come in your own nation when the Chief Executive will not be a partisan, but when, having been elected by his particular party, he will seek to justly and wisely administer the laws for the benefit of the whole people.

We think it is just as much an act of warfare when the army of the United States is called out over and above the protest, oftentimes, of governors of States or the mayors of cities to help regulate local affairs as it is to announce war. Understand us, we think that the true republic and the truly representative government will excel in the ways of peace. It will have ways to meet these emergencies that are not centered in armies. We think there is not a more corrupt system in the world than the detective system of the United States, and every State and city. We think there is no greater incentive to the crime and vice of false accusation than the average detective has by the system of rewards. "Fifty thousand dollars reward for train wreckers" is a direct bribe against some one's life or liberty. Many an innocent person has been deprived of life by manufactured evidence. These are acts of war going on every day in your midst. Do the citizens protest against it? Do people say, "this is not right?" Are men tried by juries of their peers when no thinking man, no one who has an opinion can sit on the jury? You are asked if you have formed an opinion? You would be an idiot if you had not. If you have formed an opinion it disqualifies you. If the courts wish an ideal jury like that they should go to the imbecile or lunatic asylums or elsewhere for their juries. Intelligent men and women must form an opinion when they hear about a case.

The truth is, the state of moral and spiritual growth must constitute the peace or war of the community. If the people do not use revolvers or weapons of war, they use the oppression of power or position. In London personal life is safer than it is here. In London you can speak any time on any subject on any of the great Commons or in the parks and not be interfered with. You cannot do it here. They have learned by experience that, notwithstanding it is a monarchical government, personal liberty insures the safety of the country. A representative monarchy with a monarch as a figure head is liable to have more personal liberty than a so-called republic with a strenuous figure head, a man that is liable to break away and do things. Surely you cannot look that way for the ways of peace. Policemen carry no weapons of death in London. Here if you are running to catch a midnight train you are liable to be shot by a policeman for a thief. We are not saying this haphazard; it is within the recollection of some of you that a number of people have been shot, some of them killed, by policemen, while running for their trains. This unlimited power in the hands of irresponsible persons is what causes a state of war in your very midst; and the added power is placed in the hands of the people that should be made responsible to the public and to the government.

Now what is the Way of the Soul? What is this "more excellent way" that we are speaking of? In the first place, it is the way of growth; it is the overcoming of selfishness with the knowledge of the welfare of others, you being included.

It is a state of warfare when a man has a private park with a high wall around it so that nobody can look into the park and enjoy its beautiful scenery unless some living near can overlook the park from the upper windows of his residence, or as one man did in England. A very disagreeable man who owned a very large estate, in order that the people should not see the beautiful flowers and trees growing there built a very high wall around it. But a different sort of a man, owning some adjoining property, built a very high tower upon his property commanding a complete view of his neighbor's park, to which he invited the public to come and enjoy the beauties of his neighbor's grounds. So you will very soon overcome the walls of selfishness by just making your outlook high enough to look right down into the garden of humanity. The truth is, that there must be in the individual the perception that other people are included in the plan of life, that all people are a part of the great scheme, and that the world of humanity does not revolve around the personal pronoun "I" or "me and my family," but all the other families out there. If there is a public park you have the benefit of it as well as your neighbors. If there is a public art gallery, and art is such a wonderful thing to educate the people, you have the joy of it as well as others.

A singular thing happened in London not many years ago. In the "East End" of London where no one having any claim to a "respectable" livelihood or living would care to live, there was a gallery of art built by the aid of some philanthropic people for the benefit of the poor people who lived in that neighborhood. But on Sundays this gallery was closed to the public, opened only to the wealthy "patrons," the "contributors," the nobility and royalty, who, making a grand spectacle Sunday afternoons driving out there with their carriages and retinue to visit this gallery, but the management denied that day to the toilers of the neighborhood—for whom it was ostensibly built—the only day they could possibly find time to visit it. Some one perceiving the sad, but ludicrous situation started to work to have that art museum opened to the working people on Sundays, and at last, after vigorous and persistent work for twenty-five years or more, succeeded in having it opened to the public on Sundays. By that time the museum had ceased to be a place of interest to the neighborhood, the people preferring the parks and the open air for their Sunday recreation.

So in this and similar ways the people at last conquer. But it takes about fifty, sixty or one hundred years to change legislation in England. How long it is going to take here, you can never tell, for you are becoming crystallized. While England has now no compulsory vaccination laws, you are in the throes of being compelled to have your children threatened with vaccination every time a medical board thinks there ought to be more money coming into the medical department. If you have that struggle to go through, will it take you fifty, sixty or seventy-five years to get rid of it? We know the champion of that cause in Great Britain who has lived to see the triumph of his labors.

Now when people are legally allowed to live and worship "according to the dictates of conscience," they are not privileged to die according to the dictates of conscience, but must either have a physician or a post mortem examination. It is a wrong thing to die without the help of a physician, it is against the law. That is an act of oppression. It is just as much an act of war as if they came and dragged you out of your bed at midnight and compelled you to go to prison. And you voters do not know enough to protest against it.

Talk about a Peace Congress when it is possible for all these things to occur. The voice of peace says: Vote according to the dictates of your conscience; if you have the opportunity. And if there is no party that represents the dictates of your conscience, make one. The whole machinery of the government is not as unalterable as the laws of the Medes and Persians; you have a right to alter them. The way of Peace is the way of Right, of that which is just to your neighbors and friends.

"Oh! but people must be protected against epidemics." It would be a good thing if you had a law to protect you against the microbes in your brains. Smallpox is neither probable, nor when it comes is a thousandth part as dangerous as vaccination. The measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria and many modern diseases—we don't know about appendicitis—are often due to vaccination. When "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" are guaranteed the people, the simple remedy of a healthful way of life and simple hygienic measures in the way of prevention will always succeed.

Then in moral ways; The stealing that is done under the sanction of business and that which is done by the man who takes your pocketbook from your pocket or takes your overcoat from the hall-tree are the same morally, the only difference is that one comes within the pale of, so-called, legal and legitimate transaction. But if the Soul were questioned, and said: "any advantage that you take of your neighbor is theft," the question would be answered. To the credit of the human race be it said: there are more people to-day who refuse to take advantage of their neighbors than formerly, notwithstanding your Puritan ancestors, and those who were born and reared in the country, we think the average business man of to-day is more honest than he used to be. Corporations have no souls to be saved, and no one is responsible for them. But the mass of the people are growing to understand that the people must receive, at least, that which they think to be an equivalent for their labor. Now it comes to be fact that when there is greater intelligence in the world the giant in business will not think because he has a genius for doing certain things that, therefore, he has the right to do them regardless of others, any more than a giant physically will think of trampling down the people upon the street because of his physical strength. The moral purpose is served by using the strength of the giant to protect those who are feeble.

Now, if you only remember, when they are talking about peace, to begin at the foundation, and if there is a Rockefeller, a Carnegie, a Vanderbilt or a Gould who is a giant in business, let us use his gigantic strength for the benefit of those who are feeble. This boy, who rescues men, women and children from the flames, he is the hero, not the man who can trample upon men and women because he has intellectual and financial strength. Let us find the "elevator boy" who will run through the gamut of fire and flame, mentally and physically, for the benefit of others, that is now in your midst. Let us find the great "rescuers" who understand the way and will not falter, and let those rescuers reach deep down into your consciousness.

The Soul of you is aware; the Spirit of you is making ready. "I will not do this thing," you say when tempted by speculation or by offers of investments promising the quick accumulation of a fortune. All these schemes for grinding out a fortune in a minute will disappear and the world will know that the bread earned by daily labor is not a grinding process, but the legitimate fruitage of endeavor. You cannot keep a child still, it has got to be doing something. You cannot keep a healthy young man or woman perfectly idle, young people like that want to do something, and the thing they want to do is what they want to do, and that desire to work may be directed in the way of creating some energy and wish to be useful. The desire to win one's daily bread will be encouraged to come forth, and there will be no drones in society. There will be no foundling asylums, because there will be no foundlings. Every child will have a home; every child will have loving parents, even if both their natural parents are taken away. There will be no "orphan asylums," for little children, because they will have houses and they will have garden places, and beautiful dresses with flowers on them. Think of little orphan children marching in a procession along the streets all dressed exactly alike and known only by their numbers! By and by daisies and roses will blossom out on their hats, and in their hearts because you will see to it that homes will be opened to them. How many homes there are where no children's steps are heard, where there are no voices of little children filling the home with freshness and health. Oh! how blessed it is that some of these homes of wealth find places for these little ones. It is an act of warfare when you prevent these children from growing as other children grow, when they are exhibited on the streets as being the recipients of "charity." This is an act of war.

Let us see to it that the beneficence of the rich takes deeper and wider range. Let us see to it that all the growing faculties and powers in the human heart and mind shall unfold in the right direction so that every one of these little ones shall have an opportunity to grow.

In a little while you will have "Decoration Day." It is a beautiful thing, especially if you decorate the graves of the "Gray" as well as the "Blue." But what need have they of flowers? You cannot benefit them by decorating their graves with flowers, but you might make them rejoice in their new-found homes by giving flowers to their beloved ones who may still be in mortal form, or to poor women and children who seldom or never possess a flower. If it be too much trouble to distribute your flowers in that way, send them to the hospitals to cheer and help heal those who need them, as those who have the ever-living flowers of the spirit realm do not. Or give a bouquet of flowers to your wife and see how very happy she will look, especially if you have never done such a thing since you were courting her. If you do that in memory of your beloved ones who are in the other world, they will be more gratified than if you scatter your flowers over a place they never visit except through your presence there. Talk about tombs and memorial windows! You can pay better tribute to those who have arisen, by loving remembrance of those who are here.

So you make for the Way of Peace when you cease to celebrate your Fourth of July and your national holidays with the sounding of guns; and you would make for the Way of Peace if the soldiers of your armies who have come home after their warring should retire to peaceful life, and desire not war, but universal peace. When General Grant became the chief executive of the government in exchanging the honors of war for the great responsibilities of peace he did that which every noble soldier should. He held that the government as a peaceful government was more sacred than a warring one. He sent peace commissions to the Indians. He tried to negotiate peace over all the world. The Geneva court of arbitration, as the outgrowth of the war of the rebellion, was largely under his advice.

Let us make for peace in that recognition, that all souls are equal in the sight of God. Then there will be no partial legislation; then there will be no "I am holier than thou," and the Way of Peace will be the Way of Justice and of Fraternal Love.

SPRING.

Down where the brook bends between the wildwood hills,
I stand upon a rock and open wide the door
Of Soul; as the great Cosmic Ocean moves and thrills
In rhythmic waves upon the conscious shore.

Spring! Thy voice is orchestral, low and deep
And sweet, and every circled tone is pearled
In affinity! Millions join the strain and sweep
The song aloft to melodize the world!

I hear the brooklet patter at my feet,
I sense its liquid lull and onward bound;
I see the first dainty daisies pure and sweet,
I sense their fragrant circling souls around.

In the tree-top up the hill a bird-note calls,
Where the art of Spring is spread in changing hue
On canvas tinged with gray, fleeced in vapor-falls
Of white, and rocked in the cradle of the blue.

My vision upward soars through life's spiral climb,
From laughing waters to Heaven's silent seas;
From shifting sand and rifting rock to rhyme
Of budding leaves, and bird-sung harmonies.

From the cold sand and rock, past the clinging moss,
And grasses peeping through the old leaves and loam,
Beyond the hills and trees and clouds, far across
The great Magnetic Sea, to Aspiration's home.

HARVEY W. JACOX.

Caledonia, Mich.

"The Light or Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.

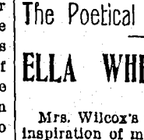
"An Infamous Dynamite Roman Catholic Conspiracy Detected and Exposed." "Romanism Exposed." Two pamphlets by Rev. J. G. White, author of "Startling Facts." Price, 10 cents each, or two for 15 cents.



Remarkable Invention.

AN INSTRUMENT THAT IMPROVES AND STRENGTHENS EYESIGHT.

Spectacles May Be Abandoned

This instrument, which the inventor has patented, is called "Actina"—a trade-mark word.

In the treatment of eye diseases the inventor of "Actina" claims that there is no need for cutting or drugging the eye in treating most forms of disease. Cataracts, and other abnormal growths have been removed, and weakened vision improved or restored by this new and more humane method. "Actina" has been tested in thousands of cases and has effected marvelous results, many people testifying that it saved their eyesight. So confident are the owners that this device is an instrument of great merit that they will give absolutely a free trial. They want everyone interested to make a thorough investigation and a personal test of "Actina." One will be sent on trial postpaid so that any person can give it a test.

They issue a book—a Treatise on Disease—which tells all about "Actina," the diseases it will remove, what others think of it, what marvelous results it has effected, and all about the responsibility of its owners—all will be sent absolutely free upon request. This book should be in the home of every family. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342R, 811 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

914

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

The Poetical and Prose Works —BY— ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Mrs. Wilcox's writings have been the inspiration of many young men and women. Her hopeful, practical, masterful views of life give the reader new courage in the very reading and are a wholesome spur to flagging effort. Words of truth so vital that they live in the reader's memory and cause him to think—to his own betterment and the lasting improvement of his own work in the world, in whatever line it lies—flow from this talented woman's pen.

POEMS OF PASSION.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Many thousands of this book have been issued, showing the estimation in which it is held. Presentation edition, with author's portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF POWER.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

New and revised edition, containing more than one hundred new poems, displaying the author's fine taste, cultivation and originality. With portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

This charming collection comprises many of the best poetic creations of the author. Embellished with portrait. Presentation edition. Price $1.

MAURINE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

An ideal poem about as true and lovable a woman as ever poet created. With portrait of author. Price $1.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

A birthday book compiled by Ella Giles Ruddy, from the poetical and prose writings of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It epitomizes her inspiring optimistic philosophy with an apposite quotation for each day in the year. With author's portrait, and half-tone illustrations prefacing each month. Cloth, price, $1.

KINGDOM OF LOVE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A magnificent collection of poems suitable for recitations and readings, true to the very best there is in human nature. Presentation edition, dark red cloth, $1.

Three Remarkable Books

"The Divine Pedigree of Man."
"The Law of Psychic Phenomena."
"A Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life."

The Divine Pedigree of Man, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God. By Thompson Jay Hudson, LL. D. A most remarkable work demonstrating the existence of the Soul and Future Life. It is scientific throughout. Price $1.50. Dr. Hudson's work on "The Law of Psychic Phenomena" is also valuable. Price, $1.50. His "Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life" should be read by all. Price $1.50.

WORLD MAKING A scientific explanation of the Birth, Growth and Death of Worlds. by Samuel Phelps Leland Ph. D., LL. D., Emeritus Professor of Astronomy and lecturer on science in Charles City College. A Work of intense interest, by a scientist and profound thinker. Cloth, price, 75 cts.

Aryan Sun Myths, the Origin of Religion.

By Sarah E. Titcomb. with an introduction by Charles Morris, author of "The Aryan Race." Price, cloth, $1.00.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE

PART I.--The Pentateuch.

Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lillie Devereux Blake, Rev. Phebe Hanaford, Clara Bewick Colby, Ellen Battelle Dietrick, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, Ursula N. Gesterfeld, and Francis E Barr.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE.--PART II.

Judges, Kings, Prophets and Apostles. Comments on the Old and New Testaments, from Joshua to Revelation. The comments are keen, bright, spicy, full of wit, the work of radical thinkers who are not ignorant of the higher criticism. There is not a dull page in either of these books, but each is a galaxy of the bright minds of the day and throw a new light on the Bible teachings relating to woman. Price of each, paper, 50 cents.

ANCIENT INDIA,

Its Language and Religions. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Paper, 25 cents.

The Triumph of the Soul For Everlasting Peace.

Delivered Through the Speech of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Chicago, April 20, 1907.

Infinite Life and Light, Love and Wisdom divine and perfect, at the altar of Thy visible universe we bend in praise. Now that the springtime of earth is here, now that these Thy children are welcoming the song birds and the bursting buds and flowers, that afar from the city's noise and din make glad the wonderful beauty and glory of nature, may they learn more and more to appreciate the blue dome of the bending sky, and the green forests and fields and the dancing waves and the waving grasses and grain; back unto the nature that they have forsaken may Thy children turn, more and more realizing that the abundance of life and light are there. Unto Thy temple of the spirit we turn with great thanksgiving for the life-tides that are flowing toward the earth from the realm invisible, from the realm above whereunto the loved ones have passed, from the realm within that cometh forth to meet the light that is beyond and above. Oh! may Thy children know of that deeper and larger realm; may they know of that which holds greater fulfillment, more perfect victory and greater beauty. And unto that realm of the soul that abideth forever, supreme and perfect, allied ever unto Thee, may Thy children ever turn, knowing that there all hopes and prophecies and fulfillments abide, and knowing also that they will one day conquer the clouds of sense and time and selfishness that encompass them here. May they realize more and more each day and hour that every step leadeth unto this higher victory, every pathway leadeth unto that perfect height, and that there shall be ultimately the supreme victory. Amen.

Discourse.

"I come not to bring peace, but the sword."

"Behold, I show you a more excellent way."

The "Prince of Peace" of Christendom knew quite well that the nations of the earth were not ready to abolish war. He also knew quite well that the very word of peace would invoke strife. He knew that Truth is a two-edged sword that pierces, morally and spiritually, the shadowy realm of those who are in a state of warfare.

Now we do not consider that peace is a thing that can be superficially applied, or that nations in a state of war can agree to abolish war and abide by it. The drunkard signs the pledge; it pleases the temperance people, and possibly makes him think he is going to be sober, but remove those external restraints and he drinks again, because he has not personally and individually gained the victory.

Besides, there are a great many states of war where there are no fire-arms, no weapons of bodily destruction, no armaments, no soldiers, no war ships. It was just as much a state of war when the colored people were kept in chattel slavery as if there had been soldiers guarding every one of them, for the government of the United States that represented peace and the equal right of every human being to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," was helping to keep them in slavery; if you released any of the slaves the soldiers of the United States were after you. That mysterious "underground railway" participated in by Quakers and all peace-loving people was a matter of great concern to the government of the United States, for valuable property was being sped away to Canada by methods only known to those connected with this "underground railway." There was a little house in Rochester, New York, the home of Isaac and Amy Post—two of the most simple, earnest and peace-loving Quakers to be found anywhere, in which there was not a closet, nor a corner in the cellar or attic that had not held refugees from slavery. Sometimes they would go out dressed in his clothes and sometimes in hers, and in all kinds of clothes and disguises and be helped to Canada. It was said they were violating the laws of the land. So they were. But they were obeying the laws of peace. The soldiers and officials of the government would have arrested them as officers of the law; yet the Law of Peace was the liberty of these men and women.

Privateering on the high seas is no longer lawful, excepting when nations are at war, or excepting when nations wish to conquer territory. But it is no longer a private enterprise; you cannot go out as a pirate, but you can join the army or navy and go out and conquer some innocent people.

So long as the spirit of aggressive warfare and oppression is in existence, the technical signing of peace treaties or agreements will no longer prevail, or will not prevail; we mean until there is sufficient sentiment or growth of the people to insist upon it, and that if the Court of Arbitration that is to be permanently established shall be in a position at all times to dispose of the disputes and causes of war among the nations of the earth, and if there is the moral support of the people behind it it will prevail, and if there is not it will not prevail.

When we talk about the existing state of affairs or the growth of nations we are not talking to your personal prejudices, we are not talking in favor or against your personal political party, we consider one political party just as corrupt as the other, excepting that the one out of power promises reform, and when in power does not fulfill the reforms promised. That is all the difference. But a state of war exists whenever and wherever by any individual or collective strength any man or combination of men oppressess his or their fellow man, whether it is in the workshop, the store or the counting room, or whether it is at the polls when you are voting; but wherever it may be, that is a state of war, and the state that produces peace comes when you rebel against it.

Revolution is not war. War is before the revolution, in the state of oppression and injustice and force that preceded it. In the war between Russia and Japan, which was war on both sides, both were on the material plane; there was no particular moral problem in the question, it was simply two giants fighting for supremacy. Japan had the advantage in ages of physical and mental training and obedience. Russia had great power, but it was physical, and though it had a trained army it was crude compared to the army of Japan. Every man in Japan is made of iron; it is the trained, the accustomed, the obedient nerve and muscle. It was a great physical conflict; it also was a great moral conflict, for it revealed what Russia was pining for.

The revolution in Russia is not ended. Revolutions do not go backward, and the revolution for liberty is not war, it is the result of all those years of imperialism and oppression, years of war. There is a cartoonist who lately happily hit upon the three causes of war, "the army, the navy and the diplomat." Where these do not exist wars are very few. Even the aborigines of this country, as they are called, did not wage destructive wars with one another very often. The army of your nation on the frontier was the prolific cause of war: the aggressive act of our encroaching civilization, whiskey and soldiers. When we talk about the "ways of peace," we do not mean these ways that increase the price of your living day by day with encroaching firmness, and does not increase your wages. It is not a peaceful measure when every necessity of life is higher and when there is no more money in the hands of the consumers to pay for it.

We fully believe that the intelligence, the growing intelligence and unity of the Trades Unions, the Labor Unions and Federation of Labor Unions will make it possible to have an adjustment by and by; but so long as there are oppressive combinations of capital there will be hostile strikes, and so long as there are lockouts Labor must resist; and the sympathy must be with labor, because here are millions of men, and on the other side simply millions of dollars. One man with a million dollars has no right to control a million men with one dollar apiece. That is the plain proposition. But if he does make it inevitable that he must have the larger part of the value of their work, and of course they must work, they must have their daily bread, and if their daily bread must be had at such a cost, that is an act of war.

Now all these capitalists are praying for peace. When the Czar of Russia and Andrew Carnegie join in issuing a call for a Peace Congress it means, that either the Czar of Russia wants to control the world, or is afraid of his counselors, afraid of his soldiers, afraid of his personal attendants. He is not seeking for the peace of the world. Andrew Carnegie may be. He has made, through warfare, many millions of dollars, and now he wants to distribute it—distribute it in books that no one can afford to read, because they have not the time, and in building libraries for towns which the towns cannot keep up because they have no perpetual endowment funds. Neither will a Peace Congress be of any use when the world is engaged more and more in making the armaments of war.

Notwithstanding this (all this that we say) the peace of the world is surely coming. It is an accomplishment, a result. That little seed that is down there in the sod is not slumbering, though it seems to be, but it is putting forth every energy to come forth, the sun is winning it to appear; but you put a stone on it and it will not grow; there must be all accessories for helping that growth. Sometimes the storm comes and destroys it, sometimes there are outward things that interfere and the germ does not yield its right growth and fruitage; but after the struggle of the springtime and the summer if you look at the fruit-laden orchard, if you look at the vineyards loaded with fruitage, if you see the fields of harvesting grain you may know that the time of peace has come. The struggles of growth and storms have been in vain to prevent the harvest. It is because of this fruitage that the people and nations are more kindly; because they worship at the time of the harvest; "The Harvest Home," the thanksgiving time of the year. You all remember how in your childhood the children and the grandchildren gathered around the ancestral hearth, and the thanksgiving was for the fruitage of the year.

The Harvest of Peace comes as the result of growth, and that there may be the seeds of peace planted in the spirit it must begin with the individual, with society and with the nation. External appliances will not answer. People cannot win you to it now by saying "this is the acceptable time, this is the year of the Lord." Put your house in order, put your community in order, put your society in order, disband your law courts, do not fight with your neghbor about an inch or foot of land he is in possession of which you think belongs to you. Every time a dispute is transplanted to the law courts instead of an individual or personal adjustment it is an act of war. There it becomes an intellectual contest between the lawyers. Whether you are right or wrong you expect to succeed. If you are accused of any crime, whether you are guilty or not guilty, you expect your lawyer will succeed in winning the fight for you.

Of course the true state of peace, is not to encroach upon the rights of your neighbor; is not to take advantage of anyone in business. You close the gambling houses and you leave open the Stock Exchanges and Board of Trade. But the "Bucket Shops" are closed because, they say, the small dealers cannot afford to lose. But the greatest gambling of the world is in Stock Exchanges and Boards of Trade, the speculation in options and the hypothecating of stocks. Whatever you may choose to call this, it is gambling. It does not relieve the great pressure upon the world that under certain conditions it is legalized. The man who turns the wheel of fortune in a little policy or lottery shop knows what he is doing, but if he buys your watered stocks he does not, he does not know what the conditions are. When a prominent judge in this city was once blamed for not closing the gambling saloons, he simply replied, "I am not adjudicating in that way. If I am required to wipe out gambling, I will begin by closing the Board of Trade." All this system of speculation is a state of war, but it is not called so by the public.

Every act that grinds a man down to ten or twelve or sixteen hours of labor every day in order that he may gain a living is an act of war. Every act that prevents him from having equal opportunities with others to earn his daily bread is an act of war. And everything that so constrains human life, that the garret, the cellar, the space under the sidewalk of the store or shop, and the stall in the stable are possible places of human abode is an act of war. The children that perish every year under the warfare of the industrial system are thousands more in number than those soldiers who perish on the battle fields during the period of what is called actual war. Women who bear the burdens of oppression go out, leaving their little ones to the mercy of the flames or whatever, to win their daily bread and such scant support as they can give their children. More people die during the time of so-called peace than ever are slain during the time of battle.

The Indians along the frontier die in greater numbers when there is no war, because they are debauched and corrupted by the whiskey and immorality of the army that is near them. Peace has its terrors; and the time that people say a nation is most "prosperous" there are records of more of its people dying of starvation and want than at any other time.

We deplore the killing of those Russians who went up to the palace, men, women and children, simply to ask for a change in the laws. We deplore the massacre of the Jews, men, women and children. Have you calculated the statistics of death in times of so-called peace? Do you know what is transpiring in your city day by day? Are you aware of the children under fourteen years of age who are toiling day after day; who are the victims of this warfare against the right of children to grow? Do you know what is transpiring around you in the midst of your delightful friends, the going to the theaters, places of amusement, and the palaces of the millionaries, of the great pageant that is unseen which passes invisibly into the world of spirits?

We say to you, that the way of the Soul is the way of Peace; that it begins with these little ones, that the way of the Soul is here for these helpless ones who struggle and labor but cannot rise above their environment because of these human conditions. We say to you, that the way of peace is here and now, to begin with individual or personal things, individual social states, individual cities, individual commonwealths and finally with the nation. We approve of a great many things that your chief executive has done, we think he has taken a great stand in many directions, but we do not approve of the stand he has taken with reference to those union men, those laboring men in the West who are under trial for murder. We believe it is a political measure and we do not approve of it, we think it is a stamp of oppression. We think no man in the chair of the Chief Executive of this country should ever condescend to do any political work, either for re-election or for the election of any other man to succeed him. We think the time will come in your own nation when the Chief Executive will not be a partisan, but when, having been elected by his particular party, he will seek to justly and wisely administer the laws for the benefit of the whole people.

We think it is just as much an act of warfare when the army of the United States is called out over and above the protest, oftentimes, of governors of States or the mayors of cities to help regulate local affairs as it is to announce war. Understand us, we think that the true republic and the truly representative government will excel in the ways of peace. It will have ways to meet these emergencies that are not centered in armies. We think there is not a more corrupt system in the world than the detective system of the United States, and every State and city. We think there is no greater incentive to the crime and vice of false accusation than the average detective has by the system of rewards. "Fifty thousand dollars reward for train wreckers" is a direct bribe against some one's life or liberty. Many an innocent person has been deprived of life by manufactured evidence. These are acts of war going on every day in your midst. Do the citizens protest against it? Do people say, "this is not right?" Are men tried by juries of their peers when no thinking man, no one who has an opinion can sit on the jury? You are asked if you have formed an opinion? You would be an idiot if you had not. If you have formed an opinion it disqualifies you. If the courts wish an ideal jury like that they should go to the imbecile or lunatic asylums or elsewhere for their juries. Intelligent men and women must form an opinion when they hear about a case.

The truth is, the state of moral and spiritual growth must constitute the peace or war of the community. If the people do not use revolvers or weapons of war, they use the oppression of power or position. In London personal life is safer than it is here. In London you can speak any time on any subject on any of the great Commons or in the parks and not be interfered with. You cannot do it here. They have learned by experience that, notwithstanding it is a monarchical government, personal liberty insures the safety of the country. A representative monarchy with a monarch as a figure head is liable to have more personal liberty than a so-called republic with a strenuous figure head, a man that is liable to break away and do things. Surely you cannot look that way for the ways of peace. Policemen carry no weapons of death in London. Here if you are running to catch a midnight train you are liable to be shot by a policeman for a thief. We are not saying this haphazard; it is within the recollection of some of you that a number of people have been shot, some of them killed, by policemen, while running for their trains. This unlimited power in the hands of irresponsible persons is what causes a state of war in your very midst; and the added power is placed in the hands of the people that should be made responsible to the public and to the government.

Now what is the Way of the Soul? What is this "more excellent way" that we are speaking of? In the first place, it is the way of growth; it is the overcoming of selfishness with the knowledge of the welfare of others, you being included.

It is a state of warfare when a man has a private park with a high wall around it so that nobody can look into the park and enjoy its beautiful scenery unless some living near can overlook the park from the upper windows of his residence, or as one man did in England. A very disagreeable man who owned a very large estate, in order that the people should not see the beautiful flowers and trees growing there built a very high wall around it. But a different sort of a man, owning some adjoining property, built a very high tower upon his property commanding a complete view of his neighbor's park, to which he invited the public to come and enjoy the beauties of his neighbor's grounds. So you will very soon overcome the walls of selfishness by just making your outlook high enough to look right down into the garden of humanity. The truth is, that there must be in the individual the perception that other people are included in the plan of life, that all people are a part of the great scheme, and that the world of humanity does not revolve around the personal pronoun "I" or "me and my family," but all the other families out there. If there is a public park you have the benefit of it as well as your neighbors. If there is a public art gallery, and art is such a wonderful thing to educate the people, you have the joy of it as well as others.

A singular thing happened in London not many years ago. In the "East End" of London where no one having any claim to a "respectable" livelihood or living would care to live, there was a gallery of art built by the aid of some philanthropic people for the benefit of the poor people who lived in that neighborhood. But on Sundays this gallery was closed to the public, opened only to the wealthy "patrons," the "contributors," the nobility and royalty, who, making a grand spectacle Sunday afternoons driving out there with their carriages and retinue to visit this gallery, but the management denied that day to the toilers of the neighborhood—for whom it was ostensibly built—the only day they could possibly find time to visit it. Some one perceiving the sad, but ludicrous situation started to work to have that art museum opened to the working people on Sundays, and at last, after vigorous and persistent work for twenty-five years or more, succeeded in having it opened to the public on Sundays. By that time the museum had ceased to be a place of interest to the neighborhood, the people preferring the parks and the open air for their Sunday recreation.

So in this and similar ways the people at last conquer. But it takes about fifty, sixty or one hundred years to change legislation in England. How long it is going to take here, you can never tell, for you are becoming crystallized. While England has now no compulsory vaccination laws, you are in the throes of being compelled to have your children threatened with vaccination every time a medical board thinks there ought to be more money coming into the medical department. If you have that struggle to go through, will it take you fifty, sixty or seventy-five years to get rid of it? We know the champion of that cause in Great Britain who has lived to see the triumph of his labors.

Now when people are legally allowed to live and worship "according to the dictates of conscience," they are not privileged to die according to the dictates of conscience, but must either have a physician or a post mortem examination. It is a wrong thing to die without the help of a physician, it is against the law. That is an act of oppression. It is just as much an act of war as if they came and dragged you out of your bed at midnight and compelled you to go to prison. And you voters do not know enough to protest against it.

Talk about a Peace Congress when it is possible for all these things to occur. The voice of peace says: Vote according to the dictates of your conscience; if you have the opportunity. And if there is no party that represents the dictates of your conscience, make one. The whole machinery of the government is not as unalterable as the laws of the Medes and Persians; you have a right to alter them. The way of Peace is the way of Right, of that which is just to your neighbors and friends.

"Oh! but people must be protected against epidemics." It would be a good thing if you had a law to protect you against the microbes in your brains. Smallpox is neither probable, nor when it comes is a thousandth part as dangerous as vaccination. The measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria and many modern diseases—we don't know about appendicitis—are often due to vaccination. When "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" are guaranteed the people, the simple remedy of a healthful way of life and simple hygienic measures in the way of prevention will always succeed.

Then in moral ways; The stealing that is done under the sanction of business and that which is done by the man who takes your pocketbook from your pocket or takes your overcoat from the hall-tree are the same morally, the only difference is that one comes within the pale of, so-called, legal and legitimate transaction. But if the Soul were questioned, and said: "any advantage that you take of your neighbor is theft," the question would be answered. To the credit of the human race be it said: there are more people to-day who refuse to take advantage of their neighbors than formerly, notwithstanding your Puritan ancestors, and those who were born and reared in the country, we think the average business man of to-day is more honest than he used to be. Corporations have no souls to be saved, and no one is responsible for them. But the mass of the people are growing to understand that the people must receive, at least, that which they think to be an equivalent for their labor. Now it comes to be fact that when there is greater intelligence in the world the giant in business will not think because he has a genius for doing certain things that, therefore, he has the right to do them regardless of others, any more than a giant physically will think of trampling down the people upon the street because of his physical strength. The moral purpose is served by using the strength of the giant to protect those who are feeble.

Now, if you only remember, when they are talking about peace, to begin at the foundation, and if there is a Rockefeller, a Carnegie, a Vanderbilt or a Gould who is a giant in business, let us use his gigantic strength for the benefit of those who are feeble. This boy, who rescues men, women and children from the flames, he is the hero, not the man who can trample upon men and women because he has intellectual and financial strength. Let us find the "elevator boy" who will run through the gamut of fire and flame, mentally and physically, for the benefit of others, that is now in your midst. Let us find the great "rescuers" who understand the way and will not falter, and let those rescuers reach deep down into your consciousness.

The Soul of you is aware; the Spirit of you is making ready. "I will not do this thing," you say when tempted by speculation or by offers of investments promising the quick accumulation of a fortune. All these schemes for grinding out a fortune in a minute will disappear and the world will know that the bread earned by daily labor is not a grinding process, but the legitimate fruitage of endeavor. You cannot keep a child still, it has got to be doing something. You cannot keep a healthy young man or woman perfectly idle, young people like that want to do something, and the thing they want to do is what they want to do, and that desire to work may be directed in the way of creating some energy and wish to be useful. The desire to win one's daily bread will be encouraged to come forth, and there will be no drones in society. There will be no foundling asylums, because there will be no foundlings. Every child will have a home; every child will have loving parents, even if both their natural parents are taken away. There will be no "orphan asylums," for little children, because they will have houses and they will have garden places, and beautiful dresses with flowers on them. Think of little orphan children marching in a procession along the streets all dressed exactly alike and known only by their numbers! By and by daisies and roses will blossom out on their hats, and in their hearts because you will see to it that homes will be opened to them. How many homes there are where no children's steps are heard, where there are no voices of little children filling the home with freshness and health. Oh! how blessed it is that some of these homes of wealth find places for these little ones. It is an act of warfare when you prevent these children from growing as other children grow, when they are exhibited on the streets as being the recipients of "charity." This is an act of war.

Let us see to it that the beneficence of the rich takes deeper and wider range. Let us see to it that all the growing faculties and powers in the human heart and mind shall unfold in the right direction so that every one of these little ones shall have an opportunity to grow.

In a little while you will have "Decoration Day." It is a beautiful thing, especially if you decorate the graves of the "Gray" as well as the "Blue." But what need have they of flowers? You cannot benefit them by decorating their graves with flowers, but you might make them rejoice in their new-found homes by giving flowers to their beloved ones who may still be in mortal form, or to poor women and children who seldom or never possess a flower. If it be too much trouble to distribute your flowers in that way, send them to the hospitals to cheer and help heal those who need them, as those who have the ever-living flowers of the spirit realm do not. Or give a bouquet of flowers to your wife and see how very happy she will look, especially if you have never done such a thing since you were courting her. If you do that in memory of your beloved ones who are in the other world, they will be more gratified than if you scatter your flowers over a place they never visit except through your presence there. Talk about tombs and memorial windows! You can pay better tribute to those who have arisen, by loving remembrance of those who are here.

So you make for the Way of Peace when you cease to celebrate your Fourth of July and your national holidays with the sounding of guns; and you would make for the Way of Peace if the soldiers of your armies who have come home after their warring should retire to peaceful life, and desire not war, but universal peace. When General Grant became the chief executive of the government in exchanging the honors of war for the great responsibilities of peace he did that which every noble soldier should. He held that the government as a peaceful government was more sacred than a warring one. He sent peace commissions to the Indians. He tried to negotiate peace over all the world. The Geneva court of arbitration, as the outgrowth of the war of the rebellion, was largely under his advice.

Let us make for peace in that recognition, that all souls are equal in the sight of God. Then there will be no partial legislation; then there will be no "I am holier than thou," and the Way of Peace will be the Way of Justice and of Fraternal Love.

SPRING.

Down where the brook bends between the wildwood hills,
I stand upon a rock and open wide the door
Of Soul; as the great Cosmic Ocean moves and thrills
In rhythmic waves upon the conscious shore.

Spring! Thy voice is orchestral, low and deep
And sweet, and every circled tone is pearled
In affinity! Millions join the strain and sweep
The song aloft to melodize the world!

I hear the brooklet patter at my feet,
I sense its liquid lull and onward bound;
I see the first dainty daisies pure and sweet,
I sense their fragrant circling souls around.

In the tree-top up the hill a bird-note calls,
Where the art of Spring is spread in changing hue
On canvas tinged with gray, fleeced in vapor-falls
Of white, and rocked in the cradle of the blue.

My vision upward soars through life's spiral climb,
From laughing waters to Heaven's silent seas;
From shifting sand and rifting rock to rhyme
Of budding leaves, and bird-sung harmonies.

From the cold sand and rock, past the clinging moss,
And grasses peeping through the old leaves and loam,
Beyond the hills and trees and clouds, far across
The great Magnetic Sea, to Aspiration's home.

HARVEY W. JACOX.
Caledonia, Mich.

"The Light of Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.

"An Infamous Dynamite Roman Catholic Conspiracy Detected and Exposed." "Romanism Exposed." Two pamphlets by Rev. J. G. White, author of "Startling Facts." Price, 10 cents each, or two for 15 cents.

Remarkable Invention.

AN INSTRUMENT THAT IMPROVES AND STRENGTHENS EYESIGHT.

Spectacles May Be Abandoned

This instrument, which the inventor has patented, is called "Actina"—a trade-mark word.

In the treatment of eye diseases the inventor of "Actina" claims that there is no need for cutting or drugging the eye in treating most forms of disease. Cataracts, and other abnormal growths have been removed, and weakened vision improved or restored by this new and more humane method. "Actina" has been tested in thousands of cases and has effected marvelous results, many people testifying that it saved their eyesight. So confident are the owners that this device is an instrument of great merit that they will give absolutely a free trial. They want everyone interested to make a thorough investigation and a personal test of "Actina." One will be sent on trial postpaid so that any person can give it a test.

They issue a book—a Treatise on Disease—which tells all about "Actina," the diseases it will remove, what others think of it, what marvelous results it has effected, and all about the responsibility of its owners—all will be sent absolutely free upon request. This book should be in the home of every family. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 34ER, 811 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.
Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address
DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

914

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

The Poetical and Prose Works —BY— ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Mrs. Wilcox's writings have been the inspiration of many young men and women. Her hopeful, practical, masterful views of life give the reader new courage in the very reading and are a wholesome spur to flagging effort. Words of truth so vital that they live in the reader's memory and cause him to think—to his own betterment and the lasting improvement of his own work in the world, in whatever line it lies—flow from this talented woman's pen.

POEMS OF PASSION.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
Many thousands of this book have been issued, showing the estimation in which it is held. Presentation edition, with author's portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF POWER.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
New and revised edition, containing more than one hundred new poems, displaying the author's fine taste, cultivation and originality. With portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
This charming collection comprises many of the best poetic creations of the author. Embellished with portrait. Presentation edition. Price $1.

MAURINE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
An ideal poem about as true and lovable a woman as ever poet created. With portrait of author. Price $1.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.
A birthday book compiled by Ella Giles Ruddy, from the poetical and prose writings of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It epitomizes her inspiring optimistic philosophy with an apposite quotation for each day in the year. With author's portrait, and half-tone illustrations prefacing each month. Cloth, price, $1.

KINGDOM OF LOVE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
A magnificent collection of poems suitable for recitations and readings, true to the very best there is in human nature. Presentation edition, dark red cloth, $1.

Three Remarkable Books

"The Divine Pedigree of Man."
"The Law of Psychic Phenomena."
"A Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life."

The Divine Pedigree of Man, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God. By Thompson Jay Hudson, LL. D. A most remarkable work, demonstrating the existence of the Soul and Future Life. It is scientific throughout. Price $1.50. Dr. Hudson's work on "The Law of Psychic Phenomena" is also valuable. Price, $1.50. His "Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life" should be read by all. Price $1.50.

WORLD MAKING A scientific explanation of the Birth, Growth and Death of Worlds. by Samuel Phelps Leland Ph. D., LL. D., Emeritus Professor of Astronomy and lecturer on science in Charles City College. A Work of intense interest, by a scientist and profound thinker. Cloth, price, 75 cts.

Aryan Sun Myths, the Origin of Religion.
By Sarah E. Titcomb. with an introduction by Charles Morris, author of "The Aryan Race." Price, cloth, $1.00.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE

PART I.--The Pentateuch.

Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lillie Devereux Blake, Rev. Phebe Hanaford, Clara Bewick Colby, Ellen Battelle Dietrick, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, Ursula N. Gestefeld, and Francis E Barr.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE.--PART II.

Judges, Kings, Prophets and Apostles. Comments on the Old and New Testaments, from Joshua to Revelation. The comments are keen, bright, spicy, full of wit, the work of radical thinkers who are not ignorant of the higher criticism. There is not a dull page in either of these books, but each is a galaxy of the bright minds of the day and throw a new light on the Bible teachings relating to woman. Price of each, paper, 50 cents.

ANCIENT INDIA,
Its Language and Religions. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Paper, 25 cents.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Georgia Gladys Cooley, after one of the most successful, and therefore encouraging months, at least for the Pittsburg, Pa., society with which she has worked, has closed that engagement and gone to Meadville, Pa., and the following small poster shows what the anticipations are of her coming to them: "Grand Spiritual Rally, under the auspices of the Independent Spiritual Society of Meadville, Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley will deliver a series of her ever popular lectures, followed by spirit messages, at Odd Fellows' Temple, commencing Sunday evening, June 2nd, and continuing Wednesday, June 5, Sunday, June 9, Wednesday, June 12, and Sunday, June 16, at 7:45 p. m. Other announcements will be made at the meetings A small silver offering will be taken at the door. Arrangements for the comfort and seating of all have been made. Come out and hear this noted lecturer on modern Spiritualism. It will do you good."

Frances Green writes from Racine, Wis.: "Very interesting spiritual meetings were held recently at the residence of Mrs. Caroline Waite, 741 Park avenue, Racine, Wis., by Mr. George Brooks of Milwaukee. Two evening meetings were held, which were well attended, and a great deal of interest manifested. The lectures were full of beautiful thoughts and suggestions. Aside from the lectures Mr. Brooks' time was completely taken up in giving readings and a number of persons were turned away for lack of time, and it was greatly regretted that he had not longer to stay. The kindness of Mrs. Waite in opening her home for the meetings and entertaining those who called, was greatly appreciated, and everyone felt that it was done with the desire to aid others spiritually. A beautiful harmony pervaded the meetings, and it was hoped that Mr. Brooks will soon be able to visit the city again."

The 50th anniversary of the Harmonial Society of Spiritualists of Sturgis will be held in the Free church Saturday and Sunday, June 15 and 16. Speakers now engaged are Dr. George B. Warne of Chicago, vice president N. S. A., Will J. Erwood of Elkhart, lecturer for the Indiana State Spiritualist Association, Mrs. A. E. Sheets of Grand Ledge, president Michigan State Spiritualist Association. Mr. Erwood will not be with us on Sunday, but will give a lecture Saturday afternoon at 2:30 and at 7:30 p. m. You should hear him. T. Collar, President, Mrs. Agnes McGowan, Secretary.

Correspondent writes: "Mrs. H. L. Lichtig of Chicago, ministered to a fine audience, of the Psychical Research Society, at Rockford, Ill., on Sunday evening, May 19, to the great satisfaction of all who heard her. Her fine address was followed by messages from the unseen, which were generally recognized by those to whom they were addressed. Resolutions of condolence were unanimously adopted by a rising vote, sorrowing with our Brother King, for the sudden loss of his amiable wife, by heart-failure during the last week. Mrs. Sexsmith of Chicago, is to be with the society on the evening of May 26; and on the following Sunday evening Dr. Geo. B. Warne, president of the Illinois State Spiritualists' Association will be with us. Possibly he can be induced to give an afternoon service.'

A. E. Pratt writes from Delphos, Ohio: "Mrs. Elizabeth Reed of Toledo, O., held a meeting at my home in Delphos on Sunday evening, May 19, and through her efforts our society that had become discouraged and lost interest to the extent that it was about to surrender its charter, was rejuvinated, and 8 new members were added, new officers were elected and the society bids fair to start on an era of progress. We are glad to acknowledge the benefit Mrs. Reed has conferred upon us. She is a fine test medium, and inspirational speaker. She is a regular member of the society."

J. C. F. Grumbine spoke to crowded houses in Hartford, Ct., May 4 and 5, before the Connecticut Spiritualist Convention. In Washington, D. C. he was given a glorious welcome in Gude's Hall, which was packed to the doors at the evening lecture, and well filled at the 11 a. m. service. The class work was very successful. The platform was decorated with palms, lilies, white roses and white carnations..

The first Summer Social for the benefit of the Band of Harmony will be held at the residence of Mrs. H. C. Goodrich, 534 East avenue North Oak Park, Thursday, June 6. Afternoon session will be a progressive euchre game, beginning promptly at 2:39 sharp. Three prizes will be offered. The evening session will consist of an old fashioned Pound or Parcel party, and musicale. Each guest will bring a package, which will be sold to the highest bidder. Bring the usual refreshments for 6 o'clock lunch, when the best of coffee and other good things will be provided. Come, and bring your friends. A good time is promised. By order of the committee."

Mr. R. F. Hale, of Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "I am sorry to let your many readers know that Brother John McLane, late from your city, and other points, is very sick. His many friends hope that he may recover and remain with us to assist in removing from our eyes the dark clouds that have overshadowed them."

May L. Pierson, secretary, writes from Spring Hill, Kansas: "To mediums and lecturers intending to apply to the Kaw Valley Spiritualists' Association, which convenes at Ottawa, Kansas, make all direct engagements with the president of the Association, H. W. Henderson, Lawrence, Kan.: I do not engage any workers connected with this camp."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

F. W. Martin writes from Elyria, Ohio: "We are closing a very successful season here, and our audiences have been all that could be desired. Mrs. A. J. Pettengill of Malden, Mass., is with us this month and closing the meetings. Her work is well received, and will leave a good impression among the people, so that we shall be favorably situated for the beginning of next season's work in our city. On the whole we may congratulate ourselves on what we have accomplished. We have had much to overcome, and we have been victorious. It has been a hard pull, but we have conquered, and can feel that the cause in our little city has never before been on as solid a foundation as the one on which we shall leave it upon at the close (June 1st) of our season's labor."

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritual Church, Plymouth Business session will be open at 10 Avenue, corner Troup street, Rochester, N. Y., June 7, 8, and 9, 1907. a. m. and 2 p. m., Friday and Saturday, closing with the election of officers. At 10:30 a. m., and 2:30 p. m., Sunday and at 7:45 each evening during the three days, Grand Public Meetings are to be held, devoted to addresses, spirit messages and other psychic gifts, music, etc. Mrs. Margueret Gaule-Reidinger, of New York City, one of the most renowned of platform test mediums. Miss Floy Cottrell of Holland, N. Y., who is marvelously gifted as a medium for Spirit Rappings. Each will give demonstrations of especial interest during the several sessions. Most of the prominent lecturers and mediums of the state, including Dr. B. F. Austin of Rochester, Prof. Wm. W. Lockwood of Buffalo, Mrs. T. U. Reynolds of Troy, Carrie E. S. Twing of Westfield, and a host of others will attend and participate. H. W. Richardson, President; Sarah A. Woodruff, Secretary.

Mrs. Laura G. Fixen will lecture in Lawrence, Kansas, June 25.

MARRIED—At her home by Mrs. Nora E. Hill, pastor of the Golden Rule Spiritual Society, May 22nd, Rule Spiritualist Society, May 22, 1907.James Hamilton Ivens and Miss Winnie F. DeWolf. The young lady is the grand-daughter of the well-known Mrs. Sarah DeWolf Kiser.

T. J. McFerron writes from San Diego, Cal.: "The officers of the Harmony Grove Spiritualist Camp of Escondido, Cal., have arranged to hold a 1907 camp, commencing August 11, and closing August 25. We have secured the co-operation of John W. Ring for opening day, and expect a large corps of good workers who will be named later on as heard from. We are preparing to accommodate more people, and contemplate having the largest camp in the history of the place. All who have ever attended our camp know full well what an enjoyable place it is for a summer outing."

Mrs. Isa Cleveland, 4308 Langley avenue, Chicago, will take engagements at camp meetings during the summer months. All communications addressed to her will receive prompt attention.

Samuel Huntington, of Malden, Mass., writes of the Progressive Spiritual Society: "Mrs. R. A. Swift was prevented from filling her engagament at the evening service through illness. Two other speakers filled her place. Mrs. R. A. Austin of Arlington, Mass., was the first speaker, choosing for the theme, "Love," giving a fine address. Mr. Geo. L Baker of Boston, was the second speaker, giving and interesting address on "Our duties to ourselves and to those on the other side of Life." He then devoted a half hour to message work. Mrs. Annie R. C. Chapman of Brighton, Mass., will be the speaker on the 26th, and Dr. F. L. H. Willis of Boston, Mass., on June 2. Developing circles 11 a. m., and 3 p. m., Sundays, and 7:30 p. m., Thursdays."

E. J. Trott writes of the American Psychical Research Society, Harvey Redding, president: "Our last meeting for the season will be held at 202 Main st., Everett, Mass., May 30. The meetings have been very successful. Mr. Redding has proved by his truthful messages that he is able to take the platfor mwith anyone."

Mrs. Carrie L. Hatch writes from 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass.: "The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society met as usual with the president in the chair. An enjoyable meeting was held, and many were present to participate in the same Next Friday, May 31st, will be the closing day of this society. Memorial services will be held and all are invited to be present. The meetings will be at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m. The admission is free. Supper served at 6 p. m."

Mrs. Annie J. Quinn writes: "The Rev. Isa Wilson-Kayner, pastor of the Truth Seekers Spiritualist Society of Dallas, Tex., is engaged in missionary work for one week with the Smithville Society, where her lectures and messages are highly appreciated. She frequently has calls from other societies, but she is earnestly working for our home society and has kept it in a flourishing condition for two years, and will continue to do so for another year."

Alexander Fleming writes from Montreal, Canada: "The Montreal Church of Spiritualists has moved to its new quarters, No. 154 Drummond street, a locality central to the leading hotels, and also one of the most fashionable districts in the city. Strangers visiting this place are always welcome. The meetings are held every Sunday evening, commencing at 7 p. m., sharp. Dr. Austin delivered a series of four lectures before the society in April. An appreciative audience greeted the eloquent Doctor. Mrs. Russigue is to deliver a series of addresses on June 2, 3, 4, and 5, in the Kam Hall. The office-bearers are alive to the interests of the society, and Montreal will soon be in the front rank among the Spiritualistic Associations of this continent. All Communications should be addressed to me, the secretary, at No. 8 Muckery street, Montreal, Canada."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall,9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Ferd. C. Suhrer writes: "The regular Sunday services of the Fraternal Order were held in its hall, 406 Ogden Avenue, and we had the pleasure of seeing the largest gathering of friends since our organization. We have been called "the society that does things," probably for no other reason than when we advertise such well-known orators and speakers as Harrison D. Barrett, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Rev. Thomas Grimshaw, Dr. Warne, and others—popular because of their eloquence in giving expression to thoughts that inspire and ennoble mankind—we have not yet disappointed our congregations. In the afternoon another large class was invited after an appealing invocation by Brother Barrett. The christening, or as Brother Barrett aptly terms it, the 'dedicating' or naming the baby, took place, when he performed that beautiful service for the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick. Many present had not before witnessed a similar ceremony, and were warm in their praise of its simplicity and impressiveness. No vacant chairs in the circle told plainly that the guides of our mediums are instruments worthy the name. Bro. S. B. West, president of the Progressive Research Society of Elgin, was among our distinguished visitors. Brother West very kindly invited the Fraternal Order and its friends to join his society in a grove meeting on Sunday, June 23, at Elgin. About twenty-five pledged their attendance. The fare is $1.00 to go and return, and that rate can be reduced if the number is larger. This will afford a splendid opportunity to get a dose of fresh air, get acquainted, exchange thoughts, ideas, and see what our sister societies are doing. Everybody will take a basket of lunch, and that will help some. Write or see Alexander Caird, M. D., for further particulars. Nearly one hundred hungry people sat down to supper and did justice to our culinary artist and the tempting dishes. Many came in time for song service and the concert, thus insuring the choicest seats for the evening. Professor Singer and Mr. William Kirtland rendered a beautiful violin duet. The vocal solo by Mrs. Alice Sexsmith called a prolonged and hearty encore. Special mention should be made of the violin solo by Master Chester Roberts, and the excellent singing by Master Edmond Miller. Dr. T. Wilkins of The Progressive Thinker favored us again in reading an original poem written by him for the Fraternal Order, entitled 'Fraternity,' which is replete with helpful suggestions and thoughts. It is published in the Thinker of May 25. 'The Higher Spiritualism' was the selection of Brother Barrett for his discourse in the evening—a subject well suited to the speaker and well liked by the large audience. Frequent applause greeted Brother Barrett as he interpreted the meaning of his subject. Everyone made themselves comfortable and were prepared to listen for about two hours, and when they realized the end had arrived sooner than they expected, they wanted more, as such an opportunity is not afforded them every day. All felt satisfied, however, that they had received enough spiritual food for one time. Your attention is directed again to 'Spiritualist Day' at The Chutes. We will have the use of a pavilion for those who bring their lunch baskets. Tuesday, May 28th, is the day, and we can stay till 11 at night."

MORRIS PRATT INSTITUTE

Whitewater, Wisconsin.

A School under the auspices of Spiritualism. Thoroughly qualified teachers. Prepares for public and private work. A two year's course. It teaches Grammar, Rhetoric, Oratory, History, Logic, Evolution, Psychology, Comparative Religion, Higher Criticism, Lessons in Psychic Development, etc., Practice in Public Speaking and in Composition work.

Admittance to all over fifteen. No examination. Club boarding in building. Tuition Fifty Dollars per year. The most beautiful building in the city. Steam heat throughout. School opens Thursday, September 19, 1907. Closes middle of May, 1908. Write for catalogue to A. J. WEAVER, Principal, Whitewater, Wis.

DR. GEO. B. WARNE, Pres.,
CORA L. V. RICHMOND, Sec.
LODEMA S. WEAVER, Matron.
and Assistant Secretary.

MASS MEETING.

The Massachusotts State Association will hold a mass-meeting in Amesbury, Mass., in Washington Hall, at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. The best of talent will be presented. All are invited. The meetings are free, and we want to make this one of the best meetings we have ever had. Among those invited to be present are: Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, Miss Susie C. Clark, Mrs. Annie Chapman, Mrs. Maude Litch, Mrs Ham, Miss Blanch Brainard, and many others. The State Association will make an effort to form an organization (permanent) in Amesbury, and all friends of the cause in this vicinity are earnestly requested to be present."

CARRIE L. HATCH. Sec.

A Call From the Rockies.

The Montana State Spiritualist Annual Convention will be held in Billings, Mont., June 6, 7, and 8. This will be the largest convention held in Montana. We extend a cordial invitation to delegates and friends to be present, as there is important work for the good of the cause to be considered.

There will be good speakers and mediums present.

MRS. W. C. SELBREDE.
Sec'y M. S. S. A.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

The Cause at Indianapolis.

For the month of May I engaged Dr. Wattles again, and his good kind face and masterly logic have drawn to him many warm friends, and for the benefit of the new society about to be organized, engaged him for another year, beginning with September. His inimitable way wins for him success.

We have ben highly favored the past few days by having a short visit from Harrison D. Barrett, President of the N. S. A. The Progressive Society secured its hall for him, and gave him a royal welcome. His lecture was a masterpiece, full of beautiful thoughts for all to practice. We also had several old mediums on the rostrum with Brother Barrett, Mrs. Ropp and Mrs. Throndson gave some beautiful messages from the spirit world. All were more than pleased with the lecture and messages. Mrs. Francis Ruddick closed the meeting by giving manifestations of spirit return by slate writing. She is a most wonderful medium. She has worked all winter for the State and new society for a mere pittance, and deserves great credit for it.

Mr. Barrett met a few friends at Mrs. Jacob's home, on urgent business only, and left for Muncie and Parkersburg at three.

Mrs. Carrie Mong, the State Secretary, was here, and assisted us to make his short stay as pleasant as possible. We all felt we need more of his work.

Next Sunday we will close our meetings till fall, and Mr. Wattles gives his last lecture on "How Scientific Is Christian Science," Sunday, June 2.

Our city mediums go to Camp Chesterfield to give a benefit for the Helping hand club.

The board of directors gave us this benefit to help us. We are to receive all money, and may we be able to help some worthy woman or child to a few days' recreation at Camp Chesterfield.

MRS. MARTHA WOOLSEY.
Indianapolis, Indiana.

THE SPIRITUALIZING PROCESS.

If You Would be Good Looking, Work From the Inside Out.

It was said of Christ that his face shone as the sun, the beauty of the soul reflected in the face.

It goes without saying that if any of us would be good looking, or in other words, good to look at, we must first, foremost and all the time live righteously.

The phrenologist examines the bumps on your head, and by them he is safely guided in the delineation of your character.

Thus the thoughts you have held from childhood up have moulded the shape of your head.

The detective spots the criminal by his looks, be it the shape of his head, the expression of his face, or the slouching movement of his gait.

Our thoughts are tell-tale witnesses of who and what we are, and we cannot fight shy of them.

It is wonderfully true, that "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

After all, when we sum it all up, we are forced to recognize the fact that the intellectual and spiritual life is the only one worth living; that intellectual and spiritual growth is the only things that cannot be taken from us.

We may fight for money and property, and yet we are forced to cut loose from them when we pass from this life; but who can take away from us the grasp of things intellectually which we have toiled so hard for, or who can deny us one jot or tittle of the compensation due us for the constant fight we have made with ourselves to keep from doing wrong?

As Paul says, "The natural man will constantly war with the spiritual man," and the hardest fight we have to make is to keep our souls clean and unspotted from the world. Christ said that we should be in the world, and yet not of the world.

We can pick out the intellectual face in the crowd, and we can also pick out the spiritual face there, and the combination of intellectuality and spirituality makes the very finest combination of manhood or womanhood.

Personal magnetism is animal vitality conserved with spiritual and intellectual attainments of a high order. To such people the little children cling, and the dumb brutes come and lick their hands in mute recognition of their greatness and goodness.

And it pays—pays so wonderfully well that it is surprising that more men and women turn away from the only channel in which happiness is to be found.

But, then, every individual soul will find the right channel sooner or later, for punishment for our neglect of duty and our very wickedness will finally force us to cut loose from all these things. We first find out that it does not pay; that's all. And when we grow weary of suffering, we turn to righteousness as a matter of self-protection.

We give some people all the sidewalk in passing them on the street. Their brutally coarse faces cause the sensitive soul to shrink from them. And yet we go to "beauty doctors" to have our faces put into shape, and to be made good looking. Would it not be easier and better to work from the inside out? Since these bodies of ours are but the physical expressions of our souls, then if our souls are right, how can this physical expression fail but be agreeable to ourselves and others?

Is it any wonder that the Christian Scientist denies the existence of matter, and claims that all is mind or spirit?

If women, who pay fabulous sums for the renovation and beautifying of their physical make-up, would only cut loose as far as possible from all thoughts of defects or blemishes, they would of themselves disappear.

If we have a sore spot on the body, we must keep our hands off, else it will not heal up.

The physician advises travel and a change of scene for his patient, recognizing the fact that the mind must be diverted into new and agreeable channels if the body would be made whole.

Happiness is health, and intellectual and spiritual growth is beauty, and beauty of the first order.

When we learn to live right, we can cut out all the beauty experts from our lives, and even cut loose from the physicians, for sickness, at best, is but sin, and ugliness is moral depravity.

KATHERINE A. DRISCOLL.
3156 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism, A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

"The Truth Seeker Collection of Forms and Ceremonies for the Use of Liberals." Price, 25 cents.

KANSAS STATE CONVENTION.

The Kansas State Convention will be held in Topeka, June 7, 8 and 9. All friends invited.

A. SCOTT BLEDSOE,
215 East 7th St., Topeka, Kansas,
President.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

Our correspondent at Rockford, Ill., writes that Mrs. L. W. King, of the Psychical Research Society, passed to the higher life on the morning of the 16th of May, at the residence of a friend where she had just called, of heart failure, aged 62½ years.

Mrs. King was a woman of great moral and social worth, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She had fine mediumistic powers, and the Research Society placed great hopes in her future usefulness. All were greatly grieved because of her departure. She left a husband, daughter, one sister, and a very large circle of appreciative friends to mourn her loss.

The funeral services were conducted at the home, by Mrs. Richmond, of Chicago, an unusually large assemblage being present to share with the family the afflicting sorrow.

Mrs. King was a member of a benevolent society known as The Willing Workers. The members, very numerous, in costume, paid their parting respects to the inanimate remains by placing a great wreath of floral decorations on her coffin as they passed in review.

Passed to the higher life from her home in Ashley, O., Gladys Adeline Suttmiller, the wife of the mayor of Ashley, Mr. Joseph Suttmiller, aged 37 years, leaving the memory of a devoted wife and a kind and loving mother, The funeral services were held in the Auditorium on the Camp Grounds, and were largely attended by a sympathetic people from far and near, and many devoted Spiritualists who knew Mrs. Suttmiller was not dead, but joined the ever-living. The floral offerings and potted flowers banked about the white casket, were numerous and beautiful, and eloquently paid their silent tribute of love and esteem to the woman who in life was loved by all. The interment was made in the beautiful cemetery at Ashley. Funeral services conducted by the writer. W. V. NICUM.

Mrs. Nellie R. King of Rockford, Ill., wife of Lorenzo W. King, passed to the higher life May 15, 1907. She was a clairvoyant and many beautiful visions came to cheer her and her friends with whom she shared this gift. She will be missed. Such lives as hers always are. The services were conducted by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond.

On Saturday last, at ten o'clock, in the morning, at her home, four miles southwest of Cedar Vale, Kansas, and in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends, funeral services were held in honor of Mrs. Louise Caroline Studer, whose transition to spirit life occurred at Kansas City, Mo., on the 16th inst. Words are inadequate to do justice to so fine a character and so good a woman as Mrs. Studer. To say she was one of the best of wives, truest of mothers and most loyal and generous of friends is but to express the heartfelt regard of the entire community, wherein for more than three decades she has lived and labored. The funeral services were conducted by Mrs. Bessie Bellman, of Winfield, Kan., whose address was a gem of beauty, embracing tenderest sympathy, inspiring hope and touching pathos, a liberal pean of victory for the enfranchised soul gone from among us "visibly." Mrs. Stoner and Miss Lena Goodell contributed graciously to the sweet solemnity of the occasion by rendering several of Mrs. Studer's favorite hymns. She was a Spiritualist forty years. C. M. ALEY.

Mrs. Almira E. Estes, wife of Wm. Estes, passed to the higher life May 13. Mr. and Mrs. Estes were pioneer Spiritualists and well known throughout the State of Michigan. Mrs Estes was beloved by all who knew her, a faithful wife, a loving mother, and a true friend; those who knew her best loved her most. Services conducted by the writer.

MRS. D. A. MORRILL.

Mrs. Louisa P. Manley Smtih of Lake Pleasant, Mass., at the age of 70, passed to spirit life from Springfield, May 11. She was long a resident of this city, but lately has lived in her cottage at Lake Pleasant. The great fire in April, destroyed her uninsured cottage, and the shock was so great that she rapidly declined in health, and passed out suddenly at the home of her cousin. She was in early life a Universalist, but many years past she has associated with the Spiritualists, being one of the founders of Lake Pleasant Camp. She was a woman of bright intellect and of estimable character.

H. A. BUDINGTON.
Springfield, Mass.

HAECKEL'S LAST WORDS ON EVOLUTION.

A popular retrospect and summary. By Ernst Haeckel, Professor at Jena University. Translated from the second edition by Joseph McCabe. With three plates and Haeckel's latest portrait. Price, cloth, $1.00 net.

CONTENTS:—Introduction. Preface. Chapter I. —The Controversy about Creation; Evolution and Dogma; Plate I; Genealogical Tree of the Vertebrates. Chapter II.—The Struggle over our Genealogical Tree; Our Ape Relatives and the Vertebrate-Stem; Plate II.; Skeletons of Five Anthropoid Apes. Chapter III.—The Controversy over the Soul; The Ideos of Immortality and God; Plate III.; Embryos of Three Mammals. Appendix.—Evolutionary Tables; Geological Ages and Periods; Man's Genealogicel Tree—First Half; Man's Genealogical Tree—Second Half; Classification of the Primates; Genealogical Tree of the Primates; Explanation of Genealogical Table I. Postscript.—Evolution and Jesuitism.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.50.

Prayer; its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Taber. Price 10 cents.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list or titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.
2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.
3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.
4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.
7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.
8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.
9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.
10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.
11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.
12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.
13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon; June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM; A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, Instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

THE BIBLE New and Revised Edition.

Authenticity, Credibility, Morality.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S GREAT WORK

Ingersoll's desire that somebody should at last tell the whole truth about the Bible has been brilliantly fulfilled. No Freethinker worthy of the name can afford to pass over Remsburg's book in silence. Like Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," may it, let us hope, find admirers and translators in other languages. And again, like Paine's book, may this brilliant work bring to its author the praise of posterity.—Der Freidenker (Milwaukee).

This great work on the Bible by Mr. Remsburg is most valuable—it is an encyclopedia of information in regard to the Bible, and surpasses in importance all other works of the kind now published. It is up-to-date in every particular. Price, $1.25.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best peoms of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death or worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

S. E. Smith. Q. It is common among those who philosophize on matters spiritual, to assert this life was intended to fit us for that which is to come; in effect, that it is a sort of kindergarten, or primary school, to prepare us for the higher grade institution we are destined to enter, after death. Now, when we consider the vast number of the race, that are called away in infancy, without receiving any benefit from the primary department, does not the position in question seem rather inconsistent and untenable?

True, we are told the children are brought up, educated, and fare quite as well, some say better, in the spirit world than in this. It would, then, appear quite a gain to die in infancy; for, if the bringing up in the primary of spirit life is only just equal to that of earth, it has this great advantage, that it escapes the severe chastisement experienced as they go through the latter.

How do you reconcile such seeming incongruities on the part of nature, or Spiritual intelligences, or whatever power was concerned in fixing the order of the human destiny?

A. The Theosophists explain this somewhat confusing problem by the doctrine of reincarnation. The spirit has to return again and again, until it has had every experience earth can give, and been reformed thereby. The belief in the necessity of this return is evidently the outgrowth of the ancient primary ideas that this earth life is a preparatory or primary school. As reincarnation provides no natural means for the beginning of spiritual being, it is forced to take the doctrine of pre-existence and is in consequence met with this strange dilemma: If spirits have eternally pre-existed, they have had infinite time for perfecting and having been embodied an infinite number of times in the future would be without effect on them. In other words, there would be no use or purpose in their passing through such incarnations. The suggestion that we must "reconcile" all our beliefs and ideas with those entertained of some Supreme Planner, is the outgrowth of old ideas and really should not be allowed to enter to the question. As much as possible, in our investigations, we should divest ourselves of old ideas, and superstitious reverence therefor. For we must know that the older a belief the more probability that it is erroneous. Thus all religious dogmas coming down from remote ages, were first the conception of the primitive child-man, the ignorant savage.

The first question is as to the truth of a statement, not as to its results, or conformity to received ideas. The doctrine of spiritual evolution gives a better explanation, along the lines of a clear and scientific theory.

It is according to the natural course of things for the child to mature and meet certain conditions of life. It is not, however, essential, and if by chance it is transposed to spirit life before such experiences are gained, it goes on from that point of vantage and does not return or meet with loss.

To illustrate: A child may be taken from the country to the city and there reared in the customs, modes of life and manners of the residents. It will have none of the childhood joys of wading in the brook, song of birds, wild flowers and green fields. It will start in life in a different direction, with character modified by environments; there will be no demand or necessity for its returning to the country for an experience that even when gained would be of no advantage in its different sphere of activity.

Thus a development starting from childhood in spirit life, will be essentially different from what it would have been in earth life. The trials, burdens and sufferings of this life may be escaped by the child transposed to the care of spirit teachers, but in a general way these are overborne by happiness and strengthen the character.

Evolution into earth life and continuous development in spirit is the normal process, but when there is failure in this, the scheme is so well arranged that it is not vital to the individual whether the transition takes place in childhood, or age, for existence is continuous, there is no return to preceding stations, and in the vastness of future attainments, any special condition or influence is of trivial moment.

W. H. Pelkey.—Q. My wife has occasionally, since childhood, had dreams of a peculiar nature, in which she visits places that are strange to her, and see people, sometimes strangers and sometimes friends, and is able upon awakening to describe places and events that she had no foreknowledge of. These dreams are accompanied with a sense of pleasure and exhilaration that she says is indescribable. They never last as long as she desires because of the strong feeling that she must return.

Can you tell what this is, and how it can be developed?

A. There are those who are sensitive to spirit influence while in sleep who are not in waking moments. During the positive conditions of the day; they are incapable of receiving impressions; but the negative influence of the night, and the passive state of sleep, open the gateway for the entrance of spiritual impressions. It must not be understood that this state is the same as natural sleep, which should be a suspension of all mental faculties. It appears to be subject to similar changes that the waking state is when it manifests impressibility. There are all degrees from dreams of disturbed physical conditions of faculties awake and active, while others are asleep and dormant to spiritual impressions and clairvoyance. This subject is made a distinct and lengthy chapter in the 'Arcana of Spiritualism.'

As the receptivity comes in sleep, when the mind cannot be directed, and spontaneously, there does not appear to be any method by which it can be cultivated. Attention given to the matter received and not passing it by as unworthy attention, is perhaps the most productive in desired results.

E. M.—Q. I am told by a medium that it is not the spirit that comes back, but the "astral." What is meant by the "astral?"

A. Well, you do not want to give your faith to that medium. He is a theosophist, or controlled by a spirit of that belief. This "astral shell," made up of the odds and ends which the spirit has left on its withdrawal, which continues for an indefinite time manifesting the characteristics of that spirit, is entirely a creation of the imagination. A sane mind will at once conclude that this "astral" is a part of the spirit, inseparable, or it is nothing. The assertion that there is any such distinct body that can simulate the individuality is not sustainable by the facts. The "astral" is as unnecessary for the explanation as the fifth wheel of a coach. The word does not belong to the vocabulary of Spiritualism and its meaning seems hazy and uncertain to those who use it so flippantly.

"Anxious One."—Q. Is it possible to develop mediumship by sitting alone?

A. The experience of many prove it quite possible, especially in those forms of impressibility which depend on isolation and concentration of the mind.

O. H. Pollard.—Q. My wife and I made the customary agreement that the one who first passed over was to return and by some manifestation make known to the other. Strange to say, although we lived in perfect love and harmony, not a single touch, rap, or other mode of making her presence known have I received since her transition. For twelve months continuously I sat every night under what I supposed to be good and acceptable conditions, but not one single intimation of her presence did I receive. How am I to explain this?

A. A similar question was answered in this department, and hence only a brief mention will now be given. Such instances are brought forward as evidence against spiritual communication, and it must be admitted, at first thought, they have force, but deeper reflection dispels the clouds and lets in the clear light. We do not appreciate the difficulties in the way of the fulfillment of such promises. I may pledge a friend, on the eve of my departure for a distant city, that as soon as I arrive I will send a telegram. When I reach my destination I may be ill or in the crush of new influences neglect. or I may find the lines obstructed and impossible to get a message through. It does not prove I have ceased to exist, or have been false.

Mr. Pollard, since his wife's transition, has lived in seclusion, apart from the ways of men, in a remote cabin in the wide reaches of Texas. Highly cultivated and refined, he has felt the pressure of his surroundings far more than he is aware of. To some natures this solitude and isolation might harmonize and impart impressibility, but with him it has brought a condition opposed to receptivity, which can only be counteracted by mingling in social life.

Difficult as the fulfillment of such promises may be, many instances are recorded where this has been perfectly accomplished, and we may be assured that whenever we furnish the right conditions the reply will surely come, for there is as great anxiety on the part of the departed as with us.

What Is Good?

"What is the real good?"
I asked in musing mood.
Order, said the law court;
Knowledge, said the school;
Truth, said the wise man;
Pleasure, said the fool;
Love, said the maiden;
Beauty, said the page;
Freedom, said the dreamer;
Home, said the sage;
Fame, said the soldier;
Equity, said the seer.
Spake my heart full sadly,
"The answer is not here."
Then within my bosom
Softly this I heard:
"Each heart holds the secret:
Kindness is the word."

—John Boyle O'Reilly.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.

By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two hundred illustrations. Cloth, $1.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies." A Review of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated articles upon Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

EVOLUTION OF THE MORRIS PRATT INSTITUTE.

A Lecture Delivered at the Chapel of the Institute by Mrs. Emma R. Abbott.

It has been my great pleasure to have been associated with the Morris Pratt School since its opening. I was here when the first fire was laid in the furnace, before the cook stove was set up, or the rooms settled. I feel I know something of the aim and purpose of the school.

Mr. Hull for years felt the need of a school, where students would have the privilege of thinking for themselves; where psychics and mediums are encouraged, and where a strong band of the highest and noblest spirits could be found around them to protect and assist their development, that they might be an honor to the arisen ones, to themselves and humanity.

The need of a school where this is done, is evident. Take a child who is a psychic. He goes to the public school. He not only comes in contact with earthly conditions which he has to struggle against, but the undeveloped spirits that are attracted to earth by his relations or associates do not know how to handle their medium. They often come back to gratify their tastes, hates, or feelings of revenge.

Mr. Hull felt that if a school could be organized where a strong band of spirits could assist the teacher in instructing the mediums or psychics, as well as the spirits that have been attracted to them, that it would broaden the minds of the people, educate the spirits as well as the mortals, spread the truth of Spiritualism and give to the world a truer and better conception of our philosophy. He felt a school was needed where Spiritualists could send their young people, knowing that what was dearest to them would not be ridiculed; where the minds of their children would not be poisoned against the ideas of their parents; where false and erroneous teachings of the Bible would not be taught; where the child would be allowed to think for himself and develop the inherent powers within him, and where he would not have the most sacred gift that has ever been vouchsafed to man stunted or completely crushed.

In public schools the bible is read each day as the word of God and given to the child as his guide and benefactor. No teacher or pupil is allowed to question it in the school room, but must accept it as such, and children whose parents are Spiritualists are made to feel they have been ostracised if they do not fall in line and conform with these ideas. They are asked and expected to attend Sunday-Schools where our beautiful philosophy is called the workings of the devil, and if the child is a sensitive one, he soon realizes the feeling that is thrown out against his parents for their behalf, which causes him to grow away from the knowledge of Spiritualism and he gradually drifts into the church. When at last the parent comes to be laid at rest, he is buried by the orthodox services, regardless of the previous requests made by him to have a Spiritualist funeral.

None realized these conditions more fully than Mr. Hull. Often he had been asked by his Spiritualist friends to officiate at their funeral, but when that time came, the children, through the influence of the teaching received in the school, ignored this last request of the parent.

He felt that a school was needed where the Bible could be taught as a part of ancient religious history; that it is a book to be studied as we would study Homer or Shakspeare, as literature, and not a revelation from God.

It was not the aim and purpose of this school to grind out mediums, as many think, nor do they expect all who take the course here to be professional speakers. We need people in all lines of business: lawyers, doctors, druggists, merchants, mechanics, and traders of every kind to help promulgate the truths of Spiritualism. We need schools that are not endowed with the wealth of Carnegie, Gould, Rockefeller, or any man who will dictate what shall or shall not be taught. We need schools where freedom of thought and a liberal education can be gained, regardless of creed or dogmas.

We need schools where people who have passed the legal age of our public schools, and yet feel the need of an education, can attend. This is the only school in the United States where a student from the age of fifteen to seventy can be enrolled without passing an examination. One can enter this school with all the idiosyncrasies which belong to mediumship and not be asked to lay aside his religion or conform to any ceremonies. He is asked only to be true to himself; to study everything with critical analysis; to allow others the same rights he wishes for himself, and be liberal, just and charitable.

This ideal school was the predominant thought of Moses Hull for years. Several times he neared the wishes of his goal, when some unforeseen condition would prevent his carrying them out. In 1897, Mr. and Mrs. Hull, Professor Weaver and Mrs. Niver formed a co-operative partnership and opened a six-weeks' summer school at Maple Dell Camp, Mantua, Ohio. They paid their own carfare, entertained themselves and gave their services gratuitously. I attended the school in 1899, and at the close of the season there was an inducement held out to them to take the school to Lily Dale, N. Y., which was done the next year. It was while in Lily Dale that Morris Pratt offered this property to Spiritualists to be used for school purposes. This meant a great sacrifice and hard work. Mr. Hull knew if they accepted it that he would be obliged to give up his work in Buffalo, where he was receiving a stated salary, to come here and make a great struggle for existence. He knew he would be censured, abused and ridiculed, but he felt the result would justify the effort. He labored on the outside, while Mrs. Hull, Mrs. Niver and Professor Weaver, loyal to their contract, labored on the inside.

We students who were here at the departure of the Hulls last fall, know how loth he was to leave us; he felt he would love to be one of us this winter. But the financial condition compelled him to go to keep the school alive.

Students! he gave his life for us, and we can pay no greater tribute to the arisen one or to those who are left to continue the work they all love so well, than to be an honor to the school by improving ourselves and assisting humanity. He passed away in the harness, but do you think he will discontinue his philanthropic work? No. Neither time, space, money or any other thing will hinder him. He will ever be on the alert to complete the work he loved.

We have grown from the six-weeks' school, commenced at Mantua, Ohio, with a few students who were more interested in a summer outing than in books, to a well organized and well equipped school with the students bending all their energies to self-improvement.

My prophecy for the future is that this building will not long be able to accommodate the students. Rooms now occupied by students will be made into class rooms. Every State in the Union will be represented. There will be students reaching all the way from youth to old age, and where we now have two or three instructors there will be many. On the pinnacle will be afloat the banner of Truth, liberal thought and speech, telling the world this is the Mecca of Spiritualism.

"But why, you ask me, should this tale be told
To men grown old or who are growing old?
It is too late. Ah, nothing is too late,
Till the tired heart has ceased to palpitate.
Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophocles
Wrote his Grand Œdipus and Simonides
Bear off the prize of verse from his competers
When each had numbered more than fourscore years;
"And Theophratus at fourscore and ten
Had but begun his Characters of Men.
Chaucer, at Woodstock, with the nightingales,
At sixty wrote the Canterbury tales;
"Goethe at Weimar, toiling to the last,
Completed Faust when eighty years were past.
"These are, indeed, exceptions; but they show
How far the Gulf Stream of our youth may flow
Into the Arctic regions of our lives
When little else than life itself survives.
"What then? Shall we sit idly down and say
The night hath come; it is no longer day?
The night hath not yet come; we are not quite
Cut off from labor by the falling light;
Something remains for us to do or dare;
Even the oldest tree some fruit may bear.
"Not Œdipus, Coloneus or Greek ode,
Or tales of pilgrim that one morning rode
Out of the gateway of the Tabard Inn,
But other somethings, would we but begin;
For age is opportunity, no less
Than youth itself, though in another dress.
And as the evening twilight fades away
The sky is filled with stars, invisible by day."

—Longfellow's Morituri Salutamus.

THE CAUSE IN CALIFORNIA.

As Set Forth by Mrs. Emilie Kratz.

In the issue of The Progressive Thinker Number 910, a Mrs. Julia Coyles of this city relates a happy experience over being the recipient of a spirit picture of her artsen daughter, it having been received through the mediumship of Edward Wyllie, a "spirit" photographer of this city.

She claimed it required several sittings before the desired result was obtained. She makes an appeal to those who would desire the same happiness, to send articles to be photographed, as the same results could be obtained as if here in person, etc.

Imagine your spirit friends floating through space to trace through the mails a jack-knife, lock of hair, etc., and then fighting for recognition at Mr. Wyllie's studio; or feel the keen disappointment by having other disinterested spirits photographed back of your jack-knife, etc.

Mrs. Coyles failed to tell us if it required several sittings with her in person before her daughter could manifest; how many articles would be required to be sent by each individual to secure the desired result, if any. Mrs. Coyles' beautiful description has been marred by her solicitation in Mr. Wyllie's behalf. Los Angeles holds many seekers after truth, and an honest psychic need not seek patronage by or through others. Mr. Jensen, of this city, some months ago gave through the colmns of The Progressive Thinker his experience on entering the studio of Mr. Wyllie unheralded. He claims he found many spirit photos in their various stages of preparation.

According to this phase of mediumship, we seem to lose all sense of propriety and respect for others, as well as self. Would we dare step behind a sitter posing for a likeness, and that person a stranger, if we happened to be in the studio at the time?

Why, then, should we so lose our sense of respect and common judgment of right after death? Can Mrs. Coyles or Mr. Wyllie explain this? Or can it be a scheme of the guide who sees more dollars in more sittings?

The notorious Hugh R. Moore, late of New York, is in our midst, having arrived with his family to make Los Angeles his home. He claims to be much persecuted, and that all the accusations of Mrs. Wickland and others as to his producing fraudulent manifestations in materialization are false, and that there had been no expose.

Mr. Robert Hale of this city has had for some years $1,000 in one of our local banks, to be given to any medium who can produce one genuine spirit form. The writer has asked Mr. Moore to accept this offer—not as a challenge, but in the interest of truth and fair play. His claims, however, to have given up this phase of mediumship, as people are not ready for it.

Never were they more ready!

With our readiness, however, is a demand for strict test conditions, for we have sat entirely too long, seeing a vapory substance that turned out to be the coarsest of cheese-cloth. We must prove all things. The world at large demands it of us, hence the writer would suggest that any medium who claims to be able to produce materializations, should come to Los Angeles—that is, if Mr. Moore refuses the invitation, and also the $1,000.

Dr. K. D. Wise of this city made an offer of $500 some years ago, which no doubt still holds good, toward bringing them here. The writer will give them entertainment in a nice comfortable home and insure protection from persecution by those who seek only to destroy.

May the guides of these mediums see and hear the crying needs of the hour for pure, honest work among those chosen as message bearers for our arisen friends.

May we become closer students as to the requirements, in order to receive best results, and be willing as psychics to concede to reasonable requests to give proof of our claims.

With love's greeting to friends and acquaintances in the States, hoping some day again to meet you face to face, my thoughts are ever with you; distance has not severed our friendship, and my prayer shall ever be that life's mission for each of us will be a higher ideal, a grander purpose, to the end of life's journey.

M. EMILIE KRATZ.
1931 Hobart, Los Angeles, Cal.

THE WORK IN COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Elizabeth Harlow Writes of a Successful Season's Work, with Mention of Other Matters.

It seems impossible that another season's work is finished, and we are to close the hall work for camp work, but such is the case. And I wish to say to the friends at large, and Spiritualists in general, this has been the most successful season of any that I have spent in Columbus.

The First Society has had an excellent attendance and added many to its members. It started out last June without a dollar, and it has maintained an expense of $1,600 this season. It will close with all bills paid and $100 in the treasury.

The Ladies' Auxiliary has held socials and tea-parties and one bazaar, and in this way has earned and turned over to said society $470, and will have $100 in its treasury. So you see this has been a busy season, with plenty of hard work, but there has been much pleasure mixed with it.

One of the most notable times of pleasure was the surprise party given Mr. and Mrs. C. B. DeLany on the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding. He was our Secretary in society, and she is Treasurer of Ladies' society. At this time we presented them with some beautiful cut glass.

One of the most notable features of our work this season has been that of Mrs. Murtha, the test medium. It has been wonderful and convincing to the most skeptical. I have followed her very closely in her work, and am free to say I know of very few that are her equal. She is a very genial and womanly woman to work with, and our people have come to love her, and will have her back next year.

We have been blest with excellent music. Miss Martha Grey, one of the finest singers of this city, has donated her services all season, and this has been no small item.

Our last and sweetest function was a surprise party given by the Auxiliary to Mrs. Murtha and myself. We were allured to the hall on pretense of business, and when we arrived we found about 100 friends waiting for us, with tables beautifully decorated in spring's best, and bountifully filled with good things. It was a genuine surprise and caused much mirth. The evening quickly passed, being filled with speech-making, music and recitations, and as a closing scene we two workers signed the contracts for another season's work.

I wish to personally thank all members and contributors for the efficient work done, the love and friendship shown me. This has been the most successful season of my public work, and it has been due to the support given me. It is good to be located, come to know your people and they know you.

I wish here to rectify an insinuation that Newman Weeks gave out in his last article. He makes it look as though I was at one time a tool of Dr. Hidden. I never sat in one of the meetings referred to, and said Doctor never hypnotized me in his life.

Mr. Editor, I see by the Thinker, just in, that R. G. Ingersoll has been after you. It would seem Mr. Ingersoll has taken especial interest in the State of Michigan since his transition. For twice this season he has been advertised to speak here in this city through a Michigan medium. And it seems Mr. Ingersoll has personal friends in this city who are not Spiritualists, but are perfectly familiar with his works and him as a man, that when he was advertised to speak, went, and each time have come away more disgusted with Spiritualism. One of these friends said if immortality were true and communicating a fact, the experience so degenerated the intelligence that it were better not to come, or else Spiritualists were impostors. So I think it behooves our mediums to be very careful about their claims, especially when they claim men so recently known who have friends in every city and town that are watching you, or else be especially careful in the topics you treat. Ingersoll never made blunders in history, especially.

With all the ups and downs we are marching steadily on. Let our workers be more and more united, and our cause will bless the world.

From now on address me: Haydenville, Mass. I return to my people here in October. Until then, farewell.

ELIZABETH HARLOW.
Columbus, Ohio.

BE EVER IN THE VAN

When trials sore oppress the race,
And reforms are tried by man,
Don't lag behind, though others jeer,
Be ever in the van!

When little children toil in mills,
Greed grinds them all it can;
Stand up, oh! man, denounce the wrong,
Be ever in the van!

The men that work from morn till night,
With arms of brawn and tan,
Will yet proclaim the dawn of peace,
The Brotherhood of Man!

Then onward press and falter not,
Lend voice and helping hand,
The maddening jeers will end in CHEERS!
Be ever in the VAN!

ALICE LUELLA HOLBROOKE.
Rockland, Mass.

HEART BREATHINGS.

Give me strength to write the true things;
Give me light to see the wise;
Grant me faith that knows the heart-strings
Of the one who fails, yet tries.

Give me eyes no sight can darken,
And a heart no pain can break—
Grant me this, my heavenly Father,
Teach me love, for thy dear sake.

Grant me great things, wise and wholesome,
If my strength can stand their strain;
Give me sorrows, till they teach me
How to lessen others' pain.

Keep my tongue from wounding others,
Keep my heart so pure and whole
Thou mayst see Thy image, Father,
In the mirror of my soul.

MARIE A. GREENE.
Topeka, Kan.

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. E. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM.—Spiritualism in all ages and among all nations. By W. J. Colville. Price, $1.00.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY.—By Swami Vivekananda. Price, $1.50.

VOLNEY'S RUINS AND THE LAW OF NATURE.—This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.—A new edition, profusely illustrated. A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing. 480 pages, with portrait and 32 illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50; postage, 15 cents.

WAYSIDE JOTTINGS.—Composed of Essays, Sketches, Poems and Songs, gathered from the highways, by-ways and hedges of life, from the inspirational pen of Mattie E. Hull. Price, 75 cts.

WHAT ALL THE WORLD'S A-SEEKING.—By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, $1.25.

WHO ARE THESE SPIRITUALISTS, AND WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM?—By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 25 cents.

WHY I AM A VEGETARIAN.—By H. J. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

WOMAN.—A lecture delivered to ladies only, by Mrs. Dr. Hulburt, on the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, marriage and divorce. Price, 10 cents.

WARFARE OF SCIENCE WITH THEOLOGY.—Information not procurable in the libraries of the world in a half century, showing the opposition of the church to science. Two vols., 900 pages. Price $5.00.

WORKS OF E. D. BABBITT, LL. D., M. D.—"Human Culture and Cure." Part First.—The Philosophy of Cure. Price, board cover, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure."—Part Second. Marriage, Sexual Development and Upbuilding. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure."—Parts Third and Fourth, in one volume. Part Third being devoted to Mental and Psychological Forces, and Part Fourth to the Nervous System and Insanity. Price, $1.00.

"Human Culture and Cure."—Part Fifth. The Bodily Organs, Their Diseases and Great Natural Methods for Their Cure. Price, $1.00.

"Principles of Light and Color."—One of the greatest books of the age. Price, $5; by mail, 32 cents extra.

"Religion."—Most thoughtful, spiritual and excellent. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents. Postage, 10 cents.

"Social Upbuilding," including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. Price, paper, 15 cents.

WOMANLY BEAUTY OF FORM AND FEATURE.—By Albert Turner. Price, $1.00.

WOMAN'S BIBLE.—Parts I. and II. The Pentateuch.—A galaxy of scholarly comments by many of our brightest minds regarding much of the Old Testament, and the slight given the women. Price, 50 cents.

WOMAN, CHURCH AND STATE.—A historical account of the status of woman throughout the Christian ages, with remalkscences of the Matriarchate. By Matilda Joslyn Gage. Price, cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

WOMAN.—FOUR CENTURIES OF PROGRESS.—Showing her gradual rise from slavery and bondage of ancient times. By Susan H. Wixon. A lecture of great value. Price, 10 cents.

WORLD MAKING.—A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

ZANONI.—By Bulwer Lytton. Price 50 cents.

A CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE REPUBLIC.—By Judge C. B. Waite, author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200." Price 25 cents.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT THE DEVIL.—By Chas. Bradlaugh, the great English Freethought leader, with a story of his life as told by himself and a history of his Parliamentary struggles. Price, 50 cents.

AFTER HER DEATH.—The Story of a Summer.—Pervaded with pure and sublimely spiritual thought. Something to make the reader pause and reflect as almost to entrancement. By Lilian Whiting. Price $1.

AGE OF REASON.—Being an investigation of true and fabulous theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages. By Thomas Paine. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

ANCIENT INDIA.—Its Language and Religions.—Translations of the articles "Religion of the Veda," and "Buddhism." The Study of the Sanskrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Price 25 cents.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.—By Thomas Inman, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

A NEW CATECHISM.—By M. M. Mangasarian. A book suited to express the thoughts of men, women and children living in the new times. Price, cloth, $1.

ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST RECITATIONS.—To advance Humane Education in all its phases. A book especially adapted to Lyceums. Full of enthusing ideas. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, 25 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. — Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realms. An intensely interesting work, carrying one deeply into the mysteries of the past. By J. M. Roberts. Price, $1.50.

A. P. A. MANUAL.—A complete exposition of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association, with a vivid description of Romanism as it is to-day. Price 15 cents.

APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT.—Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, His Apostles, and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Translated from the original tongues, and now collected into one volume. Price, $1.50.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.—Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price, 15 cents.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.—By Ella Ruddy. Price $1.

A SCIENTIFIC DEMONSTRATION OF THE FUTURE LIFE.—By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price, $1.50.

A SEX REVOLUTION.—By Lois Waisbrooker, author of "Helen Harlow's Vow," "Perfect Motherhood," and many other works. Price, 25 cents.

AS IT IS TO BE.—By Cora Lynn Daniels. This is a most spiritual book and gives a beautiful account of the process of dying. Price, $1.00.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.—A book of short poems, By Emma Rood Tuttle. Neatly bound in blue cloth with silver letters. Price, $1.

ASTRAL WORSHIP.—With a chart in the front cover with signs of the Zodiac. By J. H. Hill, M. D. Price $1.

ATLANTIS, THE ANTEDILUVIAN WORLD.—By Ignatius Donnelly, is a book of rare thought, proving the existence of a continent by the name of Atlantis years ago. Price, $2.

AURAS AND COLORS.—An Esoteric System of Teaching Concerning Halos, Aureolas and the Nimbus. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 50 cents.

BABY CRAFT, or Just What to Do for the Baby.—By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Price 25 cents.

BEHIND THE VEIL.—Written by a spirit in a most interesting manner, and describing his life in the spirit world. Price, 75 cents.

CAN TELEPATHY EXPLAIN?—By Minot J. Savage. Price $1.00.

CELESTIAL DYNAMICS.—A normal course of study in the Astro-Magnetic Forces of Nature. Just the book for Mental Healers or students in the science. 107 pages. Price, $1.00.

CHARACTER BUILDING, THOUGHT POWER.—A dainty little book and helpful. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, 25 cents.

CHRISTS OF THE PAST AND PRESENT. By Rev. Moses Hull. A valuable book. Price, paper, 25 cents.

CLAIRVOYANCE.—A book of 108 neatly printed pages, pertaining to a system of philosophy of clairvoyance, its law, nature and unfoldment. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, cloth, $1.50.

CONCENTRATION.—A series of six symbol cards and a valuable pamphlet on concentration, meditation and inspiration, with instructions how to conquer yourself and develop your innermost faculties. By Laura G. Fixen. Price, 50 cents.

COMMON SENSE.—A book of the Revolution, and yet adapted to the present day. A book to inspire the reader to love his free America. By Thomas Paine. Paper, 15 cents.

CONFUCIUS.—The moral aphorisms and terscological teachings of the sapient Chinese Philosopher. To which is added a correct likeness of the great philosopher and a sketch of his life. By Marcenus R. K. Wright. Price 25 cents.

CONTINUITY OF LIFE A COSMIC TRUTH.—By Prof. W. M. Lockwood, the well-known lecturer. Those who have had the privilege of hearing Prof. Lockwood lecture will understand and appreciate the character of this work. Price, $1.00.

CONTRASTS IN SPIRIT LIFE, and the Recent Experiences of Samuel Bowles.—Given through the mediumship of Carrie E. S. Twing. Price, 50 cents.

COSMIAN HYMN BOOK.—A collection of original and selected hymns for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home. Compiled by L. K. Washburn. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS.—This book is just what its title indicates—a thorough exposure of the inner life of those elect of earth. A very interesting book. Price, 35 cents.

CULTIVATION OF PERSONAL MAGNETISM.—By LeRoy Berrier. Price, 50 cents.

CURED.—WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.—By William E. Towne. Price 25 cents.

DATA OF ETHICS.—By Herbert Spencer. Price 50 cents.

DEVELOPMENT OF SPIRITUAL GIFTS.—How to receive Healing from the Unseen Helpers.—By Carrie Fuller Weatherford. Price, paper, 50 cents.

DIALOGUE ON RELIGION, between Rev. John Jutz and Dr. T. A. Bland. Price, 15 cents.

DICTIONARY OF DREAMS.—One Thousand Dreams and Their Interpretations. By Dr. Robert Greer. Price, 25 cents.

DISCOVERY OF A LOST TRAIL.—By Charles B. Newcomb. A book that will help you see the beauty and joy of life. Price, $1.50.

EDITH BRAMLEY'S VISION.—A thrilling appeal to all who are interested in learning how the great forces of the Roman Catholic church are seeking to prevent the progress of liberalism. Price, 15 cents.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.—By Daniel K. Tenney. Price, 75 cents.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM, or a Concordance of the principal passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures, which prove or imply Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price, $1.

ENIGMAS OF PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.—By Jas. H. Hyslop, author of "Science and a Future Life." Price, $1.60.

EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL.—The most learned, accurate, scientific and philosophical analysis of His Satanic Majesty ever published. By Henry Frank, the Independent Preacher of New York City. Price, 25 cents.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.—A valuable book by Sarah Stanley Grimke, Ph. B. Cloth cover. Price, $1.50.

EVERY LIVING CREATURE, or a heart-training through the animal world. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Cloth, price, 35 cents.

FATE MASTERED, DESTINY FULFILLED.—By W. J. Colville. 30 cents.

FATHER TOM AND THE POPE, and the History of the Pope's Mule.—Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth 50 cents.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.—A book that has done more to enlighten the world of Catholicism than any other two published. By Rev. Chas. Chiniquy, ex- priest. Price, $2.25.

FORCE AND MATTER or the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.—A very popular scientific exposition. By Prof. Ludwig Buchner, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.—This beautiful book of beautiful poems is all that the title indicates—profound, sublime and tunefully poetic and restful in its variation. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, cloth, $1.00.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT.—A book of poems. Verses of life to come. By Lillian Whiting. Price, $1. White and gold, $1.25.

FUTURE LIFE.—In the Light of Ancient and Modern Science. A work of immense importance. By Louis Elbe. Price, $1.20.

GERMS OF MIND IN PLANTS.—By R. H. France. Translated by A. M. Simmons. Cloth, illustrated, 50 cents.

GOSPEL OF BUDDHA.—According to old records. A translation from Japanese, made under the auspices of the Rev. Shaku Soyen, delegate to the Parliament of Religions. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

GOSPEL OF NATURE.—A book filled from beginning to end with spiritual truth of the most sublime and soul-stirring character. In touch with all life. By M. L. Sherman and Wm. F. Lyon. Price, $1.00.

GREAT ROMAN ANACONDA, or Thirty-seven and a Half Years in the Church of Rome.—A 32-page pamphlet. By Prof. Geo. P. Rudolph, Ph. D. Price, 15 cents.

HAPPINESS AND MARRIAGE.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 cents.

HARMONICS OF EVOLUTION.—A valuable work, by Florence Huntley. Cloth. Price, $2.

HEALTH AND POWER.—A handbook of cure and human upbuilding by aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price, 30 cents.

HEAVEN REVISED.—By Mrs. E. B. Duffey. Price, 25 cents.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY, or Solar Mentality, with illustrations and ephemeris. By Verno Vedra. Cloth, price, $1.50.

HERESY, OR LED TO THE LIGHT. By the well-known writer, Hudson Tuttle. Paper cover only. Price, 30 cents.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP.—By Thomas Carlyle. Price, 50 cents.

HISTORY OF ATHARAËL.—Life in the Stone Age.—Written through U. G. Figley. It is very interesting. Price, 30 cents.

HISTORY OF THE INQUISITION.—Just the book for those seeking information concerning that most damnable institution known in history—the Roman Catholic Inquisition. By Cyrus Mason, M. D. Price, 25 cents.

HOW THE BIBLE WAS INVENTED. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price, 10 cents.

HOW TO GROW SUCCESS.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 cents.

HOW TO TRAIN CHILDREN AND PARENTS.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 25 cents.

HYPNOTISM, ITS HISTORY AND PRESENT DEVELOPMENT.—By Fredr

Wanderings of the Hull Pilgrim.

When I closed my former article under the above heading, I supposed I would leave the State of California long ere this. I have found of late it is of little use for me to plan my movements: they seem to be directed by a power outside of myself.

I remained in Los Angeles longer than I had thought to do when I left San Jose for that city. I concluded my work in Howell Hall Sunday p. m., April 21; this was my last lecture in Los Angeles. I went to Pasadena at night and delivered a second discourse in G. A. R. Hall. This was my last work in Southern California.

I spent upwards of six weeks in Los Angeles, my home, during my stay in the city was with our niece and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bach (Brother Daniel's daughter) at 1410 Kellam Avenue, Angeleno Heights. It was truly a home to the lone pilgrim, and had these two people been an own daughter and son, their devotion to me and their tender thoughtfulness of my condition in all ways could not have been more generous.

I held five meetings in Howell Hall, each occurring on Sunday in the afternoon. Meetings in that portion of the day are not, as a general thing, so largely attended as in the morning and evening, but so many other meetings were in session earlier and later in the day, and as the hall was engaged at other hours, it was the best that could be done, and had it not been for the kindness and generosity of Mrs. Nettie Howell, I could not have held services in that place at all. She gave me (as lessee of the building) the free use of the Hall.

A short time before I left Los Angeles I was privileged to meet a number of the sisters in the faith at the pleasant home of Mrs. Esther Dye, companion of Mr. John Dye, who passed not long since to the higher life. I mention the brother because he was well known among Spiritualists, East and West. Mrs. Dye had invited me to spend the day with her, and when I accepted the invitation I supposed I was to spend the hours with her in an "old-fashioned visit," but to my surprise, soon after I reached her home I learned that others were expected, and I realized that a spiritual feast was in store, as among the sisters there were some of our prominent workers. Mrs. R. S. Lillie, who had been to the city to officiate at a transition service, was one of the number. She is full of the spirit of the work, but her physical is not as strong as of yore; she, like many others, has given the better part of her life to the cause of Spiritualism. Mrs. Captain Green, a former resident of Chicago (known as Mrs. Suydam), was one of the guests; she has grown old gracefully, and her mediumship seemed to be grander than ever. I received positive tests of my arisen companion's identity, on occasions when we were together. The other guests are probably not known in public, with the exception of Mrs. Nettie Howell, but they are no less loyal to the cause than those whom I have mentioned. Our hostess—well, she is a host within herself, a great worker in a general way in behalf of Spiritualism and in her special line of work, which is magnetic healing—indeed remarkable. Without drugs, she has, through her almost marvelous magnetic powers, performed a work in some instances that cannot be challenged by the whole medical fraternity.

The work on the part of the writer was not confined to Los Angeles and Pasadena.

On two occasions I went to San Pedro, twenty-seven miles from Los Angeles, and addressed the small but earnest working society of that city. Little more than a year since, Mr. Hull and I visited the place and held one meeting. It is evident that the seed sown at that time took root in fertile soil. My second visit was on the night of March 31st. The little hall was made beautiful for the celebration of the anniversary of Modern Spiritualism.

Notwithstanding I had delivered a long address in Burbank Hall on the afternoon of the same day, and was very weary when the hour for retirement came, I was compelled to leave on an early car the following morning for Los Angeles, as I had promised to officiate at a transition service in Los Angeles at 10 a. m. The arisen brother, John Southworth, was an old worker among the Spiritualists, and until a few years before he left the mortal, had held an office in connection with a Spiritualist society in the city, for a long time.

Has Moses Communicated?

This question has come to me again and again from his friends who have written me during the past three months. I am glad to say that several messages have come to me directly from the dear departed. I have not missed one day since he went away of sitting especially for him. That reminds me, some time since a letter came to hand from a good friend a long distance from here—a friend with whom I had not communicated for years, and he wrote, among other matters pertaining to Moses, and a communication he had received from him, "He (Moses) wishes me to tell you he desires you to keep up your sittings; they are so helpful to him. He seems so earnest in this matter, I feel to be almost dictatorial." This was satisfactory to me, because the writer knew nothing relative to the matter, only as he had received information from the spiritual world.

I have received positive proof of the identity of Moses' presence on two occasions, through the mediumship of Mrs. M. E. Kratz of Los Angeles. Mrs. J. R. Francis is well acquainted with Mrs. Kratz, and I am sure will vouch for her integrity as a woman. I had been invited to visit her, and on the occasion to which I refer, no one was present except the lady and myself. She signified to me that she was sure Moses had something of importance to communicate. I had not named one of my plans to her, nor had I told her of the great depression that had hung over my spirit for several days. I had no need to do this, for as soon as the influence came to her, Moses was reported present, and after a few remarks by one who usually controls her, Moses gave his own message. He referred explicitly to the plans I was considering at the time, and urged me not to hasten from the city; it would be shown me in a few days why he gave me that counsel. He referred to the sad experience through which I had passed during the few nights previous, and gave me, in nearly every particular, the nature of my anxiety and care. He went so far as to say, "I know, dear, of much of your anxiety; do not worry about the affairs connected with the home; it will be made easier than you think, when you shall return to the place." He added: "I have had my seasons of solicitude. I am extremely anxious, for I have been enabled to impress upon your consciousness clearly, several times, my actual presence; it so overwhelms you that it pains you, and it hurts me. I am as fully conscious of your sorrow as though I were with you in the mortal, and would be glad if it had been so ordained that we could have opened our eyes together to the realities of the spiritual world, but, my dear, we must wait, and I will do all I can to assist you in your work; in some way I shall be more of a help to you than ever before."

This may seem as little to the reader; it was much to the writer of these lines. I am in receipt of letters from Whitewater, Wis., every week, indeed some weeks have brought me many, and the contents of these messages have done as much, I sometimes think, to assist me in my work, as the messages that have come from the invisible world; in fact, sometimes I think many of them have been largely prompted by those who are in spirit.

I note in a recent number of The Progressive Thinker an article from the pen of our darling daughter, Mrs. Niver, who has had the charge of my department in Morris Pratt School since I left home. Words fail to express the gratitude I feel to the dear little woman for the tender and loving tribute she pays to me in that article, but I desire to say to the readers, I have only been the instrument through which my part of the work, to which she refers, has been done.

The class the present year has in all respects been exceptionally inspiring and helpful. At present writing I feel a sense of real sorrow that I cannot meet the students before they depart for their homes, but owing to circumstances I have felt compelled to linger, and although I have turned my face homeward, I do not expect to reach my destination for two weeks at least.

They All Profess Love for Moses.

Letters continue to reach me from the good people containing expressions of sympathy for my physical loss, and warm with tributes of love and praise for the one who has gone, and especially for his last work, which was for the Morris Pratt School. All of these communications are helpful, but I am sometimes led to inquire, "how much do they love Moses? How much do they appreciate his work?" Let me say, I have been grieved that so little has been handed me, or forwarded to me in a material way, for the School. I have been thinking it might be well to say, if every person who loved Moses Hull, and rejoiced in his work on behalf of education, would send to the secretary of the Morris Pratt Institute just one dollar I mean every person in the United States who can afford to do so, within one month from the time this article is read, we could then say to those who desire to attend the school another year, and are handicapped financially: "Come, there is help for you." I write this because I have met so many who would have joined classes of former seasons had they been enabled financially to do so.

A friend writes me that the Spiritualists of the country ought to see that a fine monument is erected in memory of "Our Moses." No, no! Mr. Hull would feel the greatest injustice had been done his work were money to be contributed for such a purpose, and the school to which, and for which, he gave his life were to fail for the lack of financial support. Remember, he gave his all, and at last his worn-out and worried brain was compelled to give way. Dear friends, how much do you appreciate the sacrifice?

I shall leave my present quarters in a few days. My engagement in San Francisco was canceled on account of the strike in that city, and the date was given to the San Jose Spiritualists. When I leave this place I accompany Mrs. John R. Kelso to her sister's home in Longmont, Col., where I purpose to rest a few days.

At present writing I am in the home of Mrs. Ringlep and family. She and her mother, Mrs. Barker, are now filling the office of President and Secretary-Treasurer of "The First Spiritualist Union" of this city. They are indefatigable workers.

Correspondents please address me at Whitewater, Wis., and in case my start home is prolonged en route, mail will be promptly forwarded.

MATTIE E. HULL.

San Jose, Cal., May 13, 1907.

PROTAGONISTS.

Such They Were in a Suit Never Seen Before in London Courts.

Archdeacon Colley, a Spiritualist, and Nevil Maskelyne, a conjurer, were such as the London courts have never before been called upon to deal with. The clergyman, much impressed by a seance at which he saw "Alice-clothed-with-a-cloud" emerging from the medium's side, challenged anyone to perform by mechanical means the mystery of this female spirit's appearance, at the same time offering $5,000 to whosoever should succeed. Mr. Maskelyne took up the challenge, and in a public hall produced an illusion by which Miss Cassie Bruce (Mrs. E. A. Maskelyne) appeared to emerge from her father-in-law's side. Then he claimed the $5,000. The Archdeacon rejected the claim and Mr. Maskelyne began a suit. At the same time Archdeacon Colley sued Mr. Maskelyne for libel, alleging that the conjurer had, in exposing the Spiritualistic visions, denied his right to his clerical title. Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, the famous scientist, who is also a Spiritualist, appeared for the Archdeacon, testifying that he had witnessed similar phenomena to those which Mr. Colley asserts he saw; while David Christie Murray, the novelist, told the Court that Mr. Maskelyne's experiment fairly represented that described in Archdeacon Colley's account of the Spiritual manifestation. In the end the Archdeacon was awarded $375 damages, and Mr. Maskelyne's claim for $5,000 was disallowed.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Psychic Light

BY MAUD LORD DRAKE.

Mrs. Maud Lord Drake has a national reputation as a medium. The manifestations given through her mediumship have been most marvelous. She has written a book with this title: "PSYCHIC LIGHT—THE CONTINUITY OF LAW AND LIFE." It is a ponderous volume of 600 pages. It will hold your attention from the beginning to the end. It is chockful of stirring incidents. Price of this large volume, only $1.50, postpaid.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Letter from Mrs. R. S. Lillie.—The Good Work Accomplished There by J. W. Ring and Others.

To the Editor:—Mr. Lillie and I have had the pleasure of a visit from John W. Ring, and the people of Summerland and Santa Barbara were favored with some of his fine inspirational lectures. For some time we had been anticipating this treat, as he has been engaged in San Jose, Los Angeles and San Diego.

On Thursday, May 10, the people of Summerland tendered him a reception and five-o'clock tea, followed by an evening discourse, which was well attended and enthusiastically received.

On Friday evening he delivered a discourse in Santa Barbara, which was one of the finest—full of bright things! The people were delighted with his work, and with Mr. Ring personally, and will look forward anxiously to the time when he can return.

In Santa Barbara he was the guest of Lucius Colburn, of "The Colburn House," which is a part of the new theater building just completed here, and one of the city's recent attractions. Mr. Colburn is one of our trance and inspirational speakers, an excellent medium, who came to Santa Barbara about four years ago from Vermont, where he was an earnest, faithful worker in Spiritualism for many years, lecturing, attending funerals, and voicing messages from the Spirit World. His efforts were highly appreciated, creating for him a wide circle of friends. We first met him at Queen City Park, Vt., where he was a central figure for many seasons.

As California has its associations of "Native Sons and Daughters," so it has in many places its societies formed of people from the States beyond the Rocky Mountains, or as one of our poets has it, "Away Back Yonder;" so the Vermonters of Santa Barbara have organized "The Vermonters' Society," and chosen him as their worthy president.

He has served the society of Spiritualists here in the capacity of speaker for some time; also as president, and at this time vice-president, and is always ready to help in every good work.

But so many of the societies of California, as of other States in the organized body of Spiritualism, are unable, as yet, to offer a salary which is any guaranty of a livelihood. Many good workers who ought to be kept busy in the propaganda work, are like Mr. Colburn, catering to the external man by keeping a hotel or rooming house, and putting into that the life and energy which with spiritual gifts unfolded by comparatively few, ought to be made of use in serving the multitudes who need their ministrations.

I am hoping that Dr. Caird has already taken a step which will prove fruitful of good results, or that some one will be able to so systematize our work, and inspire the Spiritualists with a sense of their duty and the necessities of the case in this direction, that the day may soon come when the talent and time of every good worker prepared by the spirit world will be employed in the advancement of the truth as presented and demonstrated through modern Spiritualism.

We are enjoying a visit now from Mrs. S. M. Kingley of Alameda, Cal., formerly of Putnam, Conn., whom we first met in a sunny spot on the bluff at dear old Lake Pleasant Camp long, long years ago, and who has ever visited that beautiful mountain resort, the parent, we might say, of the camp meeting work of Spiritualism, but feels to-day a personal sorrow, a heart-cry of pain, at the desolation and destruction which has swept over it. Tears fill my eyes as I pen these lines, as fond memories of the days that can never come again, and the many faces and forms met there, only to be greeted again in the "home of the Soul," come up before my vision. To the Spiritualists at Lake Pleasant, and all who are losers of their summer retreats and beautiful camp, our thoughts go out in love and sympathy.

R. S. LILLIE.

The Progressive Spiritualists Society of Elyria, Ohio, Odd Fellows' Hall, 580 West Broad Street.

We believe in a Supreme Spiritual Power and intelligence of the Universe.

We believe that service to humanity is the best expression of our love toward this Supreme Power.

We believe in the immortality of the soul, and the continued identity called death.

We believe that the exchange of intelligent thought between the spirits of the so-called dead and human beings on earth is scientifically proven.

We believe in the moral responsibility of the individual; and that, in accordance with his thoughts and deeds, peace or suffering comes to him by the natural operation of changeless spiritual laws.

We believe that the door of reformation is never closed, but that the pathway of progression lies eternally unobstructed before every human soul.

Program for the year as follows:

September 23d and 30th, lectures and tests by Mrs. Marian Carpenter, Detroit, Mich.

October, entire month, Rev. D. A. Herrick of Akron, Ohio, will lecture on Sundays and hold trumpet seances on Mondays under the auspices of the society.

November, entire month, Prof. J. Clegg Wright, of Amelia, Ohio, will lecture and give demonstrations on each Sunday, and hold class lectures during each week on scientific subjects.

December 2d and 8th, lectures and tests by Mrs. Stein of Detroit, Mich. Test seances on Mondays following. Balance of December, lectures by F. W. Martin and others. Messages and music by Prof. Phil. Herder of Cleveland.

January 7th and 14th, lectures and demonstrations by Mrs. G. L. Reed of Toledo, Ohio. Thursday, seances.

January 21st and 28th, Mrs. May Davis, Bradford, Pa., lectures and tests, with Thursday seances.

February, entire month, Mrs. M. Messeremith of Rochester, N. Y., lectures and tests, with Thursday seances.

March, entire month, Mrs. E. J. Demorest of Alleghany, Pa., lectures and tests, with Thursday seances.

April to be billed later.

May, entire month, Mrs. Annette J. Pettingill of Boston, Mass., with Tuesday and Thursday seances.

Dime socials, at homes of members every Wednesday. The public is cordially invited.

F. W. MARTIN, President.

"The Kingship of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world, etc. Price 25 cents.

VOICES RECOGNIZED.

At a Trumpet Seance in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

On Friday evening, March 8, a trumpet seance was held at the home of Edwin Fanrot, in Grand Rapids, Mich.

At the request of Mr. Harrison H. Reed of Lowell, I attended the seance to write down the good things. His sister, Mrs. Hattie Richards, whose postoffice is at the Michigan Soldiers' Home; his daughter, Mrs. Flora Warner, and his niece, Mrs. Eva Weiger were there. The seance was for his family.

I sat by the medium, so my knee touched his, and if he had moved I would have known it; but he remained immovable.

The first controlling spirit remarked: "Give your best thoughts to the medium and to the spirit world; and we will bring your spirit friends to you."

This axiomatic rule or principle applies to all spiritual phenomena. The closer it is observed the better are the results. If we send out angry, vexed, hateful or positively doubtful thoughts, going out in spherical waves and meeting the thought-waves of the spirits working to produce the manifestations, such opposing forces would neutralize their efforts, and the phenomena; but if we help them with harmonious wave-thoughts, similar to their own, their manifestations will be better.

So many of Mr. Harrison's departed relations and friends, unknown to the medium, announced themselves, that this article would be too long to mention all.

A voice announced himself as "Hewitt," of Lowell, recognized by Mr. Reed, both old acquaintances of each other. Mr. Reed wanted to know what he should tell their old friends at Lowell?

"Tell them I came and talked to you," said the voice.

Reference was made to other departed friends of theirs at Lowell; Aldrich and Lee; and the voice answered, "They are coming out all right."

Mr. Hewitt had been a church member.

Mary Jane and Eliza, Mr. Reed's departed relations, announced themselves, and talked in a feeble manner, so much so that I leaned over to hear better.

Pretty soon the controlling voice said: "Sit up straight in your chairs, for your thought-waves bother us and come too close to us.

I could hear a general movement of all moving back in their chairs.

"In the spirit world," said the controlling voice, "every word and deed will be a part of you."

All was so quiet that the least move could be heard.

"Bear Foot," an Indian, with whom Mr. Reed was acquainted, came and talked like an Indian, with more force and so differently.

Many of Mr. Reed's spirit relations and friends came and announced themselves, and the was anxious to have his sister, daughter, and granddaughter convinced.

When the phenomena were very quiet the latter young lady had wished that Bundy, a young man of her acquaintance, would come.

Pretty soon a voice did say, "Bundy is here."

This Turner Bunday had a peculiar joking, clownish voice and manner, so that his personality was recognized beyond a doubt. This manifestation was the most interesting and satisfactory.

The medium will soon sit in a wire cage for a test condition, and for self-protection, and advancement. Then we will report results.

H. EUGENE MARTIN.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

TWO MIGHTY "TRUTHS."

As Seen by John T. Dow.

I do not say it to brag or claim sperior insight, but there is one truth that others do not seem to comprehend.

It is this: No voluntary act ever takes place without a motive; and that motive is always, without one single exception, pleasure or happiness for self, or what is the same thing, to avoid suffering or misery.

Somehow people fail to comprehend this mighty truth; nevertheless I know it is a fact, and no man can gainsay it.

But I am not going to explain or discuss the matter at this time.

The other great truth is this: There are no more people in existence to-day than there were millions, billions, or trillions of centuries ago. Never were there any more or less than there are to-day—and there never will be.

Everything that is immortal always was and always will be; never had a beginning and will never have an end.

JOHN T. DOW,

Duluth, Minn.

MODERN ARCHITECTURE

PRACTICAL BUNGALOWS AND COTTAGES FOR TOWN AND COUNTRY

This book contains perspective wash drawings and floor plans of one hundred and twenty-five choice homes, ranging in price from $500 to $2,000, and is invaluable to the home builder, furnishing many new and up-to-date ideas and suggestions in modern architecture. Every plan advertised is made by a licensed architect and been built from to the entire satisfaction of the builder and within the estimated cost invariably. Blue prints are furnished at moderate cost, ranging from $5.00 to $10.00 according to the cost of erection, consisting of floor, roof and foundation plans, front, side and rear elevations, with complete typewritten specifications. Arranged and edited by Fred. T. Hodgson. 12mo. Cloth, 250 pages, 300 illustrations. Price, $1.

THE PATHWAY OF THE HUMAN SPIRIT.

Or, the Pathway of the Spirit Traced.

By J. M. Peebles, M. D., M. A.

Did it pre-exist and does it reincarnate again into mortal life? When did it enter the body? What is its form—how does it relate to the soul body? Can it leave the human body and return again? Can it live in and control another mortal body? These questions and many others are asked and answered by the Doctor in this, his latest book, of two hundred pages. Price 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with introduction and supplementary matter. Price, cloth, 25 cents.

LIST OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Send in Your dates and Names of Secretaries at Once.

Interest in the various Spiritualist camp-meetings has commenced, and secretaries of the same should report at once to this office, so that proper announcement as to dates and officers can be made.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Semi-Tropic Spiritualist Association desires to correspond with speakers and mediums for engagements at Camp-meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, from August 15th to September 15th, 1907.

GEO. E. LYON, Sec'y.
1974½ E. First St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Onset Camp.

Onset camp commences its thirty-first annual meeting, July 21, and closes August 25. For full programs address the Secretary, Onset, Mass.

New Era Camp, Oregon.

The New Era Camp-meeting begins July 6 and ends July 29. For full programs, address Geo. H. Lazelle, president, Oregon City, or F. F. Dunton, secretary, Liberal.

Forest Home Camp, Mich.

This camp opens Aug. 4 and closes August 25. Any person desiring programs of information regarding campgrounds or camp work, will please write to the secretary, who will answer all inquiries. Mrs. Millie Mitchell, president; Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich.

Chesterfield Camp.

Begins July 25 and ends September 1. Mrs. Flora H. Millspaugh, secretary, Chesterfield, Ind. Send to her for full programmes.

Winfield (Kansas) Camp.

The Winfield Camp Association will hold its fourteenth annual camp-meeting commencing June 30, and closing July 14. Mrs. A. McAlister president, North Manning street, Winfield, Kan.; Mrs. M. C. Salling, secretary, 1002 South Church street, Winfield, Kan.

Lily Dale Assembly.

The season opens at Lily Dale N. Y., July 13, and closes September 3. For program address Laura G. Fixen, Secretary, 1047 Carmen ave., Chicago, Ill.

Sunapee Lake Camp, N. H.

SunapeeLake Spiritualist Camp at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., commences August 4, and closes September 1. For programs and information, write to John W. Clay, Sutton, N. H.

Verona Park Camp.

The Verona Park Camp-meeting, Me., will open August 18, and close August 25. A. F. Smith, president, Bangor, Me.; F. W. Smith, secretary, Rockland, Me.

Camp Progress.

Meetings are held at Mowerland Park, Upper Swampscott, Mass., every Sunday, beginning June 3, and closing September 30. B. H. Blaney, president, 150 Elm street, Marblehead; Mr. H. S. Gardiner, secretary, 28, Cabot street, Salem.

Edgewood Camp, Wash.

Commences July 29, and ends Aug. 19. For full particulars address Geo. E. Knowlden, 955½ Tacoma avenue, Tacoma, Wash.

Delphos (Kansas) Camp.

Opens August 9, closing on the 25th. Address all communications to T. D. Rice, Secretary, Delphos, Kan.

Island Lake Camp.

Island Lake Camp, Island Lake, Mich., opens July 14, extending until August 30. For programs or information write to the secretary, N. G. Swarthout, Fowlerville, Mich. At Brighton after July 1st.

Lake Brady, Ohio.

The sixteenth annual session of this camp will commence June 30, and end September 1. For full particulars address A. G. Keck, Akron, Ohio.

Unity Camp, Mass.

Opens on Suday, June 4, and continues every Sunday until the last of September.

Harmony Grove Camp

Harmony Grove Camp-meeting Association will hold its annual camp, July 22 to August 5. This camp is located three and one-half miles from Escondido, Cal. For further particulars in regard to the camp, address T. J. McFeron, secretary, 528 Fir st., San Diego, Cal.

Niantic Camp, Conn.

TheConnecticut Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, at Niantic Camp Ground, Niantic, Ct.; season of 1907, commences June 12, and continues until September 11. For full particulars address George Hatch, South Windham, Ct.

Haslett Park, Mich.

Thetwenty-fifth annual assembly of Spiritualists at Haslett Park, Mich., commences August 6, and continues to September 3. For programs address E. F. Spross, Okemos, or D. R. Jessop, Williamston.

Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

The twentyfifth annual camp-meeting at Mt. Pleasant Park, opens July 28 and closes August 25. Programs and information given to all who write to Mrs. M. B. Anderson, secretary, Clarkesville, Mo.

Ocean Grove Camp.

The camp is located at Harwichport, Mass., and opens July7, and closes July 21, 1907. For programs and information, write Mrs. Mary B. Small, South Harwich, Mass.

Grand Ledge Camp, Mich.

The Grand Ledge Spiritualist Camp-Meeting opens July 21, and closes August 18, with Mr. Oscar Edgerly as presiding chairman. For full particulars address J. W. Ewing, Grand Ledge, Mich.

Summerland Camp.

The Summerland Spiritualist Association will hold its annual camp-meeting the last week in June, beginning June 23 and closing June 30.

Solon Smith Secretary, Summerland, Cal.

Wonewoc Camp-Meeting.

The Western Wisconsin Camp Association holds its annual camp-meeting in Unity Park, Wonewoc, Wis., July 14 to August 11. For particulars and programs write Gertrude Spooner, secretary, Wonewoc, Wis.

Ottawa Camp.

Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, Forest Park, Ottawa, Kansas, August 16 to 26 inclusive. Write for programs. H. W. Henderson, president, Lawrence, Kansas; Mrs. May Cook-Pearson, secretary, Spring Hill, Kansas.

Vicksburg Camp.

Vicksburg Camp, Mich., opens July [illegible] and closes August 4th. For full particulars address Mrs. Jeanette Fraser, Vicksburg, Mich.

Parkland Camp, Pa.

Parkland Heights Spiritualists' Home and Camp-meeting Association will open its camp on Sunday, July 7, and continue every Sunday until the last of August. Elizabeth M. Fish,, Secretary, Floral Heights, Parkland, Eden, Pa.

Harmony Grove Camp, Cal.

Harmony Grove Spiritualist Camp at Escondido, will open August 11, and close August 25. For full particulars address T. J. McFeron, 528 Fir, San Diego, Cal.

Mantua Camp, Ohio.

This camp, located at Mantua Station, Ohio, will open July 9, and continue to August 27. For further particulars, address F. H. Sherwood, secretary, Mantua Station, Ohio.

Queen City Park Camp, Vt.

QueenCity Park Camp, South Burlington, Vt., commences July 29, and ends September 3. For programs address A. F. Hubbard, president, Tyson; S. N. Gould, vice-president, Randolph, or Effie L. Chapman, Cambridge, Vt. After the camp opens address each of the above at Queen City Park, Vt.

Freeville Camp.

The Freeville Camp, N. Y., opens July 22 and closes August 19. For programs write to Miss Victoria Moore, Dryden, N. Y.

(Advertisement.)

MONEY FOR YOU! READ!

Dear Friends—Which one of the readers of this paper want to easily but honestly make a nice sum of money in a short time? I can secure 320 acres of very valuable timber land for low price, if taken soon. I will give deed of half the land and half the timber to whoever will furnish the money to secure it. It is a chance of a lifetime, and immense profits. Best of timber and sure thing. No possible failure. Ready market, with high prices. Timber stands thick as can be, oak and hard pine. Address for full particulars with ready envelope for reply. Proofs and references for investigation. A safe and sure investment. Who will be my partner? C. M. BROWN, Alexander place, Clinton, Ark.

A NEW BOOK.

Science and Religion.

By Benjamin F. Loomis, 397 Pages, $1.50, Cloth.

Showing the harmony of the Sciences and their relation to Religion, or the relation of Man to the Universe.

The Macrocosm and the Microcosm.

Showing the harmony between Phrenology and Astrology, or the Influence of the Planets on the Human Mind; and containing the Horoscopes of Jesus Christ and of Adam. Progress of the World explained by the principles of

PHRENOLOGY.

A Cosmic View of Christ.

The Rise and "Fall" of Man

Scientifically Considered, and many other things not commonly found in other books. Address

FOWLER & WELLS CO.,

24 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitaints of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

FATE MASTERED

And Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville.

A dainty book of 52 pages, bound in heavy white cover with cat-tail decoration.

Contents: Fate Mastered. Interior Force, Its Practical Evolution. Thought as a Shield. The Human Aura. For sale at this office. Price, [illegible]

Mrs. E. M. Hitchcock will answer questions by yes or no for 25 cents; business questions preferred. Send own hand writing. Full reading, $1.00. Fern Hill, Wash. Send date of birth.

NOTICE.

"If anyone has a full clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill. and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same."

WHNTED—A clean elderly woman. Spiritualist for housework in small family. Mrs. Oswald, 5823 Aberdeen St., Englewood, Chicago.

NOTICE.—If anyone has a full or test clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill., and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same.

THE ACME COLLEGE Of Occult Science Company.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Ohio. Antitheist Spiritual College. Acme mediumship developed. No dark seances permitted. They Marvel at our healing. Send stamp for particulars and testimonials. W. S. McCLANE, Pres.: CORA BENTON, Sec., 1714 Adams avenue, Toledo, Ohio.

FRED P. EVANS,

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,

FRED P. EVANS,

2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.

From an angel's viewpoint; including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,

21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Harp, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery, Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.

FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 10,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

230 North Sixth St.

San Jose, Cali

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—H. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

OUR CHILDREN.

Hints From Practical Experience for Parents and Teachers.—By Paul Carus.

In this little book "Our Children," Paul Carus offers a unique contribution to pedagogical literature. Without any theoretical pretensions it is a strong defense for the rights of the child, dealing with the responsibilities of parenthood, and with the first inculcation of fundamental ethics in the child mind and the true principles of correction and guidance. Each detail is forcefully illustrated by informal incidents from the author's experience with his own children, and his suggestions will prove of the greatest possible value to young mothers and kindergartners. Hints as to the first acquaintance with all branches of knowledge are touched upon—mathematics, natural sciences, foreign languages, etc.—and practical wisdom in regard to the treatment of money, hygiene and similar problems. 207 Pages. Price, cloth; $1.00.

Science and a Future Life.

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., JUNE 8, 1907 NO. 915

MATERIALIZATION.

Trenchant Consideration Thereof by Mrs. Straub.

Numerous and wonderful are the phenomena through which modern Spiritualism demonstrates the august truth of spirit life and spirit communion; yet the most astounding phenomena, the most convincing fact, demonstrated long ago by some of this world's best known and most respected scientists—the phenomena of materialization—remains to this very day a bone of contention within and without the ranks of Spiritualists—and the reason? Laziness—nothing but man's laziness combined with conceit.

We readily indorse the phenomena, more or less easy of access—the phenomena that comes to ourselves or our friends and neighbors, but we reject more difficult phases, because they require much patient preparations, carefully arranged conditions, and last—not least—some sacrifice of time and money.

It is almost impossible to establish the required conditions at the average seance, let the medium be true or false. But if we shirk the necessary effort, the recognized "sine qua non" of any successful materialization, we have no right to denounce it as a delusion or a humbug. All we can do is to remain agnostics—honest and open-minded agnostics — until some ray of light of extraordinary power pierces the hard fibre of our skull.

This is the very thing that lately happened to myself. It was partly distrust, partly lack of opportunity, that kept me away from the seance room. My own personal experiences had fully convinced me of life everlasting; no further proof was needed for myself, but who can feel indifferent about all those to whom no avenue of conviction is open, except the one of their physical senses? Materialization, proved beyond any possible doubt, is the only hope for them; therefore I remained in a hopeful and watchful attitude toward materialization. I absorbed all the arguments, pro and con, laid down by honest investigators in a more or less intelligent language; but most of those in favor of materialization give their wonderful illustrating facts without any attempt at explanation. They forget that a sound mind asks for basic principles, however limited, before it can assimilate any new truth. At last I found all that I wanted to know, comprised in a modest little book: Materialization; by Mme. D'Esperance; and Materialization a Fact in Nature (Austin). In simplest explanation it shows how something can be created out of apparently nothing; that nothing lying back of everything, that nothing can be changed into something before our very eyes. It shows how life-material is gathered in the seance-room and condensed into the proper stuff to create a figure, which is finally made complete by its union with the intelligence ready to manifest.

That seeming miraculous hastening of Nature's process is known to be the greatest puzzle to the investigator, and yet, how many wonders do we meet all over the world—even on a mere physical plane—without astonishment, simply because our eyes are used to them. Many interesting facts of the kind are referred to by said booklet, and may I be permitted to mention just one more in addition. Some of our esteemed readers may have seen what is called "artificial stone." We find nowadays all kinds of artificial stones, from the roughest to the finest; from the common building material to precious stones, and even diamonds.

Whatever merit may be in said art or industry, it must stand as a speaking illustration of the fact that man, by skill and knowledge, is able to shorten the processes of Nature and to produce often within the shortest time what means millions of years in Nature's laboratory.

Taking this standard, what is there miraculous in materialization?

Those who are sure of life and progress after so-called death, must know that for chemistry in particular there is no limit of possibilities in limitless space.

Yes, dear friends, our numberless demonstrations of spirit return and communication are glorious facts, but a voice within me, not to be silenced, exclaims: "Materialization is the most stupendous fact of all—the very crown of phenomena! It is the one phenomenon especially destined to revolutionize the world."

Indeed! let the truth of materialization be established as firmly as Galileo's truth of the sun being the center of our moving planetary system, and the burning social and moral questions to-day will shrink into nothing, inch by inch, as the truth will spread and permeate the family of mankind; for it is doubt about a future life that makes the average weak and selfish man yield to the temptations of the moment.

Therefore, all you dear brothers and sisters who draw the line on materialization, let me beseech you, especially you who are leaders in the ranks, to drop your positiveness for the sake of those who must see a dead man alive—for nothing else will convince them. Let me beseech you to gather into congenial groups, and try hard for materialization and our friends across the river will truly assist you; and should our means allow to aid science in establishing a solid base for this grand truth, let us help with all our might, until a glorious Temple for all humanity will rise upon that base—a Temple whose crests will be forever in touch and harmony with the arisen hosts of our brothers and sisters in worlds beyond.

H. STRAUB.

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds make ill deeds done.—King

He who is afraid of asking is ashamed of learning.—From the Danish.

In the court of his own conscience no guilty man is acquitted.—Juvenal.

Give up to science entirely, for science is but one.—Seneca.

The will of man is by his reason swayed.—Shakspeare.

Who plays for more than he can lose with pleasure stakes his heart.—Herbert.

Honest error is to be pitied, not ridiculed.—Chesterfield.

Genius always gives its best first; prudence at last.—Lavater.

Correction does much, but encouragement does more.—Goethe.

SOME REFLECTIONS

In Regard to Various Matters Connected with Spiritualism.

Spiritualism must stand on the truth of materialization. If there is no materialization, there is no Spiritualism, except that which exists in the imagination of the superstitious followers of those who depend on faith alone.

There is none of all the various phases of mediumship, but what depends on materialization. There can be no conception of a thing that is not material. If a thing is not matter, it has no existence—it is nothing. What could you produce to prove any truth of spirit return that did not involve the existence of a material substance? Every sense of the body depends on the material substance out of which that body is composed.

We feel, we see, hear, taste and smell material substance. We cannot convey an idea that does not involve the existence of matter. It would be impossible for a medium to sense the presence of a spirit unless it were composed of material substance.

Yet, while all that I have said is true, there is another truth as potent in the solution of our knowledge of things: matter does not exist alone. With matter, in whatever form it may be presented, there is ever present a force which is eternally persistent.

All the evidence which establishes the existence of matter is equally applicable in establishing the presence of force. It is impossible to sever the connection of these two factors which account for all things that are brought within the range of human knowledge. They are the positive and negative factors which make up the substance of all that can ever comes into the range of human consciousness.

No human thought can be expressed without force in connection with matter. There is no matter without force, or force without matter. It is impossible to disassociate them.

Life, itself, is but a form of force by which the immortal spirit itself animates the body.

There is no vacuum in space, for matter exists throughout the universe, binding the satellites to their primary planets, and planets to their primary suns. Suns communicate with suns throughout the starry universe, which constitutes the sidereal system.

Communicate, did I say? Yes; inasmuch as the rays of light travel on the waves of this impalpable ether, from satellite to planet, from planet to sun, and from sun to sun, for there are millions of suns in the sidereal system.

There is no place where matter is not. To the vibration of ether we are indebted for the light of the remotest star, which has taken more than a thousand years to reach the earth. But for the vibration of ether we would be deaf and blind. By the means of the vibration of ether we are conscious of light, heat, sound and electricity. It is the most tenuous matter known. It is both impalpable and imponderable. We can neither see, feel, hear, taste nor smell it; in fact its existence is a matter of assumption, yet by this assumption we are enabled to account intelligently for light, sound, heat and electricity.

Science aids us by mechanical appliances to discern other forms of mater, and with our senses unaided the coarser kinds come to our knowledge and complete our capacity of knowing things.

Now as to spirit. There is no reason to doubt in this case. It is matter. We could not know it unless it were matter, as it is only by matter that we can know matter. The difference between spirit and other forms of matter is only in degree of refinement. Spirit is a more sublimated form of matter; this is proved by the fact that persons who are not mediums have seen spirits.

There are volumes of testimony in regard to apparitions appearing to persons who are not conscious of any mediumistic qualification. The spirit has power to make more dense its substance by adding to itself matter of a quality to bring it in the range of physical sensation.

Mediums have the power of assuming a spiritualized condition which enables them to see, hear and talk to spirits. You may call spirits etherealized forms, if you wish, for they have a material form of sublimated matter. The force of life animates their bodies as it does our bodies, whereby the power of sensation is produced.

The phenomena of Spiritualism demonstrate the power of spirit over matter. We, by the power which life gives us, demonstrate the same power. Life is manifested through the spirit over the physical body. Death is only a change in the form of matter. The matter of the physical body is thrown off, leaving the etherealized spirit body and nearly all the characteristics of physical life with the spirit.

Spiritualism is the only religion that demonstrates the truth of its profession. To deny its phenomena is to destroy it. As a faith religion it is only a dream, like the other religions of mythical foundation, of which the world now has too many. It has a beautiful philosophy, but its foundation is built on absolute knowledge. We have news from that other—that better land. We know of those who inhabit it. We know that they are our friends who have only gone before. They are not indebted to any crucified God for their salvation. They did not find streets paved with gold, nor a God upon his throne; neither did they find the unquenchable fire of hell, or see the torture of the eternally damned. They met the men and women that they had known in earth life, changed only in that freedom of opportunity which eternal progression affords.

Its philosophy is the evolution of the human soul in its eternal progress to perfection.

J. F. BAKER,
914 Perue Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

Solitude and concentration will reveal a world of thought, the likeness of which man had never dreamed.—Abolt.

We are so vain as to set the highest value upon those things to which nature assigned the lowest place.—Seneca.

With all the consecration ceremonies poured over a church it is not half so holy as the home.—L. K. Washburn.

Man alone is and shall be our god.—Feuerbach.

Creedal Beliefs and Teachings

They Are Compared with the Facts, Philosophy and Phenomena of Spiritualism, Which Gives the Greatest Proof of Human Progress and Continuity of Life.

The judgment relative to the above query will very likely be somewhat varied in expression in accord with each individual's experience along these lines. All do not have exactly the same tenor of thought and experience, hence look upon these ideas from different points of view.

There are many creeds and beliefs, and no doubt each one holding his own creed or articles of faith, is honest in the acceptance of it, as per their knowledge of the comprehension of the ideas and teachings which have been inculcated into their minds through early education, oftimes making it hard for individuals to change views upon those lines they have been led to believe had to do with the soul's condition of joy, peace, happiness and heaven, or the reverse of misery, pain or torture in some place of existence after what is termed death, because of the teachings of creeds or dogmatic theories which each one so educated, has been led to understand, would be the terminal point, according to the acceptance or rejection of those ideas.

They have been taught in holy writ that unless they repent and believe that someone else could or would pay the penalty they would be eternally lost; hence, many times through religious excitement of so-called revivals, many have been led to believe in the creeds or dogmas of what is termed religion, and that they could be saved, and would pass an eternity of hallelujahs to some personification called God, whereas perhaps their nearest kin, who had not accepted these creed or dogmatic teachings, would be writhing in the pangs of eternal torture because of their disbelief or unbelief. Through such teachings they severed the very cords of the tie of love which binds a mother to her offspring.

Could such an existence be a heaven to a mother, father, brother, sister, wife or friend? Nay, nay!

Many, many times has it been the case that the waves of creedal belief have rolled over the mentality of human beings caused by the excitement of so-called religious revivals, leading mortals to accept what they supposed to be a full and free salvation, they only waking up to the true realization of their condition, when the soul and spirit had left the physical casket, through transition to another existence wherein they could see more clearly the true situation of things and the fallacy of the creeds and teachings they had been led to accept, through the hypnosis of revivalist or priestly teachings wherein they had been told that unless they repented and believed in the salvation of atoning blood and cast all their sins upon someone else, they would be eternally lost in hades. The opportunity will be presented to everyone, sooner or later, to see the fallacy of such teachings, either in this sphere of existence or in spirit. Then he can come into the true recognition of the possibilities of eternal progress; but each one must have a spark of desire within his own soul to progress. That desire may arise either through some investigation on their part or through some ministering spirit, be it in the mortal body or in the spirit body after transition, for there are what are termed ministering spirits, both in the mortal and spiritual body, whose mission it is to present these truths, hence in some way and at some time will the opportunity be presented the living entity or spirit; but it is for the spirit to first recognize a need of progression into a better condition. There will be those who are true spiritual advisors who will help lead them into channels of thought wherein the knowledge desired, can be attained.

Have not the creeds and theological teachings done much to pervert the interest of true progress? I say that they have because they have filled the minds of mortals with fear of eternal punishment and misery, who have been taught that such would be the final result unless there was a full acceptance of the dogmatic teachings of salvation through atoning sacrifice, that someone else paid it all.

I know somewhat from experience the fallacies of such creeds and teachings, because I was reared and brought up under these ideas, which shackle the soul and spirit in bondage of fear; but thanks to the spirit of eternal love, through the ministering spirit of a brother who passed to the borderland and entered into the eternal light, life and liberty of the soul, the truths of spirit life and the possibilities of eternal progress were plainly made known to me, and my soul and spirit came into the true recognition of life's existence and its realities, both as regards this mundane and the future spheres of life.

What proof of an eternal existence, either for happiness or misery, does the creedal belief or teachings furnish humanity, or gives satisfactory evidence of life beyond this vale of tears, trials and struggles for existence? None; but the simple faith, which has been inculcated into mortal minds by and through the fallacious teaching of dogmatic theories of salvation as taught by those who term themselves gospel teachers or students who teach and preach that there is no possibility of the soul's development or progress after the change of so-called death, and these priestly teachers deny the facts of eternal progress as proven and demonstrated through Spiritualism and its philosophy or phenomena.

It is not all summed up in one creed, for there are many, each one claiming that their special system is the only right one and each working for the supremacy of their own particular method of salvation.

Spiritualism does not rely upon creedal beliefs or theological and dogmatic teachings, but can and does prove its teachings, by both physical and mental phenomena as demonstrated through their sensitives or psychics. To one who has been an observer along the lines of theological teachings, they seem very meager in the point of comfort as to a possible chance of eternal happiness or progress for the majority of humanity, because when one takes into consideration the countless millions of human beings that are in existence, there are but a few, as compared with the whole who have a chance of attaining the full and free salvation that is advocated by the revivalist or priest who goes about, as the old saying is, "Like a lion seeking whom he may devour," and if you accept their way of thinking (instead of thinking for yourself) then you are a good and glorious saint, fit for the kingdom of heaven; but if you do not think and believe thus and so, then they relegate you to the pit of eternal punishment, prepared, as they say, for all unbelievers. Especially do they condemn such noble souls as Robert G. Ingersoll, who demonstrated in his home life and associations with humanity, the truths of love and domestic affection. Those who knew him best testified to the true character of his daily life in home or abroad.

Always in his public demonstrations of intelligence did he advocate liberal thought, and that each human being had a birthright to live and think out from his or her own standpoint those principles which would embody into each mortal mind the right idea of true manhood or womanhood. But these sanctimonious priests would relegate such noble soul to eternal perdition, and no doubt in my mind but some of these very teachers of creedal beliefs and religious dogmas are oftimes far behind in their own lives and actions, as far as a true and spotless life is concerned, as compared with Ingersoll and others who sought to free the minds of human beings from the fallacies of dogmatic religion. Had they the power, they would to-day, as in times past, when they tortured and burned at the stake, so-called heretics who attempted to give people an insight into spiritual truths, carry out old ideas of witchcraft, and send out of physical existence such as seek to give humanity a knowledge of Spiritualism and continuity of life beyond the mortal.

What would be the outcome of human progress if creeds and theological teachings alone had their fullest sway?

As viewed from the knowledge of spirit return and the truths that Spiritualism teaches of this life and he future existence of soul and spirit, it proves that man has an individuality after leaving the physical body.

The outcome of the creedal beliefs or teachings of theology alone would be a great obstacle in the pathway of human progress and advancement of soul and spirit, because such beliefs have a natural tendency against the development of the soul or spirit.

The natural idea taken from such false dogmas leads the mortal to feel that no matter what an individual has done or how great a sinner he has been, if he only comes to the atoning grace of salvation, he will be freed from all punishment and be as pure as the angels. Such has been the teachings of revivalists and teachers along that line, as reported in the daily press of this city where such services have been conducted of late.

Each human being has a birthright given him through the principles of nature, and it is within the province of each one's rightful ownership to use the reasoning power that has been given him. But those of the priestly craft do not always like to have their parishioners drift into the channels of free thought and reasoning capabilities, because they know that such procedures will eventually lead the thinking and reasoning soul beyond their ability of control. In the province of the spiritual philosophy, the facts and phenomena of its teachings, all delegate to the mortal ideas of freedom of thought, and that each one should open wide the windows of the soul and investigate the truths of its teachings and phenomena which liberates the soul and spirit from the shackles of bondage with which the dogmas and creedal beliefs have always filled the mortal mind, doubt and fear, and hindered the progress or development of the soul and spirit.

Creeds and beliefs do not satisfy the longing soul that reaches out to know the realities of the beyond, for the loved ones who have left the physical, and the vacant chair tells its tale of sadness when the loved kin or friend has passed out of the mortal sphere of existence. It is not beliefs that fill the aching void and give cheer to the saddened heart at such times, but it is knowledge that is wanted, and Spiritualism gives that knowledge. In the next article mention will be made regarding demonstrated facts.

N. H. EDDY.
Buffalo, N. Y.

ON MEMORIAL DAY.

They will cover your grave with blossoms,
On the morrow, sweet and rare;
Gay tulips, and jonquils and lilacs,
And pink honeysuckles fair;
And in silence will place above you
The flag of your country there.

Amid strains of martial music
Will the soldier's praise be sung;
As the beautiful wreaths and garlands
On the grassy turf are flung.
To the old, it brings sacred memories,
Brave, hopeful thoughts to the young.

I may linger not, brave soldier,
On the morrow, where you sleep,
'Neath the fragrant and loving tributes
Of the ones who o'er you weep;
But the flowers of love bloom ever,
For you in my heart most deep.

It is ended, life's long, hard battle,
Peace reigns where you tent to-day;
On the shores of the land imortal,
Which seemeth not far away;
For you often come on a furlough,
And my hand in your own I lay.

ALICE M. WARREN.
Proctorsville, Vt.

FIRE.

The Right Man in the Right Place.

Spiritualism is being tried as in the refiner's fire, and all that is pure and good will stand the test, and all that is bad will fall and be consumed by the fire—the fire of justice and truth and virtue. When the head of our cause, Harrison D. Barrett, stands out in bold relief like he does in prosecuting the fakes as he has in the years that have past, I feel like we could do no better than to honor him as our leader and let the good work go on, and as I desire to serve God and my fellow men and women in spirit and in truth, therefore I will do my best to let the light shine through my pen, and words, and actions, for actions speak louder than words.

Now, when our President comes out bold and without fear or trembling, and declares that his people shall be separated from the ungodly, from thieves and robbers and prostitutes, I do know that, like the Nazarene of old, he has commenced to scourge and drive out of the temple—the temple of the greatest cause that ever attracted the attention of mortal men—the money-changers and all those that would make the temple of God a place of barter and sale and pollute it with their ungodly acts and deceptions, wearing a cloak of bright shining appearance in the dark, which is covered with phosphorus, a product of brimstone, which suggests to my mind the hell within which it will take a fire like unto the lake mentioned in the Bible, and I am not certain but that it will take an ocean of fire to burn out all the rot and filth and cussedness that is in our ranks as well as in the orthodox churches, where there are hotbeds of vice and corruption—men and women with cloaks of religion and dressed in sheep's clothing, while at heart they are ravenous wolves.

Perfect love casteth out all fear, and our dear BrotherBarrett has that love in his heart that makes bold and brave and noble all men and women—the true love of God and the love that Christ spoke about when he said: "I give unto you a new commandment that ye love one another." This commandment did away with all the other commandments that had been given. I admire a man like our leader, one who for over a quarter of a century has not been afraid to let his light shine, and because of his love for our cause and the sacrifice of his life on the great cross of humanity, he has waged a war against all wrongdoers and all vice and corruption wherever he has found it, and he has won the respect of all good, honest men and women. The only ones that howl are the ones that know they are wrong, and I do know that they know that they are wrong as well as we do, and we are as bad and mean as they are when we do not expose their miserable works.

Brother Barrett is the right man in the right place, and he has nearly laid down his life for his friends and his brothers and his sisters. Christ said truly that no greater love has any man shown than he who lays down his life for his friends, and I here and now say, that those who do not know Brother Barrett personally, have only to go back to the sketch of his life of twenty-five years a Spiritualist, in The Progressive Thinker some time ago, to know that I have written truly concerning him. I do not believe in riding a free horse to death, but I know that Brother Barrett has served his brothers and sisters, and the cause he loves so well without fear or favor, and just now, after he has done all the work for us and our cause is being weighed in the balances we shall stand by him, and I know our good brother will still be willing to guide the good old ship of Spiritualism into the harbor of protection and safe within the veil where we can drop the anchor and furl the sail, and I now will say, in conclusion, that if my good brother will pardon me for placing credit where credit belongs, and knowing that he is firm on the rock, and that my few words of just praise will not cause him to fall or fail to do his duty, I sign myself, your humble servant,

REV. DR. R. E. COON,
Spiritual Evangelist.
Lock Box 49, Portland, Oregon.

A VOICE FROM THE DEEP WITHIN.

What tells my soul of a higher life,
Of a better life than this—
Not a land of rest and free from strife,
But a land of greater bliss?

I cannot think it were free from toil,
As was taught in days agone,
But free from the human earth turmoil,
And nearer a brighter dawn.

I cannot dream of a robe and crown,
Of a jasper wall and throne,
Of a Godly smile and Godly frown;
I only dream of my own.

I can only reach with my inner eye
The heights that are for me;
I can only sense, when the form shall die,
The soul's eternity.

I can sometimes see a loved one's face,
There just beyond the veil,
And I know in the universe of space
I'll follow on the trail.

I know I must pass from this earthly plane,
As my friends have passed before;
There are higher heights for me to gain,
And better things in store.

I can reach no height for other men;
I can only reach my own;
But can reach a hand to help them when
To a proper strength I've grown.

These hairs of silver tell a true tale
Of a time, not far away,
When the spirit, free, will spread its sail
Before a brighter day.

Oh, beautiful Life! Infinite Love!
We drink at thy fountain, free;
We rise from the earth to spheres above,
And grow eternally.

Chorus.

There's a silent voice from the deep within;
There's a silent voice without,
That tells of a future and the great has been;
A voice from all things about.
A low, sweet voice;
A dear, kind voice:
'Tis the silent Voice from the Deep Within.

DR. T. WILKINS.

A DISMAL PICTURE.

As Portrayed by the Eminent Astronomer, Camille Flammarion—Death at Last Comes to the Sun and Planets, and the Space Occupied by Them Becomes a Desert Waste.

In comparatively few years [as set forth in the Chicago Examiner], astronomically speaking, this beautiful planet upon which we live—so full of life to-day, so full of activity, so noisy, so rich, on whose surface generations succeed generations so rapidly—will be dead, more—destroyed!

Just as she conceals in her bosom to-day the elements and dates of her beginnings, so she contains there the germs of her decadence and end.

And not only she, but her companions, also—Venus, her youngest sister, who resembles her so closely and whose present humanity is undoubtedly centuries behind our present stage of progress; Mercury, fiery and swift; Jupiter, now pursuing his course with noble and majestic movement; Saturn, girdled with his triple ring and guarded by his eight satellites; Uranus, slow and venerable; Neptune, whose years are centuries—all these worlds will shortly have ceased to exist.

Sun's Rays Enfeebled.

Inside an infinitely small fraction of eternity they will have lost all heat—water, air, liquids, gases, cohesion, affinity—all these elements of existence and of life will have disappeared.

Silent deserts rolling in solitary space, they will present only ice and barren rocks to the enfeebled rays of the sun.

Meteors, winds and rains will have leveled the mountains with the plains, dried up the beds of the lakes and gradually augmented the extent of the ocean, which to-day covers three-quarters of the earth's surface, and which will at last cover it completely.

The spots on the sun, which are even now scaring many people, will have increased in number, and this great luminary will have been exhausted of its heat by its long radiation into space.

At first these spots will be seen to spread themselves, like two dark zones, on either side of the equator of the sun, and meteorologists will observe a sensible diminution in its heat and light.

When millions of centuries shall have passed, this loss of heat will have become so great that all organisms on the planets will perish to give place to new beings constituted to live in the cold.

Days Turned to Night.

But an age will come when the sun, first growing dark red, then obscure, will cease to be the source of heat to the family of planets which have so long drawn from it their magnetism and life, and will shed only a livid and sinister light.

The days shall be turned into nights, and there will be no longer either Spring or Summer. The worlds, dark and heavy, will revolve like black balls around another black ball.

The heavens will have become unrecognizable, the earth decrepit, dried up, disintegrated, will have fallen into fragments which, spreading themselves along her orbit, will continue to revolve around the dead sun.

Diminutive skeletons revolving around a giant skeleton, aerolites carrying into darkness the last fragment of a formerly inhabited earth, they will, perhaps, be enveloped in its passage by some hyperbolic comet which, carrying some of them with it in its course, will scatter them in another system on some unknown planet, whose inhabitants, gathering them up to preserve them under glass in a museum, will analyze them, without finding in them any clew to the history of the globe whence they came.

A MESSAGE.

Written for a Mother Who Lost Her Best Beloved and Only Child, a Beautiful Daughter, in the Morning of Her Life—not Lost, but Waiting for that Mother in the Better Life.

Sweet Mother, though the sunset's bars
Must fall and fold away our light,
Still watch for us the tender stars
So safe and sure; than hope more bright.
And tho' the tides of life rush o'er
The inmost fortress of the heart,
They just as surely leave the shore,
And in our harbor have no part.

Sad mother, broken hopes for all
Of us, lie scattered at our feet,
But dawns a time when one sweet call
Will prove the glittering bits complete;
And in the bliss that will be ours,
How far astern this storm will seem,
Woes of to-day but drifting showers
Across a past and troubled dream.

Fond Mother, you and I would glean
The fairest flowers our eyes could find
For Heaven's garden, hue and sheen
Must rarer be, our wreaths to bind.
And were our eyes not dim with Earth,
What glories would the truth unfold:—
The mystery of Angelic birth;
The reason why—the story told.

Dear Mother, when the steeps subside,
And fair and calm the path before,
We shall be nearer the divide,
And almost to the swinging door.
Doubt not, they know and love us still,
They're only earlier there than we;
Around the bend, straight on, until
Their beckoning hands we plainly see.

And while we bide a little space
This side the thinly flowing veil,
The knowledge that upon each face
We know, is love that cannot fail,
Will make us stronger as we tread
The path that leads us to their side;
For well we know there are no dead,
The living are the ones that died.

EVA AMES.
South Wallingford, Vt.

Reason must be our last guide and judge in everything.—John Locke.

Justice is the constant desire and effort to render every man his due.—Justinian.

Where all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only rather more dangerous.—Froude.

THAT'S THE WAY.

Make Man Good by Suggestion, as Set Forth by Prof. J. D. Quackenbos of Columbia University.

All attitudes of the objective mind—its trend of thought, opinions, beliefs, desires, propensities, tendencies, emotions and passions—are controllable and alterable by a higher human personality, exclusively along the lines that are moral and true. For the subliminal self of man is that principle in us which dictates what is right and inclines to good; that "spirit" in which or under whose control the Apostle Paul urges men to walk in order that they may neither be condemned by the moral law nor bound by the law ceremonial.

So man in his higher personality is adequate to the extirpation from his objective nature of any abnormal craving or passion, like the craze for alcoholic drink. And he will always act in response to that 'touch of explosive intensity," as Prof. James has described it—that suggestional force which awakens ethico-spiritual activities and subordinates the lower tendencies of the carnal nature—when imparted by a pure-minded suggestionist who is in genuine sympathy with the inebriate and operates with the courage of his convictions.

By means of the enlightened employment of hypno-suggestion the subliminal self may be brought into active control. It happens to be a physiological fact that in a state of sleep, either natural or induced by an intelligent physician through ordinary hypnotics, a human being is suggestible—that is, amenable to the insinuation of a belief, impulse or thought which may dominate the waking life.

The technic adopted involves the arrest of the visual attention by some bright object, the concurrent establishment of the patient's confidence in the desire to help him and monotonous sleeping suggestions as an accompaniment of impression by personality. Dipsomaniacs, as a rule, are easy subjects, in that they yield readily to the hypnotic influence and accept unconditionally the suggestions communicated by the operator. Regular drinkers may be dealt with whenever they can be induced to sober up, but I have found it unprofitable to attempt influencing an intoxicated person.

The physical, mental and moral bankruptcy that accompanies dipsomania should be held up before the view of the sleeper until an abhorrence for drink and all that it stands for has come into his soul.

It will thus be seen that hypnosuggestion is of the nature of inspiration. It is a summoning into control of the true man an accentuation of insight into life and its procedures and a portraiture of happiness as the assured outcome of living in consonance with the truth.

—New York World.

SONG OF THE MYSTIC.

I walk down the Valley of Silence—
Down the dim, voiceless valley—alone!
And I hear not the fall of a footstep
Around me, save God's and my own;
And the hush of my heart is as holy
As hovers where angels have flown!

Long ago was I weary of voices
Whose music my heart could not win;
Long ago was I weary of noises
That fretted my soul with their din;
Long ago was I weary of places
Where I met but the human and sin.

I walked in the world with the worldly;
I craved what the world never gave;
And I said: "In the world each Ideal
That shines like a star on life's wave,
Is wrecked on the shores of the Real,
And sleeps like a dream in a grave."

And still did I pine for the Perfect,
And still found the False with the True;
I sought 'mid the Human for Heaven,
But caught a mere glimpse of its Blue;
And I wept when the clouds of the Mortal
Veiled even that glimpse from my view.

Do you ask what I found in the Valley
'Tis my Trysting Place with the Divine.
And I fell at the feet of the Holy,
And above me a voice said: "Be mine";
And there rose from the depths of my spirit
An echo, "My heart shall be thine."

Do you ask how I live in the Valley?
I weep, and I dream, and I pray.
But my tears are as sweet as the dewdrops
That fall on the roses in May;
And my prayer, like a perfume from Censers,
Ascendeth to God night and day.

In the hush of the Valley of Silence
I dream all the songs that I sing;
And the music floats down the dim Valley,
Till each finds a word for a wing,
That to hearts, like the Dove of the Deluge,
A message of Peace they may bring.

But far on the deep there are billows
That never shall break on the beach;
And I have heard songs in the Silence
That never shall float into speech;
And I have had dreams in the Valley
Too lofty for language to reach.

And I have seen Thoughts in the Valley—
Ah! me, how my spirit was stirred!
And they wear holy veils on their faces,
Their footsteps can scarcely be heard;
They pass through the Valley like Virgins,
Too pure for the touch of a word!

Do you ask me the place of the Valley,
Ye hearts that are harrowed by Care?
It lieth afar between mountains,
And God and his angels are there:
And one is the dark mount of Sorrow,
And one the bright mountain of Prayer.

—Father Ryan.

One solitary philosopher may be great, virtuous and happy in the midst of poverty, but not a whole nation.—Isaac Iselin.

The Secular Press.

It is highly interesting to witness the Secular Press swinging into line, and devoting a great deal of attention to subjects connected with spirit return. The following from the New York World furnishes a very interesting summary of various experiences.

Ghostly Comforter Came to Her.

On the night of November 24, I visited my parents, leaving my little boy, almost three years of age, playing. When I returned home I found him in bed with a high fever. We sent in different directions for a doctor, but owing to a severe snowstorm which set in that night, up to 3 o'clock in the morning, none had arrived.

I was desperate. Just then our servant girl called me and said:

'A gentleman wishes to see you."

I left the room, quickly going toward the gentleman, exclaiming: "Oh, doctor, help my child!"

He grasped my hand and said: "Emma, I am no doctor! Take comfort, don't cry. Whatever trouble the Lord sends us we must bear; it is well with the child. Place a black veil on his face."

I told him I did not possess one. He then said:

"Then take a piece of black silk."

It was then I stared at him, and was startled at his ghostly appearance. Before I could realize all this he suddenly disappeared, although the door was locked.

After opening the same no trace of the man was seen. I hastened to my child and found him in convulsions. I placed a black silk over his face. In a short time the convulsions became less violent, and in less than an hour my little darling was dead. This happened when we lived in East Tenth street.

EMMA DEXHEIMER.
No. 206 Eighty-fourth street, near Third avenue.

Visited by Dead Mother.

On August 6, 1883, I was employed as a tow-boy by the Coney Island Railroad, and the next day, August 7, I was run over by one of their cars, which caused me to have my right leg cut off in the Long Island Hospital.

On the same day my mother, after being informed of my accident, was taken sick in a car while on her way to see me, and while I was on my way in the ambulance to the hospital she was being removed to St. Peter's Hospital in another ambulance. She died on the 9th of August.

Now the death of my mother was without my knowing anything about it. On account of my being so low at the time the doctors and my friends hid it from me. But whenever I asked about her they told me she was very sick and could not get out to see me.

About five weeks after her death I was lying in my bed wide awake, talking to the patient in the next bed to me, when my mother suddenly appeared to me and told me that she was dead, and that I would meet with some trouble, but not to mind it, as everything would turn out all right in time.

This was the first knowledge I had of her death until seven weeks after, when I was about to leave the hospital, when my uncle, her brother, told me of it.

This I swear is the truth.

HUGH McDEVITT.
No. 51 16th street, Brooklyn.

Ghostly Warning of Death.

On the morning of January 20, 1904, about 8 o'clock, I went to the store. When I was coming home I met my brother and told him to come home, as it was getting late for a little boy to be out. He came with me.

As we were passing the front stoop of our house I glanced at the door, and to my surprise I saw the door open all the way back to the wall, which was very unusual. I told my brother to wait till I went up and closed the door. He waited at the bottom of the steps.

I went up, and when I was on the top step I saw a white figure coming around the bend of the winding stairs. The figure was a frightful thing to look at. It had one hand upon the wall and the other rested on the banister; it had a long, flowing white gown, and was very thin and eyes sunken in its head.

I stood still for a moment. Then I saw it coming nearer and nearer. I was afraid and ran down the stairs, leaving the door open.

Then I saw it disappear. When I got to the bottom of the stairs my brother said: "What was that? It frightened me."

I said: "It looked like a spirit."

We went into the house and told our parents, and father laughed and said, "Nonsense." Then they went into the hall and lit the gas, but there was no sign of anybody, and the door was closed. My mother said, "That is a warning of some kind."

A few days later the man up stairs took sick with heart trougle and died soon afterward.

KATHRINE RUPPERT.
No. 13 Baldwin St., Newark, N. J.

Ghost Made of Many Little Lights.

On the first Sunday in August in the year 1881, I was visiting friends at a cottage in Oyster Bay, L. I. I was sitting in my room reading when I was disturbed by a rustle in the hall outside my door. I looked up and saw the form of a woman about to enter my room.

I had started to speak, when, on getting a near view, I discovered she was not a living person. The impression I received was that I was looking at a corpse just risen from the grave.

In life she must have been smaller than the ordinary woman, quite slender, with straight, black hair. She wore a black dress considerably out of fashion at the time and held something in her hand which closely resembled a white carnation.

The deathly pallor of her face was awful to look at. She stood in the doorway a few minutes, then slowly turned away and disappeared before my very eyes. As she turned away she seemed to be a mass of tiny lights that blazed and seemed to consume her. This happened at 7:30 o'clock.

ELIZABETH JACKSON.
Garrison, N. Y.

Dead Nun Walked Before Her.

I was a nurse at St. Mary's Hospital, conducted by the Sisters of Mercy in San Francisco, Cal., and was attending the male patients on the first floor. Sister Imelda, whom I liked very well, was attending to the female patients on the third floor.

When a patient died the body was carried out of a back door down on the main floor, to a small outhouse, known as the "dead house." One week after Sister Imelda's death I was going out of this door on my way to the Old Ladies' home, a separate building from the hospital, when I saw a sister walking ahead of me toward the "dead house."

I thought it a very unusual thing for a sister to do, especially alone, and I hastened after her to offer my assistance. Just as I reached her she ascended the one step leading to the "dead house," and put her hand on the door knob to open it, and then turned and faced me. It was the face of Sister Imelda, but of an expressionless, shadowy form. Then the apparition instantly disappeared.

Fear of ridicule prevented me from speaking to anyone about this event.

LOUISE RAYNOR.
No. 165 W 21st St., N. Y. City.

Tried Vainly to Trap the Ghost.

In the fall of 1888 I lived with my parents in the old Barker homestead, three miles from Rahway, N. J. The old house is two and a half stories high with about sixteen rooms, with large, wide hall running from the front to the back of the house.

The broad stairs on one side of the house, leading to the second floor and attic, were used by our family.

I was a young woman of nineteen, not easily frightened, and not superstitious.

One evening, after looking through some magazines, I thought I would go up to the attic and get a look. As I did not want to disturb the household, I went up by way of the front stairs, reaching the attic.

I sat down in front of the old bookcase and set my lamp beside me. I was looking over some books when all of a sudden my light went out, and having no match I gorped my way to the hall, guiding myself by the banisters.

I reached the broad landing at the head of the stairs leading to the big hall below when I was startled by hearing footsteps coming up the stairs. I crouched in the corner, scarcely daring to breathe until they seemed to have passed me.

I ran down the stairs, through the dining room and up the back stairs to my room.

Glancing at the clock, I saw it was 12:15. I went to bed, but could not sleep, and when daylight dawned went to the attic to see if there were any windows open.

But every window was closed. While my mother and Mrs. Dayton (who lived with us) and I were in the sitting-room during the afternoon of the following day I related my experience of the night before.

The old lady held up her hands and exclaimed: "That was Barker's Ghost!"

Mother said, "Tell her the story, as she is old and daring enough not to be afraid of anything."

Mrs. Dayton then said that one of the Barkers, years ago, came out to the old homestead to have the home aired and put in order for the family, and as he did not return after a reasonable length of time one of the family came down to see what was keeping him so long. Going through the house they found him on the landing of the front stairs in a pool of blood, murdered. Ever after that his ghost was supposed to walk up those stairs at midnight.

I had read of haunted houses. But here I had been living all these years in one and had not known it. With a laugh I left the room and went up stairs to the landing, tore up the carpet, and, sure enough, there were large stains, as though something had been spilled there. I related the story to my older brother and asked him to help me catch the ghost!

That night we stood by the double doors in the dining-room that opened into the big hall. Glancing at my brother, with his revolver in his hand, I was on the point of laughing, when suddenly I heard the footsteps coming along the hall.

Seizing the lamp my brother and I ran into the hall, but we could see nothing.

The next day a city cousin came to stay a couple of weeks. One day I related the story to her, and asked if she would sleep with me in the spare room down stairs.

She agreed. After getting my brother's revolver we decided to lie down on the bed until nearly midnight. There were two windows in the room that opened on the porch. It was a beautiful moonlight night. My cousin said, "Turn down the light, I love to lie in bed and look at the moon."

The shutters were open and the shades were up full height. I was startled by my cousin grasping my arm.

Looking over toward the window I saw the form of a man clearly defined against the moon. He was wild eyed, with arms uplifted. He disappeared as suddenly as he came.

I shall never forget my cousin's piercing screams as she ran from the room.

I was too frightened to move. When I came to my senses I ran to my parents' room, where I found my cousin in hysterics.

If not a ghost, what was it?

MRS. IDA M. GORMAN.
29½ Arkansas Ave., Atlantic City, N. J.

Lived Long in a Haunted House.

My lovely home down in the sunny South is haunted, so the negroes say. The home was built by myself and husband when we were in the early twenties, and we were much attached to it. During the ten years we lived there we were called upon to pass through many sad, as well as strange experiences. Steps were constantly heard, and my husband never retired without his pistol under his head, for so often we were awakened by the sound as though someone were entering the house, though we never could see anyone.

Six children were born—four of whom were called away in early infancy.

Many were the strange sounds heard by the negro servants living in the little cabin a short distance from the house. Almost every morning I would be greeted by: "Good morning, Mis' Josie, did yo' hear de ghosts las' night?"

Finally, my husband in the early thirties, passed away, and a short while before he died a tiny little cherub, Lizzie, was taken from us. Just one day before she died I had thrown myself on a bed in an agony of despair in a room adjoining, when suddenly I felt the pressure of an invisible hand; tenderly and caressingly it patted my cheek and a voice said: "Don't grieve so, daughter, it is best your little one should go now, for she will be with me in heaven."

It vanished, and the impression it gave me was deep and lasting that it was the spirit of my husband's father who had passed out years before I was born.

A few years after my husband's death I was driving out of the grounds with my two little children in the carriage, when suddenly I was impelled to glance back toward my bedroom window. I saw plainly the form of my husband peering through the lace curtains, looking longingly and intently at us as we left the long vista of flowers and shrubbery bordering the drive.

Again, several months afterward I heard my name called in a whisper as I crossed the hall alone.

Many times footsteps would be heard in the silent night as though someone were hastily coming up he garden walk, then up the steps to the doorbell, and when it would ring someone would go hastily to the door—and find no one there!

The house has been rented to three different families, and all have many experiences to relate. A deep sigh has often been heard in the guest chamber, and by different persons.

MRS. JOSEPHINE PEOPLES.
Narragansett Hotel, 93rd St., & Broadway, New York City.

Spirit Appeared as He Was Killed.

In the spring of 1901, I think it was in May, I was a Pullman porter running to Albany, leaving New York at 4 p. m., and getting in about 7:30.

The company provided two old Wagner cars for the boys to sleep in at night, which lay down in the yard. Some nights there would be quite a few of us, so we would sit up and play poker most of the night. There was one porter named Smith, who, would never play, but would sit and look on.

One night quite late one of the boys asked him if he would get a pint of beer. We gave him the can and he went out of the car.

He had been gone about 15 minutes when he came back and walked through the car. He never said a word to anyone, but went right through the car and out of the other door. Of course, that caused lots of comment and laughter, as we thought he was playing a joke on us.

But just at that moment the door was thrown wide open and a brakeman asked us, did we send a man out? We said, "Yes."

"Well," he said, "he is lying out here cut in half—run over by a freight train."

We want out and looked, and sure enough there was poor Smith dead, and that was he that came through the car, or his spirit.

We all remembered when he came into the car he went through both doors without opening them, and he had no legs. W. S. BAKER.
N. 417 W. 52nd st., New York.

A Ghostly Letter Seeker.

It was in the year 1882, when I was employed as a boy to drive a pony and carriage at Dutton Manor, Lancashire, England, that I saw my first ghost. Dutton Manor was then occupied by James Fenton, Esq., his wife, three sons and three daughters.

It was the gamekeeper whom I had heard tell the story of why the left wing with its tower was seldom used, and why the old manor had been closed for so many years. The story ran that a young man had just returned to the manor with his bride, many years before, when he saw her one morning receive a packet of letters from the postman. The bridegroom demanded an explanation, she refused to explain and fled to the left wing and thence to the tower, which was reached by a stone stairway on the outside. Having secreted the letters in the tower, she attempted to return, but in some manner fell off the stairway and lost her life just as her husband arrived on the spot, and ever afterward her ghost was said to be looking for the letters.

So you may be sure, after hearing this, I never went any nearer to the tower at night than I was compelled.

But one winter night the manor was filled with company, and I had been told to help the butler wait on the table. Dinner was over and we were serving coffee and cake in the drawing room, when one of the guests, I think it was a gentleman, said: "Whichever lady gets the ring in the cake will be married before the year is out." Immediately Mr. Richard, the eldest son, called me quietly over to him and said: "Go up to the top of the tower in the left wing, and upon a table you will find a ring. Bring it to me."

I did not dare refuse to go; there was no time to lose. I knew he must want it put into the cake unknown to the rest of the people, so, trembling, I took up a silver candlestick with a single lighted candle, passed through the billiard-room, thence to the picture gallery, where I remember noticing a picture of King Charles, whom I had heard had been beheaded, and I could have sworn I heard him groan in agony.

I entered the left wing. I believe at that moment I shrank so small in fear of my own shadow that I cast no shadow. So fearful was I of making a noise that I did not walk; I flew. I have travelled over the entire earth since, but it was further by far to the tower. I have lived many years since, but it has not been one-half as long as those few minutes.

I reached the stone stairway to the tower, mounted to the top, opened the door, and the light went out. I reached for the table and grasped the ring, when—horrors! I heard a man's voice say, "But you did get the letters!"

I then saw a lady's bare neck in a glimmer of light which came through a casement.

Was I afraid? I don't know. What did I do? I don't know. I only know that I was able to give Mr. Richard the ring in time for him to hand a young lady a piece of cake just as the clock struck twelve.

HENRY BENNETT.
313 Sumner ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Drawings By Watson Heston. With critical and humorous comments upon the Texts. Heston's drawings are incomparable, and excruciatingly funny. Price, in boards, $1.00.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

THE ORDER OF NATURE.

Our Epoch and How It Comes to Be.

I.

The air is full of questions. Thinkers are seeking solutions of problems as old as time. We are making an epoch. We have reached a period of unfoldment sufficiently large to enable us to comprehend more of the meaning of ourselves. The world of intelligence is rapidly becoming scientific; it is seeking bed-rock in all matters social, political, intellectual and religious. Those who dig deepest find the richest ore.

And all this is not wonderful; it is simply in the order of Nature. All planets evolve by the same processes. There are no other sets of principles at work on the other planets than obtain on this. Primordial methods are the same in essentials at all times.

As all preceding worlds swung into space from their respective parentage, the suns, so has ours. Such facts as these simplify our labors, those in hand now and those which will engage our attention as we travel on through the eternities. We can begin to arrange our Nature studies as we do our mathematics, by familiarizing ourselves with fundamentals.

In former papers we have dwelt upon the three primordial principles by whose activities all things come to be.

Creation, as it is understood to-day by the best informed minds presupposes the fact of self existence in all that is; that every atom always did exist and always will. Out of this atomic, sentient allness every form has come. Ethers have the power to hold all atoms apart—in solution. Original atoms are not all in use—have not all been embodied in form; the Universe still holds in primal condition atoms of all grades, all degrees of fineness, so we need have no anxiety concerning an end of things.

The Universe constitutes God; just as an individual is known, not by his heart, not by his head, not by his form, separately and entirely, but by the whole manifestation, the allness of him. So the sentient Universe is God. This gives us a clear apprehension and comprehension of the so long vexed question: "What is God?"

Distinctively, definitely co-ordinated with this sentiency are the principles through and by which it carries on its works of construction and change. These are three in number. Love is first to operate. It expresses in desire, in attraction, selection, adhesion, cohesion; second, intellect—the finding-how faculty; third, Will—the power to put into execution. The first has its seat in the heart; the second, in the head; the third, in the muscular formation. The true dictates are from the heart; the head should never lead, nor the will.

The above statements are academic; they are by authority and the authority is intelligencies from a planet of a sun system, the third older than ours, and these are in communication with people of two sun systems older than theirs. The formula given above is the basis of Cosmic processes as their researches and experience have proven, and the teachings so based should by us be deemed authentic.

The intelligencies communicating these points are of those who witnessed the birth of our planet from its parent, our sun, and took it in charge to assist in its growth and development.

They have watched its progress, have magnetized it, and from time to time have visited it to note its evolutionary steppings, assisting as need required, according to the attractions of its indwelling sentiency. Along the highway they have scattered their wisdom in unnumbered ways and in inspirations since it was a peopled planet with accompanying spiritual spheres.

Time and again have the message bearers gone out to teach as best they could, yet were often dismayed as the crude elements forbade from time to time the propagation of the seeds of Truth as they were sown. It is that the races in part have outgrown the rack, the cross, the fagot, the rope and the thumbscrew, that this last and great attempt has been made to open the doors between the two states of being and later to declare themselves as Teachers and Aids still in the progress of the planet.

In giving to the readers of The Progressive Thinker these statements I am acting under a close leading and am commissioned to say that I have a backing in spirit realms which will manifest itself and by indubitable proofs show that this which has been given is authentic.

By the processes of evolving spiritual forces strong and clear manifestations are to be made and we wish our workers to hold themselves responsive to the highest within them so that the teachers and helpers may be able to come very near with their methods for the opening wide of the avenues of spiritual influx for the good of all.

Not long since the highly intelligent planet Mars turned its magnetic streams upon the Earth so that we are in currents of rare inflow of intellectual power, and when this has continued up to a certain point we shall be in line for a polarizing of the grandly spiritualizing streams that will flow to us from the planet Jupiter. Then, indeed, shall we hear the footsteps of angels; we shall see the white-robed throngs and shall in its entirety know the meaning of the message that heralded the birth of one who again shall come among us as Teacher, Brother, Friend.

The millennial days will come to us as they have come to other worlds; we shall see of the travail of our souls and be satisfied.

MRS. M. A. CONGDON.
Hood River, Oregon.

CURING DRUNKARDS.

Suggestions as to the Proper Course to Pursue.

I see many remedies advertised for the cure of drunkenness and other bad habits—some ingredient to be added to their food, either unknown to the victim or with his consent. Can any of your readers testify to the efficiency of any of these cures? Mr. W. T. Stead of London some time ago gave a prominent notice of one of these cures, and seemed to think well of it.

Now I have this suggestion to make to the temperance societies, and am rather surprised that it has not been long since tried.

I suggest that they should advocate a law requiring the medical officers of jails to administer one or other of these remedies to all criminals who have been addicted to drink and drugs, also to tobacco chewers.

In this way a great deal may be done toward curing drunkenness, because the police can arrest and have all habitual drunkards locked up for a two or three-weeks' treatment in in place of a fine. F. A. BINNEY.
San Diego, Cal.

The Spiritual Philosophy.

We Are Compassed About Continuously by a Great Cloud of Witnesses.

The elucidation of the Spiritual Philosophy as bearing on human destiny is a subject worthy the serious consideration of all intelligent beings. There is a lamentable amount of ignorance concerning what it involves, not only among people in general, but even among Spiritualists themselves. Many never spend any time in its investigation, seeming to treat the subject as of no special importance. They know, through the phenomena, that man lives after so-called death, for they have received confirmation of this fact through the channels of mediumship. But how and where are they to live, what do, and what become; what are their relationships, and whattheir possibilities? Of these things they know little or nothing, nor do they seem to care or take the trouble to investigate. These treasures of wisdom and knowledge do not lie around on the surface. They are hidden treasures coined in the mint of spiritual consciousness. They are hidden from all those who live on the sensual plane of human existence.

People on this plane lay the flattering unction to themselves that what they do in secret can never be known. That they can lead a reckless life of self-indulgence and no one be the wiser. But they are terribly deceived. There is absolutely nothing done in secret. Nothing is hidden that shall not be made manifest. We are "compassed about continually by a great cloud of witnesses." In view of this fact the Apostle Paul admonished the Hebrews, to whom he wrote his famous epistle, that they should lay aside every weight and the sin that did so easily beset them.

"All things are naked and open to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do." Our very thoughts and imaginations are matters of record. Our words and actions are stamped upon the scroll of destiny—ineffaceable forever, except by repentance and a long course of righteous living.

The judgment is set. Spiritualism rends the dark veil of mortality, and that tremendous fact stands revealed. It discloses a hell for evil doers that that is no myth. It reveals a heaven attained only through right living, and the unfoldment of the spiritual nature. The spiritual consciousness is awakened, and all motives and acts are seen in their true nature and bearings. Till then the record is a sealed book. No exoteric power can break the seal or open the book. Your destiny is hidden till you wake up in the spirit world and in amazement read your record. The book of fate is opened as each man faces the consequences of his earth life. Disrobed of the mortal garb, he stands for just what he is, with no veil to hide his deformity. No robe of imputed righteousness, woven in the loom of another's sacrifice, to hide his nakedness. He can go on while in the mortal, adding sin to sin; he can make darkness his pavilion, and hide himself in the most secret haunts and flatter himself that no one can see or know of his deeds done in the darkness; but let him know and understand that he has been all the while held in full survey by myriads of spiritual beings, and among them his own kindred, who grieve bitterly over the course he is pursuing. Let him also know that a time of resurrection is coming, when, like spectres damned, his evil deeds—even those long since forgotten—rise up like a mighty army of accusers, on every turn, while conscience, awake at last, tortures his wretched soul with remorse and a sense of conscious guilt.

There is absolutely no escape from the consequences of wrongdoing. There are many claiming to be Spiritualists who seem to imagine that all they need to know is that they live hereafter, and that they are not to be sent to hell when they die. But the relation of the life that now is, to that which is to come, and the effect of good or evil deeds upon our future destiny, are seldom thought of, much less investigated, by those living under the sway of carnal appetites. Sin and suffering are inseparable. Even God, Himself, cannot abrogate the law governing cause and effect.

When professing Christians sin, or do that which is evil, no atonement of Christ can absolve them from the consequences of their transgressions. Like all others, they must reap what they sow. The suffering will be proportionate to the wrongdoing while in the physical body. They make a terrible mistake when they think they can sin that grace may abound. Likewise Spiritualists who give loose reins to their carnal appetites while they sing of a "sweet bye and bye," are doomed to a terrible disappointment. Such must work out their own salvation by ceasing to do evil and learning to do well. The loving ministrations of angels may assist in the work of repentance and restitution, but they can do nothing more.

While hatred, or malice, or revenge, or covetousness, or lust, hold empire in the soul, no progress can be made. These passions, unrepented of, are the manacles that bind men and women in the prison cells of sensuality and earthliness. The lower planes of existence are more thickly populated by far than the angelic spheres. In many portions of the world of spirits pandemonium reigns, while dense darkness covers the unhappy victims of a seemingly merciless fate.

Had the philosophy of Spiritualism been understood by these denizens of darkness, and had their lives been regulated accordingly, they would have escaped the fearful dilemma in which they find themselves. Their deplorable condition is the direct result of the mistaken idea that one can lead a life of sin and yet escape the consequences. The sooner people awake to a realizing sense that they themselves are responsible for the sorrows that may await them in the after life, the better it will be for them and for all concerned.

The experiences related above are not an infliction of the judgment of God, but are a direct result of the life on earth under the dominion of the lusts of the flesh. They always war against the soul.

Men become hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. In proof of this we have only to glance at the present state of things. We behold the worship of mammon, the insatiate greed for material riches, the adulteration of nearly everything people eat or drink, the conscienceless trusts that rob the poor, the starvation wages paid to many employes, the damnable avarice that constructs many of the tenement houses in the large cities, and builds the sweat shops, filling them with helpless victims of poverty in order to increase their ill-gotten gains at the sacrifice of the bodies and souls of men, women and children. Need we wonder that, when the result of this state of things is fully matured, and the time of reaping comes, there will be misery and wretchedness in the spirit world? Many will then be weighed in the scales of "even-handed justice" and will be found wanting. The ingredients in the poisoned chalice which they pressed to their lips shall be pressed to their own lips. The suffering inflicted upon others will come back upon themselves with compound interest. Their riches shall torture their guilty souls with the avenging fires of retributive justice. There will be no escape till the uttermost farthing has been paid. According to our philosophy the fate of evildoers is certain and sure. It is a REAL, and not a mythical, hell. Every evil deed furnishes fresh fuel for its avenging fires.

Reader, if you do not relish such a fate, see to it that you live so as not to deserve it.

Where the philosophy of Spiritualism is understood in its far-reaching significance, and people live in accordance therewith, all these conditions will be radically changed. There is absolutely no hope for humanity except in the psychological unfoldment of the spirit nature. Then men will know and love one another, and no longer war with each other like the wild beasts of the forest. They will live in the spirit, and cease to fulfill the lusts of the flesh. Selfishness will give place to generosity, and pure love will be the all-potent factor in human existence.

What a different record the true Spiritualist will meet when the sealed book is opened, from that of evildoers, which we have been contemplating. As a record it will far transcend their expectations. Every good thought sent out for human weal will embellish the book with celestial gems. Every kind word and generous deed will speak with dazzling brilliancy upon every page. The whole personality will shine with the resplendent glory of angelic purity. There will be "fullness of joy, and pleasures that are forevermore." And yet, eternal progression has but just begun. The glory in which they find themselves is but the early twilight of eternity's morning. The Philosophy of Spiritualism compasses vast eternity, explores the illimitable universe, and delves in the stupendous mysteries of immortality. It penetrates the innermost realm of the spiritual planets and constellations that give to the material orbs their existence. It leads its votaries to an acquaintance with the generative forces of universal being. All worlds and systems are brought into reciprocal relation to each other by a system of communication faintly foreshadowed to the children of earth by the telephonic and telepathic means of intercourse. To the angelic inhabitants of the spiritual world, time is not, and distance is annihilated.

In view of a destiny so grand, so ineffably glorious and soul-inspiring, an appeal comes from the celestial spheres to all Spiritualists to lead spiritual lives and thereby give the pure light of life to those in darkness. A mighty work is before you. A great responsibility rests upon you. You hold the key to the situation. All that is needed to complete the demolition of the crumbling systems of superstition is for you as Spiritualists to appreciate the day of your opportunity and live and act accordingly.

Rise above petty self-seeking and strife, and unite on the main issues as one mighty body of spiritually enlightened, emancipated people. Angelic messengers are preparing the way, and mighty hosts are ready to co-operate in a spiritual movement such as has never been known on the planet. A union of soul and a union of purpose—oh! Spiritualists, is the one prime necessity of the hour. Mighty angels and countless hosts of celestial deific spirits await your bidding—oh! ye spiritual denizens of earth. But know ye this: in vain is their aid invoked while disunion and inharmony prevail. When, with one accord, ye rally to beat back the cohorts of darkness, they are with you—a mighty invincible host. Then, in clearer light, and with a broader understanding, the Spiritual Philosophy will be revealed to the children of earth, as their guiding star, and as containing the mystic key that opens to them infinite treasures of divine wisdom and knowledge.

Oakland, Cal. N. F. RAVLIN.

A VETERAN OF THE WAR.

An old man sat on a rustic seat
With his grandson at his knee,
Told of the fights, "but ne'er a retreat
I made in the war," said he.

Across his brow ran a purple streak,
The right sleeve empty and frayed;
Recalled the sad night at Bloody Creek
When the Southern foe were stayed.

After the wound and stump were healed,
He sought not his mountain rest,
At once as a colporteur revealed
This brave hero at his best.

He tramped it through the entire war,
He sang and then knelt in prayer—
Ne'er heeding bullets, or cannon's roar,
When needed was always there.

On his return to the mountain side,
He thought how he looked before;
They honored their hero and replied:
"Thrice welcome; the war is o'er."

"Your Grandmother was waiting for me,
And to win her was my goal;
With her arms outstretched, 'My darling,' said she,
From the bottom of her soul.

"So always fight for the weak, oppressed,
And boy, in the end you'll see,
And let them take your right arm, if best,
They can't take your soul," said he.

GILBERT PATTEN BROWN.
Boston, Mass.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

PILES

Wonderful New 3-Fold Remedy Curing Thousands—Anyone May Try It Without Cost.

Send Your Address To-day and Get a $1 Package to Try—FREE

We want every sufferer from piles who sees this advertisement to send us his or her address at once. Return mail will bring—Free to Try—our complete new three-fold absorption cure for Piles, Ulcer, Fissure, Prolapse, Tumors, Constipation and all rectal troubles. If you are fully satisfied with the benefit received, send us One Dollar. If not we take your word and it costs you nothing; you decide after a thorough trial. This treatment is curing even cases of 30 and 40 years' standing, as well as all the earlier stages. Act now and perhaps save yourself great suffering. Our three-fold treatment cures to stay cured, because it is constitutional as well as local, and we want you to try it at our expense. Our valuable new Pile Book (in colors) comes free with the approval treatment, all in plain package. Send no money—but write to-day—to Dr. Van Vleck Co., X023 Majestic Building, Jackson, Mich.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

DR. J. M. Peebles' Works

Reduced Prices.

1. What Is Spiritualism and Who Are These Spiritualists? A book of 131 pages, elegantly bound in paper. Price 40 cents; postage 5 cents.

3. Spiritualism Vs. Materialism. This volume, cloth-bound, contains a series of essays and arguments against materialism from the point of Spiritualism. Price 50 cents; postage 8 cents.

4. A New Biography of Dr. Peebles, by Prof. E. Whipple. A book of 600 pages, bound in cloth, and giving a full history of the Doctor's eventful life and travels, now 85 years of age. Price $1; postage 18 cents.

5. Vaccination a Curse and a Menace to Personal Liberty. This, an illustrated volume, treats exhaustively of calf lymph, vaccine virus, "optional" vaccination or compulsory. Price $1; postage 12 cents.

7. Demonism of the Ages and Spirit Obsessions. A large volume of almost 400 pages. Treats of the angels, demons, obsessions, and evil spirits through all the historic ages. Price $1; postage 15 cents.

8. Spiritualism Commanded of God. A reply to Seventh-day Adventists. 30 pages. Price 10 cents; postage 2 cents.

9. Proofs of Immortality, the London "rejected" address. 49 pages. Price 15 cents; postage 3 cents.

10. The Pro and Con of Spiritualism. 24 pages. Price 10 cents; postage 2 cents.

11. Spiritualism in All Lands. 31 pages. Price 10 cents, postage 2 cents,

The Proofs of Life After Death

A Twentieth Century Symposium.

An assembly and collation of letters and expressions from eminent scientists and thinkers of the world, giving the strongest and best reasons known to the world to-day, as substantial evidence of the continued existence of the soul after death. Arranged under the several heads of Science, Psychical Research, Philosophy, Spiritualism. With a special contribution on Immortality from New Standpoints.

Compiled and edited by Robert J. Thompson, Late Special Envoy of the United States to the President of the French Republic.

A work of especial value, giving the views of a large number of eminent persons. Finely printed and bound. Price $2. For sale at this office.

"THE LIFE BOOKS"

BY RALPH WALDO TRINE.

What All the World's A-Seeking, or The Vital Law of True Life, True Greatness, Power and Happiness. Contents—The Principle; The Application; The Unfoldment; The Awakening; The Incoming; Character Building Thought Power. Price, $1.25.

In Tune with the Infinite. Contents—Prelude; The Supreme Fact of the Universe; The Supreme Fact of Human Life; Fullness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; The Secret, Power and Effects of Love; Wisdom and Interior Illumination; The Realization of Perfect Peace; Coming Into Fullness of Power; Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; How Men Have Become Prophets, Seers, Sages and Saviors; The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion; Entering Now Into the Realization of the Highest Riches. Price $1.25.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. "The moment we fully and vitally realize who and what we are, we then begin to build our own world even as God builds His."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Every Living Creature. "The tender and humane passion in the human heart is too precious a quality to allow it to be hardened or effaced by practices such as we often indulge in."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Character Building Thought Power. "A thought, good or evil, an act, in time a habit, so runs life's law; what you live in your thought world, that, sooner or later, you will find objectified in your life."—From title-page. Price 35 cents.

WOMAN: Four Centuries of Progress. A Lecture delivered at the Progressive Thinker's International Congress, Chicago, Ill., October, 1893. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, 10c.

The Morris Pratt Institute.

Report of the Fifth Annual Meeting of the Morris Pratt Institute Association.

The fifth annual meeting of the officers and members of this association was held in the Institute Building, Whitewater, Wisconsin, May 16, and 17, 1907. Everything considered the attendance was fairly good, although several of the trustees were unable to be present, much to the regret of their associates and the members of the organization. The familiar face of the beloved President, Moses Hull, was among the missing, as he has taken the next step in life and gone back to the soul world since the annual meeting of 1906. He was missed in the physical by all the people present, but his spiritual influence was sensed by more than one of the company assembled in convention to transact the business of the school to which the arisen one devoted so much energy and capital through the closing years of his earthly visit. He was lovingly remembered by everyone and a committee on resolutions, consisting of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Prof. A. J. Weaver and the writer, was appointed to put into words an outward expression of what was felt in every soul of love and sincere regard in which the arisen President was held by all.

The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. in the parlors of Prof. Weaver, with the Vice-President, Dr. Geo. B. Warne, in the chair. The minutes of the last regular meeting were read by the acting secretary, Mrs. L. S. Weaver, and were approved. Vice-President Warne appointed a committee on Auditing Accounts, consisting of Hon. Wm. Smith, of Janesville, Wis., Mrs. Christine Cooper, of Clinton, Iowa, and Miss Genevra Spaulding, of Lansing, Mich.

The report of Treasurer Weaver was most gratifying. It showed that the school had been self-sustaining throughout this year and revealed the pleasing fact that the aggregate of all outstandinding bills was less than $300. The report was received with rounds of applause and smiles of encouragement by all the members present.

The outlook for the coming year was reported to be very promising, and there was every assurance that the school had made the last turn around the corner of difficulty and was now moving steadily forward over the roadway of success. Too much cannot be said in praise of the able and efficient management of Prof. A. J. Weaver, and his estimable wife, to whose efforts this excellent report was largely due.

The election of officers and of delegates to the next National Convention occupied the attention of the members of the association for some time. There were three vacancies to be filled on the Board of Trustees, one for the period of one year, caused by the transition of President Hull, and the other two by the expiration of the terms of Trustees Rynerson and Warne. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond was unanimously elected to fill the unexpired term of Moses Hull as trustee of the school, while Trustee Warne was elected to succeed himself. Hon. Wm. Smith was elected as the successor of Trustee Ryerson. All of these officers were chosen by unanimous vote, which reveals the unity of feeling that prevailed among the members of the association.

Prof. A. J. Weaver of Whitewater, and Rev. E. W. Sprague of Detroit, Michig.n, were unanimously elected delegates to the 15th annual convention of the N. S. A., to be held in Washington, D. C., in October of this year. Several financial agents were elected and commissioned to solicit funds for the support of the school in their respective localities.

The best of feeling prevailed from the opening to the closing session of the convention, and everyone was most enthusiastic in his praise of the good work already accomplished by the Morris Pratt Institute. Harmony was the watchword of the hour and each one vied with the other in doing his best to add as much as possible thereto.

The Board of Trustees was called together at an early hour by acting President Warne, who stated that the first business was the election of officers of the Board for the year ensuing. Geo. B. Warne was unanimously chosen President; Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond was elected Secretary and Prof. A. J. Weaver was re-elected Treasurer. The Board unanimously voted to empower Mrs. Richmond to appoint an assistant secretary to act in her stead in all matters pertaining to the immediate work of the school. It was also voted unanimously to request Mrs. Richmond to give a course of lectures during the coming year upon the Higher Spiritual Psychology.

President Warne was requested, also by a unanimous vote, to give a course of lectures upon Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene, with respect to their relations to Psychism.

Prof. A. J. Weaver was re-elected Principal of the Institute, and empowered to appoint such assistants as he might require in order to carry on the work in harmony with his views.

Many other items of business of minor importance were considered and acted upon according to the best judgment of the members of the Board. All matters not considered in convention or at the Board meeting were referred to the Executive Committee with power to act. The Executive Committee for the current year consists of President Warne, Vice-President Smith, Secretary Richmond, Treasurer Weaver, and Trustee Geo. H. Brooks.

In connection with this annual gathering of the Morris Pratt Institute Association, President Brooks of the Wisconsin State Spiritualists' Association, called a grand mass meeting to assemble in the chapel of the Institute on Thursday evening, May 16, and Friday afternoon and evening, May 17. The attendance was not large, but those present made up in enthusiasm and interest what was lacking in numbers. President Brooks was at his best as a presiding officer and was exceptionally happy in his presentation of the various speakers. His own remarks proved that he was something more than a "walking exclamation point" when it comes to business of a financial character. When President Brooks was elected to office thirteen months ago, the Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association was in debt nearly $1,600. President Brooks reported with facts and figures to prove his statements, that that indebtedness had been reduced more than $1,200 during the past year and that the association now owed only $325. This speaks well for the leadership of President Brooks and proves that he is the right man in the right place. He was most ably seconded by the hard-working secretary of the State Association, Miss Louise G. Loebel, of Milwaukee. There are few men in our ranks who have more real devotion in their hearts for the cause of Spiritualism than has Geo. H. Brooks. He believes in paying one hundred cents on the dollar and does not spare himself in the least in his efforts to do for the cause he loves. He was stricken with a painful illness that almost graduated him into the Spiritual world, in January of this year, and was confined to the house for about eight weeks. Notwithstanding this serious drawback, he accomplished the marvel to which I have referred and brought in a report that is certainly most creditable to him, as an officer, in every respect. If Spiritualism had a thousand workers possessed of equal zeal and enthusiasm, such as we find embodied in Geo. H. Brooks, our movement would flourish as the proverbial Green Bay tree.

At one of the sessions of the Institute Association, Acting President Warne called upon the students for brief addresses and for the period of two hours the people present were enthused and instructed by the inspired utterances of the young workers who are soon to take places upon the rostrum of Spiritualism. Each speaker's words were to the point, and every address full of meat. One marked characteristic found in the utterances of all was the love each speaker felt for Prof. Weaver and Mrs. Niver of the Institute faculty. The addresses were couched in well chosen, words, grammatically and rhetorically arranged, as well as logically expressed. The writer was baptized in an ocean of optimism on this occasion, for he found in these young people at least ten or twelve talented occupants of the future pulpits in the Church Spiritualistic. They have bright futures before them if the signs of the times are read aright, and the utterances at the meeting in question can be taken as auguries of their several abilities. All officers and members of the Institute Association were pleased to learn that these gifted young people would return another year to complete their course of study.

Able addresses were made at the mass meeting by President Brooks of the State Association, and by President Warne, Vice-President Smith, and Secretary Richmond, of the Institute Association. Mrs. Niver favored the assembly with Owen Meredith's splendid poem, "Aix Italiens," rendered as only Mrs. Niver can render that marvel of poetical excellence.

Judge Smith's address was a most eloquent tribute to mediumship in general and especially to the wonderful work accomplished by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond and her guides.

President Warne followed along the same line and introduced many interesting anecdotes of President Lincoln with regard to his belief in the teachings of Spiritualism. President Warne's defense of mediumship was something long to be remembered by those who heard it.

Mrs. Richmond was deeply touched by the eloquent tribute paid her and her work by the several speakers and responded most feelingly to their expressions of good will. Quina's poems delighted all who heard them and added much to the interest of the meeting. Mrs. Richmond gave the closing lecture on Friday evening. It was replete with spiritual thought and gave those whose privilege it was to hear it something to remember when they had gone to their respective homes.

The pastor of the Methodist Church of Whitewater was an interested listener on this occasion and he pronounced the address one of the most helpful that he had ever heard.

Convention Notes.

President Brooks declared that he had never read "Camille," but he was so emphatic that he conveyed the suspicion to the minds of all that there was an exclamation point at the end of every sentence!

President Warne's bon mots and sharp hits were enjoyed by all, but he proved that he could take, as well as give, the social pleasantries. For a first class definition of the word "ache" President Warne is now considered authority; it was also noticed that he could use the word "tired" with the same intonation as could a certain officer of the N. S. A.

"Soul Centralization, and How to obtain it by going into retirement and there seeking silent oblivious composure!" For an explanation of these two sentences, ask the genial secretary of the Morris Pratt Institute Association.

"Lost, a blue baby's bonnet!" "Found, some so-called tests!" Respectfully referred for elucidation to President Brooks.

One gloomy shadow fell athwart the pathway of all members of the association when it was found that President Warne had become a pro-antitransubstantiationist. "But de President, he smile like de lil' brack sheep was de onliest lamb he had."

Professor Weaver announced his conversion to a belief in anthropophagenenarianism, but he did not seek to force his views upon any member of the Board nor yet upon any student in the school. He believes in freedom of thought for man, woman and child.

It was a most inspiring meeting of the association, and an excellent mass convention. Peace and good order were everywhere apparent and everyone went home saying in his soul that it was good for him to have been present. All are looking forward to another year when they may meet again to enjoy the discourses from the platform and social converse with the members of the school.

The Spiritualist papers were not forgotten. Good words were spoken for The Progressive Thinker and other spiritual papers with the suggestion that each young speaker make it a point to advise his hearers to become subscribers for one or more of our excellent journals.

Mrs Cora L. V. Richmond was elected Special Delegate and Spiritual Plenipotentiary to represent the Morris Pratt Institute Association at the Internal Peace Congress to be held at The Hague, Holland, in June, 1907. She will sail June 1, armed with papers of authority to represent, not only the school, but the N. S. A., the Church of the Soul, the New Thought Federation, and other liberal bodies in America, and will eloquently testify that the mission of all of these movements to the children of men is Peace.

All of which is respectfully submitted. HARRISON D. BARRETT.

The Way Out.

Suggesting Practical Means and Methods of Spiritualistic Propaganda.

There are now two communications on record in The Progressive Thinker by President Barrett, both referring, in part at least, to my article relating to N. S. A. propaganda, and there are points in each to which I feel inclined to reply. Before doing so, however, I wish to relate an incident of recent occurrence, and of a purely personal character. Meeting an acquaintance on the street in Seattle a few days since, he addressed me in substantially these words: "You and Mr. Barrett seem to be clashing a little; is there any danger of a personal collision?" I smiled at the suggestion and replied that there was not the slightest danger of anything so serious; that President Barrett had opinions of his own, and was expressing them in his own way, and that I was trying to do the same. I then added that when I can not tolerate an honest difference of opinion without indulging in personal prejudice, I will make it a point to keep out of the lime-light.

As a matter of fact, I find myself largely in accord with President Barrett's ideals and aspirations. I have to differ with him, and perhaps broadly, upon one or two quite important matters, but these differences do not in any degree furnish a basis for personal animosity. I do not believe in the assassination of character. The truth will be best served by each individual feeling at liberty to express his or her opinion without the fear of personal attack. And Spiritualists, of all others, should become amenable to this law. In the final analysis all sincere workers under the banner of Spiritualism are seeking the same grand accomplishment, viz: the uplifting of humanity. These differences are in method, rather than in purpose; hence I am the sincere friend of President Barrett, and all others who are trying, in any way however humble, to contribute to the good of the race.

Brother Barrett has proved his loyalty to this grand purpose, and our points of agreement greatly outnumber those of disagreement.

Life is too short to indulge in personalities.

Touching my interest in the N. S. A., President Barrett is again correct. Spiritualism, with its special line of philosophy, is entitled to an organized expression. It can and will survive without it, but can be made much more effective with it. I do not believe the N. S. A. should be now abandoned, in view of the results achieved by the earnest efforts of its adherents. No doubt mistakes have been made, and they will continue to be made, no matter who may have its interests in charge. There are no gods or 'goddesses on this planet. That may sound dogmatic, so I will qualify it by saying I have never met any, to my knowledge. I have met those who claimed to be, and thought the claim valid. To the best of my knowledge and belief they were gods in disguise—disguised in the garb of human, with the human predominating.

All human effort must be tried out in the crucible of human experience. A just standard of measurement will force the inquiry: "do the successes overbalance the failures?" Measured by this standard the N. S. A. is entitled to support. And by the same token we may take a hopeful view of the entire field of effort, and then, things being equal, a large ratio of successes may be attained as time passes. What is constantly needed in our movement is the willingness and ability to rise to the demands of a rapidly growing constituency. And upon this point, more than any other, my anxiety rests. I believe in the Democracy of Spiritualism. This is my religion—if I have any. I am the sincere friend of the N. S. A. As such I hope to see it rise to the full measure of its responsibilities, and meet the incoming tide of human aspiration.

Breadth of view, as well as height in attainment, with the patience that never tires, must become the characteristics of its adherents.

It is common history that popular movements often, after reaching a certain stage of development are liable to become ineffective, by failing to meet the advancing trend of thought. The orthodox church is now "snuggling up to the common people," hoping to counteract the effect of this failure in the past. It is probably too late. The common people are no longer common, and the siren song of "will you walk into my parlor" is more often declined than accepted. A visit to the park, or, in this region, Puget Sound, are much preferable.

Are we to follow the example of the church? I trust not. Nevertheless, I believe that we are approaching a crisis, and the desire that we may act wisely and promptly has suggested my article in the Progressive Thinker. I sincerely hope that my plan—or a better one—may be formulated, with the purpose in view of reaching every portion of our country, and concentrating and combining, as far as possible, into one general organized movement the vast number of people who are learning to rely upon the basic claims of modern Spiritualism.

Apropos the plan submited, Brother Barrett has treated my suggestion so courteously that he has left me but little room for argument. I thoroughly appreciate his strong words of commendation. I expected criticism and desired it. Criticism and comparison, in the right spirit, lead to improvement. I should feel that I had written to but little purpose, had I failed to arouse an interest in the minds of those whom I believe to be profoundly interested in the Spiritualistic movement. I might add parenthetically that I have received a number of communications of a personal nature from those whom I hold in the highest esteem, approving substantially the suggestions made in "Points Omitted."

Let me say in conclusion upon this point, that I am not joined indissolubly to my idol, like the reputed Ephraim of scriptural record, and being of rather a social temperament, do not desire to pursue this subject alone.

I believe the present management of the N. S. A., at this time, are as anxious to accomplish the larger work as the laity, provided the latter are willing to co-operate. Can we not mature some definite plan of action that will materially assist in the great work?

President Barrett dwells at considerable length upon the matter of finance. The point is an important one. We all understand this difficulty, or, at least, all who have attempted propaganda work. But I have long been of the opinion that one important reason for this is that we have been so schooled along that line. That is to say, that in times past our attention has been drawn principally to the vital and all-absorbing claims of Spiritualism, and not much attention given to methods of propaganda. Our overflowing zeal has naturally resulted in our being more generous than just in many instances, and so the importance of proper financing has been overlooked.

I cannot fully sympathize with the complaint so often made, that Spiritualists are not willing to pay when value received is tendered them. Our standard of comparison is sometimes faulty. We are apt to think of the church, and the plethora of purses so freely opened for its support. This comparison is not well chosen. It must be remembered that we have no inexhaustible supply of brimstone to apply to our recalcitrant and homogenous following in case of a financial deficit; no palatial residences in the skies for the benevolently inclined millionaire. Ours is not the open door to society's "400," nor the embowered and flowery pathway leading up to the perfumed refining atmosphere, placidly circulating around the summit of "Nob Hill." Remove these incentives to church loyalty and a "stampede" would doubtless follow; also a marked falling off in receipts financial. Human nature is about the same the world over.

Now, while I do not believe in popularizing our movement for the sake of becoming commercial, or of becoming commercialized for the sake of being popular, I do believe that the matter of finance must be recognized, and the people taught to know that our workers—both psychics and lecturers—must be cared for financially. A few years of this training will be likely to bring our standard financially up to a healthy average. Indeed, evidences are not lacking that we are making considerable progress in that direction at the present moment. We already have a strong corps of earnest workers in the field, whose services are constantly in demand, and who are receiving a fair compensation for such service. It is entirely reasonable to conclude that the number of these can and will be increased as time passes. It may seem to be rather a cold-blooded proposition, but it is in accord with the demonstrated facts of human experience, that when our people obtain what they need and desire, they will, according to their means, be willing to pay a reasonable price for it; leaving out of the case, of course, that class always in evidence in all popular movements that never pay for anything they can obtain without doing so.

I believe we may safely rely upon this business principle. It is self-operating, and will take effect when the conditions are complied with.

Now, if by a system of grouping of states, and an alignment of workers in the different groups, depending to some extent upon volunteers (and I believe volunteers will not be lacking), may we not reasonably expect a gradual increase in the number of effective mediums and lecturers, as well as a gradual advance in the standard of compensation. And will we not be much more likely to find those who will assist in providing sufficient endowment for the National movement, so that this larger work can rest upon a permanent foundation.

Like all other movements, we shall be compelled to demonstrate our right to recognition—our right to exist. Certain it is that unless we plan largely we should not expect large results. Perhaps I am too optimistic, but I endeavor to base my hopefulness on the sum total of human effort and experience.

Brother Barrett's suggestion that some person of wealth and influence be invited to accept the position of president of the N. S. A. I do not take to so kindly. First, because it does not seem to be necessary; and second, because it would have a tendency to counteract that self-reliance necessary to the vital activities involved. It should be a temporary expedient if adopted. But this was merely suggestion on the part of President Barrett, showing what might be done if advisable; at least, I so interpret it. I fully believe the people can be made to see the value of the movement, and if so, they will furnish the sinews of war: brain, brawn and finance.

But this article is already too long. I must close by saying that we must build for a large and brilliant future if we desire to realize it. To foresee and provide is an ever-present demand in every avenue of life. As far as we can depend upon any human agency, we can depend upon a movement that has humanity's interests as its inspiration, and consents to be democratic in method and application.

R. F. LITTLE.

Seattle, Wash., May 14, 1907.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Sadness has entered the home of our beloved Lyceum Conductor and Secretary of the First Spiritual Society of Portland, Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Haviland have laid away the form of their little daughter, Myrtle Fern Haviland, age 7 years. She passed to spirit-land on May 7.

Harry J. Moore officiated, using the text, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them."

Mr. F. E. Coulter paid a beautiful tribute to our little Lyceum worker and missionary.

Dr. R. A Coon rendered a beautiful poem.

Mrs. Cora Armstrong gave a beautiful poem: "Only Fallen Asleep."

The lyceum girls acted as pallbearers, carrying the beautiful white couch.

May 12 the Lyceum held a memorial service for our Fern, and we know she was with us. We extend our loving sympathy to the father, mother and sisters, Pearl and Thelma. We recall one of Fern's favorite memory gems:

"Kind hearts are the gardens,
Kind thoughts are the roots,
Kind words are the blossoms,
Kind deeds are the fruits."

The Lyceum sang Fern's favorite songs, "Holy City," and "We'll never say good-bye," as she lay in her bower of flowers, the kind remembrances of her many friends.

ETHEL LEWIS.

Portland, Oregon.

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

A TRAGIC DEATH.

The Powerful Incidents Narrated Below Plainly Illustrate the Presence of Spirits Who Knew the Tragic death Would Come, but Seemed to Know of no Way to Avert it, Hence Induced the Prophetic Dreams.

A strange, pathetic tale incident to the death of Roland Wills came to light yesterday. Wills was killed one week ago last night at 8 o'clock while driving a team of horses attached to a scraper. He was employed at the time on work at East Eighteenth and Marion streets, Sellwood. It is thought he died from a fracture of the skull, caused by hitting the iron when he was thrown under the scoop.

Four nights before his death, Wills, who was aged only 24, called his young wife to his side and told her he felt something was going to happen.

"I FEEL WE AREN'T GOING TO LIVE TOGETHER VERY LONG." HE SAID. "I CAN'T TELL WHY, BUT SOMEHOW I FEEL SOMETHING IS GOING TO HAPPEN ME. I LOVE YOU MORE THAN I EVER DID, BUT I HAVE A PREMONITION WE ARE GOING TO BE SEPARATED. I WANT YOU TO FORGIVE ME FOR ANY CROSS WORDS I EVER MAY HAVE SPOKEN."

Then the young man knelt and prayed. The scene was particularly touching, as he had not previously professed religion. He was profoundly impressed with the thought that death was near.

The next, perhaps still stranger chapter transpired three nights later—the night preceding the fatal accident. Mrs. Wills dreamed her husband was dead in an open field; that he was surrounded by a crowd, and that she, upon going to his side, recalled his statement of approaching death and cried out her grief in agonizing prayer in the presence of the assembled throng. A grocer named Welch, she dreamed, carried home the body in a wagon.

Wills' remarkable premonition and the strange dream of his wife came true. Death did overtake him in the identical manner of her vision, and not this alone, but the very grocer, Robert G. Welch, of 1640 East Nineteenth street, did convey the body home in his delivery wagon.

Every feature of Mrs. Wills' dream worked out in the tragic death of her young husband. He was killed in an open field. But a few moments previously his little daughter had delivered a message to him from her mother which was to hurry home to dinner. Before the child was safely in the house her father met his end.

Upon receiving word of her husband's death Mrs. Wills rushed to his side just as she had dreamed the previous night and found him lying on the ground lifeless. There was the crowd she had seen in her vision. As in the dream, she raised her hands in prayer, and it brought tears to every eye.

These strange features of the case were related by the widow to friends, and are among the most remarkable psychic phenomena ever brought to light.—Sunday Oregonian, Portland, Oregon.

ARE CORPUSCLES ENTITIES?

Possessing Directivity, What Directs Them in Their Onward Course?

I have read with much interest Prof. Edgar L. Larkin's reviews of "The Psychological Crime," "The Great Work," and Brother Tuttle's "Evolution of the God and Christ Idea." His grasp of the infinity of minuteness as well as the infinity of greatness of things is most wonderful and instructive to an ordinary mind, of which I am one, but I desire to learn more from this wonderful man, and with your permission I would like to ask through the columns of The Progressive Thinker the following:

Is a corpuscle an entity? From his minute statement of one hundred septillions of them to weigh a druggist's grain, I conclude they are entities. I cannot conceive that size or weight of an entity has anything to do with its individuality. The unit in mathematics may be added to to make septillions or divided into septillionths, each being part of the unit. The unit may become a part of octillions, of units. We can multiply or divide ad infinitum, yet the unit exists.

Now, the Professor says the corpuscle has directivity. If it is a unit, and has directivity, what is that which directs it. A thing to be directed must have a director. The size of a thing does not change its being a thing. Again to show that a carpuscle is a thing, he says they have "Inertia, the chief property of ordinary matter." Again he says: "Nothing exists but corpuscles;" "That is, nothing exists but electricity."

Now, if a corpuscle is acted upon by direction or oscillation, which moves them with such terrific speed, it is incomprehensible to man. The size and speed is a mathematical abstraction; yet the corpuscle is inert.

Then, again, in oscillation—again they are directed and form the atom, and from the atom to the grand old mountain where he sees the great beauties of nature.

Now will the good brother tell us what it is that directs these corpuscles in their onward course.

I notice he comes down on Brother Tuttle for his using the words Cosmic Mind. Now, if corpuscular directivity does not suggest two forces at work to produce all objective matter in all forms, what does it suggest?

Pope says "All is one stupendous whole, whose body nature is and God the Soul."

Again, that ripe, rich scholar, Lyman Abbott, says, "I no longer believe in a personal God, but in Infinite Intelligent Force."

Now, again, does not the direction given to the corpuscle to unite itself with others, show an intelligent force? It matters not how infinitessimal the thing or force, or the intelligence—it may be in the abstract, yet is expressed in all we see or can know.

The lens through which the Professor views the heavens are a mass of corpuscles. They were directed to form the telescope. What directed them? Undoubtedly he will say the mind of men, as it has taken thousands of centuries to reach this unfoldment from the intelligence of the corpuscle direction. Is it not reasonable to think the intelligence of the director of the corpuscle has evoluted into a condition of higher, broader and fuller knowledge of the matter it directs, as the corpuscle shall draw to itself others or unite with others in attractive form till we see all of the objective nature around us.?

We are ever seeking to learn, and through The Progressive Thinker we have a teacher in all that shall benefit man now and in the just beyond.

Let us hear more from Prof. Larkin. I. W. POPE.

A Phantom Ray of Sunlight—A Curious Phenomenon.

The events which I am about to relate happened on the evenings of September 22 and 23, 1892, in the village one-half mile back from Lake Mahopac, N. Y. We had rented a quaint stone cottage, standing in a two-acre lot, for the season, and there I went with my three small children and a maid and a large Newfoundland dog.

One evening I was sitting quietly reading, when a strain of sweet music came, as I thought, in at the window from the road. Raising my head to listen, I glanced at the window, and to my surprise, saw a broad bright band of light come floating across the room and melt away in the corner behind me.

The next day I brought the dog in for company. About 10:30, as I was thinking of retiring, I stooped down ta pat Bounce. As I did so the same music, sweet as on the night before, floated in; the dog's hair bristled up on his back, and with eyes starting out of his head the dog let out one growl and flew from the room. In the meantime the bright light, looking more like a sunbeam than anything I could think of, crossed the room to the corner back of where I sat; there was a crash of discordant chords, a long-drawn groan, and all was still.

The morning of the 23rd of September, some years before, there had been a murder committed in that room, I learned next day.

The owner of the place raised sheep, and on the day before he was killed had sold a number of them and was known to have a large sum of money in the house. His son, who was a drunken scamp, had been there and had a quarrel with his father over money matters, and the old man put him out of the house early in the day.

In the evening, as was his custom before retiring, he sat playing the organ, which stood in the corner just where I had seen the light go out. The windows were open, as it was warm, when his wife, who was upstairs, thought she heard a queer noise as of something falling. Going down stairs she found her husband, with his head lying on the keys of his organ, crushed in by a heavy blow. This is an absolute fact.

(Mrs.) EMILY VAN HARDING.
No. 771 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

SPIRITUAL THIRST.

God Is the Soul of the Universe.

To the Editor:—I am still thirsting for spiritual truth and knowledge. I have learned much since I began reading The Progressive Thinker, and shall continue to seek evidence of spirit return. Any liberal person who will read regularly your valued paper will surely outgrow the old theology.

I am not living under favorable circumstances for spiritual growth, but can develop much in reading after the able and talented authors and teachers whose lectures and discussions appear every week in the columns of your progressive paper.

I have been interested in the discussion of "Things in General," by President Barrett and Mrs. Clara Watson. When we analyze their sentiments, they are not far apart. Intelligent minds have learned through study, investigation, observation, experience, education and science, that nature is the great controlling power of the universe. Nature populates the earth sphere with mankind, animals and the various species of all animated life, and sustains them. Humanity learns that God is the soul of the universe, or spirit in nature, which is eternal.

Man is an eternal spirit, and cannot die. His body after transition decays and returns to the bosom of mother earth to mingle with the elements. These are basic principles. Through the grand principle of progression our spirits can reach the higher spheres of development in the spirit world, and attain wisdom, knowledge and intelligence, not attainable on the earth plane. The old theology must give place to the grand spiritual philosophy. This is not a thought which is new to Spiritualists. But we must give our thought to others, that they may become enlightened. One of the most important facts in the universe for man to learn, is that he is an immortal spirit. That through advancement and unfoldment he can reach the heights and depths of the cosmos, during the future ages of eternity.

In all periods of time the people have been deceived by their leaders. The old dominant churches have always fought the enlightenment of the races of mankind, in finding the truth and getting knowledge. The idea that man can be a murderer, a libertine, or a monstrous sinner in crime, and just before transition, some priest or minister persuade him to repent and believe in the atonement, which prepares his spirit to enter heaven at once, is preposterous. Repentance does not change the character of the criminal, nor undo the wrong that has been committed.

If it were not for infirmities and old age, I would go into active service in this part of Iowa, to advance the glorious truth of Spiritualism. I am willing to aid financially, but we cannot do any good in this part of the state, without able leaders, teachers and genuine mediums. I have raised quite a family of children, by the aid of a faithful wife, and have been devoted to them. It is a great responsibility to raise a family, properly, but most people get the experience and the results. It seems to be natural in the course of nature.

Young folks do not realize what they are doing, when they enter the state of matrimony, but they learn by and by. Experience is said to be one of the great teachers of humanity.

W. S. FRANKLIN.

Bedford, Iowa.

RHEUMATISM
CURED
WITHOUT MEDICINE

A Dollar's Worth of the Great Michigan External Cure for Rheumatism Will Be Sent to Every Sufferer Who Writes for It at Once to TRY FREE

Send No Money—Only Your Name

We know that Magic Foot Drafts are curing Rheumatism in almost every form and stage—curing old chronic cases of 30 and 40 years' standing after doctor's prescriptions, mineral baths and medicine had failed. No matter what you have tried, or how long you have suffered, our faith is strong that this new external remedy will cure you sound and well of Rheumatism. You are welcome to try the remedy at our expense—we want to send you the proof. You don't have to take our word for anything. Simply ask for it—Try it—Prove for yourself how it can cure you. We will send to you by mail prepaid a $1.00 pair of Magic Foot Drafts free to try in your own home and trust you to send us one dollar when you get relief—not a cent do you pay us unless you are relieved. This remedy is curing thousands, and we are pretty sure it will cure you. Surely you must try it while we offer to send you the cure merely for the asking. Send your name and full address to-day to Magic Foot Draft Company, X023, Oliver Building, Jackson, Michigan.

MAHOMET, THE ILLUSTRIOUS.
By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. This work is one of the Library of Liberal Classics. No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting; it should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. Price, 25 cents.

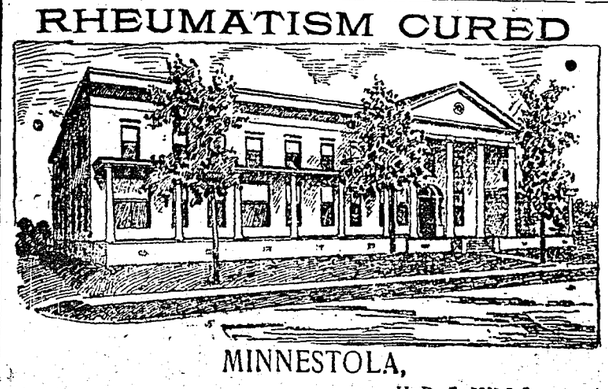
The Universe By L. M. Rose.
This booklet contains 71 pages of explanation regarding force; the beginning of creation; what matter is; what life is; immortality; psychic science; the soul of things, and ends with a poem entitled "Song of Psyche," by Emma Nickerson-Warne. Price 25 cents.

THUMBSCREW AND RACK.
Torture implements employed in the 15th and 16th centuries for the promulgation of Christianity, with pictorial illustrations. By George E. Macdonald. Price, 10 cents.

THE TALMUD Selections from the contents of that ancient book, its commentaries, teachings, poetry, and legends. Also brief sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polano. 359 pp. Price, cloth, $1.

RATIONAL MEMORY TRAINING.
Hints and helps in memorizing figures, lists of words, prose and poetic literature, new language, etc. By B. F. Austin, author of several other works. Price, 50 cents.

The Wonders of Life.
By ERNEST HAECKEL, Author of "The Riddle of the Universe." This book is confined to the realm of organic science, and treats of "The Knowledge, Nature, Functions and History of Life." Price, cloth, $1.50.



THE RELIGION OF CHEERFULNESS
By Sara A. Hubbard.
This little booklet sets forth interestingly a religion which all may admire and experience with benefit to body and spirit. Very nice for a holiday present. Daintily printed and bound, in a case. Price 50 cents.

SIX HISTORIC AMERICANS.
A Book That Every American Freethinker Will Delight to Own.
By John E. Remsburg.
The work consists of two parts, "The Fathers of Our Republic," and "The Saviors of Our Republic." In regard to Paine's religious views, Mr. Remsburg establishes the negative of the following (1) Was Paine an Atheist? (2) Was he a Christian? (3) Did he recant? Page after page of the most radical freethought sentiments are culled from the correspondence and other writings of Franklin and Jefferson, which show that these men were as pronounced in the rejection of Christianity as Paine and Ingersoll. That Washington was not a Christian nor a believer in Christianity. In support of Lincoln's infidelity he has collected the testimony of more than one hundred witnesses.
The book is handsomely bound in cloth, giving fine portraits of George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant; also portrait of the author.
This book contains 365 pages, printed on heavy paper, well bound in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism
A Treatise on
HUMAN CULTURE.
By Leroy Berrier, Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

The Majesty of Calmness, The Kingship of Self-Control.
Two dainty white gift books by Wm. George Jordan, treating of individual problems and possibilities in the light of the New Thought.
They are very interesting and instructive and worth more than the price indicates, as an ornamental and valuable addition to the library. Price, 30 cents each.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,
H. D. C. MILLS.
Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year..... $1 00
Six Months..... 50cts
Thirteen Weeks..... 25cts
Single Copy..... 5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

The Observing Boy.

A youthful American traveling with his parents in China, writing to his home paper, says:—

"The Chinese are certainly a curious people, and are about three thousand years behind time. They haven't any railroads, except one dinkey little branch, and the end of the Siberian road, and no street cars. The reason for all this is their religious belief. They worship their ancestors and think they must do everything their ancestors did; so, because their great, great grandfathers lived before the railroads were invented, they think they must do without them also."

The kid, had he taken a correct view of affairs in the land of his nativity, would have found a somewhat parallel condition in a lesser degree with us. The clergy and their dupes are, and have been for centuries, laboring to retard progress, and bind us back to ancient modes of thought and action—customs in vogue from two thousand to five thousand years ago. Science has been everywhere obstructed at the whim of these Christian people, and it has gained its present proud eminence in spite of their determination to the contrary.

Astronomy and geology were special objects of Christian hate. The former, with its telescope, found no place just above the clouds for its heaven and throne of God. And the latter determined matter was eternal, and that the hell in the interior of the earth was a priestly fiction.

It was only a few centuries ago the Pope issued his bull commanding a comet, seemingly descending on the earth, to reverse its direction. In consequence the heavenly intruder changed its course, and this world of ours was saved from being smashed into smithereens.

Western civilization has little to boast of over the Orient when we remember it was but a comparatively short time ago we were burning heretics, hanging witches, whipping Quakers, and banishing Baptists.

"Ancestor Worship!" It was, and is, ancestors' habits, thought and crimes the church wants to continue. Their worship is an old-time book, and a day in no sense different from all other days.

A Mistaken Proposition.

A Roman Catholic paper, deploring the infidelity of the age, tells its readers that "the destruction of religion will result in self-destruction of the individual."

Then it says: "In a few years we shall see the public schools, emancipated from religion, engaged in rearing a race of suicides."

This writer has lived a long life, and it has been his fortune to serve as a juryman in many post mortem investigations of suicides. To date he cannot recall a single victim that has in any way come under his observation, who was not a member or believer in the dominant religion. He has heard many say, who were Spiritualists: "Life has ceased with me to be worth living, but I firmly believe my future in the immortal state will be greatly impaired by a hasty exit from this, so I shall brave it through to the end."

It is the desponding Christian, with his mind dwelling on the miseries of the damned—as preached in church pulpits—who becomes unbalanced, and terminates his earth existence. So common are cases of this kind it has become the conviction of many that all victims of this class are temporarily insane when they murder themselves.

The infidel is content to "bear the ills he has, rather than fly to those he knows not of."

Well-Meant Advice Not Accepted.

A Kansas City correspondent of The Progressive Thinker, in a recent issue, suggested that "Spiritualists accept the teachings of Christ as their creed, and be known as The Christian Spiritualist Church." He told us, "Then they will hold fast in the bonds of love and Christian fellowship."

Are there not already Christian churches enough to satisfy the ambition of our friend? There is a very large range to choose from, embracing every variety of faith, and claiming Christ as their head. The Mormon church, even while practicing polygamy, an institution existing in the time of Christ, which he never condemned, is a Christian church, and this "Christ" is its savior. Back through all the ages, according to ecclesiastical history, we have remains of defunct Christian churches, which accepted Christ as their elder brother, teacher, prophet, and God. There was Capocrates, who, says Mosheim,

"Not only allowed his disciples full liberty to sin, but recommended to them a vicious course of life, as a matter both of obligation and necessity; asserting that eternal salvation was only attainable by those who had committed all sorts of crimes, and had daringly filled up the measure of iniquity."

Concludes Mosheim: "It is almost incredible that one who maintained the existence of a Supreme Being, who acknowledged Christ as the Savior of mankind, could entertain such monstrous opinions as these." Our Christ-needing brother may go back and resurrect some of these despicable Christian sects, if he will; but we beg him to leave us Spiritualism, pure and simple, as the spirit world teaches it.

They who need a Redeemer to save their souls from a God-built endless hell, have a right to organize a Christian church, if they cannot find satisfactory dead ones enough to resurrect. And they can make the positive teaching of their Jesus Christ, as taught by him, their corner stone. Hear him:

"If any man come to me and HATE not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and HIS OWN LIFE also, he cannot be my disciple." Luke 14:26.

There is the base of the Christian creed! The Christian church structure was reared on that base, and the powers of hell can't find a more unworthy one. It has practiced HATE as its corner stone against all who would not accept its terrible teachings, burning its victims alive until civilization had gained sufficient force to stay its murderous hand. Wherein they have departed from their hateful policy they have not followed the teachings of the master, with his declaration: "Those mine enemies which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me."

No one should talk or write in favor of a Christian church, based on the teachings of Jesus, until he has sold all he has and given it to the poor—in fact, has become a tramp, without scrip or staff, taking no thought of the morrow, and has practiced hate on all the dear ones the instincts of nature have taught him to love.

Genuine Spiritualists are so earnestly the opposite of the "hate teaching," they love father and mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters, and expect to spend all the eons of eternity in cherishing that love, and jointly sharing with them in love for the All-Father.

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Director of the Census, Hon. S. D. North, is desirous of giving Spiritualism and its followers their just dues in his forthcoming report. To that end he has invoked the aid of the National Spiritualists' Association, whose position is, or should be, such as to bring its officers into touch with all societies in the United States. The President of the National body has been appointed Special agent of the Census Bureau to collect reliable statistics for Director North's report.

The officers of all local societies, State associations and camp meetings should make a special effort to report their several organizations to headquarters. Official blanks have been sent out and have been received by these officers as very few of them have been returned. If the Spiritualists do not receive their just dues in this report it will be their own fault, for Director North has made every effort to have them properly represented among other religious bodies.

All Spiritualists who are interested in having Spiritualism properly presented to the world are requested to see that correct information is at once forwarded to the proper officers. It is to be regretted that some of the officials of State Associations and ex-members of the N. S. A. Board of Trustees not only refuse to forward statistics, but also decline to answer courteously worded letters of inquiry.

If less than 45,000 Spiritualists are reported in the next Census it will not be through fault of the government, but will be due to indifference and personal pique of individual Spiritualists.

WANTED! WANTED!

The address of every worker for Spiritualism in the State of Illinois. About ten in every hundred are unselfish workers. Many will donate liberally when asked. Some want to take the lead on State ocasions. Some are generous with advice, and nothing else; others see nothing but failure in every undertaking, but all do the best that is in them. What we want in order to start our Fraternal Camp Association, are the workers. If you are not one, send the address of those you know who are, and at the same time state what you wish, to be a charter member at $5 for the first year, or $1 annually. Let us hear from all.

ALEX CAIRD, M. D.,
598 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

A Subject For Thought.

Photographic pictures, taken by the camera, aided by the microscope, revealed, it is estimated, one hundred millions of suns where only five millions were the previous estimate. Our sun is one of the smallest—only one-sixth in magnitude, compared to the whole universe of suns.

Each sun is evidently the center of a great solar system of its own, and it is believed all are revolving around a common center.

Our solar system is rushing onward at the rate of millions of miles a day toward Vega, in the constellation of Lyra. It is asserted by astronomers that Vega is many hundreds of times larger than our sun.

All this wilderness of worlds, according to the Bible and popular religious faith, were created by God out of nothing in six days.

And now the marvel of all time, as we gain it from the Bible, and from the orthodox creed: The first great sin: our adored mother Eve was seduced by a serpent, and because of it she exposed all her posterity to the last vibration of the pulse of time, to endless damnation. There was no escape from this torture of body and soul other than in believing a son of God, by a Jewish maiden, 4,004 years later, was truly an only son, and he must be accepted as the redeemer, otherwise eternal misery is the unbeliever's doom.

It is but reasonable to presume all the other planets of our own solar system, as the innumerable planets of all the other millions of suns, are inhabited by beings similar to man. Were the inhabitants of all that retinue of worlds affected by the sin of our first parents? And did they, too, need a savior to redeem them from the awful consequences of that sin?

We are lost in the mazes of a terrible labyrinth as we think of questions involved in this Son of God business, and we would gladly welcome intelligence from headquarters, if the priestly teaching has any foundation. Until such kindly information is given from the highest sources, the reader will allow us to believe this whole story of the fall of man, total depravity, an angry God, and a half human son, is a priestly invention devised in the interest of the tricksters for their exclusive benefit.

Knowledge of an infinity of suns and planets was unknown to humanity at the time the Bible was written. This explains why the priestly writers supposed the earth was the principal factor in creation, while sun, moon and stars were made merely for purposes of illumination. Had Jesus been a God, as the church maintains, it seems strange he never hinted at the insignificance of earth and man compared to the universal whole. Does not this omission suggest that possibly, after all, Jesus had no better knowledge of the majestic universe than the uneducated masses in the age he is reputed to have lived; hence he could not have been a God with infinite wisdom.

Reader, think of it.

Pointed Paragraphs.

He who carries the light of truth along the highways of life may expect to be persecuted.—Mrs. Russegue.

No person can read the works of Thomas Paine without thinking upon broader lines, and without living more righteously than ever before. —Ibidem.

I deplore the tendency to make of Spiritualism another religious denomination, with the forms, ceremonials and superstitious beliefs of the church that I had fondly hoped we had outgrown.—Mrs. Dr. Severance.

The Ethiopian can change his skin and the leopard his spots as easily as a king or pope or priest can become a lover of freedom and humanity.—Dr. J. T. Bowles.

If abuses are destroyed, man must destroy them. If new truths are discovered, man must discover them. If the naked are clothed; if the hungry are fed; if justice is done; if labor is rewarded; if superstition is driven from the mind; if the defenseless are protected, and if right finally triumphs—all must be the work of man. The grand victories of the future must be won by man, and by man alone.—Ingersoll.

Brave Words.

"And then my heart was filled with gratitude, with thankfulness, and it went out in love to the heroes, the thinkers who gave their lives for the liberty of hand and brain—for the freedom of labor and thought, * * to those by fire consumed—to all the wise, the good, the brave of every land, whose thoughts and deeds have given freedom to the sons of men. Then I vowed to grasp the torch they had held and hold it high, that light might conquer darkness still."

Thus Col. Ingersoll told why he was arrayed against the church, and proclaimed the great truths that made his name immortal.

AN ENTIRELY NEW DEAL.

The POSTAGE on papers has been increased to all the British possessions on this continent...On a single paper we are compelled to pay ONE CENTS each week, amounting to 52 cents a year, whereas previously we only paid the pound rates—a mere trifle. Hence, to all the British possessions on this continent the paper hereafter will be $1.50 per year.

ANOTHER EXPOSURE.

Brother Hale of Los Angeles, Cal., sends us a telegram notifying us that the "Rev. Dr." Hugh Moore's methods have been exposed again. Full particulars next week.

CATHOLICISM AND SPIRIT RETURN.

Priest Preaches Belief in Spirits—No Question of Their Existence, Says Father Searle from His Pulpit—Devils or Lost Souls—Former Not Confined to Hell in Their Operations, He Asserts, but May Be Seances—Biblical Command Against Them and Efforts to Reach Spirits are Wasteful and Dangerous.

In his sermon yesterday morning the Rev. Dr. George M. Searle, rector of the Catholic Church of St. Paul the Apostle, at Fifty-ninth Street and Columbus Avenue, expressed his belief in spiritism, and explained to his congregation the attitude of the church toward the spirits which, he said, he believed existed in the world and could be communicated with through mediums.

Father Searle is a member of the Society of Psychical Research, and a friend of Dr. Raupert, who lectured on "Spiritualism" before the Catholic Club in this city last week. He summed up his views in these paragraphs, which he asked his parishioners to be sure to remember:—

"First—The reality of the existence and operation of spirits in modern spiritism is no longer an open question, even among scientific men who have examined the subject. Anyone who considers the manifestation of them as mere humbug, trickery or delusion, is simply not up to date.

"Either Devils or Lost Souls."

"Second—Although it cannot be demonstrated conclusively that in them no genuine communication is ever made from deceased human beings, the strong—we may say overwhelming—probability is that, as a rule at any rate, the spirits communicating are either devils or lost human souls, subject to devils in hell. These devils are not confined in their operations to a local hell. Such may be the case after general judgment, but not now.

"Third—It follows that endeavors to ascertain the truth about the departed by means of seances is not only a waste of time, but also extremely dangerous—a foolhardy tempting of God and absolutely prohibited by the very nature of the case, as well as by positive Divine command.

"Fourth—I say it is prohibited by Divine command, for this matter of spiritism is not really modern, although it has had a great revival lately. It has been from the beginning in one form or another. We find it in the law of the Old Testament still binding on us in such matters:—'Let there not be found among you any one that consulteth pythonic spirits, or that seeketh the truth from the dead, for the Lord abhorreth all these things.' And the warning of St. Paul should be enough to prevent us from giving heed to the teachings of spiritism, or 'to spirits of error and doctrines of devils.'"

In the early part of his sermon Father Searle said only ignorant persons denied the existence of spirits and the possibility of human communication with them.

Investigations by Scientists.

"Many scientific men, and men, too, of great eminence, like Sir William Crookes, Sir Oliver Lodge, Professor Richet of France, and Lombroso of Italy," he continued, "have, in spite of previous prejudices, determined to investigate the matter—not superficially, but thoroughly, and not only they, but all others who have made such investigation, have, we may say, become absolutely convinced that we have in the phenomena of spiritism a real certainty, not only of the presence of forces unknown to science as hitherto understood, but also—and this is the most important—of intelligences similar to but distinct from our own, exerting and directing these forces.

"The only serious question or subject for investigation has come to be: What are these intelligences? Are they what they claim to be: the spirits of departed human beings, or are they some others, of which science has hitherto taken no account? As to the certainty of these conclusions and the scientific state of the case, as it now stands, I will simply ask you to take my word. It is established that even materialization, as it is called—that is to say, the moulding and shaping of some unknown and ordinarily invisible substance into the likeness of a human form, not only visible, but tangible—is a well established fact. Sir William Crookes, one of the greatest scientists of our present time, vouches for this from his own experience, but many—we may say innumerable other good and unimpeachable witnesses—testify to it.

Evidence in Slate Writing.

"And you will find that new slates, enclosed in a package fresh from the shop, can be written over with answers to questions on paper not seen by the medium, but still remaining in his visitor's pocket. You will find also that tables and other objects, even persons themselves, can be and are raised from the ground absolutely without what we consider support. Many other real marvels are worked, and their number is increasing daily."

Father Searle referred to feats performed by professional magicians, and said these were known to be tricks worked in conditions especially arranged. But, he asserted, genuine mediums worked with no such conditions or preparations. He said he believed the spirits materialized by mediums were not any more enlightened than human beings, and that they could not be relied upon for guidance in matters of morals or faith. He believed they almost always tried to conform to the wishes and beliefs of the persons with whom they communicated. He even thought, he said, that the spirits impersonated the dead and were thus often caught in error.

Referring to the attitude of the Catholic Church toward the subject, he said:

"We Catholics are, or should be, well convinced that there are non-human spirits which have never had a body. It is in fact undoubtedly of faith that such is the case, it being so stated frequently and unmistakably in Holy Scripture. Moreover, the act of diabolic possession occasionally occurring through all history and continuing up to the present day is perfectly plain and undeniable to those who will take the trouble to examine the evidence. We know, therefore, that unembodied spirits exist, not human and not divine, and the fact that some of them are devils is simply unquestionable to those who have studied the subject, even without the light of faith."

—New York Herald, May 27.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is last year's nest from which the bird has flown.—H. W. Beecher.

APPRECIATION.

Ringing Words of Praise and Thankfulness That Are to the Point

It is noble, manly and womanly to give due expression of appreciation for favors, kindnesses, sacrifices, and the State Spiritualists' Association, through the recent well-known act of President Warne and his associate, Dr. Burgess, an active member of the Association, has shown itself worthy of a shower of appreciation from the independent societies, auxiliaries and individual mediums throughout the entire state, for the effort put forth in their behalf at the State Capital, in the defeat of that obnoxious bill.

How dare any sane medium ask, "What has the State Association done for me?" It can only be asked by those utterly dumb to the beautiful feeling of gratitude, thankfulness or deep appreciation.

The Fraternal Order has shown its appreciation in a tangible and substantial manner. Mrs. Susie Thompson has shown her appreciation in an appreciable way; as has Mr. and Mrs. Kirchner. Brother J. R. Francis comes forward with kindly marks of interest in the protection of true mediums from an obnoxious law. Others not yet reported, except from hearsay, have raised amounts for the reimbursement of the Association for expenses incurred in the recent fight.

Now let the good work go on all over the State, and we will soon have the Association on a thoroughly solid financial basis, and raise our standing to the Banner State Association.

But, please do not forget the fact that this is not a "one man institution;" it is yours and mine, if we are true to our convictions; it is only an organized body, composed of a live board, with a live executive head.

The esteem in which Dr. Geo. B. Warne is held to-day by Spiritualists of the advanced class may be somewhat measured by the fact of his having been chosen Vice-President of the N. S. A., President of the Morris Pratt Institute Association, and President of the Illinois State Spiritualists' Association. It is only a just recognition of his fitness, earnestness and conscientious warfare for true Spiritualism as against fraud; for genuine mediumship and against deception.

I make this statement of my own free will and accord, not as Secretary of the State Association, but as a man and brother, as a Spiritualist; as an unselfish mark of friendliness and appreciation of my brother, without "frills or bouquets," for the grand work he has done and is doing for the cause. It is only a mark of soulful gratitude to one who is trying to raise the standard of the whole Spiritualism, and I throw off my epaulets long enough to voice the sentiments I sense from the souls of all true and unselfish, unenvious Spiritualists. If we do not stand together in a band of brotherhood, in "true fraternity;" if we do not give a brother the warm, glad hand for his services for our Cause we profess to love, we love it not truly; neither do we love our brother.

Let us have real spiritual Spiritualists for awhile among us and see what the change will bring forth.

What are you doing for the State Association? What are you doing for Spiritualism? If you are in earnest for the whole Cause, stop your everlasting "knocking" on the State and National Associations! Stop your "knocking" any of the enthusiastic workers, and get down to work or join some orthodox church, where you belong.

It is easier to contend with an open foe than a friendly traitor.

The Illinois State Association HAS done something for you, if you are a true Spiritualist or a true medium. Give it your support.

DR. T. WILKINS.

To the Friends of Moses and Mattie Hull.

To the Editor:—I wish to call the attention of the friends of Moses and Mattie Hull, in behalf of Mattie. You all know they gave their all to the benefit of the Morris Pratt School, drawing no salary for their work. But an unlooked-for event has come upon Mattie. Moses was called from his work at a time when he was sending everything to the school. This left Mattie poorly prepared to meet his funeral expenses. If they had been keeping out their salaries from their collections, she would not have been embarrassed. She is now tied down to a debt which is much larger than it would have been if tle is not solely her battle, nor was it Moses' battle. It was also yours. He fell on the field while laboring for you and in your cause. He was your servant. Is it right, is it just, then, that Mattie should be at all the expense of his funeral, just because she was his yoke-fellow? It seems to me that we all have a duty in this matter, and that it will be a privilege to all, or the most of us, to contribute our offering, large or small, in memory of him whom we loved, to his faithful companion.

I hope all will feel a duty in this respect. Some cannot contribute much, but every little will count something, and we who have abundance will contribute accordingly. Contributions may be sent to her at Whitewater, Wis.

DANIEL W. HULL.

COURT PUTS BAN ON MEDIUMS.

Reverses Probate of Will Made Under Spiritualistic Influence.

Indianapolis, May 29.—In reversing a judgment which permitted the will of Mrs. Albertsmeyer to be probated, the Supreme Court to-day held that Spiritualism should not be permit to control the practical affairs of life.

Mrs. Albertsmeyer left a considerable estate, but cut off her orphan grandchildren with $1 each, it being alleged that her husband appeared to her at a seance and told her that the children were going to make trouble.

The court to-day declared that it is right for the wife to consult her husband's wishes, and that it is a well-known fact that many of the brightest and clearest intellects have sincerely believed in spiritualism and other vagaries, and that it cannot be said as a matter of law that such belief is evidence of unsoundness of mind.

"But," declared the court, "when such pretended counsel comes through the dubious channel of a medium as an oracle from one possessing knowledge of the hereafter, under the solemn surroundings of the seance, its influence on a credulous mind can hardly be measured. The indulgence of such belief and practices may be so long continued and of such a character as to affect the mental status."

—Chicago Record-Herald.

A "Real" Ghost Story.

It is so designated by the writer, L. E. Holladay, who sends the account to the News, of Chattanooga, Tenn—The names, dates, and place are given with an apparent franknesr that is highly commendable. We give it simply as a "story," to illustrate how the secular press is trying to interest its readers in occult subjects. There is enough absolute truth in connection therewith without resorting to the improbable or fictitious, and we would advise Mr. Holladay to draw from the same in his next article to the News.

Dresden, Tenn, May 28.—With his hair turned from jet black to the gray of age in a single night as tangible evidence of his awful experience, there is related by a young man of this county a story that would cause the stoutest heart to shiver with fear to hear it. And as he relates what has befallen him, and his listeners with anxious ear stand motionless to catch every word that falls from his lips, the relator himself, still overawed by recollection of that terrible night, even in the presence of his friends, looks both to the right and left as he speaks, to ascertain apparently whether or not he is still pursued by ghostly visitors from another world.

It appears that Mrs. Mary Dupree moved into the Hatler's camp ground west of here, about fifteen years ago, from Alabama. She has one son, Jamie Dupree, who is now about twenty-two years of age. Mrs. Dupree purchased a little farm upon which there was located a small cabin, and moved to it soon after she came into the community. While she attended to her own affairs, yet when she first came she found time to make the acquaintance of the neighbors, and has visited them at lengthy intervals since her location in the neighborhood. At the same time she has always been of a morose disposition and rarely ever seen to laugh or smile or take pleasure in the little gossips that make up so much of the daily conversation of womankind.

But her son Jamie was of altogether different nature. As he grew to man's estate he developed a bright, sunny disposition, and is much beloved by all of his friends.

But the young man has one weakness, which is perhaps the cause of all his trouble. He had a perfect horror of death, and the sight of a graveyard makes him almost frantic with fear. And to make matters worse for him, to the southeast of his mother's farm, and almost in sight of where he tills the soil each day, there is an old-fashioned, disused and neglected graveyard wherein rest the bodies of the men and women of another time of the long ago.

While all of his life a graveyard has been very repulsive to him, yet Dupree says that within the last six months he has had an almost irresistible longing to visit and explore this old resting place of the dead and read the inscriptions upon the tombstones therein. Recently his mother availed herself of an opportunity to visit her old home in Alabama, and young Dupree was left to his own resources for a few days.

The young man states that on the second night after his mother's departure he had fed his live stock, safely housed the chickens and other fowls, eaten his supper and retired. That being weary he soon closed his eyes in sleep and slumbered, as he thinks, until near midnight. His first recollection was that he was rudely awakened by some one apparently in the room, and told to get up. He attempted to rise but could not do so. He then endeavored to open his eyes, but his lids were heavy. After struggling for some minutes he finally raised himself up in bed, and after many efforts finally succeeded in opening his eyes, when he beheld the front door of his room ajar. He was sure that he had fastened and locked it the night before, but it was now wide open. At first he felt a terrible fear creep over him, but this soon passed away. He sat up in bed and was by this time wide awake. He heard what he thought was some one walking in the yard, and then many whispered voices in the room.

A strange white light then pervaded the entire premises and a tall ghostly form walked in and commanded him to get up and follow him. Now thoroughly affrighted he tried to cry out, but could not do so. He then made an effort to return to bed, but his arms and limbs would not do his bidding, but in spite of every effort to the contrary he arose, put on his clothes and followed the vision out into the yard. He noticed that the night was clear, the heavens full of glistening stars, and heard the bark of a dog at a far-away house. The apparition walked out of the front gate and started toward the graveyard. Again his mind turned to flee away, but the body refused and followed after the fast walking form. In an almost incredible space of time they reached the little city of the dead and Dupree stood quaking in fear in his mind, but his body moved irresistibly on. The gate that had almost fallen from disuse and decay swung back and he passed under the cedars and walked over the very graves of the dead. There was the stump of an old tree broken off some three feet above the ground and he was directed by his mysterious companion to have a seat upon it. He did so and again looked about him. All bodily fear had passed away and in its place an agony of mind had substituted itself, which was so awful in its experience that it appeared to be stunted and only waited for the developments to follow. He now noticed that the heavens, but a few moments before clear and bright, were rapidly filling with clouds, and here and there a star for an instant peeping through. The wind also, which until then was still, had begun to moan and whistle through the cedars and the undergrowth. From the road on many occasions he had noticed a whitened stone which had towered above the others and appeared to stand as a sentinel to guard this army of the dead. He saw he was now seated near it and fastened his eyes upon it. The light that had surrounded him in his bed now came and lit up the graveyard and the woods round about. Then he looked at the monument again and saw the ground move beneath it. The foot of the very grave itself appeared to open, and crawling forth from beneath its slab the ghostly form of an old man appeared, and, looking straight into his face, smiled upon him. Then he saw another grave open and a middle-aged woman came forth and greeted the man with a look of love and tenderness. One by one each and every grave gave up its dead and gathered about young Dupree, whose mind and body were both beyond fear, and who watched the movements of the visitors from the other world with concern and interest. There appeared to be nearly a hundred, as well as he could ascertain, of the apparitions, of every shape and size, about equally divided as to sexes. He was particularly interested in the form of a handsome young girl, apparently about 19 years of age, with long and golden hair, gentle face, form and figure, who was met by that of another, who looked to be a young man, and Dupree remembered that he had been told they died and had been buried together nearly 100 years. For how long he sat and watched this ghostly assemblage he knew not. But he remembers that finally there appeared to be a commotion among them, and he heard the sound of a wagon. He looked and saw a hearse drawn by two white horses, the lines that guided them being held in the bony hands of a grinning skeleton. A coffin was unloaded and brought and sat down in the midst of the cemetery. It was then opened and he saw that it was empty. Then his first visitor at his house re-appeared and commanded him to step forth. As he did so he noticed that a long, deep grave had been dug by invisible hands and it dawned upon him that this gathering of spooks and spirits had arranged for a funeral, and that he was to be the victim, and that he was to be buried alive. The forms gathered around him and one laid its hand upon his shoulder, while another grasped him by the hair of the head.

With a cry of anguish that could be heard for miles, he summoned all of his courage and broke away from the company of his uncanny companions. He leaped over the fence with a single bound and ran back toward his home with all of his might. As he ran great drops of perspiration broke out upon his forehead, to be instantly cooled by the passing breezes. Looking to the eastward he saw the first gray streaks of morning and welcomed its coming. But another had heard his cry and he was met by a man on horseback who had come to succor him. He fell fainting by the roadside and was borne by tender hands to his own home near by. For many weeks he was delirious with fever, and when he recovered and looked again in the mirror his waving black hair had turned to white, as a mark of his awful experience. In his delirium he had told the whole story, relating every instance time and again. Friends went in daytime and examined the graveyard for evidence of what had happened. They found every tree, bush, briar and bramble dead as if from a fire, while the fence that had for generations surrounded it was gone, and not a trace could be found. The tall white stone that had marked the last resting place of the center grave had fallen, broken as if stricken by an irresistible force. Within the last few days the widow has sold her little home, and mother and son have returned to the home of her youth. But he will bear through life the mark upon his head, of locks once black, but whitened through fear, of the awful agony which he felt and the terrible experience that he passed through.

HO! FOR ELGIN!

Sunday, June 23, there will be held at Elgin, Ill., a Union Meeting and Basket Picnic of Spiritualists, and the principal object of this notice is to the effect that by clubbing together in clubs of 6 and buying 6 ride commutation tickets (round trip rides), they can be had for $5 each, making the fare but 85 cents for the round trip, with a few cents over for the "bunch," instead of paying $1 for the round trip. This is worth remembering. Tickets can be had at the 5th Avenue terminus of the Aurora & Elgin electric line.

T. WILKINS, Sec'y.

BABY, AGED NINE DAYS, SPEAKS.

Uses Words Perfectly and Dies, and Neighbors Fear Catastrophe.

Roanoke, Va., May 29.—When it was nine days old, a child born two weeks ago to Mr. and Mrs. Lofwich Brewer, of Fox Postoffice, used English perfectly. Its aunt, who was holding it, was startled when the infant suddenly began to speak, calling the names of its parents and others with perfect enunciation, and following this with the word "Heaven." The child died yesterday. Neighbors are alarmed by the occurrence and fear that some catastrophe impends. —Chicago Record Herald.

There is work that is work and there is play that is play; there is play that is work and work that is play. And in only one of these lies happiness.—Gelett Burgess.

Much of the religion to-day is only respect for the religion of the past.—Investigator.

Shall We Seek to Lift the Veil?

An Address by Mr. E. W. Sprague, before the First Association of Spiritualists, Washington, D. C.

(Reported Expressly for The Progressive Thinker, by Walter P. Williams.)

Some people have said that it is wrong to try to communicate with the dead. Unnumbered millions in times past have been and in the present are, in about the same condition of mind regarding a future life that poor old Job of the bible experienced in the long ago. He was evidently in earnest and honest, but he had grave doubts of a future life. Job, the 14th chapter and first verse reads as follows:

"Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble."

Second verse: "He cometh forth like a flower and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not."

Tenth verse: "But man dieth and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?"

Fourteenth verse: "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Sixteenth chapter, twenty-first and twenty-second verses;

"O that one might plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth for his neighbor!

"When a few years are come, then I shall go the way whence I shall not return."

Job was a materialist. Poor man, we can understand his sad condition of mind and pity him. He knew he must die and he had but little hope of a life after death; he was in great doubt of a future state of existence for mankind, and his sufferings because of this were almost unbearable. Such is the case with a large portion of the human race to-day. Even those who do believe in a life after death are usually very anxious to have their belief demonstrated. This is evident from the fact that people in ancient times brought forward every possible proof possible bearing upon this subject. This is shown by the scriptures. And it is proved by the fact that multitudes of Christians are to-day seeking the evidences presented by modern Spiritualism.

Christians get consolation out of certain passages of scripture, and I am glad of it, indeed I am. Anyone that can get consolation out of the scripture, or out of anything else, upon this mighty question, I am always glad to assist. I Corinthians, 15th chapter and 26th verse, reads thus:

"The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

Take notice the passage says this enemy "shall be destroyed." The phenomena of modern Spiritualism fulfill the prophecy contained in that passage of scripture. Spiritualism has destroyed death as an enemy by proving it to be a friend—a friend in the hour of greatest need. Death is not a destroyer, but a helper; a friend, yea more, it is the greatest of all blessings. He who has added to his faith knowledge (see 2 Peter, 1:5) can with Paul joyfully say: "Death is swallowed up in victory. O Death, where is thy sting? O Grave, where is thy victory?"

See 1 Cor., xv:54-55.

Paul, through his mediumship, received the knowledge of the future life and gloried in it.

Should we seek to lift the veil?

Think of the sorrow, the grief, the mourning of the millions. If your parents and children had disappeared years ago and you knew nothing of their whereabouts, and someone should come to you to-day and say your parents and children are living next door—yea, in the next room, and there is a door between you and those you love, and they have been living there all these lonely and sorrowful years and you might have communicated with them if you had known it and had known how to use the key to unlock the door, how would you feel? Well, now, that is true.

There are many men and women who stand exactly where Job stood when he asked the question: "If a man die shall he live again?" Many have uttered the sentiment that Job expressed, that I have read to you, and they stand in the same position to-day. And yet the religion that this Association represents—the religion of modern Spiritualism—has revealed the fact that the loved ones they are sorrowing and mourning for live right next door. Spiritualists have discovered what has been suspected for ages, that this is the case. It has been suspected that the dead lived and that they were somewhere, maybe not far off; according to the bibles of various organizations and religions they did live next door, but it remained for modern Spiritualism to bring the key that would unlock that door and open it. It is true the door had been pulled part way open and loved ones had passed through and spoken to the world here and there for ages.

While it is true, if history is true, that there were certain individuals like Paul who had opened the door and communicated with the spirit friends, yet the great religions of the world have taught that these were special providences. In the case of Paul, the Christians seem to think that the Almighty opened the door to him briefly and that he had an experience that did seem to prove a future life; they pointed to it gladly and said: "Here is evidence, 'O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?'"

But, my friends, it was only belief on the part of these people who read the story and who did not know that it was true. Some of them accepted it because it seemed that it ought to be true, and said: "Well, I believe it;" and others said: "No, it cannot be, because I cannot see it;" so one class ignored this evidence and put it aside, and the other class accepted it as infallible truth. Both went to great extremes. One said there is nothing in it, and the other said there is everything in it. But while this went on, these passages of scripture given by the medium Paul and the medium Peter and the medium John and the other mediums of that day gave to the world the fact, which was fact to them. It has reached millions of souls and appealed to them and brought comfort and consolation, and I am thankful for it. Yes, I am thankful for every word and every impression that can be brought to the Christian, the heathen, the Pagan, the materialist, or any one who wants to know about a life beyond. I am thankful that there are people who have faith; I am thankful for the fact that those who have faith have developed and ripened into believers in a future life; but I am sad when I come in contact with one who can see nothing before him but darkness and final annihilation—I pity him.

Ladies and gentlemen, modern Spiritualism has not come to antagonize the thought that Paul gave us, that Peter or Jesus gave us. It has not come to antagonize those things that teach and proclaim a future life. Indeed, modern Spiritualism has come to fulfill such claim.

When Jesus came to the skeptical Israelites they at that time believed in the phenomena reported by Moses; they believed that Moses' cabinet was an instrument of God, and that spirits materialized over the door of the "ark of the covenant," as it was called; they believed in Moses who was leading them; they implicitly believed in trance, healing, discerning of spirits and other spirit phenomena of those ancient days, but, like the modern Christian Church, they would accept none of it. Jesus said to them: "I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." He came not to destroy that which they believed regarding a future life; He came not to destroy the evidences that are taught in the old scriptures—he came not to destroy these, but to fulfill them. And each one of you that is teaching these beautiful doctrines of spirit communion and the philosophy of the future life and of its present life; each one of you that is working in the interest of modern Spiritualism, can cry out with Jesus of Nazareth, "I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."

"But," someone says, "you don't believe in the trinity. I don't want anything to do with Spiritualism because it doesn't teach the doctrine of the trinity. I don't believe in Spiritualism because it denies the doctrine of a burning lake of fire and eternal torment; I don't believe in it because it doesn't teach the physical resurrection. It is the devil," etc. Those are just like the objections the old Israelites made to Jesus Christ; they condemned him and said he had "a devil," and that his teachings were from the devil.

They said the same of Peter and Paul and all those mediums of that day—the same old cry that you hear to-day, and they said Jesus denied the scriptures. Moses said "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," but Jesus said: "Love your enemies." He was contradicting the scripture. He contradicted Moses' law of marriage, and that was evidence that his teachings were "of the devil." Ladies and gentlemen, the same thing is reproduced and enacted to-day, precisely. Because Spiritualism does not indorse the church dogmas, some of the clergy repeat the old cry: "It is the devil."

Dear friends, we are here in the interest of humanity. This little society is run for the purpose of scattering the beautiful truths that have been given to us from the spirit side of life. There are many who say you must not try to disturb the dead. My dear old mother was one of that class. She was a good woman; she was a beautiful character and well versed in the scripture. In her early life she was a Baptist and used to testify under control (she didn't know what ailed her until after she became a Spiritualist). Later she became a Universalist and remained one for forty years. When that dear mother came into Spiritualism it was a struggle for her. She was afraid. She said: "I am afraid that it is not right to disturb the dead."

That idea clung to her for months and months, although she was communicating with the dead every day. One day she said to me: "My son, if I get to be a Spiritualist I will be a good one, because I will never be a Spiritualist until I have to." Well, it went on a long time. Finally one time she was at a meeting in old Hemlock Hall, North Collins, New York, and messages were given from the rostrum by J. Frank Baxter, and they were telling ones. We all went out to luncheon, which we spread on the grass, and as we were getting ready to sit down I overheard my mother say to another lady: "I guess I will have to own up that I am a Spiritualist." I laughed and said: 'Mother, I heard that." "Well," she said, "my son I told you if I ever got to be a Spiritualist I would be a good one, and I might just as well own up that I am a Spiritualist."

My heart leaped within me, for I wanted my mother to know it, and she did know it. She died a Spiritualist and went to the other world a Spiritualist and comes back a Spiritualist, and it makes me happy, because I love her.

My dear friends, this subject is an important one, because so many are afraid to investigate. Why, just recently, in the house where we are stopping, a poor colored girl was terribly frightened because our landlady said to her: "If I die I will come back to you."

"O Lord bless me, don't come back to me. Please don't come back to me, missus." She was greatly frightened.

The thought has gone out over the world that there is something uncanny about the dead returning. The Christian world calls our arisen friends "dead people" and "ghosts," and ghost stories have been circulated everywhere throughout the world until people are afraid of their own arisen loved ones, and there are many people who think it is wrong to try to lift the veil who absolutelytake the scriptures for authority, and the scriptures say: "Try the spirits whether they are of God, because many false prophets are gone out into the world" I John, iv:1). Paul says: "Desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy" (I Cor., xiv:1). And yet the people who take this as infallible authority say, "O no, this won't do; I am afraid it is wrong." As in the case of my dear old mother, this comes from erroneous education.

Should we seek to lift the veil? I would that the day were here when we could lift the veil in the presence of Congress; when we could lift the veil in the presence of every legislature in the United States; when we could lift the veil at every religious meeting when people are worshiping and testifying. I wish that day were here—it is coming rapidly—when we can lift the veil before the eyes of every human being, and when the veil is lifted to all we will see ourselves as others see us, and very likely we will see our faults standing out so plainly that we will be ashamed of them and put them away.

Should we try to lift the veil? Heaven bless you, if you think not, attend a funeral and that will convert you. I remember being at a funeral in Alliance, Ohio, once, where we tried to lift the veil. There was a family of ten children. The mother of that household—a beautiful woman and a good Spiritualist—had gone. However, she had not taught much of Spiritualism to her children, and it was unfortunate, for they knew little about it, although she was a medium. She went to the other world and I was called to officiate at her funeral, and the children all came and gathered around that coffined form, and I never heard such heart-rending cries—such cries of anguish; I never saw such weeping, such expressions of agony, as were there expressed by that dear family of lovely children, and the poor old man, the father of the children, sat there and could not speak, the tears rolling down his cheeks.

In this great excitement I did not know what to do, so I called upon our good sister, Mrs. Flora Russell, to sing; she was engaged for the occasion. She sang one of Longley's beautiful songs, and they became quiet. They forgot their sorrow for a moment as they listened to the sweet voice and the beautiful words, but as soon as she ceased they began again, and I said to some one near me, "I don't know what to do," and was told to begin speaking and it would quiet them, and so I stepped forward and began to talk, and soon I had the attention of every one. When I gave them the beautiful message of Spiritualism they ceased to wail and mourn and cry, and when the meeting was over they gathered around me and thanked me for the words I had spoken, and they said: "Why, mother said that this was true, and I am so glad, and we are going to find out now."

Do you object to their lifting that veil? Could anybody object to those darling children trying to lift the veil to communicate with their dear mother? There can be no reasonable objections to anyone communicating with loved ones—dead or alive. This is the twentieth century. Fear is dying. It is said that "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." I wish there were fools enough to rush in and find out whether there are angels "to tread." How else can we know?

My dear friends, while there are many who are seeking these truths—seeking to lift the veil—some, unfortunately, are not able to do it because there are so many errors taught by opposing factions in relation to it; they become entirely mixed up in the matter and don't know how to proceed.

This thought, coming to me just now, seems to be worthy of a moment's consideration. What are we, as Spiritualists, doing to help them? Are we formulating methods? Are we publishing in concise form everything we ought to publish that will give beginners a sure footing on which to begin their investigation of Spiritualism? There have been many errors taught by our opponents to frighten beginners.

I have met mediums in many places in the United States who talk like this: "I have an evil spirit; a Jesuit is with me; he is smart and tells things that I do not know until I prove them true. He will write poetry through my hand; he tells wonderful things through my entranced lips, and then he will write lies, etc. He is a bad spirit." But what is the matter with us as Spiritualists that we have not explained this so they can understand it? Evil spirits, in my humble opinion, are largely in the mind, in these cases. Such suggestions are ruinous to mediumship. Imagination wrote the lies. There is such a fine line between the absolute consciousness of spirit control and the mind's activities that often, as the medium lets go of herself to be controlled—becomes impassive to the influence—the spirit leads her and she is doing nicely and writing what the spirit wants to write, and then he (the spirit) loses his hypnotic control over her, and not knowing it she goes right on writing her own imaginary thought, just as we go on dreaming in the night, and some say this is dreadful. Why, the evil spirits of modern Spiritualism are ten thousand devils let loose—if the stories our enemies tell about them are true. Away with it! We must use reason and be practical.

In speaking of this point I wish to say, let us get together and formulate something which will be a safe guide, teaching the proper method to be pursued in the process of lifting the veil. Some one says "We can't. O yes, we can. There are conditions that are safe and we understand them. The main thing is to teach mediums and sitters that they must not expect that everything they get through undeveloped mediumship will be infallible, and not colored by their own minds, their own emotions, their own thoughts, and, possibly, by those around them. Second, teach them that if they aspire to the good and put doubt and fear of evil aside, that all the devils outside of hell can't interfere with them. (Applause.) The man that never had an evil thought will never have an evil influence. A human brain like a piano key when out of order will produce a discordant note. This cannot be truthfully laid to evil spirits.

Ladies and gentlemen, "Shall we seek to lift the veil?" There are organized institutions in this country that say: "No, don't do it; it is dangerous; be careful." I will ask this question this morning for the benefit of any who may be afraid to lift the veil. Don't you think that a farmer knows more about farming than a man that never did any farming? Don't you think that a mechanic knows more about house building than a man who never handled carpenter's tools? Who would you go to to find out something about the legality of some property claim? You would go to a lawyer, wouldn't you? Then don't you think that the instruments that the spirit world has chosen—the mediums through whom the spirit world manifests—the instruments that have been, in their development, attuned to the higher vibration of the spirit spheres—don't you think that they who have experienced all of this, and the spirits themselves who have revealed the greatest religious philosophy the world has ever received, and have brought the development to the mediums, are just as good authority as to the dangers of psychism, or as to the dangers of lifting the veil, as some mahatma reputed to live in the mountains of India, that nobody has ever seen? I am asking this question for your benefit to-day.

Oh! let us lift the veil, for when we do we see our darlings, we communicate with our own arisen ones. It is not dangerous, positively not dangerous. And, dear listener, if you lift the veil in the proper way it is beneficial in every sense. You are benefited physically, morally and spiritually, and when you lift the veil you will have the privilege of seeing for yourself. You will no longer need to take hearsay evidence for anything that is given; you will know your own darlings, for you will see them face to face.

Twenty-six years ago I tried to lift the veil. I made no particular arrangement for it, for the arrangements were made by the people who lived on the other side of the veil, before I was apprised of it; but when the veil was lifted I was happy. It has been the joy of my life every day since that time. There are many people who have not yet seen the veil lifted. There are many people who are so hungering for some evidence of that life—for some knowledge of that bourne from which Shakspeare says "no traveler ever returns," that they are flocking into yonder Catholic church this morning in hundreds; they are hurrying into yonder Methodist church in hundreds, and the same to every place where it seems as though there is a possibility of learning something about the future life, and there they are told that the dead at one time did return; there they are told that his Christian bible is infallible and contains no mistake, and if they don't believe it they will be lost, and if they do believe they will be saved; and then they will read the passage that tells how Jesus said he would come back to them; they will read there the passages that these saints, seers and prophets have given to the world as written there, and they get some comfort out of it. I am glad they do. They cannot all accept the stories that have been attached to these facts, though they are glad to get a little crumb of comfort, just a little hopeful word regarding the other side of the veil, even though it be but a faint glimmer of a future life.

We as Spiritualists may learn a lesson here this morning, if we will. The truths that are recorded in this book (the Bible) that we Spiritualists have proven to be positive truths, are the fundamental principles of Christianity. I refer to the fact of spirit communion. The early Christians rejoiced because they found them and went out to tell the world what they had found; but each one—each denomination at least—has told the world many things that are not absolute truths—that are but theories, based upon the opinions of the writers. Some of these objectionable things may be mentioned, viz.: eternal punishment, physical resurrection, total depravity, a six-day creation, an infallible Bible. These are but theories, and not based upon facts. These theories have grown with one class, and other theories with other classes, until to-day it is said there are six hundred Christian denominations in the world and each one is contradicting the other.

Now, Spiritualism has started out in exactly the same way. Spirits do return and demonstrate their presence. They have demonstrated the personal presence and individuality of our darlings in ten thousand ways, and come in such a way that we know that we are not talking to the infinite, that we are not talking directly to God, or God talking directly to us, as was thought to be the case in the time of Moses, but that they are our loved arisen friends, each one manifesting his own individuality to us. We have a great deal more than they had in those days, for we have better instruments to work through; our media of to-day have greater brain power and higher spiritual faculties because evolution has been working all these years, and we as a people have better comprehension; we have better reasoning powers and can understand spiritual things better because we have developed our intellectual and spiritual faculties to a greater degree. We start out in the work of enlightening humanity with more information than they had. We have discovered who produces these manifestations, while they credited them to Jehovah the god of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

My dear friends, we have come to know that these phenomena reported as having occurred in that ancient day, do occur to-day, and we have found out who is behind them. So we have a great advantage over them because of this discovery.

Already Spiritualism is the mother of many cults: "Theosophy," "Christian Science," Divine Science," and "New Thought" societies, each having purloined and appropriated some truths taught by spirits through mediums, and then, I am sorry to say, some of these cults have turned against Spiritualism and sought by "fair or foul" means to destroy it from off the earth; with the evident hope that in so doing they might occupy the entire field unmolested. These cults are simply a reproduction of the condition of things when the medium Jesus of Nazareth came with the mediums Peter, John, James, and others, and gave to the world some such proofs of a future life as Spiritualists are giving to-day, and which became the basis of the hundreds of different denominations of Christianity. The same danger lies before us as Spiritualists to-day as lay before the people of the time of Jesus of Nazareth. If Spiritualists keep splitting apart, one cult taking a little and another a little of our great truths, we will in a short time have the six hundred denominations, and they will all tell you, as some appear to be ready to tell you now, as the patent medicine advertisers do: "Beware! beware! None are genuine unless our name is blown in the bottle."

Please do not understand me to say that the time will ever come when spirit communion will again cease. It will never come, but there may be danger, as some cults are appropriating its philosophy and condemning its phenomena. Christianity has left out the practice of spirit communion in every one of its denominations, though spiritual gifts and spirit phenomena are the basis upon which it was founded.

Now, what is there for us to do? Stand together for spirit communion. "United, we stand; divided, we fall." "In union there is strength," and Spiritualists can all agree upon one thing, if nothing more, and that is spirit communion. Let us then put our hands, hearts and heads together and work in accordance with our reasoning faculties, with earnestness, condemning no one for his individual opinion, but condemning erroneous systems that conflict with the truth as we understand it, doing this kindly, however. The man who is "everything to all men," as Paul was, does not seem to me to be greatly needed in the progress of the world to-day.

One thing more. What we want to-day is to get together and formulate methods of lifting the veil; get together and select some of the scientific minds from our ranks—men and women of brains and intelligence—to investigate the phenomena of Spiritualism scientifically and make quarterly reports of the results obtained to the world, that the world may know that the phenomena are true, and that the spirit world and modern Spiritualism may be credited with the great truths they have brought to mankind. Ladies and gentlemen, this commission should be under the control of the National Spiritualists' Association and carried on for the purpose of advancing our great cause in its truth without any side issues (applause). It must come to this, and you residents of Washington are going to be here when the next convention meets, and you should take pains to become appointed as delegates to that convention and go into the work with a purpose in your mind and let that purpose work out just the thought I have given you here, that the world may know what Spiritualism stands for; that it need not take Mrs. Besant's interpretation, nor Madam Blavatsky's, Mary Baker Eddy's, W. J. Colville's, E. W. Sprague's, nor any other individual's idea regarding its truth, but that it will stand as authoritative when the statements regarding it are sanctioned by the convention of the National Spiritualists' Association, so the world may know what is accepted by the great organized body of Spiritualists. Don't you think the world will have more respect for us and for our movement when we do business in this way?

I am so thankful for the truths of Spiritualism, and I cannot feel contented and satisfied to see the little cults or the psychical research societies appropriating it without giving the spirit world and our old pioneers of both spheres the credit of bringing it to the attention of the world. Hold together in organization and work to keep Spiritualism clean and pure as the angels of heaven are bringing it to you, and you will force all to come to Spiritualism, and these cults and research societies will become servants of our great movement.

"Man is of but few days," and I know there are but "a few days" before me. I could not live long without preaching Spiritualism; I love to preach it; it is dearer than life. I owe a debt to the spirit world and to this movement, as well as to the old gray-haired veterans, the honest noble souls, the patriarchs in Spiritualism, those that are left upon the earth plane and those that have gone up higher. I am trying to pay the interest on the debt as I go along, so that I shall feel free when I enter that other realm; I shall feel that I have paid the interest, at least, if I have not been able to pay all. I know I can never pay all. I owe everything to Spiritualism. If it had not been for the old patriarchs of Spiritualism who fought for its truths and gained the fight against every obstacle and everything that was heaped upon it and upon them in the early days, Spiritualism would not have reached the millions of people among whom are scientists, philosophers, theologians, and people in all walks of life, who to-day appreciate its great blessings.

The old patriarchs stood firm for Spiritualism; that's what we are standing for. We want it clean and pure. We don't want Mary Eddy-ism, Blavatsky-ism, fraud, or any of those things. We want pure Spiritualism and are willing to work for it, and we are going to work for it so long as we have a voice to be heard; and when I lay down my armor and cease my work on this side of life, don't feel sad, don't mourn, and don't wear black, but rejoice with me, for I tell you here that when that day comes I shall have ascended; when that day comes I shall have taken my place in the higher school and I shall be proud and happy to reach it. Ladies and gentlemen, let us stand for this whole truth; let us stand for this magnificent and grand philosophy; let us be faithful to it, let us work for it, and let us work until that veil shall be lifted so clearly and completely that all men shall discern it, and then when we mortals see ourselves as we truly are, all the world will seek to be true, all the world will try to be good, and the "salvation of man" will have been accomplished. (Applause.)

THE HEART'S ASTRONOMY.

This evening as the twilight fell,
My younger children watched for me;
Like cherubs in the window framed,
I saw the smiling group of three.

While round and round the house I trudged,
Intent to walk a weary mile,
Oft as I passed within their range,
The little things would beck and smile.

They watched me, as Astronomers,
Whose business lies in heaven afar,
Await beside the slanting glass,
The reappearance of a star.

No so, not so, my pretty ones!
Seek stars in yonder cloudless sky,
But mark no steadfast path for me—
A comet dire and strange am I.

* * * * * * * * * *

And ye, beloved ones, when ye know
What wild, erratic natures are,
Pray that the laws of heavenly force
Would hold and guide the Mother star!
—Julia Ward Howe.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

OVERLEAPING AMBITION.

"If ye cannot curb your self-desires in this world, neither can ye in the next."—Oahspe.

"Thou showest me that the line betwixt selfishness and unselfishness is finer than a spider's web."—Same.

In this day many noted characters in business, politics, socially, are placed in the limelight as never before perhaps in extant history of the world.

Every virtue, superior quality, power, force of character for good in man, as well as every fault, blemish and detrimental characteristic—all these stand out in bold relief, with all the chief actors in life's drama now being played.

The dullest mind even, it would seem, cannot help being impressed with this fact.

What is the cause that underlies all this?

May it not be attributed to the faith that the world, ripening in its office and existence, as does the apple on the tree, has simply arrived one more perceptible degree towards its destined maturity?

If so, is it strange that the Earth's children, its creatures, made up of the same elements, partaking of the same inflow of the universal spirit, should show responsively and characteristically, a corresponding evolution? It would seem but natural and conclusively such should be the case.

Dr. Henry Wagner, in his "Why of Things," seems to agree with this, and also additionally states that not only are we in the main ever progressing, but that cyclicly in time history repeats itself.

Space forbidding a quoting at length from Dr. Wagner's scientific article on his subject, fragments only applicable and in accord with the spirit that prompts these thoughts, are set forth.

He says: "The Sun's passage through the twelve signs of the Zodiac requires a period of 25,920 years, or 2,160 years in each sign called a subcycle. One of these sub-cycles terminated in 1881 when the Sun passed from the water sign of Pisces into airy sign Aquarius. * * * The Sun's motion through space is exactly the reverse of the Earth's. * * * Every moment of time is alternately day and night to some portions of the Earth's inhabitants. The light and darkness must not be confined merely to the physical day and night produced by the Earth's motion upon its axis, but we must also consider the Solar and Polar motions which reflect their periods of light and darkness upon the mental and spiritual planes of life. * * * Races and nations have their periods of light and darkness; their youth, manhood and old age, decay and disintegration. The western races are just entering their cycle of day on the mental plane of nature's universal expression of life and light.

* * Aquarius is an airy, scientific, mental, metaphysical and humane sign, and the Sun in this sign is now manifesting its vibrations in a marked manner all over the western hemisphere. * * * The hidden things of darkness are being brought to light, the crooked transactions of the unjust powers are being exposed to the mental gaze of all who wish to behold them. * * * Progress is attained for every part of the divine whole, and ultimately perfection will be accomplished as cycle after cycle manifests its special fruitage upon the three planes of life, physically, mentally and spiritually. * * * The Sun's influence in Aquarius during the next 2,160 years will perfect the western races intellectually and physically. They will attain the summit of their power and greatness about A. D. 2806."

The foregoing thoughts with remarks following are prompted because of the many great upheavals now taking place, say, in our own nation. Take the great realm of American Boodleism. Was there ever such a time in this as now? The great earthquakes now of such frequent and startling effects on our entire Pacific Coast from Alaska to Patagonia, encircling the entire globe in farreaching evidencing are but typical of the other upheavals we are now undergoing socially, politically and industrially. Everything not sound at the core is collapsing and coming down. Have you noticed it?

This brings us to the point of reflection on the great war now going on among us under the banners of graft, greed and self-glorification. What a turmoil is there not? All along the line already lie strewn political, financial and social defuncts who "didn't know it was loaded." Cheer up, however, fellow citizens, the worst is yet to come! Mighty giants have locked in death struggles. The big stick comes down again and again with resounding whack, and whilst the wielder gets an occasional nasty thrust in turn, the strenuous man yet seems good for many a round.

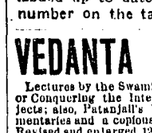
This brings into view a unique character in our affairs of to-day: A man who by no means seemingly intends to let his light shine under a bushel, but who, with ambition incomparable, has sought for years to gain the crown of highest place in our people's power of gift. A man who for nearly a quarter of a century has daily heralded to the world some act of good to fellow man, always labeled: "I AM THE MAN WHO DID THIS NOBLE DEED!"

Is this picture recognized?

He seems truly an object lesson of overleaped ambition. To do good deeds ostentatiously and with brass band accompaniments, in hope of being taken by a discerning people at his self-estimate, seems in this day equally impossible with lifting one's self over the fence by the boot straps. And yet the tugging at the boot straps continues—vainglorious blind and with ambition that outranks all satisfying, does this atom of being, carrying an immense bubble of egotism, make much noise in the land.

Why is it that so many possessed of much force, great opportunities, abundant means, yet fall in even approximating the heights of self-ambition? The answer is that they run counter to a law so much greater than themselves but which in their blind desire they failed to take into account in mapping out a way to the high goals in the affairs of men.

Is their force expended all for naught simply because of failure to satisfy ambition regardless of the law? By no means—Nature's conservation of forces is a fact recognized. One force is employed against another. Both forces may be evil—so-called—in whole or in part, and yet, when the contending forces have spent themselves, as a resultant a new, stronger and better may have been evolved in place. To "know thyself" is, therefore, the great lesson, and to harmonize with universal law a prerequisite to true advancement in any walk of life.



P. O. CHILSTROM.

Crescent, Nevada.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF "ACTINA"
In the Treatment of Afflictions of the Eye

Every person with impaired eyesight or suffering from weak or diseased eyes should write for our latest free booklet, entitled "Positive Evidence."

The records of phenomenal cures by the "Actina" treatment, as described therein by grateful patients themselves—names and addresses given—will satisfy the most skeptical that "Actina" is not only a remarkable, simple and harmless invention, but restores eyesight even after specialists have pronounced cases incurable.

Following are a few of the successes produced by "Actina," but more fully described in our free booklet.

A Chicago gentleman, after suffering 12 months with inflammation of the iris, used "Actina" a few weeks. He says he can now see as well and as far as anybody.

An Iowa lady writes that after being under treatment of specialists for 15 years, "Actina" completely restored her eyesight and she no longer uses glasses.

Astigmatism and granulated lids impaired the eyesight of a Hartford (Conn.) lady. Specialists failed to cure. As a last resort, against advice of friends, she tried "Actina." She writes:—"For many months I have written almost daily without glasses. No more pain in my eyes and drooping eyelid is restored."

"Actina" removed a cataract from the eye of an Oklahoma lady; relieved the closure of a tear duct for a well known Chicago lady, and in scores of instances people have been able to discard eyeglasses through the faithful use of "Actina." To get an idea of the enthusiasm of our patients the entire letters as printed in our book should be read.

"Actina is made on common sense principles. Its simplicity, effectiveness add lasting qualities will appeal to any one that will investigate. Let us send you one on two weeks' trial. Use it as often as you please and if you are not benefited, or for any other reason are dissatisfied, send it back and no charge will be made. Write today. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 812 W., 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo

CANCER CURED
WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.
Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address
DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

915

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY.

Lectures by the Swami Vivekananda, on Raja Yoga; or Conquering the Internal Nature, and other subjects; also, Patanjali's Yoga Aphorisms, with commentaries and a copious glossary of Sanskrit terms. Revised and enlarged. 12mo. Cloth, $1.50. Raja Yoga is an ancient system of Indian Philosophy, and one of the four chief methods that the Vedanta Philosophy offers to obtain freedom and perfection. Swami Vivekananda became a familiar figure in several American cities during the three years following the Parliament of Religions at Chicago; he was cordially received in America, where the breadth and depth of his teachings were soon recognized. His teachings are universal in their application. The book is cheap at $1.50. For sale at this office.

Discovery of a Lost Trail
BY CHARLES B. NEWCOMB,
Author of "All's Right with the World." Cloth 276 pages. Mr. Newcomb made a distinct success with "All's Right with the World," which continues in the front rank of the Metaphysical books that are now so popular. The great number who have been cheered and strengthened by him will welcome another book by this wise teacher whose words of help are doing so much to make the world better by making men and women better able to understand and enjoy it.
"Discovery of a Lost Trail" is a simple study of that strange and beautiful thing called life, but grand in its scholarly simplicity. It will be in demand by many who have not previously read metaphysical writings. Price $1.00. For sale at this office.

In Tune with the Infinite
By Ralph Waldo Trine.
Within yourself lies the cause of whatever enters into your life. To come into the full realization of your own awakened interior powers, is to be able to condition your life in exact accord with what you would have it.—From Title-Page.
CONTENTS.—I. Prelude; II. The Supreme Fact of the Universe; III. The Supreme Fact of Human Life; IV. Fullness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; V. The Secret, Power and Effect of Love; VI. Wisdom and Interior Illumination; VII. The Realization of Perfect Peace; VIII. Coming into fullness of power; IX. Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; X. How Men Have Become Prophets, Seers, Sages, and Saviors; XI. The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion: XII. Entering Now into the Realization of the Highest Riches. For sale at this office. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Apocryphal New Testament,
Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, his apostles and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Price, cloth, $1.50.

THE AGE OF REASON.
By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 185 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth, 50c.

AFTER HER DEATH.
The Story of a Summer. By Lilian Whiting. Pervaded with pure and beautiful spirituality of thought. Instructive and helpful to all who love and seek the higher and finer ways of spiritual experience. Price, $1.00.

Paine's Theological Works.
Age of Reason, Examination of the Prophecies, etc. Illustrated edition. Post 8vo., 432 pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

Womanly Beauty ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES
The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

STARTLING FACTS,
OR
Deeds of Darkness Disclosed

This work devotes special attention to Auricular Confession and its relations to sacerdotal celibacy, convents, monasteries, morality and civil and religious liberty. It is intended to be an embodiment of facts and documentary evidence of the pernicious influence of the confessional; a trenchant showing up of Romanism, based upon standard Catholic authorities; an eye-opener concerning the methods and spirit, the moral turpitude and evil works of Romanism. Cloth, 75 cents.

MOLLIE FANCHER,
The Brooklyn Enigma.
An authentic statement of facts in the life of Mary J. Fancher, the psychological marvel of the nineteenth century. Unimpeachable testimony of many witnesses. By Abram H. Dailey. With illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.
By the Editor of the National, with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorce, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Oscar A. Edgerly writes: "On Sunday, May 26th, I concluded a very pleasant month's engagement with the First Spiritual Church of Baltimore, Md. It is, indeed, a pleasure to work for an organization so well officered as is the Baltimore Church. With Hon. Chas. R. Schirm as president and Mr. Henry Scharffetter as secretary, the administration of affairs are bound to be in accordance with the best business principles. While the weather has been bad during my ministry at the church, yet our audiences have been good, and the people made me feel that the work of my spirit guides was appreciated.

"I feel that I owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Schirm, who has, many times during my stay, extended to me the hospitality of his beautiful home, and thus brightened for me many otherwise lonesome hours. I shall always have a warm place in my heart for the officers and members of the First Spiritual Church of Baltimore.

"With the exception of September, 1907, my time is now all engaged until the first Sunday in June, 1908.

"My home address is No. 42 Smith Street, Lynn, Mass."

O. Z. Skinner writes from Walla Walla, Wash.: "I write to let the world know through the columns of The Progressive Thinker how the cause is prospering in Walla Walla, Washington. We have a small society here, composed of twenty-five intelligent men and women, and we hope to greatly increase the number soon. At a recent business meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: O. Z. Skinner, president; Mrs. J. M. Small, vice-president; Mrs. M. E. Paul, treasurer, and Mrs. Mamie W. Frank, secretary."

Mrs. May A. Price will leave Washington, D. C., June 4, to attend the convention of New York Association at Rochester. Will be ordained at the convention and remain in Rochester, doing private work for a month or two. She is open for engagements for the coming season as lecturer and test medium.

Samuel A. Huntington of Malden, Mass., writes of the Malden Progressive Spiritual Society, Louise Hall, 138 Pleasant street, Mrs. F. S. Sheriff, president. Our midweek and 11 a. m. and 3:39 p. m. Sunday circles, are being well patronized, and much interest manifested. Mrs. Annie R. Chapman of Brighton, Mass., was the speaker and message-bearer on Sunday evening, May 26. She prefaced her work by reading a fine poem entitled "Love," and chose the same subject for her theme, giving a very broad, instructive and beautiful address. The speaker then devoted an hour to giving many fine readings. We think her one of our brightest young mediums, nd is doing a grand work, and being used in a beautiful manner by the spirit forces. Dr. C. L. Willis of Boston will be the speaker and message bearer on June 2, and Mrs. Alice M. Whall of Everett, Mass., on June 9."

Mrs. C. Kirchner writes of the good work accomplished in raising funds for the Illinois State Spiritualist Association to the amount of $8.55. $2.75 of the amount was collected by Sisters Mrs. Susie Thompson and Mrs. Kirchner, from various mediums, and $5.80 was the receipts from the benefit seance given by Mrs. Kirchner, at her home.

On the evening of May 26 and 27, G. H. Brooks, president of the Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association, lectured at Racine, Wis. He says: "There is quite an interest being awakened here, which in time I trust will be productive of good. I start out this week to visit Albany and Janesville; then to Sheboygan, Sheboygan Falls, Green Bay, Appleton, and other points in the interest of the State work."

Mrs. C. H. Thompson writes: "On Wednesday, May 29, The Fraternal Daughters and a number of their friends went over in a body to the home of our financial secretary, and gave her a surprise. Her home was packed to the door. We had gotten up a little token of our appreciation of her services as an arduous worker in the society in everything she undertook to do. Brother Chas. A. Thompson was called upon to make the presentation with a few remarks, in which he said that the friends present and their actions would explain more fully than any words he could utter. Then Sister Adams responded, and said it was her prayer and soul's desire to be able to do more and more in the future than in the past, and thanked each one for their kind appreciation of her services. Then we all joined in the games. We played Board of Trade until the Bulls got the better of the Bears, and then we tried our hand at fishing, and then the feast was spread and we all partook of the finest victuals ever put down to a hungry crowd. We were honored with the presence of friends from each side of the city. Our enjoyment came to a close at about 12 p. m., by Brother C. A. Thompson auctioning off a few of the dainties left over."

Rev. Alice Baker writes from Oklahoma City, Okla.: "The Oklahoma State Spiritualist Association has granted Ordination papers to Mrs. S. E. G. Thorp of this city. Mrs. Thorp has been the speaker and medium for the First Spiritualist Church here for the past two years. She has done very efficient work, and is very much appreciated." The writer was called by these good people to lecture and officiate at the ordination. Service on Sunday evening, May 26, the house was filled to overflowing; the music was soul-inspiring. Mrs. Troup, the secretary, stood to our right, with a large and beautiful bouquet of white flowers, to be presented to the candidate as the charge was being given.

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

Accepting the flowers, Mrs. Thorp responded in a beautiful and impressive way. Mrs. Thorp is a lady of culture and refinement, and inspired by wise spirit intelligences."

S. D. Rankin of Lawton, Okla., writes of a test seance conducted by Rev. Alice Baker, who, though sick at the time, the manifestations were excellent. The medium passed into a trance state and then followed a spiritual feast; tests and poems were given by the spirits, illustrating the grand truths of Spiritualism. Mr. Rankin concludes by saying, "Spiritualism is the fulfillment of the Divine plan, the emancipation and spiritualizing of the human race. Mrs. Baker's lectures are drawing the thinking people wherever she goes." As to one of her lectures on "The Well of Truth," I have no words to express the great appreciations that is manifest. To the Spiritualists of Oklahoma I wish to send forth a thought, hoping it may go forth with no uncertain sound. Let us all do our work in our own way, and to the very best of our ability, and let us also see to that our pocketbooks are spiritualized. Mrs. Baker leaves us now for other parts of the state. We regret to see her go, but we are not selfish. She and her noble band of inspirers, are needed in other places to demonstrate this great truth."

Mrs. Mattie E. Hull left San Jose, Cal., May 22, in company with Mrs. John R. Kelso. They went directly to Sandstone Home, Longmont, Colo. The home is a beautiful health resort, owned and conducted by Mrs. Julia D. Coffin, in the foothills of Colorado. This spot is also the home of Mrs. Kelso when in that state. Mrs. Hull is spending a brief season of rest in the Sandstone Home, after which she will return to Whitewater. Possibly she may fill a few dates on the Santa Fe Route, made by Mr. Hull when he planned the homeward travel. Mrs. Hull will reach Whitewater, Wis., early in June, and will be ready to make appointments within one hundred miles of that place before she leaves for Ohio and New York. Address her at Whitewater, Wis.

Mrs. Henrietta L. Lichtig left the city Saturday for Macomb, Ill., where she serves the Society for the month of June; after which she goes to camp. She would like to make engagements for the season of 1907-8.

Dr. J. E. Hughes and Mrs. Minnie Lambert of Bedford, Iowa, were united in marriage at Maryville, Mo., yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. They arrived in the city last evening on train No. 3, and are now at home in the Duckworth residence on Valley Avenue in this city. The bride is a stranger to us, but we have confidence in Dr. Hughes to believe that he chose a woman worthy to become his wife.—Sentinel-Post.

Ferd. C. Suhrer writes: On Saturday, May 26th, the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, through its mediums and workers, ministered to large and appreciative audiences both afternoon and evening, despite the inclement weather. Our Memorial Day observance was fitting, and next year will be on a more extensive scale, embracing many desirable features not yet introduced in Chicago. Our full staff of mediums was present and gave evidence to many of the life beyond the grave. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor of the Church of the Soul, sent her regrets at not being able to be with us, as she and Mr. Richmond were busy making preparations for their trip to the Hague Peace Conference, where she will represent the Fraternal Order and other societies. After a bountiful supper and an enjoyable song service and concert, which all enjoyed, tests and messages occupied our attention. Bro. Chas. A. Thompson was on the North Side assisting Sister Hilbert, pastor of the Progressive Spiritual Society, and Sister A. W. Bloom, another of our popular mediums, was assisting our German friends of the Bund der Wahrheit. This service concluded our series of regular Sunday meetings for the summer, as many of our people will be out of the city visiting the various camps, filling engagements in other societies and enjoying a much needed rest after participating in the most strenuous Spiritualist organization Chicago has seen in many years. The Fraternal Order has introduced many new features to Spiritualists and others of advanced thought, which when first spoken of from those engaged in similar work in Chicago, but among the few who had faith in the promoters and looked into the matter deep enough saw the many desirable features and wonderful possibilities readily joined hands and assisted in giving Chicago and the world something the people had always wanted, but until our organization their wants were not filled. The seed has been sown now in the minds of many, and when the Fraternal Order reopens the first Sunday in October, the fruit of our labors will be evidenced by a large membership, harmonious and active corps of officers and a monthly program of entertainment—spiritual and social—surpassing in magnitude and quality anything ever offered by a Spiritualist society in Chicago. We are still working out new ideas and planning—dreaming—and in the near future we will have the extreme satisfaction of seeing our dreams realized. We have accomplished in the short time since our organization what we were told was impossible. Anything practicable is possible with those of understanding and determination, and next year we will do greater things. The Fraternal Camp Association is coming along nicely. Just read The Progressive Thinker and see us grow. From the numerous inquiries concerning the grove meeting to be held in Elgin, we will have enough to warrant an extra coach attached to the regular train. Send your name now to Dr. Alex. Caird, 598 West Monroe Street, if you want to take advantage of this opportunity Sunday, June 23d. The time and place of leaving, and the necessary information will be made known in time for preparation.

Mrs. Russegue of Hartford, Ct., lectured in Montreal, Canada, June 2, 3, 4 and 5. The lectures we publish from this gifted lady, are always read with great interest.

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Will Mrs. Lole F. Prior please send her present postoffice address to this office?

Mrs. Humphrey writes from St. James, Minn.: "The people of St. James were more than pleased with the lectures delivered by Mrs. McFarlin last week; also the tests given by Mrs. Buehler were all recognized. The ladies spoke to a crowded hall five nights, and two parlor meetings, and should they return (as we hope they will) a much larger hall will be needed. Many in this little city are beoming intrested in Spiritualism and hope they will have a chance to listen again to such able speeches as Mrs. McFarlin and Buehler, missionaries under the auspices of he State Spiritualist Association, of Minnesota."

The Spiritual Society of Houston, Texas, is now being ministered to by Rev. David A. Leisk, from San Diego, Cal., a decided interest has been aroused among the Spiritualists, and his lectures are highly appreciated by good audiences. It is the desire of Mr. Leisk to organize the work so that it shall rest upon a solid basis, and not go to pieces on the departure of the speaker, as has been the case in the past. Readers of The Progressive Thinker who belong to Houston and the neighborhood, please note that the meetings are held in Oddfellow's Hall, Rusk and Milan streets, at 3 and 8 p. m., on Sundays, and that you are cordially invited. Mr. Leisk is at present the guest of Mr. Welander, 2112 Chestnut street, Houston, Texas., where he can be interviewed by those interested.

Mrs. Clarisse H. Mullins writes: "I wish through The Progressive Thinker to thank the friends, one and all, for the kindness shown me during my recent illness. I will also say I am now ready to take up my work again. Will give readings daily from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., at 231 Hoyne avenue, near Van Buren."

The Rockford Society of Spiritualists, Michigan, will hold its next quarterly meeting on June 9. Dr. Edson A. Titus, Ph. D., will deliver two lectures; one at 10:30 a. m., and one at 2:30 p. m. All are invited. Picnic dinner in the society's spacious dining hall. E R. Keech, secretary.

Rev. Albert P. Blinn writes from Norwich, Conn.: "This society held its last service on Sunday evening last, and the church was crowded. The occasion was a special concert service, such as we have held on the first Sunday evening of each month all winter, and which have become very popular. The program included instrumental and vocal music arranged by our organist, Charles A. Dowsett; recitations by Mrs. Charles E. Burdick and the writer, and a short address. The past season has been the most successful in the history of the Union. The financial returns have been larger than ever before. A great deal has been done in the way of repairs and improvements upon the building and we are in possession of a splendid pipe organ and a handsome interior setting of scenery, through the generous interest of friends. The suppers held each fortnight have been well patronized, the last one being the record breaker, over two hundred guests being present and the receipts being nearly. $40. We close for the summer months to open on the first Sunday in October upon what we believe, and feel, will be even a more successful year than the one just gone."

Mr. Sakharam Ganesh Pandit, B. A., of Bombay, India, is to deliver a series of lectures at 6558 Stewart avenue. The dates are as follows: June 1, 4, 11, 15, 18, 22, 24 and 29. Lecture commences each evening at 8 o'clock. He lectures on the following subjects: The Hindu Ideal of Marriage. The Caste System in India; Its Favorable and Unfavorable Aspects. A Rational Demonstration of the Existence of the Soul. Reincarnation. Man, the Master of His Destiny. The Veda, or Bible of India. The Bhavagad Gita, the Creed of Hinduism. History, Myth and Symbolism. Hindu Philosophical Schools. The Logical and Atomic Systems of Philosophy. The Sankhya Philosophy of Evolution. The Yoga Philosophy. The Vedanta Philosophy of the Absolute. Is the World an Illusion? The Fourth Dimension. The Alchemy of Devotion. Esotericism and Exotericism in Religion. Worlds Within Worlds. The Stages of Spiritual Evolution. The Law of Sacrifice. Ancient and Modern Science. Devas, Nature Spirits, Angels and Archangels. The Problem of Right and Wrong. The Building of Character. The One God Under Many Forms. The Language of the Gods. Hinduism. Zoroastrianism. Psychism and Spirituality. Shri Krishna, the Hindu Incarnation. Story of the Christ. What Yoga Really Is. Are We Better or Worse Than Our Ancestors? Occult Chemistry. The Planetary Chains. The Races of Man. The Wider Consciousness. The Subnormal and Supernormal Self. Psychic Phenomena. Methods of Psychic and Spiritual Development. The Nature of Emotion. Classification of the Emotions. Practical Application of the Theory to the Art of Right Living. For full particulars address Mrs. Charles Howard, 6558 Stewart Avenue. Chicago.

The Spiritual Church Students of Nature, Mrs. Schumacher, pastor, has discontinued its meetings during the summer. The society has been prosperous, having $100 in the treasury.

Georgia Gladys Cooley has commenced her services with the Meadville, Pa., society, and reports very successful work at Pittsburg, where she is wanted again when she can make a date with them. Her work is telling for the cause wherever she is called to work.

Correspondent writes: "Monday evening, May 27, Mrs. Susie R. Thompson of 348 South Oakley Boul., held a spiritual test meeting at Mrs. Bloom's residence, 319 Plum street, Elgin, Ill., convincing many investigators who promise to be followers of the truth. Her new friends hope she will hold another meeting with them in the near future, as her tests were all recognized. Mrs. Thompson holds test circles every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Use phone Ogden 5077 for engagements for readings."

The Fraternal Order of Spiritualists will give an excursion to Elgin, Ill., June 23, to join the Elgin, Rockford and Genoa Spiritualists in a one-day mass meeting in their grove at Elgin. Take Elgin-Aurora elevated car at 12 o'clock noon; fare $1.00 round trip. Bring your lunch baskets and friends and spend your Sunday with us in the grove. For information apply to the following committee: Mrs. J. S. Adams, 1007 West Harrison Street; Mrs. Dr. Caird, 598 West Monroe Street; Mr. Charles Thompson; Mr. B. Hilbert, 204 Burling Street; Mr. Ed Curtis, 615 Otto Street; Mr. A. W. Bloom, 1113 Lincoln Avenue, Chairman of Committee.

Rev. Alice Baker's home address is 449 Live Oak street, Dallas, Texas. She has been for some time, and is now, acting as State Missionary of Oklahoma.

Prof. Wm. Lockwood, has lately been lecturing in Buffalo, N. Y., on the following highly interesting subjects: "How principles of Astrology, natural phenomena and sentient existence became interwoven in the social life of mankind, in the earliest ages of the race." The Chaldean Theogony, one of the oldest traditions of Creation, and its Gods, known to the page of history." "Adonis and Astarte, Pluto and Proserpine." "Apollo and Diana, Osiris, Iris and Orus, Zeus and the Roman Jupiter." "Mithras and Mysteries. Hell and the Devil. The eras of superstition that gave them birth." "Oracles, Seers and Sybils, Prophets, Priests and Phrygian Bonnets and gowns—their place in Modern Religious Idealism."

FREE FROM TRANCE.

Talks New Tongue—Iowa Girl Displays Great Fluency in Language Strange to All Hearers.

Perry, Ia., May 26.—After having been in a state of trance for exactly fifty days, says a dispatch in the Chicago Examiner, Miss Prudence Van Gilder, a pretty music teacher, twenty years of age, emerged from the trance to-day, but in a condition which to family, friends and medical and psychological experts is one of mystery.

Power to use the English language appears completely gone, but from the lips of the young woman another language, which no one here can interpret, falls with a fluency and musical expression which is the marvel of all hearers.

During the fifty days' trance Miss Van Gilder's jaws were set, and food could only be administered by inserting a tube through a tooth especially removed for the purpose.

Miss Van Gilder seemed to come to her normal condition early to-day. Unable to speak a word of English she motioned for the bible, turned to the tenth verse of Psalm 116, and by gestures asked her sister to read the following:

"I believed, therefore have I spoken. I was greatly afflicted."

While friends gazed awestruck upon the scene, the mother suggested food, and food was brought. But a strange thing happened. The girl pushed away the tray which her sister sought to place upon her lap and not until she had doubled her knees under her after the fashion of the Japanese would she consent to eat a mouthful.

There have been scores of callers at the house all day. The young woman seems to be bright and serenely happy, but no one can understand what she says. There is talk of securing a linguist from Des Moines to visit the Van Gilder home and see if he can throw any light upon the nature of the strange language.

Lake Pleasant Still on Earth.

One of the hardest things in the world is to down a genuine Spiritualist, and it would seem as though an association of Spiritualists possesses the same indestructible attributes. Certainly Lake Pleasant, the second oldest Spiritualist camp ground in the world, is rising, Phoenix-like, out of the ashes. When the writer first visited the grounds, on the morning following the great conflagration of April 25th, it seemed as though the old camp had received its death blow, but within a week the directors met in council and were unanimous in the opinion that the camp meeting should be held this season as usual, and everything done that could be done to prepare for it.

At the time of the fire the annual camp meeting program was in the hands of the printers being prepared for the press, but it was recalled immediately and the needed alterations and corrections made.

I have received over one hundred calls from friends desiring circulars, and occasionally I receive a second letter chiding me for not having sent them. If the fire had not occurred, the circulars would have been distributed May 1st, but a delay of a month has been caused and the circulars are now ready. I will mail them to all the friends as soon as possible.

The camp meeting will open Sunday, July 28th, and continue for 30 days. Several cottages are now under construction in the burnt district. Mr. Frank L. Fletcher has completed his new cottage upon Montague St., and Mrs. Louisa B. Booth and Mrs. Thos. E. Jordan are both having cottages built on the same street. Frank Wilbur and Mrs. A. A. Jackson are erecting cottages on Owasso St., and Mr. J. Russell Bickford is building a $3,000 structure on Lyman St. Several contracts have been placed with local carpenters, but work has not been started yet. There are nearly one hundred cottages now on the grounds, and rooms can be secured at most of them. The dance privilege has been granted to Leonard A. Bemis, of Athol, and dancing parties will be conducted in the Temple every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening during July and August. Charles F. Sigle will run the grocery store and Leon E. Henry has erected a new stationery store and ice-cream saloon upon the site of his old one. Mrs. S. B. Valentine has purchased the electric car station of Dwight Hilliard, and will conduct it as a restaurant, and the railroad station is being renovated and repaired to be used for the same purpose. The Home Comfort House will furnish room and board as usual, and the Grove House will be open for guests.

In applying for circulars or writing for information, the friends are requested to inclose stamp for reply.

ALBERT P. BLINN, Clerk.
17 Oak St., Norwich, Conn.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and

Do You Want to Know

About your Love Affairs, Health, Business, Journeys, Speculation, Marriage, Legacies, Changing your Position, Home or Business, your lucky or unlucky days, your children or family affairs, about buying and selling property.

Let Me Tell Your Fortune Free.

For 20 years I have been guiding people to SUCCESS and HAPPINESS. Send for free Horoscope. Give your name, address, birth-date, sex, and state whether married or single. Send 10 cents, silver or stamps, to pay postage and clerical work. Address;

PROF. ALBERT POSTEL.
Room 549, No. 120 W. 34th St., New York, N. Y

MAY 30.

I see them bearing the flowers to-day
To the spot where the heroes sleep,
And I think of an unmarked soldier's grave
Where Virginia's breezes sweep.
And I wonder if someone plucks a flower
By the rivulet of Bull Run,
And lays it above the dust of him
Who made me a soldier's son.

The days that are gone I live once more
As I close my eyes and think,
And the chain of memory stretches back
And I follow it link by link.
And spanning eight and a score of years
I return to a Christmas day
When the streets are filled with marching men,
And the air with their banners gay.

But I have sight for only one,
And a man with a bearded face,
And a kindly eye and a stalwart tread,
Who walks in a forward place.
I watch the train move out of town,
With its smoke and its clanging bell
And the smoke takes form of clouds of war,
And the clang is a funeral knell.

He wore the blue as a soldier should,
He was tender and true and brave;
He gave his life for the nation's life,
And his pay was a soldier's grave.
A random shot, and above his corse
Sweeps onward the battle's tide;
And while the stars shine out that night,
They bury him where he died.

So I watch them strewing the flowers to-day
On the spot where the heroes sleep,
And I think of an unmarked soldier's grave
Where Virginia's breezes sweep,
And I wonder if someone plucks a flower
By the rivulet of Bull Run,
And drops it above the dust of him
Who made me a soldier's son.

GEO. E. MACDONALD.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

Passed to higher life on the evening of May 22, Brother Joseph C. Engle of Balbec, Ind. In the transition of Brother Engle, the West Grove Spiritualist Association loses a worthy member, the wife a dutiful husband, the children a loving father, and the community a valued citizen. Services at West Grove church by Mrs. Elizabeth Hrlow, of Haydenville, Mass."

E. A. GRAY.

Passed to spirit life from Nashua, N. H., May 2, Lucy R., widow of Jonathan Hosmer, aged 93 years. For many years Spiritualism had been her staff and stay, and in accordance with her request, the writer conducted the funeral services.

JULIETTE YEAW.

Passed to spirit life from Clinton, Mass., April 28, George H. Jewett. He had lived in Clinton 54 years. He was a veteran of the civil war, a prominent Spiritualist, and for many years extensively employed as a mover of buildings. A large delegation from E. D. Baker Post were present at his funeral, the chaplain of which assisted the writer in conducting the service.

JULIETTE YEAW.

Passed to spirit life from Worcester, Mass., May 22, Mrs. Lucy H. (Parker), widow of Aaron E. Underwood. She was 80 years old, a veteran Spiritualist, a constant attendant at the meeting of the Worcester Association, until her last illness. The peaceful face, the beautiful flowers brought inspiration, comfort and cheer to the home recently bereft of two sisters and a brother. JULIETTE YEAW.

J. Rigdon passed to spirit life at his home, near Salem, Ore., April 14, 1907, aged 74 years. Ever since he became convinced of the truths of Spiritualism he has been an enthusiastic worker for the cause. Possessing dauntless courage and with the knowledge gained from the spirit world, he was able at all times to withstand the sneers and criticisms of those who did not have the light. His remains were cremated at the Portland Crematorium and his ashes buried in the beautiful grounds adjoining. MRS. E. J. HUFFORD.

MASS MEETING.

The Massachusetts State Association will hold a mass-meeting in Amesbury, Mass., in Washington Hall, at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. The best of talent will be presented. All are invited. The meetings are free, and we want to make this one of the best meetings we have ever had. Among those invited to be present are: Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, Miss Susie C. Clark, Mrs. Annie Chapman, Mrs, Maude Litch, Mrs Ham, Miss Blanch Brainard, and many others. The State Association will make an effort to form an organization (permanent) in Amesbury, and all friends of the cause in this vicinity are earnestly requested to be present."

CARRIE L. HATCH. Sec.

STRANGE POWER

Used to help the Unsuccessful, Discouraged and Despondent. You are invited to join The

PSYCHO SUCCESS CLUB

Send for my booklet, "The Road to Success." It is Mailed FREE. Address PROF. ELMER E. KNOWLES, Room 9, No 126 West 34th. street, New York, N. Y.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

"The Truth Seeker Collection of Forms and Ceremonies for the Use of Liberals." Price, 25 cents.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.

Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.

Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.

Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.

Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.

Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.

Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.

Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.

Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.

Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.

Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts. THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

THE BIBLE New and Revised Edition.

Authenticity, Credibility, Morality.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S GREAT WORK

Ingersoll's desire that somebody should at last tell the whole truth about the Bible has been brilliantly fulfilled. No Freethinker worthy of the name can afford to pass over Remsburg's book in silence. Like Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," may it, let us hope, find admirers and translators in other languages. And again, like Paine's book, may this brilliant work bring to its author the praise of posterity.—Der Freidenker (Milwaukee).

This great work on the Bible by Mr. Remsburg is most valuable—it is an encyclopedia of information in regard to the Bible, and surpasses in importance all other works of the kind now published. It is up-to-date in every particular. Price, $1.25.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within: thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

William Arling.—Q. I wish to call your attention to that portion of the Wesleyan Discipline relating to the examination of those who think they are called by the Holy Ghost (Spirit) to preach, and ask if you do not think it would be well for Spiritualists to enforce similar questions relating to their belief, on those who seek to become recognized teachers?

A. That the reader, who may not be versed in Methodism, may grasp the purport of this inquiry, I will quote from the Discipline the passage referred to:—

"Do they know God as a pardoning God? Have they love of God abiding in them? Do they desire nothing but God? And are they holy in all manner of conversation? Have they gifts as well as grace for the work? Have they—in some tolerable degree—a clear, sound understanding, a right judgment in the things of God, a just conception of salvation by faith? And has God given them a good degree of utterance? Do they speak justly, readily, clearly? Have they fruit? Are any truly convinced of sin and converted to God, by their labors?"

Stripped of its theological phraseology, this means simply:—Have you a good moral character, and have you education and common sense to clearly express your convictions? It does not demand much of a candidate; in fact not a tithe of the demands made by Spiritualism.

There has been greatest injury to the cause by the granting of ordination indiscriminately, often to those unworthy and incapable. The rite has been accepted by societies and individuals as evidence of worthiness and good character—with disastrous results. If ordination is bestowed at all, those who assume authority to give it should be most certain that they make no mistakes and that the candidates are worthy. It carries with it the privilege of writing "Rev." before the name, and this is a farce unless there be a reverend character to go with it. Recent experience of Spiritualists with these "Revs.," who were ordained because it helped their trade as materializers, has been an object lesson. Rev. applied to a teacher of Spiritualism ought to have a higher significance than when given to a gospel preacher. What reverence can we have for one of these "anointed," dragged from the cabinet, with his confederates disguised with false whiskers, wigs and cheese-cloth robes?

Ordination is a credential of worthiness, and to be of value must have a strong organization back of it. Spiritualists, as a class, are very restive under any such restrictions. They consider themselves more capable judges than any organization, and the only square deal is for them to investigate for themselves.

If ordination could be placed on such a foundation, the Methodist Discipline would furnish a model for the questions which should be asked. What the applicants know about God and their exact belief in the infallibility of the Bible might be passed. Such questions as these would be pertinent: Have you a common school education? Can you talk clearly and freely? Have you a good social standing? Is your moral character without reproach? Do you feel called by the spirits, or are you impelled by selfish ambition? Only the spiritual can be successful teachers of Spiritualism. To converse with the dead should be held as a sacred privilege. Complete preparation for a teacher of Spiritualism would require such a vast circle of knowledge that no mortal could pass the examination. For the present the standard must not be placed too high. Yet there are some things to which we must give heed. Thus we know that inspiration comes to the inquiring and aspiring mind, and its transmission is measured by the attainments of the recipient. There may be exceptions; we are told that even an ass in the old times talked instead of brayed. Blind Tom in recent times made angelic music; but such are exceptions, and from known psychic laws we do not expect the eloquence of Cicero, or Darwin's knowledge from an ignorant medium, or inspired wisdom from the idiotic. Hence it is that simple mediumship is not, nor should be, a guaranty for ordination, as has been suggested.

After all, the only true ordination is the manifestation of fitness and ability for the work. No organization has authority to grant or withhold the privilege of the teacher, or dictate what he shall or what he shall not teach. Every new thought, every advanced idea, has been given to the world by the unordained. The measure of teacher and speaker is quickly taken, and those who really have ideas require no introduction or support of organization.

Erich Saskoneski.—Q. Where can I procure a book on Clairaudience?

A. There has been no work published on this subject. It is a branch of Clairvoyance, for as that means clear, or rather, spirit, seeing, Clairaudience means spirit hearing. It is even of more rare manifestation, and cannot be acquired from books or imparted by "lessons." The recorded instances appear, almost without exception, to have come spontaneously, at some crisis in the life of the recipient, or the imparting person, or spirit, and this, perhaps, only once in a lifetime. Yet there are those who have this sensitiveness of spirit hearing, and by giving it heed, and by becoming receptive by concentration of mind, it may be improved to a wonderful degree.

A. M. Rich.—The Divining Rod. The following extract from a letter kindly sent in fraternal response, corroborates the explanation given in a previous number of The Progressive Thinker, of the causes producing the movement of the divining rod:—

"On reading your answer to question concerning divining rods, it brought back to memory my experience in the oil regions. At that time nobody would sink a well without having the spot located by what they called an "oil smeller." He used a forked twig, which at a certain point as he walked about, would turn down. I took the divining rod in my hands, but could get no such results, even when standing in the exact place where the "smeller" had located an oil vein, indicated by the twig bending down. But strange to say, when he placed his hand on the back of my neck, whenever I held it over the spot he had indicated, the rod would turn down as it had done in his hands. I held a prong in each hand, with the central part standing up perpendicular. If there was anything in the way in which I grasped the rod that caused it to twist down, I was not conscious of it. It has always been a mystery to me. It evidently had nothing to do with an oil vein beneath, because the sinking of many wells demonstrated that a porous oil rock underlaid the whole territory."

The conclusion of our esteemed correspondent, it seems to me, is not fully sustained from his premises. Even if the oil country is underlaid with porous rock saturated with oil, there may be nodes of stronger pressure, which would give stronger flow of oil when reached. This is proven by the fact that there is great difference in the flow of wells near each other.

The student of this subject will readily see that when Mr. Rich held the rod, and the operator placed his hands on the back of his hands or neck, or in any way come in contact with him, it was the same as if the operator himself held it, for Mr. Rich was under his psychic control.

That the rod moves in the hands of certain persons, without their consciously contributing thereto, is undeniable. The cause may call forth a variety of opinions. I think there are a much greater number of successes with its use than failures. I have an instance in mind. My father desired a stock well, and from experience of neighbors, knowing how small was the yield from their efforts, was undecided. The lands rested on slate, an impervious rock, more than 1,000 feet in thickness, with only an occasional seam giving a flow of water. All the wells went down to this stratum—about twenty feet—and practically supplied with surface water. My mother, who possessed extraordinary gifts as a sensitive, thought she would try the divining rod, and procuring a witch hazel branch, set out in the search. She went to many places where the well would be desirably located, but the branch gave no encouragement. At last suddenly it bent, doubling on itself, and pointed down. When she moved away it would straighten up. The well was sunk on the spot indicated. Down eighteen feet to the surface of the slate no water came in. Hard clay rested on the slate, impervious. Into the slate they went, some four feet, when a workman's pick struck through and the water gushed through as from a fountain. It was necessary to drive a plug into the hole made by the pick, to keep back the flow of water while the well could be walled up.

That was sixty-five years ago, and ever since practically the supply of water is inexhaustible. A windmill brings it to the tanks, and if it pumped continually there would be no failure.

Strange to say, the water in the well is most changeable in quality. In winter it is pure as crystal, sweet, and praised by all who taste it. As summer advances it becomes a sulphur and iron spring. Some days the color will be inky; at others, when in the tanks, milky; and then again it will be slightly bitter and salt. Different veins appear to come into it for brief periods.

John B. Telhahl.—Q. (1) Does the spirit have to pass through any certain number of changes, and what of its environments in each?

(2) Is there any estate of spirit life so low and depraved that there can be no advance therefrom, and the end final destruction?

A. The spirit passes through only one change: that from mortal to spirit life. The environments of the first need not be dwelt on here; those of the spirit are such as are correspondingly requisite to its existence as spirit.

(2) That there is an individualized existence after the death of the physical body does not prove that existence is eternal. There must be attained a certain degree of advancement, a determined evolutionary product, before continued existence is assured.

A Spiritual writer in England, in explaining the meaning of the "second death," spoken of in the Bible, has woven a network of argument in favor of his contention that those spirits who refuse to advance, who on the contrary retrograde and become more and more depraved, annul their charter of individual existence and at last meet the second death, which is of the spirit, as the first is of the mortal body.

It is a terrible conclusion, and the line between those who go onward and those whose lamp of existence goes out is not sharply drawn, and difficult to determine.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

MASSACHUSETTS ASSOCIATION.

A Successful Mass-Meeting Held at Worcester.

The Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists held a mass-meeting in G. A. R. Hall, Worcester, The day was fine and a good audience met at 2:30. Vice-President Hatch opened the meeting, and expressed his sincere regret that the President, Dr. G. A. Fuller, was detained at home by the illness of Mrs. Fuller.

Mrs. Juliette Yeaw gave the invocation.

Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, treasurer of the M. S. A., was the first speaker. She said in part: "We have come here to-day not simply to shake hands and congratulate ourselves with the work done, but we have met here in the interest of organized effort. You are all well versed in regard to the object of our organization, and if the hands of said organization were upheld, we could accomplish all that the oorganization has laid out. We are always glad to come to Worcester. We are always benefitted by these meetings, and if all the Spiritualists could know what associated effort means, we could bring great happiness to the world.

The M. S. A. extends to you a hearty greeting, and we wish each and everyone present would join us, then all would feel they were helping to bring our beautiful truth before the people.

Mrs. Gray then sang a beautiful selection, "Where is Heaven," which was finely rendered.

Mrs. Maude L. Litch, then spoke briefly, and said Spiritualism when rightly understood makes life look so different than formerly. It has come that all may walk out into the light; it has come to tell you of the continuity of life; it fills the great void of material life; it will bring you strength to meet the battles of life. Your loved ones will come to help you and guide you along the pathway of life. She closed her remarks by giving many convincing communications.

Mrs. Juliette Yeaw was then introduced, and she was controlled by Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes. She said: "I have returned to give you greeting, and to say I am still interested in the Massachusetts State Association, and shall be while the association exists. I am still a student in the great school of life, and I have been able to understand much that I studied while in earth life. I want to say to you all who are interested in this work, to work unselfishly and willingly for this cause we all love. I am aware this may be a very imperfect impersonation, but I love this instrument; she was a dear friend. I love the people of Worcester, and I wanted to bring my love and, and to tell you all I still live, still love, and still work for this great truth."

Dr. R. L. Bishop was the next speaker; he said, "We all ought to work for organization; it is necessary along practical lines." He closed his remarks with tests. After singing by the audience, Mr. Niles of Marlboro, spoke briefly, saying Spiritualism teaches us our loved ones have not gone far away, and I sometimes think there is not even a "Thin Veil Between Us," and I think Spiritualism has come to spiritualize the whole world. He closed his remarks with tests.

Mrs. B. W. Belcher was the next speaker. She is one of our workers always willing to assist whenever she can. She gave tests which were recognized. The meeting for the afternoon closed with singing "America."

Meeting called to order in the evening at 7:30 by Vice-President Hatch. Singing by the audience, after which Mr. Woodbury C. Smith, president of the Worcester Society, welcomed the State Association to Worcester. He said these mass-meetings are of benefit to all concerned, speakers, mediums and friends of the society. It gives all an opportunity to exchange thhoughts, and all are benefited by the intercourse. These meetings are an inspiration that helps us all to go on in the work and to take up our duties cheerfully.

Mrs. Gray then sang another selection, "Something Sweet to Think of," very finely.

Mrs. Carrie F. Loring then responded to the welcome extended by President W. C. Smith in behalf of the Massachusetts State Association. She closed her remarks with tests.

Mr. Charles S. C. Hatch then favored the audience with a violin solo, which was highly appreciated.

Mrs. Juliette Yeaw, of Leominster, one of the pioneer workers, was then introduced, and she spoke most eloquently on the subject, "If a man live, shall he ever cease to live?" a new version of "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Mrs. Kate R. Stiles was the next speaker. She spoke most eloquently upon Spiritualism.

Mrs. Gray then sang a beautiful selection, "Angel Serenade." Violin obligata by Charles L. C. Hatch.

Mrs. S. C. Cunningham then spoke briefly of Spiritualism, and gave many communications.

Mrs. Maude Litch closed the meeting with a benediction.

CARRIE L. HATCH, Sec.

IF.

If everyone were wise and sweet,
And everyone were jolly;
If every heart with gladness beat,
And none were melancholy;
If none should grumble or complain
And nobody should labor
In evil work, but each were fain
To love and help his neighbor—
Oh, what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

And if perhaps we both should try
That glorious time to hurry;
If you and I—just you and I—
Should trust instead of worry;
If we should grow—just you and I,
Kinder and sweeter-hearted,
Perhaps, in some near by-and-bye,
That good time might get started.
—Message of Life, New Zealand.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

"Harmonics of Evolution. The Philosophy of Individual Life. Based Upon Natural Science, as Taught by Modern Masters of the Law." By Florence Huntley. A work of deep thought, carrying the principles of evolution into fields. Price, cloth, $2.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

What Shall I Do to Be Saved?—Abstract of Lecture by Thomas Cross, Delivered Before the Worcester Association of Spiritualists, Sunday, March 17, 1907—Reported by M. Lizzie Beals.

The text of countless sermons, the title of many hymns, "What Shall I Do to Be Saved?"

Theology tells us salvation is free to all, if we believe and accept the teachings of the churches, but if we use our reason and common sense we cannot accept those teachings.

What shall I do to be saved from what? From disease, worry, fears? Some people are constantly talking disease; whatever you may do or say, to change the subject of conversation availeth nothing, you may interest them for a few moments on other subjects, but the mind constantly dwelling upon disease seems to take pleasure in being miserable, and any attempt to draw them out into another line of thought is apparently useless.

Saved from worry? We worry over what is past and gone; we worry over present conditions; and we worry over what may come to us in the future, and it avails us nothing only to make us unhappy and the lives of those about us as well.

What shall I do to be saved? Do the best that you can. It is not what we believe, but what we are that shall make or mar our future happiness. We as Spiritualists, know that we, as individuals are alone responsible for every act of our lives while dwelling in the material form—we must be our own saviors. In the years past and gone we were taught and believed that God was responsible for all of the world's progress, but in the light of this twentieth century we have come to know and understand that man and man alone is responsible for the progress and upliftment of the human race.

I have been told that recently in the city of New York a meeting was held to discuss an important subject, attended by the learned and most cultured people of our land. I inquired what was the subject for discussion. Was it to improve the sanitary conditions of the city? No. Was it to devise ways and means for making conditions better and brighter for the homeless orphans? No. Was it for the betterment and upliftment of the human race? No. This great discussion by these educators, cultured people of our land was held to decide whether the kink in a bull pup's tail was natural or artificial.

When I was a boy, I was brought up to keep the Sabbath, we were not allowed to do any work on Sunday, and no recreation of any kind. We could go for a walk if we wished, but that was all. The habit had become so fixed with me that I did not outgrow it for some time after I had reached years of discretion, was married, and had learned to know and understand some of the deeper lessons of life. One Sabbath morning a good bishop was on his way to church, when he saw a young lad busily engaged in digging bait, the bishop approached the lad and said: "My boy, don't you know that your heavenly Father will be very much displeased with you to see you digging bait on the Sabbath day?"

The boy looked up, and after thinking a moment replied, "I don't know anything about my heavenly Father, but I'm pretty well acquainted with my earthly father, and I'm not going to take any chances."

My friends, everything in the industrial world is governed by Trusts, and in the world of religion, a great religious trust exists in your land today. The Spiritualist platform is the only free platform in the land, and yet there are some in our ranks who would seek to limit its freedom, to teachings of Spiritualism, and pattern after the churches as of old. If that time ever comes, I shall step down and out, for we cannot limit the freedom of the Spiritualist platform.

My friends, the greatest thing in the world is love, the love of one man for one woman, and the most sacred place in the universe is home.

What shall I do to be saved? Do the best that you can, as husband or wife, brother, sister and friend, and the world will be better for your having lived, and when the summons comes, and you journey on to the higher school of life, you shall hear the words "well done."

Birthday Celebration.

Last Friday, May 24, was the birthday anniversary of our speaker, Mrs. Carrie M. Hinsdale, and was made the occasion for a pleasant gathering of the members of the Galveston Spiritualist society at the Temple.

Mrs. Hinsdale invited the members to a "quilting party," and prizes were offered to both ladies and gentlemen for neat work, fast work, and a "booby," or "consolation prize." Squares of material were already prepared and each one was required to make a "nine square block" in 30 minutes. There was a good deal of laughter and joking over the work. For the ladies, Mrs. Dean, of the Ladies Auxiliary won the prize for fast work. Mrs. McGraw and Mrs. Landry had to draw for the prize for neat work, and Mrs. Landry won. Mrs. Peters was given the consolation prize, having finished after the 30 minutes were up. Wm. R. Trostman won the prize for fast work among the men, Wm. Boutelle for neat work, and Messers. Haase, Pfeiffer and Martin drew for the consolation, which fell to Wm Martin. Each guest had a guess at the age of Mrs. Hinsdale, those guessing being required to deposit a copper for every year of her age, according to their individual opinion. The prize for the guessing contest was won by Mrs. C. P. Martin, who guessed correctly.

Refreshments were served after the contests and just at the close Mrs. Dean in a few well chosen words, presented Mrs. Hinsdale with a very handsome gold pen, as a token of esteem from the Ladies' Auxiliary and individual members of the society.

Mrs. Hinsdale thanked the friends and declared the English language inadequate when one desired to express deep emotion.

There were also quite a number of presents from individual members, notably, a large leather Gladstone bag," which will no doubt prove most useful in Mrs. Hinsdale's journeyings to and fro.

The entire evening was given to laughter, good wishes and enjoyment.

At a late hour, with hearty handclasps and wishes for many more happy birthdays, the guests said "Good night" to Mrs. Hinsdale, and each declared it to have been a most enjoyable evening.

CORRESPONDENT.

"The Kingship of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world, think. Price, 25 cents.

THE SPIRIT REALMS.

The Testimony of a Catholic in Reference Thereto.

The whole history of our race bears witness to a general belief in the existence and manifestation of spirits. This belief is shared alike by the lettered and the unlettered, the refined litterateur and the untutored savage. The Holy Scriptures teach, in words that cannot be explained away, that a spirit world really exists. The good spirits are sent to minister to those who hold the heritage of salvation.

The Witch of Endor had communications with the spirits. Many evil spirits were cast out of unfortunates by our Lord. Indeed, the pages both of the Old and New Testaments are filled with reference to the inhabitants of the spirit realm. Neither can any believer in the bible doubt the possibility of the spirits appearing to mortals. Decisive upon this point is the mission of the Archangel Raphael, who, in human form, accompanied the youthful Tobias on his journey, and although seen by many, was not recognized until he himself, at the end of his mission, disclosed his real nature and office. Decisive, likewise, is the wondrous apparition of the Angel Gabriel to our Lady when he announced to her that the lofty dignity of mother of the Prince of Peace had been conferred upon her.

But what of the spirits of the souls of the departed—can they never return to us? This is the question we ask involuntarily when dear ones are taken from us, when we mourn over lifeless forms. Under the safe guidance of the great St. Thomas, we answer emphatically that the spirits of the departed can, with God's leave, come back to us. They may even, St. Thomas assures us, be allowed to appear in visible form to the living, either by way of consolation or by way of warning.

The grave, consequently, does not seal everything. The departed, so tenderly loved, are not cut off from the circle of thought and of presence. Angels and saints and dear ones are near to us; we can feel their presence; we are assured of their sympathy, and we are stronger and better and nobler because of this intercourse with the inhabitants of the spirit-kingdom. This permitted return and manifestation of the departed must be carefully distinguished from the common idea of a ghost, stalking with measured steps through the hallways and vacant rooms, and terrifying all by unearthly shrieks and foolish antics.

The Almighty always works in ways that are impressive and instructive, not in ways that arouse the mirth of the thoughtless and the disgust of the serious. We can learn from this principle which may serve as a guide in passing judgment upon the vast array of facts carefully collected by the Society for Psychical Research. Many of these incidents must certainly be classed as hallucinations, many as illusions, while a certain number must be ascribed to the action either of the departed, of the demons, or of those spirits who keep watch and ward over human beings.—Rev. Morgan M. Sheedy, editor The Quarterly.

[The above was re-published by the Pittsburg (Pa.) Observer, a Catholic publication. These statements from a Catholic priest are surely the forerunner of a more bold announcement of spirit communion by the Catholic Church. The future is prescient with the promise of an early recognition of the facts we have promulgated these many years. We must look well to the distinctive features of our Cause and preserve our identity as Spiritualists.—Editor Banner of Light.]

THE SOUND OF FAIRY BELLS.

Angel Forms Descending.

Where the grass with dew was bending
And the scent of flowers blending
With the fragrance of the dells;
Sudden as the sunlight glancing,
Borne on light wind round me dancing,
Came the sound of fairy bells.

Faint and far the sweet notes dying
Rose again, and round me flying
Smote upon my troubled brain.
Thus the wheeling seabirds calling,
And on storm-winds rising, falling,
Beat against the lighthouse pane.

From the dead past, with its weeping,
Onward o'er the present leaping,
Sped my soul to future days.
While as thought went onward sailing,
Rose from earth a bitter wailing,
And this vision met my gaze:

Starving men below me dying,
With abundance round me lying,
While they fought for niggard pay.
Honest workers wealth were reaping,
But as quickly from their keeping
Was the harvest snatched away.

And as foaming wave surrounding,
Filled the sky with harsh resounding,
Clashed the bells with angry roar.
But the after-swell came rolling,
And their deep and solemn tolling
Bore me to a tranquil shore.

War was dead, and wrong was dying,
Sorrows clouds dissolving, flying,
For the sons of toil were free.
All rewards to workers going,
Wealth o'ershading, commerce flowing,
Sunlight on the land and sea.

Thus, while notes of fairy ringing
O'er the fields of earth are winging,
Nevermore they pass away.
For the harmonies there ranging,
Into new forms ever changing,
In eternal beauty play.

From the blue skies o'er us bending,
Come fair angel forms, descending
Softly as the falling snow;
And the notes that meet our hearing
Are from jasper walls uprearing,
As the builders strike their blows.

While the earth in ceaseless marching,
With the starry skies o'erarching,
Seeks the sunrise far away,
We may hear the angels singing,
And the bells of heaven ringing,
From the fields of endless day.
— W. A. Carlisle, in Two Worlds.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.

By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two huadred illustrations. Cloth, $1.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth, 75 cents.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies." A Review of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated articles upon Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

VALUABLE LIBRARY ...OF... SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

JOURNEYS TO THE PLANET MARS, or Our Mission to Earth.—By Sara Weiss. Cloth bound, price, $1.50.

JUST HOW TO WAKE THE SOLAR PLEXUS.—By Mrs. Towne. A book on concentration. Price, 25 cents.

KAREZZA.—Ethics of Marriage.—A plea for a better birthright for children and a higher development of parentage through the most sacred relations. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.00.

KINGDOM OF LOVE, and Other Poems.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

KORADINE.—A prophetic story, and a valuable book for girls to read. Written by Dr. Alice B. Stockham and Lida Hood Talbot. Price, $1.00.

LANGUAGE OF THE STARS.—This important work is the first practical exposition of the Astro-Magnetic forces of Nature—in relation to man—yet issued. Price, 50 cents.

LAW OF PSYCHIC PHENOMENA.—By Dr. T. J. Hudson. Price, $1.50.

LONGLEY'S CHOICE COLLECTION OF BEAUTIFUL SONGS.—Price, board covers, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

LIFE AND MATTER.—An answer to Haeckel's "Riddle of the Universe." By Sir Oliver Lodge. Price, $1; postage, 12 cents.

LIFE AND REMINISCENCES OF ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.—The work is well written by his life-long friend Edward C. Smith. Handsomely bound in cloth. Price, postpaid, $2.00.

LIFE BEYOND DEATH.—Being a review of the World's Beliefs on the subject, a consideration of present conditions of thought and feeling, leading to the question as to whether it can be demonstrated as a fact, to which is added an appendix containing some hints as to personal experiences and opinions. By Minot Judson Savage, D. D. Price, $1.50; postage, 10 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.—Illustrated with views of the old Paine homestead and Paine Monument at New Rochelle. By the editor of the National, with preface and notes by Peter Eckler. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION, RESEARCHES IN METAPHYSICS. By Edward C. Randall. Price, $1.50.

LIFE WORK OF "CORA L. V. RICHMOND.—An interesting book regarding a world-renowned inspirational lecturer, a pioneer worker in Spiritualism. Compiled and Edited by Harrison D. Barrett. Price, $2, postpaid.

LIGHT OF EGYPT, or the Science of the Soul and the Stars.—A grand work of profound philosophical deductions, on a theme of great interest to everybody. Price, $2.00.

MAGIC—The Old and the New Magic. An explanation of the tricks of legerdemain. Price, $1.50; postage, 10 cents.

MARIONE—His Birth, Character and Doctrine.—Historically correct. Exact and perfect in every detail and beyond adverse criticism. By Edward Gibbon. Price, 25 cents.

MAHOMET THE ILLUSTRIOUS.—An apology for the life and character of this celebrated prophet of Arabia, containing 118 neatly printed pages. By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. Price, 25 cents.

MAN AND THE SPIRITUAL WORLD, as disclosed by the Bible and study along the line of Biblical Spiritualism. By Rev. Arthur Chambers. Price, $1.10.

MAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE.—A popular account of results of recent scientific research regarding the origin, position and prospects of mankind. By Dr. Ludwig Buchner. Price, cloth, $1.00.

MAURINE AND OTHER POEMS.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

MORALITY WITHOUT GOD.—By M. M. Mangasarian. Price, 10 cents.

MYSTERIES OF THE SEANCE, or Tricks and Traps of Bogus Mediums.—By a life-long Spiritualist. Being an expose of how fraudulent mediums perform their tricks. Price, paper, 25 cents.

MYTH OF THE GREAT DELUGE.—A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. A very interesting pamphlet. By Jas. M. McCann. Price 15 cents.

NATURE CURE.—This is an excellent book for suffering humanity. It simply tells how to prevent and cure the ills of the flesh in a natural way. By Drs. M. E. and Rosa C. Conger Price, cloth, fancy, $2.; common $1.50.

NEW TESTAMENT STORIES COMICALLY ILLUSTRATED.—By Watson Heston. Price, cloth, $1.50; board cover, $1.00.

NO BEGINNINGS.—By W. P. Maple. Price 75 cents.

OBSESSION.—How evil spirits influence mortals, and how to guard against the same. A very necessary and interesting study for sensitives. By M. Faraday. 23 pages; price, 10 cents.

OCEANIDES.—A story of spirit life, by Carlyle Petersilea. Price, paper cover only, 50 cents.

OLD TESTAMENT STORIES.—By Watson Heston. Price, boards, $1.00; cloth, $1.50.

ORIGIN OF SPECIES.—By Charles Darwin. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

OUR CHILDREN.—Hints from Practical experience for parents and teachers. By Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS INTO THE LIGHT.—This little book will be read with intense interest by thousands. By Samuel Bowles; Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing medium. Price 25 cents.

OUR BIBLE, WHO WROTE IT? and a Few Thoughts on Other Bibles.—By Moses Hull. Price, $1.00.

PAST AND PRESENT.—By Thomas Carlyle. Price, 50 cents.

PERFECT MOTHERHOOD, or Mabel Raymond's Resolve.—Dedicated to woman everywhere, that children may cease to be born accursed. By Lois Waisbroker. Price, cloth, $1.00.

PHILIP CARLISLIE.—By Carlyle Petersilea. Price, $1.10.

PALMISTRY.—By Comte de Saint Germain, A. B., L. L. M. Practical palmistry, or hand reading simplified. Price, 75 cents.

PEARLS.—Brave thoughts from brave minds. Selected and arranged by M. M. Mangasarian; 75 pages, neatly bound. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth 35 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF PHENOMENA.—Physical and Metaphysical. Matter phenomena and life phenomena. Objective and subjective phenomena. Hyperbole metaphysical. By Geo. M. Ramsey, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.00.

PIONEERS OF PROGRESS.—Dr. T. A. Bland. Price, $1.00.

POEMS OF PASSION.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

POEMS OF POWER.—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price, $1.00.

POLITICAL WORKS OF THOMAS PAINE.—Containing the three volumes, "Common Sense," "The Crisis," and "Rights of Man," three volumes in one. Just the book for patriotic Americans. Price, cloth, $1.00.

POWER OF SELF-FORMATION.—By Leroy Berrier. In two styles of binding; paper cover, 50 cents; cloth cover, 80 cents.

PRACTICAL BUNGALOWS AND COTTAGES for Town and Country.—By Fred T. Hodgson. Price, $1.00.

PRACTICAL METHODS FOR SELF-DEVELOPMENT.—Spiritual, Mental, Psychical. By Elizabeth Towne. Price, $1.00.

PRACTICAL METHODS TO INSURE SUCCESS.—A valuable little work, full of practical instruction in matters pertaining to the physical, mental and spiritual health. Worth many times its cost. Price, 10 cents.

PSYCHIC RIDDLE, THE.—By I. K. Funk, D. D., LL.D. A book full of psychic suggestion. Price, $1.00.

PROPHETS OF ISRAEL.—Comprises in the main popular sketches from Old Testament History. By Carl H. Cornill, Doctor of Theology and Professor of Old Testament History. Price, 25 cents.

PSYCHIC LIGHT.—Continuity of Law and Life.—By Maud Lord Drake. This book is from the pen of an acknowledged leader in psychic philosophy and a successful demonstrator of its phenomena and one of the oldest advocates of New Thought and Higher Education. Cloth bound; price, $1.50.

PSYCHOMETRY.—Its Science and Law of Unfoldment.—By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 50 cents.

PULPIT, PEW AND CRADLE.—Second paragraph in book, last two lines reads "Christianity is one thing for grown men. It is quite another thing for women and children. By Helen H. Gardner. Price, 10 cents.

RADIANT ENERGY AND ITS ANALYSIS.—Its Relation to Modern Astro-Physics.—By Prof. Edgar L. Larkin, director of Lowe Observatory. Containing numerous illustrations and diagrams. Price, $1.75.

RATIONAL MEMORY TRAINING.—By Rev. B. F. Austin. Price, 50 cents.

REALIZATION.—A course of lessons upon the "Inner Nature of the Self." By Loraine Follett. Price, 50 cents.

RELATION OF THE SPIRITUAL TO THE MATERIAL UNIVERSE, and the Law of Control.—New edition, enlarged and revised and greatly improved. By M. Faraday. Price, 15 cents.

REINCARNATION, or the Doctrine of the Soul's Successive Embodiments. Examined and discussed pro and con by Dr. J. M. Peebles versus Dr. Helen Densmore and W. J. Colville. Paper cover; price, 30 cents.

REINCARNATION.—By Walker and Wood.—Price, leatherette, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGIOUS AND THEOLOGICAL WORKS OF THOMAS PAINE.—Here is a book that should be in the library of every Spiritualist and Freethinker in the land. Price, cloth, $1.00.

RELIGION.—A profound philosophical treatise on this world-wide subject of contention. It is a good book for students preparing for the spiritual rostrum. By E. D. Babbitt. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

RESEARCHES INTO THE PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM.—By Sir William Crookes. Illustrated. Price, 50 cents.

RIGHT LIVING.—This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long felt want of an ethical text-book adapted to the comprehension of children. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, cloth, $1.00.

RIGHTS OF MAN.—Being an answer to Mr. Burke's attack upon the French Revolution. By Thomas Paine. 276 pages. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

ROMANCE OF TWO WORLDS.—By Marie Corelli. Price, 50 cents.

SCHOPENHAUER'S ESSAYS.—Translated by T. B. Saunders. Price, 75 cents.

SCIENCE AND A FUTURE LIFE.—By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price, postpaid, $1.60.

SCIENCE OF SPIRIT RETURN.—By one of the scientific minds of The Progressive Thinker corps of contributors. Rich with profound thought. By Chas. Dawbarn. Price, 10 cents.

SIX HISTRIC AMERICANS.—By John E. Remsburg. Price, $1.25.

SIXTH AND SEVENTH BOOK OF MOSES.—Translated from the ancient Hebrew. Price, $1.00.

SOCIAL UPBUILDING, including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price, paper, 15 cents.

SOME GLIMPSES OF OCCULTISM, ANCIENT AND MODERN.—A series of lectures by C. W. Leadbeater. Price, $1.50.

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.—By Mattie E. Hull, containing 38 songs. Price, 10 cents each, or $7.00 per hundred.

STARTLING DEEDS OF DARKNESS DISCLOSED, Relative to Auricular Confession, and Its Relation to Sacerdotal Celibacy, Convents, Monasteries, Morality, and Civil and Religious Liberty.—By Rev. J. G. White. Price, 75 cents.

STUDIES IN THE OUTLYING FIELD OF PSYCHIC SCIENCE.—How to investigate, form circles and develop mediumship. A test of genuine mediumship. By Hudson Tuttle. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

SUPERSTITION IN ALL AGES, or "Le Bons Sens." Testimony of a Catholic priest who abjured the Christian religion and asked God's pardon for having taught it. Price, cloth, $1; postage, 14 cents.

TALLEYRAND'S LETTER TO THE POPE.—This work will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. Price 25 cents.

TEACHINGS OF JESUS, Not Adapted to Modern Civilization.—With the true character of Mary Magdalene. A book full of truth. By Geo. W. Brown, M. D. Price, 15 cents.

TEN COMMANDMENTS ANALYZED. By W. H. Bach. Price 25 cents.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.—A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. A splendid work by the seer and philosopher, Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

THE ARISTOCRACY OF HEALTH.—A study of Physical Culture, and Our Favorite Poisons. A masterly work on the subject, by the gifted writer, Mrs. Mary Foote Henderson. Price, $1.50.

THE A, B, Z, OF OUR OWN NUTRITION.—An excellent work and guide to perfect health. By Horace Fletcher. Price, $1.00.

THE CANDLE FROM UNDER THE BUSHEL, or Thirteen Hundred and Six Questions to the Clergy.—Nuts that are hard for them to crack. An interesting book. By Wm. Heard. Price, 10 cents.

THE CONSTITUTION OF MAN.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 cents.

THE CRISIS.—By Thomas Paine. Price, 25 cents.

THE DEMONISM OF THE AGES.—Spirit Obsessions so Common in Spiritism, Oriental and Occidental Occultism. By J. M. Peebles. Cloth bound. Price, $1; postage, 10 cents.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SPIRIT—After Transition.—The origin of religious, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. By the late M. Faraday. Price, 10

Great Hindu Brings Light to New York

All-Wise Mahatma to Unfold World's Mysteries to Seekers for Truth—Means Peace and Health—Philosophy He Teaches Insures All Things Desirable, Says William E. Curtis, in the Chicago Record-Herald.

HE IS A MAN OF IMPOSING PRESENCE, WITH A FACE AND HEAD LIKE THE BUSTS OF AUGUSTUS CAESAR. ALTHOUGH 62 YEARS OF AGE, HE LOOKS LIKE A MAN OF 40, AND THE SLIGHTEST GLANCE INTO HIS GREAT BROWN EYES IS SUFFICIENT TO CONVINCE ONE OF HIS REMARKABLE INTELLECTUAL POWERS. HE IS ASSERTED TO BE THE GREATEST LIVING METAPHYSICIAN.

USUALLY HE WEARS A PLAIN BROWN ROBE OF THE COLOR OF THOSE WORN BY FRANCISCAN MONKS, BUT HE HAS A GREAT VARIETY MADE OF THE RICHEST SILKS, MOSTLY YELLOW, THE COLOR OF THE ASCETICS, WHICH HAVE BEEN PRESENTED TO HIM BY HIS ADMIRERS AND DISCIPLES. HE BUYS NOTHING, HE OWNS NOTHING, HE NEVER TOUCHES MONEY; HE HAS NONE; HE DEPENDS ENTIRELY UPON THE GIFTS OF THE GODS, AND IF THEY DO NOT COME HE GOES WITHOUT THEM. HE WEARS A BRILLIANT TURBAN WHICH HEIGHTENS THE STATUESQUE POISE OF HIS HEAD. HIS TURBANS ARE SIMILAR TO THOSE WORN BY THE RAJAHS OF INDIA, AND ARE PRESENTS FROM THEM.

HE POSSESSES THE EXTRAORDINARY FACULTY OF CONTROLLING THE BEATING OF HIS OWN HEART AND SAYS THAT HE CAN RELEASE HIS OWN SOUL FROM HIS BODY BY MENTAL ACTION AT ANY TIME HE DESIRES.

The Mahatma Agumya Guru Paramahansa, one of the most remarkable men in the world, a Hindu scholar and ascetic, and the head of the Yogis, as the yellow-robed monks of India are known, has been in New York for a week or more, living quietly and receiving his disciples and students at a private residence, which they have rented for his accommodation, at 39 West 82nd street.

A Mahatma is a teacher. The term indicates no rank, power or authority, but, at the same time, those to whom it is applied have the highest degree of both. The Mahatma Agumya Guru Paramahansa is considered the greatest living exponent of the Vedanta Philosophy, the oldest code of ethics and method of spiritual development known, which, until now, has never been presented by a genuine teacher to the thinking people of the Western world. This philosophy—for it is not a religion—is founded upon the Vedas, the sacred books of the Brahmins, the word Veda meaning not a single volume, but the entire Brahmin literature, and it is claimed by believers that it contains all the truth in all the various religions that have ever been developed by human minds. At the same time the Vedanta philosophy and its teachings cannot be fully understood even by scholars of the profoundest learning unless they are assisted by the light of Yoga, a system of mind control which cannot be learned from books.

The Yogis of India contend that mind control is the source of all the happiness in the world, and that the lack of it is the source of all evil; therefore, they argue, as happiness is based upon the action of the mind, it can only be obtained by intellectual cultivation and the study of the mysteries under the instruction if the learned few who have attained Enlightenment and Ultimate Wisdom through long lives of austerities and contemplation. The Yoga system of Hindu philosophy is sometimes defined as the means by which the human soul may attain complete happiness by union with the Supreme Soul.

The word Yoga means literally, the Concentration of the Mind in Abstract Meditation, which sharpens the senses; stimulates the intelligence, restrains the desires, produces calm, and promotes contemplation. This can only be accomplished by the ascetic life and mental exercise in seclusion, which the Hindu student seeks in the forests of the Himalayas. Those mountains have been chosen for centuries for the study of the Infinite, because the surroundings are beautiful, serene and tranquil; nature may there be contemplated in her grandest moods, the fruits and vegetables furnish sufficient food for years of vigil, and the atmosphere is stimulating. Sometimes students remain in the forests of the Himalayas for a half a lifetime; others only a few years; and it is contended that such abstinence and introspection not only result in an extraordinary development of the mental powers, but also in an increase of physical vitality and muscular force which protects them against disease, increases their power of endurance, and gives a clean body as well as a clean soul.

The believers in Yoga also claim a clearness of judgment and accuracy of vision which can never be attained by ordinary people.

The Mahatma, who is the highest authority and the most learned exponent of the philosophy, has come to New York to offer instruction to those who desire Enlightenment, but he reserves his time for the benefit of those who are serious and sincere in their anxiety to learn the Truth. As he said to me the other evening:

"I am generous; I am willing to give; but at the same time, I am equally miserly and guard the most precious things in my store until I am convinced that the student is worthy to receive them."

He is not only the High Leader of the Yellow Robe Ascetics of India, who number millions, but he is recognized by them and others as the re-incarnation of Krishna, one of the three gods of Hindu triology—Siva, Vishnu, and Krishna. He is therefore divine. He believes himself to be a god, and at present is living and teaching in the world according to his desire to Enlighten Men.

Mahatma Agumya Guru Paramahansa is the son of the Preceptor of the Rajah of Cashmere. He was educated in the schools of his native country, where he learned English among other accomplishments.

He became a barrister, and in time was appointed judge of the High Court of the Indian Empire. He began the study of the Vedanta philosophy, which sharpened his perceptions and cleared his vision so that he became overwhelmed with the injustice and wickedness of men, renounced the world, and, leaving his court one day, walked to the cemetery, stripped off his clothing and lay down naked among the graves upon the earth to which all men must come, and for weeks gave himself up to contemplation. His father, who was a scholar and a profound student of the Vedanta philosophy, recognized the call, and, understanding his son's situation, and the influences that were moving him, did not oppose his action. But his mother resisted until she became convinced that if he refused the call it would bring upon him and his family great misfortune.

Another reason why she yielded was that from babyhood he had been regarded as sacred. The lotos leaf, the sign of Krishna appears as a birthmark upon the sole of his foot. He is now universally regarded as the re-incarnation of Krishna and partakes also of the nature of Siva and Vishnu.

After his period of contemplation in the cemetery he resigned his position upon the bench; gave up his fortune and walked naked as a beggar to the forests of the Himalayas, where he spent twelve years in contemplation until enlightenment came. Then he returned to the world, became a Mahatma (a teacher) and wandered from place to place throughout India, teaching those who desired the Higher knowledge and the philosophy of the Yoga. His ability, wisdom and learning, as well as the belief that he is the re-incarnation of Krishna, gives him a rank higher than that of any temporal prince or authority.

The proudest Rajah in India would not dare enter his presence without asking permission and would bow to his feet. He never enters a city, but always is welcomed as the guest of people of high rank who live in the suburbs and place his chair in an arbor or garden or a drawing-room and listen to his wisdom with anxiety and awe. There are two other Mahatmas of equal sanctity among the Yogis, but they do not speak English, and for that reason he was selected to carry the Light into the western world.

He accepts no money. He holds that a true teacher cannot be paid for his knowledge. He depends entirely upon his disciples to furnish him food and clothing and shelter. Like the wandering Yogis of India whom Kipling describes, he possesses nothing in this world but knowledge, which he will impart to those who sincerely desire it; but very few people are capable or are deemed worthy of receiving the mental training known as Yoga, a mehod that goes back into a time beyond the first records of human speech. Its professors assert that it is not a code; it is not a religion; it is not ethics, but it is a combination of all. They declare that it seeks no proselytes; it conflicts with no other faith; it attacks no cherished beliefs; it engages in no controversies; it needs no arguments, but is simply the purification of the mind and the cultivation of the spiritual vision. The Mahatma converses with animation with all visitors, but avoids all disputes. He does not trouble himself about being misunderstood; he never seeks to convince anyone, but is always ready to impart knowledge to those who desire it and believes that no person can resist the Universal Will which leads his disciples into the Life of the Way.

He came from India to London last November, as the guest of his disciples in that city, who number about 150 and have headquarters at 60 So. Audley street, Grosvenor Square. He come to the United States a few days ago to impart instruction to his disciples here in New York, who number about twenty and include some quite prominent men. They rented a house for him at 39 West Eighty-second st., where he is attended by a young physician and disciple and a native servant, and will receive any respectable person who may call at any hour of the day or night.

He is a man of imposing presence, with a face and head like the bust of Augustus Caesar. Although 62 years of age he looks like a man of 40, and the slightest glance into his great brown eyes is sufficient to convince one of his remarkable intellectual powers. He is asserted to be the greatest living metaphysician.

Usually he wears a plain brown robe of the color of those worn by Franciscan monks, but he has a great variety made of the richest silks, mostly yellow, the color of the ascetics, which have been presented to him by his admirers and disciples. He buys nothing, owns nothing, never touches money; he has none; he depends entirely upon the gods, and if they do not come he goes without them. He wears a brilliant turban which lightens the statuesque poise of his head. His turbans are similar to those worn by the Rajahs of India, and are presents from them.

His life is very simple. He never leaves his room. He takes one meal a day, a slice of bread, a vegetable, a glass of milk or a cup of tea. He sleeps four hours, more or less, and spends the rest of the time in meditation or in giving instruction to his disciples. Notwithstanding his simple food and complete abstinence from exercise, he has extraordinary muscle power. His disciples assert that he is the strongest man in the world. In India he is called "The Tiger Mahatma," because his strength is sufficient to tear apart the jaws of a tiger. It was recently tested in London by one of the most celebrated English athletes before a committee of experts, and they acknowledge that he was the strongest man that they had ever seen. He possesses the extraordinary faculty of controlling the beating of his own heart and says that he can release his soul by mental action at any time he desires. He knows the day of his death, but has not revealed the date, which he selected himself, notwithstanding the fact that he claims the power to prolong his life indefinitely. He is the one man who can live forever if he desires to do so.

Since his arrival in New York a well-known physician sought an interview in order to gratify his curiosity concerning the Mahatma's ability to control his pulse. Although his great mind regards such intrusions as impertinances, he received the skeptical physician to gratify mutual friends, and proceeded to suppress his pulse until the doctor was frightened and begged him not to go farther lest he might kill himself. The Mahatma was very much amused and seemed to enjoy the doctor's alarm more than anything he has experienced on this side of the world. The doctor was a good deal bewildered when he was quietly informed that the Mahatma's will is Absolute; that it is working in harmony with the One Force that dominates everything in this world; and that all knowledge is open to him from the source of knowledge; and all power from the Universal Will.

Although his profession and his training enable him to restrain his passions and practice forbearance, and the casual visitor expects to find a placid, sweet-tempered saint who has attained "the holy calm," he will soon discover that the Mahatma has not entirely divested himself of the ordinary traits of human nature. That eminent gentleman is very much alive; very energetic; very quick to resent the slightest infringement of his dignity, and sometimes, I am told, is subject to a violent rage. One of his disciples, an old friend of mine, who brought him over to London, tells me that he "has all the moods of the ocean," but that, "while he appears to be acting like an ordinary human being, and, to ignorant, worldly people, seems restless and irritable, the interior state of his mind is pure and clean, and his conduct can only be understood by those who have attained his stage of understanding."

He is not restricted by the laws of caste which control all other Hindus. My friend, his disciple, tells me that he is above all caste; hence he is able to cross the ocean and do what is forbidden to all other true believers. He has the authority to release others from the law of caste if he considers it just and expedient to do so.

The Mahatma is never lonely, for he can look into the other worlds. He has what is called "the vision of space." He says that time and distance are not factors in his life. He told me the other night that, although he is stopping in New York, he can see all that is going on in San Francisco. He can see what is going on in the planets; he says that all of them are inhabited and that some of them are places of punishment.

WILLIAM E. CURTIS.

IS EVOLUTION A FACT?

Rev. Thomas B. Gregory Assumes That It Is, in the Chicago Examiner.

The pastor of a Chicago church requests an answer in the columns of the Examiner to the following communication:

Dear Sir: You asserted in one of your articles in the Examiner that evolution had come to be more than a theory of philosophy; it had become a fixed fact in science.

As I have been studying this theory of philosophy for many years, I was greatly interested in what you had to say, and I will be under great obligations to you if you will cite one fact in science which establishes the fact of evolution.

If you will thus accommodate me I shall thank you heartily. I know a great many facts which hint at the theory, but up to the present I have not been able to overtake a single fact which establishes the fact of evolution.

Were the writer of the above letter other than the learned and eloquent pastor, I know I might be tempted to think that his idea of evolution was somewhat cloudy.

Such, certainly, is the case with a great many people.

Of course, the author of the letter knows that evolution is a process, not an agent—the mode or manner according to which things are brought to pass, not the power that brings them to pass.

Broadly speaking, evolution is the theory that from the beginning the movement of things has been an upward one—advancement rather than retrogression; creation, in all of its phases, becoming, with the passing centuries and ages, a finer and still finer affair.

Such, in plain language, is the meaning of the big-word definitions given by Spencer and other evolutionists.

When I say, then, that evolution has become a fact, I simply mean that the one-time theory is now a scientific demonstration.

Science—that is to say, the unquestionable knowledge which we have gained of nature's operations—proves that the order of the day, on all sides, has ever been a progressive one, the superior ever succeeding the inferior, the latest ever being the finest.

This fact, it seems to me, no intelligent person can for a moment think of doubting.

In every department of scientific thought the fact looms up large and distinct, and the scientific student can no more miss seeing it than the traveler to the Pyramids can miss seeing the stupendous piles of masonry towering above him.

But this does not mean that evolution is all—that God is eliminated, and that matter and forces are all that are to be considered.

As already intimated, evolution is simply the statement of the method of nature. The method may be the expression of the operation of matter and its forces, to the exclusion of any directing mind, or it may be the expression of such operation plus the directing mind.

If evolution is "continuous, progressive change, according to certain laws, and by means of resident forces," may it not turn out to be possible that among the "resident" forces is to be found the Supreme Mind, of whose will and intelligence the "laws" and the "progressive changes" are merely the reflection?

Season For 1907 Opens June 15.

MAPLEWOOD HOTEL

Spiritualist Assembly Grounds,

Lily Dale, New York.

From June 15, 1907 to July 12, rates will be, for room and board, $5 per week.

Regular Assembly Season begins on July 12. Transient rates will then be from $1.50 to $2 per day.

Season rates for families and parties, special rates.

M. R. ROUSE Proprietor.

MENTAL MUSCLE.

An Important Subject Considered.

We may not see our way quite clearly in the complex life of every day. We feel lost in the whirl of interests that meet us in our special line of action, surrender is impossible. Decision of some kind is insistent, and in the battle of opposing forces we must take our place, on one or the other side, maintaining that place with what power we may command.

In the midst of these perplexities word comes to us that there is a way out—easy, and without the strain of our own mentality.

It is declared that in our case, as well as in others, the citizens of the world unseen may be pressed into service, whilst all that we need do is to stand by as an observer or on-looker.

This statement is alluring. It is such a relief. It absolves us from effort.

We hasten to avail ourselves of this supernatural help, and rest content with the result.

Certainly it must be true. Have not the "spirits" so declared? Henceforth our life-work shall be easy. Problems will be solved. Friction will cease to be. Trials will be resolved into harmonies. Music and merry-making shall fill our days, and the years will be but a procession of pleasures.

Alas! for the awaking. Our dreams have become night-mares. We are confronted with disastrous defeat. We rebel, because we have been misled; because our affairs are at "sixes and sevens," and declare that there is no truth in "spirit return," that the statement is a "snare and a delusion."

In our own jungle of ignorance we have wandered, stung by thorns and brambles, and to escape blame ourselves, have visited the woes of our failure upon unseen agencies.

Let us stop just here, Let us be logical. Let us analyze the situation.

It is assumed that communion between the seen and unseen worlds has been established as a proven fact. Very well. It is also affirmed that those who "pass on," enter the unseen life at a point of progress attained while on earth. Granted. How many successful financiers may be numbered among the hosts who leave this earth?

How many whose advice concerning the varied pursuits of this world can be accepted as indisputably safe, and these questions may be continued indefinitely. Furthermore, before we expect exactness of answer, we may remind ourselves of our ignorance concerning the relations and conditions necessary to communion, and by so doing, face the fact of our own incompetence to judge.

Above all this there is a point of stupendous importance to us, in the "unreliable phase," as we are wont to call it.

We are saved from being shirks. We are forced back into the path of life's law. We are rescued from laziness and compelled by the iron hand of necessity to work, to think, to create, to plan, and to carve out from materials at hand our own destiny.

If we explore the undiscovered territory of our being, if we cultivate its soil, if through earnest effort we open the inner life to the warmth and sunlight of spiritual perception, we may attain to that knowledge of harmony by which we can regulate the smaller details of our daily lives in accordance with the natural growth and progress of the soul.

Let us be thankful that we are saved from the fate of the parasite, and are able through the exercise of personal power to take our own proper place in God's universe as a conscious, self-reliant personality.

Chicago. ELLA DARE.

MORRIS PRATT INSTITUTE

Whitewater, Wisconsin.

A School under the auspices of Spiritualism. Thoroughly qualified teachers. Prepares for public and private work. A two year's course. It teaches Grammar, Rhetoric, Oratory, History, Logic, Evolution, Psychology, Comparative Religion, Higher Criticism, Lessons in Psychic Development, etc., Practice in Public Speaking and in Composition work.

Admittance to all over fifteen. No examination. Club boarding in building. Tuition Fifty Dollars per year. The most beautiful building in the city. Steam heat throughout. School opens Thursday, September 19, 1907. Closes middle of May, 1908. Write for catalogue to A. J. WEAVER, Principal, Whitewater, Wis.

DR. GEO. B. WARNE, Pres.,
CORA L. V. RICHMOND, Sec.
LODEMA S. WEAVER, Matron.
and Assistant Secretary.

MODERN ARCHITECTURE

PRACTICAL BUNGALOWS AND COTTAGES FOR TOWN AND COUNTRY

This book contains perspective wash drawings and floor plans of one hundred and twenty-five choice homes, ranging in price from $500 to $2,000, and is invaluable to the home builder, furnishing many new and up-to-date ideas and suggestions in modern architecture. Every plan advertised is made by a licensed architect and been built from to the entire satisfaction of the builder and within the estimated cost invariably. Blue prints are furnished at moderate cost, ranging from $5.00 to $10.00 according to the cost of erection, consisting of floor, roof and foundation plans, front, side and rear elevations; with complete typewritten specifications. Arranged and edited by Fred. T. Hodgson. 12mo. Cloth, 250 pages, 300 illustrations. Price, $1.

THE PATHWAY OF THE HUMAN SPIRIT.

Or, the Pathway of the Spirit Traced.

By J. M. Peebles, M. D., M. A.

Did it pre-exist and does it reincarnate again into mortal life? When did it enter the body? What is its form—how does it relate to the soul body? Can it leave the human body and return again? Can it live in and control another mortal body? These questions and many others are asked and answered by the Doctor in this, his latest book, of two hundred pages. Price 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter.

"The Light of Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.

"Spiritual Fire Crackers, Bible Chestnuts and Political Pin Points." By J. S. Harrington. A pamphlet containing 70 pages of racy reading. Price 25 cts.

LIST OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Send in Your dates and Names of Secretaries at Once.

Interest in the various Spiritualist camp-meetings has commenced, and secretaries of the same should report at once to this office, so that proper announcement as to dates and officers can be made.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Semi-Tropic Spiritualist Association desires to correspond with speakers and mediums for engagements at Camp-meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, from August 15th to September 15th, 1907.

GEO. E. LYON, Sec'y.
1974½ E. First St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Onset Camp.

Onset camp commences its thirty-first annual meeting, July 21, and closes August 25. For full programs address the Secretary, Onset, Mass.

New Era Camp, Oregon.

The New Era Camp-meeting begins July 6 and ends July 29. For full programs, address Geo. H. Lazelle, president, Oregon City, or F. F. Dunton, secretary, Liberal.

Forest Home Camp, Mich.

This camp opens Aug. 4 and closes August 25. Any person desiring programs of information regarding camp-grounds or camp work, will please write to the secretary, who will answer all inquiries. Mrs. Millie Mitchell, president; Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich.

Chesterfield Camp.

Begins July 25 and ends September 1. Mrs. Flora H. Millspaugh, secretary, Chesterfield, Ind. Send to her for full programmes.

Winfield (Kansas) Camp.

The Winfield Camp Association will hold its fourteenth annual camp-meeting commencing June 30, and closing July 14. Mrs. A. McAlister president, North Manning street, Winfield, Kan.; Mrs. M. C. Sailing, secretary, 1602 South Church street, Winfield, Kan.

Lily Dale Assembly.

The season opens at Lily Dale N. Y., July 13, and closes September 3. For program address Laura G. Fixen, Secretary, 1047 Carmen ave., Chicago, Ill.

Sunapee Lake Camp, N. H.

SunapeeLake Spiritualist Camp at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., commences August 4, and closes September 1. For programs and information, write to John W. Clay, Sutton, N. H.

Camp Progress.

Meetings are held at Mowerland Park, Upper Swampscott, Mass., every Sunday, beginning June 3, and closing September 30. B. H. Blaney, president, 150 Elm street, Marblehead; Mr. H. S. Gardiner, secretary, 28, Cabot street, Salem.

Edgewood Camp, Wash.

Commences July 29, and ends Aug. 19. For full particulars address Geo. E. Knowlden, 955½ Tacoma avenue, Tacoma, Wash.

Delphos (Kansas) Camp.

Opens August 9, closing on the 25th. Address all communications to T. D. Rice, Secretary, Delphos, Kan.

Island Lake Camp.

Island Lake Camp, Island Lake, Mich., opens July 14, extending until August 30. For programs or information write to the secretary, N. G. Swarthout, Fowlerville, Mich. At Brighton after July 1st.

Lake Brady, Ohio.

The sixteenth annual session of this camp will commence June 30, and end September 1. For full particulars address A. G. Keck, Akron, Ohio.

Unity Camp, Mass.

Opens on Suday, June 4, and continues every Sunday until the last of September.

Harmony Grove Camp

Harmony Grove Camp-meeting Association will hold its annual camp, July 22 to August 5. This camp is located three and one-half miles from Escondido, Cal. For further particulars in regard to the camp, address T. J. McFeron, secretary, 528 Fir st., San Diego, Cal.

Niantic Camp, Conn.

TheConnecticut Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, at Niantic Camp Ground, Niantic. Ct.; season of 1807, commences June 12, and continues until September 11. For full particulars address George Hatch, South Windham, Ct.

Haslett Park, Mich.

Thetwenty-fifth annual assembly of Spiritualists at Haslett Park, Mich., commences August 6, and continues to September 3. For programs address E. F. Spross, Okemos, or D. R. Jessop, Williamston.

Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

The twentyfifth annual camp-meeting at Mt. Pleasant Park, opens July 28 and closes August 25. Programs and information given to all who write to Mrs. M. B. Anderson, secretary, Clarkesville, Mo.

Ocean Grove Camp.

The camp is located at Harwichport, Mass., and opens July 7, and closes July 21, 1907. For programs and information, write Mrs. Mary B. Small, South Harwich, Mass.

Grand Ledge Camp, Mich.

The Grand Ledge Spiritualist Camp-Meeting opens July 21, and closes August 18, with Mr. Oscar Edgerly as presiding chairman. For full particulars address J. W. Ewing, Grand Ledge, Mich.

Summerland Camp, Cal.

The Summerland Spiritualist Association will hold its annual camp-meeting the last week in June, beginning June 23 and closing June 30. Solon Smith Secretary, Summerland, Cal.

Wonewoc Camp-Meeting.

The Western Wisconsin Camp Association holds its annual camp-meeting in Unity Park, Wonewoc, Wis., July 14 to August 11. For particulars and programs write Gertrude Spooner, secretary, Wonewoc, Wis.

Ottawa Camp.

Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, Forest Park, Ottawa, Kansas, August 16 to 26 inclusive. Write for programs. H. W. Henderson, president; Lawrence, Kansas; Mrs. May Cook-Pearson, secretary, Spring Hill, Kansas.

Vicksburg Camp.

Vicksburg Camp, Mich., opens July 28 and closes August 18. For full particulars address Mrs. Jeanette Fraser, Vicksburg, Mich.

Parkland Camp, Pa.

Parkland Heights Spiritualists' Home and Camp-meeting Association will open its camp on Sunday, July 7, and continue every Sunday until the last of August. Elizabeth M. Fish., Secretary, Floral Heights, Parkland, Eden, Pa.

Harmony Grove Camp, Cal.

Harmony Grove Spiritualist Camp at Escondido, will open August 11, and close August 25. For full particulars address T. J. McFeron, 528 Fir, San Diego, Cal.

Mantua Camp, Ohio.

This camp, located at Mantua Station, Ohio, will open July 9, and continue to August 27. For further particulars, address F. H. Sherwood, secretary, Mantua Station, Ohio.

Queen City Park Camp, Vt.

QueenCity Park Camp, South Burlington, Vt., commences July 29, and ends September 3. For programs address A. F. Hubbard, president, Tyson; S. N. Gould, vice-president, Randolph, or Effie L. Chapman, Cambridge, Vt. After the camp opens address each of the above at Queen City Park, Vt.

Verona Park Camp.

The Verona Park Camp-meeting, Me., will open August 25, and close September 1. A. F. Smith, president, Bangor, Me.; F. W. Smith, secretary, Rockland, Me.

Lake Pleasant, Mass.

This camp will open Sunday, July 28, and continue for 30 days. For Programs address Albert P. Blinn, 17 Oak street, Norwich, Conn.

(Advertisement.)

MONEY FOR YOU! READ!

Dear Friends:—Which one of the readers of this paper want to easily but honestly make a nice sum of money in a short time? I can secure 320 acres of very valuable timber land for low price, if taken soon. I will give deed of half the land and half the timber to whoever will furnish the money to secure it. It is a chance of a lifetime, and immense profits. Best of timber and sure thing. No possible failure. Ready market, with high prices. Timber stands thick as can be, oak and hard pine. Address for full particulars with ready envelope for reply. Proofs and references for investigation. A safe and sure investment. Who will be my partner? C. M. BROWN, Alexander place, Clinton, Ark.

A NEW BOOK.

Science and Religion.

By Benjamin F. Loomis, 397 Pages, $1.50, Cloth.

Showing the harmony of the Sciences and their relation to Religion, or the relation of Man to the Universe.

The Macrocosm and the Microcosm.

Showing the harmony between Phrenology and Astrology, or the Influence of the Planets on the Human Mind; and containing the Horoscopes of Jesus Christ and of Adam. Progress of the World explained by the principles of

PHRENOLOGY.

A Cosmic View of Christ.

The Rise and "Fall" of Man

Scientifically Considered, and many other things not commonly found in other books. Address

FOWLER & WELLS CO.,

24 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.50.

Prayer; Its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Taber. Price 10 cents.

NOTICE.

"If anyone has a full clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill. and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same."

NOTICE.—If anyone has a full or test clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill., and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same.

Mrs. E. M. Hitchcock will answer 8 questions by yes or no for 25 cents; business questions preferred. Send own hand writing. Full reading, $1.00. Fern Hill, Wash. Send date of birth.

THE ACME COLLEGE

Of Occult Science Company.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Ohio. Antithelst Spiritual College, Acme mediumship developed. No dark seances permitted. They Marvel at our healing. Send stamp for particulars and testimonials. W. S. McCLINE, Pres.: CORA BENTON, Sec., 1714 Adams avenue, Toledo, Ohio.

FRED P. EVANS,

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,

FRED P. EVANS.
2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

TRUMPETS:

Infallible Fibre Trumpets! Better than metal; insulated top and bottom. Tangible with spirit forces. Cardinal Enamel Color. Dark source, T. P., $1.50; light T. P., $2.00. Self-developing Cabinet and Physical Battery Combinat on Cabinet. Special revised book governing every phase of development. A to Z Trumpet and Cabinet work in full. Book postpaid, 17 cents. Write for Circular.

SAM. NEWTON, 422 Dorr St., Toledo, O

PHOTOGRAPHS . . . . . of Your Spirit Friends,

can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.

FRANK N. FOSTER.
Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Hary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles. I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the Head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.

FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. P. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

230 North Sixth St.
San Jose, Cal

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit climes of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00.

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

OUR CHILDREN.

Hints From Practical Experience for Parents and Teachers.—By Paul Carus.

In this little book "Our Children," Paul Carus offers a unique contribution to pedagogical literature. Without any theoretical pretensions it is a strong defense for the rights of the child, dealing with the responsibilities of parenthood, and with the first inculcation of fundamental ethics in the child mind and the true principles of correction and guidance. Each detail is forcefully illustrated by informal incidents from the author's experience with his own children, and his suggestions will prove of the greatest possible value to young mothers and kindergartners. Hints as to the first acquaintance with all branches of knowledge are touched upon—mathematics, natural sciences, foreign languages, etc.—and practical wisdom in regard to the treatment of money, hygiene and similar problems. 207 Pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

FATE MASTERED

And Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville.

A dainty book of 52 pages, bound in heavy white cover with cat-tail decoration.

Contents: Fate Mastered. Interior Force, Its Practical Evolution. Thought as a Shield. The Human Aura. For sale at this office. Price, 30 cents.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., JUNE 15, 1907 NO. 916

FROM THE N. S. A. HOME OFFICE.

Progress of the T. J. Mayer Endowment Fund, and Other Important Matters.

In a recent issue of your valuable journal you published our article on "What the N. S. A. Has Done." While the things accomplished by the National Association have been many when we consider that this organization has been established but fourteen years, yet they are but few compared to the manifold works that could be done by a centralized body like this if it had at its command an endowment fund of one hundred thousand (or more) dollars. As President Barrett has truly said, such a fund could be secured without injury, or even of inconvenience to any one, if each Spiritualist who could spare the sum of one dollar would send it to this office; and those who could not easily offer a dollar might send their mite in quarters, dimes, or pennies, to help swell the fund, for all contributions, however small, are welcome. The desire to gain such a means of carrying on the work of this association is laudable on the part of its present trustees; nor is this a personal or selfish aim, since it is not likely that these present incumbents will long remain in office, and to leave in the care of their successors a goodly amount for the perpetuation of the work of Spiritualism cannot but be commended by all right-minded people.

Our president suggested calling this the Theodore J. Mayer Endowment Fund, as a fitting testimonial to the life and benefactions of that good man who has joined the great army of soul-workers in the higher life. No more worthy monument could be raised to his name and memory, and none that he would more prefer to see. Some of our eloquent speakers and writers have said in their eulogies of Mr. Mayer since he passed on, that he will be better able to work for the cause of humanity from his spirit heights, and for his beloved Spiritualism, than he was when hampered by a physical body. This may be true, but we think that he will depend on the true Spiritualists of the land; on all who admired his work and desire to see it flourish; on all who wish to emulate his example in doing good, sending their contributions to the Mayer fund, that he may see that in his death he has wrought still more grandly for the cause in a practical sense, for the carrying on of the National work by drawing contributions to this fund in his name.

Since the first eloquent appeals of President Barrett for such a fund, supplemented by pleadings from this office, we have received up to the present time contributions amounting to the sum of one hundred and fifteen dollars and fifty cents. One friend in Geneva, N. Y., gave of this amount twenty-five dollars; four have each given five dollars; one, two dollars and a half; three dollars have been made up in dimes from endless chain letters started in Maine; two have contributed each fifty cents; the remainder has been in one-dollar contributions. While it is the aim to make this fund a popular-subscription one of one-dollar contributions, larger sums are welcomed and smaller ones are very gladly received. Will not every Spiritualist who reads these lines DO SOMETHING for this fund? Send a contribution to this Mayer fund—pennies, dimes, or dollars, are acceptable. The money is needed that a perpetual fund may exist for the blessing of mankind.

Mr. Thomas Welsh of Beaver Falls, Pa., was the first to start this fund, with a contribution from himself and wife; since then he has sent others, and has induced many friends to contribute. He and we believe that if some person would become interested enough in each town and city to solicit contributions to this fund, much might be collected for the object named.

Rev. Frank T. Ripley sent his donation hoping to be the first, and he was second to Mr. and Mrs. Welsh. Mr. Ripley has since then sent several penny-collections to the Mediums' Relief fund—a well appreciated work. If every medium and spiritual worker would send a dollar, or do something for either the Mediums' Relief or the Endowment fund, what a splendid treasury we should have. If the officers of each Spiritualists' Society, or some prominent Spiritualist in each town, would only give time to making collections for this fund in their respective places, we should have money enough to do all the noble work for which the N. S. A. was organized.

Mediums' Relief, and Other Funds.

Of course we have other funds that must not be depleted; that of the Mediums' Relief or Pension Fund is an important one. Some of the good friends prefer to remember that rather than any other branch of our work, and some divide their contributions between that and the Mayer Endowment fund. One valued contributor to the latter was the brother of T. J. Mayer. He resides near Cleveland, and his interest in our work is highly appreciated.

Our General Fund also calls for attention on the part of our societies and friends. The First Church of Allegheny, Pa., has been taking up a monthly collection for this fund and has been of great help. Rev. H. C. Dorn of Newark, N. J., has been working early and late to aid the N. S. A. and has done it well. Our hearts and hands are encouraged by all such helps, and we feel that the Cause is making its way through the energy and zeal of just such good workers as these in the various departments of Spiritualistic labor.

The Spiritual Press.

It may be well to mention here that in addition to the weekly visits to our library of the Spiritual publications of this country, sent by the generosity of the editors and managers of those valued papers, we are now to have copies of the English journals "The Two Worlds" and "Light," the managers of those two publications having generously 'responded to our plea and placed the N. S. A. on their free list. This is liberality itself, and a boon to this organization, for our files will be enriched thereby and future generations will see the records of both English and American Spiritual journalism by the files of the N. S. A.

Convention.

It has been before announced that the next annual convention of the N. S. A. will be held in this city, October 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. Full particulars will be given in due time. There will be no public reception this year. Convention will open Monday forenoon and last five days. Each evening will be a public meeting for music, song, lectures and messages. A grand galaxy of prominent workers will participate in these exercises.

Railroad rates will be governed by the Certificate plan this year, but will favor our people even more by their purchasing excursion tickets for the Jamestown Exposition, at Norfolk, with stop-over privileges at Washington. These will give ample time for attendance at our convention and to see all the sights of this city, including the magnificent buildings of the United States Government.

Communications, contributions, etc., to the N. S. A. may be sent to MARY T. LONGLEY, Secretary.

600 Pennsylvania Ave.,
Washington, D. C.

The glory of science is that it is freeing the soul, breaking the mental manacles, getting the brain out of bondage, giving courage to thought—filling the world with mercy, justice and joy.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

People may outgrow natural ignorance, but ignorance carefully cultivated, polished, propagated, and called divine truth, can rarely be outgrown, because it paralyzes the power of growth.—Moncure D. Conway.

AN ANGEL ON EARTH.

"Woman is Selfish Who Lives Only For Loved Ones," Says Eva Booth, The Salvation Army Evangelist—Must Help Strangers to Realize the True Glory of Self-Sacrifice—Sphere to Uplift Fallen—Rights of Women are Service and Immolation, Says Salvation Army Commander.

Eva Booth, the fragile yet indomitable leader of the Salvation Army in in America, believes that no woman should live for her own family alone [as set forth in the Chicago Examiner].

"How can a woman look into her own children's eyes and know that she has done nothing to relieve the suffering of other children less fortunate?" she asked a reporter for the Examiner after her wonderful meeting, when, garbed in the rags she wore when she began her slum work in London, she thrilled a vast audience at the Auditorium with a two-hour sermon.

"Service and sacrifice—these should be the watchwords of women," she said. "True, women are continually sacrificing and serving in their own families, but that has a selfishness in it. It is the woman who goes into the home of some less fortunate sister and scrubs her floors and attends to the wants of her sick babies who has the true spirit of service and sacrifice.

This the Age of Woman.

"This is the age of woman," went on Miss Booth. "Her wonderful sympathy, her quick intuition, her broad charity, make her particularly fitted for the uplifting of the world.

"Woman's sphere — to help the needy, to lift up the fallen, to cheer the sick and helpless—that is the only sphere she needs. When she has filled that she may look for others.

'Women are among the most valuable workers in our Salvation Army," went on the American commander of the army. "Their tact, their gentleness, their insight into human nature, their appreciation of conditions, make them invaluable in the individual work, and among the more responsible positions, like corps leaders, the women are the very best officers we have.

"There is a wonderful work to be done among women by women," said Miss Booth. "The women of the slums need so much teaching in the simple, decent ways of life. Only women can teach them these steps to a better, cleaner way of living.

Wonderful Slum Settlement.

"The most wonderful effort to help poor women of which I know," said Miss Booth, "is our wonderful slum settlement in New York. You ought to have one like it in Chicago. It is a $70,000 building right in the heart of the worst slum district. The people living around it have no soap or decent water or tubs with which to wash the few clothes they have. They have no sewing machines or clean places in which to manufacture even the tiniest garment. Now, this building will contain a basement equipped in up-to-date private laundry fashion, with tubs and soap and everything needful.

"To this any poor woman can bring her soiled clothing and wash it out in one of the clean tubs, or if, perchance, she can find some woman who wishes to hire her to do a washing, she can bring that there and earn her little pittance. She can starch and iron the clothes in the same room.

"Another floor will be devoted to a sewing room, with all conveniences, so that women may bring their little sewing for themselves or children and do it in pleasant surroundings.

"The women of the army are helpers in this building, teaching the women to do the things they do not know how to do.

"The women of the Salvation Army, for that matter," said their commander lovingly, "have solved the secret of sacrifice and service. Women who wish to make the world better can adopt no better methods than those of the army sisters."

While Eva Booth's so-called religious belief is founded on error, and is false throughout, yet her earthly career is one composed of angelic deeds, hence she is an Angel of Light and Love. It is well to believe correctly from a religious or secular standpoint—that is, to possess the actual truth, but whether believing in that which is ERROR, or that which is TRUTH, the deeds of life only make a person angelic or devilish—an Angel of Light or a fiend of darkness! The belief in Spiritualism does not count with the Lord to any great extent, unless accompanied with good deeds. JUS TICE.

Animal Immortality.

Human Echoes of Spirit Assertion—All Beings Are United in One Universal Scheme. Element, Plant, Animal, Human—All Is Spirit Manifesting Through Material, in Every Degree from Latent Instinct to Illumination.

"For be it known that the spirits of all infants are the evolving spirits of animals who enter their human homes when the spirit holders cease to be vitalized by the mother spirits."—Ruthia.

"Mind is eternal evidence of spirit."—Hiperean.

The belief in the spirit-continuance of animal life has been held in incipient phases since the beginning of the human race.

Dr. E. D. Buckner says in his book on "The Immortality of Animals,"—"The religions of Egypt and Phoenicia, Islamism, Brahmanism, Zoroastrianism, Buddhism, the Greek and Norse Religions, Lao-tseism and Confucianism, Judaism—from which descended Christianity—and in America the religion of the Peruvians and the Aztecs—indeed all the primitive religions of the world, directly or indirectly advocate the immortality of lower animals. In many religions of a more crude form, such as we find among the Indians, they, too, believe that wherever the departed soul of man goes, his faithful horse, dog, wife, and attendants follow."

This doctrine was maintained also by a large majority of ancient philosophers—Plato, Menander, Socrates and others; taking the shape among the Platonists of the transmigration of souls from human beings into animals—a reversed recognition of the embryonic human in the animal. Many of the old Jewish and Christian writers—among them Manasseh, a noted Jewish Rabbi; Philo, in his book of future rewards; and Tertullian, a noted Christian author—advocated the belief that "dumb animals will have a much happier state than they ever enjoyed here."

H. O. Haughton, editor of "The Dawn," asserts that "more than one hundred and seventy English authors—lay and clerical—uphold the immortality of animals and have written in its support, and the belief is gaining ground steadily."

Hundreds of well-known divines, scientists, authors and humanitarians have expressed themselves as believing in the doctrine. Among them are John Lawrence, Agassiz, Dr. Pusey, Lamartine Mrs. Mary Somerville, Rev. J. G. Wood, Ivan Turgunieff, Dr. Adam Clarke, Dr. John Fulton, Bishop Butler, Bishop Jeremy Taylor, George Eliot, Orlando Smith, De La Camp, Canon Carter, Canon Wilberforce and Lord Coleridge.

The well-known Anti-Vivisection leader, the late Miss Frances Power Cobbe, has given with conciseness and deep feeling the general theological argument for the doctrine of animal immortality. "I will venture to say plainly that, so far as appears to me, there is no possible solution of this heart-wearing question save the bold assumption that the existence of animals does not end with death. It is absolutely necessary to postulate a future life for the tortured dog or cat or horse or monkey, if we would escape the unbearable conclusion that a sentient creature, unoffending, nay, incapable of giving offence, has been given by the Creator an existence which, on the whole, has been a curse. That conclusion would be blasphemy. Rejecting it with all the energy of our souls, we find ourselves logically driven to assume the future life of lower animals."

John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, betrayed his mediumistic and telepathic susceptibility, and his prophetic perception of one of the great truths of spiritual evolution—that the souls of animals are human souls in a lower phase of development, when he wrote, "What if it should then please the All-Wise and All-Gracious Creator to raise the creatures which we now call inferior animals, to a higher grade in the scale of creation? What if it should please Him, in the great regeneration, when He makes us 'equal to the angels,' to make them what we are now?"

To-day, interest in the rights and immortality of animals is to be found on every side.

Professor George H. Howison, head of the department of philosophy, University of California, declares that "wherever mind is found, the immutable, unchanging mind, the mind which is not the result of processes but is part of that mind which is absolutely unchanging, and so makes man responsible legally — wherever that mind is found in man or beast, there is immortality. To this mind death is merely an experience, and like all other experiences, serves simply to remove hindrances to the intellectual faculty. Man is the mental superior of the animal because a great number of these hindrances to intellection have been removed. This removal of hindrances constitutes evolution."

Mrs. Lucy A. Mallory, in the "Universal Republic," says, "There will be no lack of proof in the coming time that animals are but embryo human beings."

Walter De Voe writes in "New Thought," "I believe in evolution—in a progressive order of life and forms that enter into all conceivable states of existence, earthly or celestial. The organized intelligence of an animal and the organized intelligence of a man are different in degree only. They both belong to the realm of transient mind-forms, but there is enough life incorporated in the memory of both to carry them along in progressive development in the spiritual realms until they realize that degree of soul power which is derived from Divinity, the only source of immortal being."

"Have animals souls? There is no man in the United States better qualified to express an opinion on this absorbing subject than George Conklin, the famous animal expert. 'Many a time,' he declares, 'I have caught myself looking into a tiger's eyes and wondering whose soul was imprisoned in that sinuous body, and struggling for expression. All animals have a distinctly human side; but there is a striking difference in the mentality of animals of the same species, just as there is among men of the same race.'"—From Chicago Inter Ocean.

Ernes Harold Baynes, the naturalist, writes as follows: "During my brief visit to the New York Zoological Park I saw nothing more majestic than the great lion 'Sultan,' which, when I entered, was lying with his massive head resting easily on his great forepaws. * * Then he arose and began to pace his den in silence and with a dignity not to be described. * * He saw us all, in that surging crowd, but he looked at no one, and as I tried to study the whole picture with an unprejudiced eye, I was forced to admit that our dignity compared with his was small indeed. And as I watched the mighty free-born thing, pacing out his life 'for the glory of man,' I asked myself what phrase might best describe him. I must have put the question aloud, for someone said in my ear, 'a soul in prison,' and turning I met the earnest face of Miss Laut, the novelist."

Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox says of two of her beautiful cats, "Cleo died of a broken heart during my absence in the West Indies. * * Sammy lies buried in 'Bungalo Court, with a rose bush by his dear head. * * So much affection, intelligence and love cannot become extinct. The life principle must continue on in some form. Sammy and Cleo must reappear again in some phase of life."

J. Howard Moore states in his "Universal Kinship," "Of one thing I am positive, and that is that there are the same grounds precisely for believing in the immortality of the bird and the quadruped as there are for belief in human immortality. And it is delightful to find great thinkers like Haeckel, great biologists and philosophers, holding the same conviction."

"Any unprejudiced observer who will study the psychic phenomena of a fine dog for a year, and follow distinctly the processes of his thought, judgment and reason, will have to admit that it has just as valid a claim to immortality as man himself."—From Ernest Haeckel's "Riddle of the Universe."

W. L. Alden, London correspondent, wrote the following to the New York Times just before the publication of Maeterlinck's book on the dog: "Maeterlinck is about to publish here his new book, 'Our Friend, the Dog,' and we may be very sure that in it he will fully recognize the existence of the canine soul. If a man really wants to be intimate enough with a dog or cat to understand its mental point of view, he must recognize that the animal has a soul. In Maeterlinck's last book he showed an intimacy with animals of which very few men can boast. Mr. Haggard will do well to cultivate Maeterlinck's acquaintance and sit at his feet as a humble student of animal souls. He would very soon wonder how he could ever have had the least doubt as to the existence of a dog's soul. It may not be precisely like the human soul. Indeed, as a rule, it is a much better soul. But it certainly exists, and deserves to be treated with respect."

Concerning the remarkable dream of Rider Haggard, apprising him of the death of his dog, he relates: "The dog, Bob, between whom and myself there existed a mutual attachment, either at the moment of his death—if his existence can conceivably have been prolonged till after one in the morning, or as seems more probable, about three hours after the event, did succeed in calling my attention to its actual or recent plight by placing whatever portion of my being is capable of receiving such impulses when enchained by sleep, into its own terrible position. * * By some subtle means of communication whereof I have no knowledge, it spoke to me, telling me that it was dying. * * I recognized further, that if its dissolution took place at the moment when I dreamt, this communication must have been a form of that telepathy which is now very generally acknowledged to occur between human beings from time to time and under special circumstances, but which I have never heard of as occurring between a human being and one of the lower animals. If, on the other hand, that dissolution happened, as I believe, over three hours previously—what am I to say? Then it would seem that it must have been some non-bodily but surviving part of the life of the spirit of the dog, which, as soon as my sleep gave it an opportunity, reproduced those things in my mind, as they had already occurred; I presume, to advise me of the manner of its end or to bid me farewell."

Ernest Crosby says: "Nero, old dog, I see myself looking out of your big eyes. * * You are a neighbor and brother, and how do I know that you are not human and a man? I am persuaded that you have a future, too."

H. S. Salt states in "Animals' Rights:" "The idea of Humanity is no longer confined to man; it is beginning to extend itself to the lower animals, as in the past it has been gradually extended to savages and slaves. 'Behold the animals. There is no one but the human soul lurks within it, fulfilling its destiny as surely as within you.' So writes Edward Carpenter, the author of 'Towards Democracy;' and what has long been felt by the poet is now being scientifically corroborated by the anthropologist and philosopher."

Dr. E. D. Buckner writes: "Within the last half century, wild as well as domestic animals have been taught to do many wonderful things hitherto considered impossible. It has been stated by the best authority that lower animals, as well as man, are making great advancement in intellectual development." Many believe that the psychic wave of perception now sweeping through the human race includes animals, although this is not usually brought to the attention of mankind except in cases of animal genius, as, for instance, the two mind-reading Bozzies, the wonderful collies owned by George B. Clason of Chicago.

"Peter Rabbit," in Harper's Magazine, has brought forward an excellent array of arguments for "Animal Immortality."

Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell asks in "Health:" "With our imperfect finite knowledge, what right have we to deny the possibility of immortality to animals, many of whom would put to shame what the world calls reputable men, by their love and devotion? It is a belief that has existed from remote ages, and like many another ancient belief, is now re-asserting itself. * * We can see no valid reason for refusing to concede the privilege of immortality to animals. * * We trust the day may soon come when this belief will be universal."

Ernest Bell has published a pamphlet entitled "Why Do Animals Exist?" "The question," says Mr. Bell, "is not merely an academic one. On the view accepted by the community depends the welfare and happiness of countless sentient creatures, and also, to a considerable extent, the progress of the human race.' ' In his summing up Mr. Bell says: "We think we have shown—(1) That there is overwhelming evidence that animals were not made for the use and purposes of man, but for purposes of their own which we may not be able to fathom. (2) That in mind, no less than in body, they are nearly related to us in what concerns this life, and that there is no evidence at all that they do not have a continued existence in other spheres. (3) That we can in no way evade the conclusion that the same rule of conduct should apply to them as well as to human beings, in so far as the development of their faculties makes it applicable."

"A Book of Mortals," with a subtitle, "Being a record of the good deeds and good qualities of what humanity is pleased to call the lower animals," is a volume that can afford real satisfaction to those who have a sympathy for, and feel kinship with, the sub-human races. The author, F. A. Steele, "sets down no collection of animal stories told to provoke tears or laughter, but a fair and square record of the many benefits which humanity has taken thoughtlessly, thanklessly, from the lower animals."

The book is divided into three parts. Part I, "What Our Fellow Mortals Are," treats of reason and instinct, character and conduct, and shows how many of the virtues and vices of man are found in the domestic and wild animals. Part II, "What Animals Have Done For Man." Part III, "What Our Fellow Mortals Are Doing." Of this portion of the book Mrs. Anna Harris Smith says, in "Our Four-Footed Friends:" "No one can read this section thoughtfully without being awakened to a deeper realization of the overwhelming debt of gratitude we owe to some of these 'fellow mortals' that are treated by so many people as if they were wholly incapable of feeling or suffering, and deeper shame to think what a cruel return is given them for their service and their devotion to man."

Within the recollection of present residents of Hartford, Hon. Francis Gillette lectured in this city on "The Immortality of Animals."

George T. Angell says in "Our Dumb Animals:" "Many years ago a man left by will to Mr. Bergh's New York Society about a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Relatives contested the will on the ground that he was insane because he believed in a future life for animals. The judge, in sustaining the will, said he 'found that more than half the human race believed the same thing.' "

"Are dumb animals immortal?" asked a young theologue of one of the oldest and most renowned professors in a prominent theological seminary in New England, who replied: "Are dumb animals immortal? Young man, I don't know; but if you have one of God's dumb creatures dependent upon you for food and care. I advise you to so treat it in this world that you will not be ashamed to look it in the face if you chance to meet it in the next."—Sarah Nelson Carter.

Vivisectors and all the cruel ones of earth will wish, in The Time to Come, that they had heeded this advice, for murder does not kill, and death is no barrier to the working of Justice—which is an integral part of Love. ELLEN SNOW.

Hon. Correspondent of the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection.

Hon. Vice-President of the International Ethical Educational Society.

99 Washington St., Hartford, Conn., January, 1907.

The Departure of Mr. James D. Palmer to the Higher Life.

Poet and moralist from the dawn of the literary age have meditated and sung of the sad brevity of human life.

The old and the young have seen in the career of man a study, a tragedy and a psalm.

Death is a common heritage—a universal destiny awaiting every living thing on earth, yet inevitable, so common, just as common as birth. We are never rationally ready to give up the precious heritage of life, be our state or condition ever so humble or ever so hard.

There is always a solemn thought connected with life. The joy of consciousness and the innate love of life carries with it that love of association, persons and objects that form so great a charm to the setting and framing of the experiences of life.

The pain of human frailty and mortality comes forcibly to me in the death of Mr. J. D. Palmer of Willoughby, Ohio—an old friend whom I met in the early days of my life in American Spiritualism, at whose home I have lived, at whose table I have eaten, whose friendship has continued until we met again, and I find him a familiar personality at Lake Helen camp, Florida. There he and his faithful wife made me welcome at their beautiful home amid the scent of roses and orange blossoms.

Pictures like these live in memory, and will so live for eternity in the Karma of our lives.

Mr. Palmer was a man of strong personality, generous instincts and directness of mental action, conscious of power. He was strong in his affections, with a mind of clear sight and decision. He had been a Spiritualist for a great number of years, and a faithful friend of Lake Helen from its start. Every year has seen him there with his faithful wife. He has lived to see the camp grow and stand erect on its feet as an institution that will live in the coming years. His name will be entwined with others in the work of its upbuilding.

Not one person familiar with Lake Helen but what will drop a tear at the great loss we all have sustained in his going hence.

Mr. Palmer was born in 1834 at North Adams, N. Y. He was a direct descendent of Walter Palmer, the founder of Stonington, Conn., in 1653. He was a courageous man. He served through the war of the Rebellion under Col. Gibson of the 49th Ohio Volunteers.

The dark days of the national conflict he passed fighting—not as a mere soldier, but as a lover of his country, its integrity, and the full establishment of human freedom under its flag.

He was married to Miss L. Sophronia Sperry, and leaves one daughter, Mrs. C. F. Singer, and two grandchildren, Mrs. Sidney Kent Singer of Boston, and the Princess Jean Ghika of Paris, France.

The funeral services were conducted by Mrs. Carrie Twing, a lifelong friend and a great helper at Lake Helen, whose home is at Westfield, N. Y.

Her eloquent words portrayed the grief of the friends and the real fact of continued existence to those assembled.

The music was provided by the Smith-Pratt quartette of Painsville, Pa.

The body was buried in the local cemetery. Mrs. Palmer remains with us, and may she realize that satisfaction to the fullest of the great natural truth that life is continuous, and that again we shall meet one another face to face in a finer and grander world, where death and sad separation cannot enter.

J. CLEGG WRIGHT.

Amelia, Ohio.

FRATERNAL ORDER OF SPIRITUALISTS,

The First Society Closes a Very Successful Season.

On Sunday, May 26th, the First Society F. O. O. S. held their last meeting for the winter session, which was very well attended, and most everyone seemed to regret that it was our last meeting, until October 6th. We are very pleased to state to all those interested in our work that our four months of labor more than paid us for all that we have went through. It not only has been a spiritual blessing but an educational blessing and a financial success. Some one may ask the question: How has it been an educational blessing?

I would answer in this way: In the first place, the society was organized to try to give a higher Spiritualism, and I think those who have attended our meeting and have read The Progressive Thinker every week will have seen that we have been honored with such noted speakers as the following, on our rostrum: The tried and true, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond; President Harrison D. Barrett, Rev. Thos. Grimshaw, Dr. Geo. B. Warne, and others who have been fully appreciated for their soul-stirring addresses, and we are making arrangements now for our speakers for our Fall opening, and are living with the brightest hopes that this society will bring before the Spiritualistic public some of the finest talent ever known in the ranks of true and higher Spiritualism. This has been promised us by the spirit forces. I want to thank you, Bro. J. R. Francis, as being the means of getting our news spread broadcast throughout the length and breadth of the land, and also to thank Bro. Dr. T. Wilkins for that soul-inspiring poem which he wrote for us, entitled "Fraternity." It is a life's lesson in itself.

From January 13, 1907, to May 26, inclusive, we have taken in the sum of $721.13, and paid out for talent the sum of $197.50. We feel very much gratified to know that those who have lectured for this society have been fully satisfied with the way they have been compensated for their labors. It was a soul's joy to me when I handed Bro. Harrison D. Barrett his check to see the expression which came over the brother's countenance. I know he felt that this society truly believed that the laborer is worthy of his—or her—hire.

In closing I would like to offer a few words of thanks to all the mediums who have come forward and been the means of our society being able to give to the hungry souls of so many hundreds of friends who came purposely to try to receive a spirit message from their loved ones on the spirit side of life. Each and every medium gave both time and talent, and inconvenienced themselves many times so that our society might be a success. If our mediums were to forsake us we know we would have a hard time to hold together. My prayer and heart's desire is that God and the spirit friends will bless and strengthen them more and more every day of their lives, and when they pass over to the other side, that the loved ones will be waiting for them and will greet them with those kind words, Well done, thou good and faithful one, enter thou into the joy which passeth all understanding, for time and eternity. Amen.

I think the members of the First Society F. O. O. S. can pride themselves on having as fine a band of platform mediums as any society throughout the world, and as congenial, one toward the other, as one could wish to be. Let everybody watch the columns of The Progressive Thinker for the notices of our opening in the Fall. The spirit friends have told us they have a bountiful feast of good things in store for us. All are welcome to be partakers of these spiritual blessings. Again thanking you, Brother Francis, for your many favors bestowed upon us, I remain yours truly,

CHAS. A. THOMPSON.
Treasurer First Society F. O. O. S.

Our Spirit Children.

O children of our life and love,
Pour blessings on our souls once sad;
Teach us of home and life above,
And make our earth-worn spirits glad.

We long had waited—yes, so long,
For one pure gleam of spirit light;
One word, one sight, one ray, one song,
To teach of heaven and guide aright.

Sweet as a flower from the spirit land;
Holy as songs we all revere;
Tranquil as souls that understand
The truth, dear children, you are here.

Children of home, no more depart;
Keep in the way and lead us right;
Your presence lifts the fainting heart,
And evermore the way is bright.

S. F. TOOLEY.

Waterville, N. Y.

When Love Illuminates.

I loved the moon, the stars, the birds,
And music seemed a thing divine
Before love came to me.

To gather flowers and fern was joy;
To breathe the odor of the woods
Brought exhilaration.

The gorgeous sunset stirred my soul,
And then with twilight's softened glow
Came rest and harmony.

A void there was—a vague desire
For someone to enjoy with me
The beauties of the earth.

Companion? Friend?—Ah, more: soul-mate!
The soul cries dumbly for its own—
Its uncompleted whole.

He came. All things seem newer, grand,
And faith in human kind is born,
For love has glorified.

New London, Conn. E. K. B.

The Morris Pratt Institute.

Interesting and Salient Points of the Secretary's Report, Furnished by the Assistant Secretary, Mrs. L. S. Weaver.

The secretary's report may be of interest to the friends of the school; therefore I will quote some of its salient points.

"Many letters have been received by your Secretary, showing there is a very friendly feeling throughout the country, as well as interest and good fellowship for the work being done here, and adding encouragement by enclosing tangible support. Among letters received is one which impresses one very deeply, and, I think, is worthy of notice, since it proves that generosity is a commodity in the Spiritualist ranks. It was from A. B. Gleason, an old man 81 years of age, living in Corona, Cal. In his youth he was deprived of an education. At nineteen years of age he could not write his own name, although now he writes a very intelligent letter. He is alone in life. He has an income of $400 a year, out of which he pays $260 for board. He said his attention was called to the needs of the school by reading in The Progressive Thinker a list of donations sent to the school, which to him seemed very meager. His interest was so great in a school existing under the auspices of the Spiritualists that he decided to send a check for $40, out of his small income, to swell the amount. This donation was made in January. In April we received a letter from him from which I wish to make a few quotations, since they contain some good sound philosophy that may be well for our consideration.

"Since Mr. Hull's death I have often thought what would become of the school, and I decided to write and ask all the facts concerning it. How many students have you? And what are its prospects in that line? How many professors, and what salaries are they getting? How long will they be liable to stay, and if they leave can any be found to fill their places at present prices or salaries."

I answered his letter, giving him a detailed report of the history of the school since its beginning. I assured him that according to the evolution of nature some of the present faculty could not be retained very many years. But we hoped ere that time arrived our school would be munificently endowed so that professors and teachers could be procured by paying good salaries. I judge my letter was quite satisfactory, for in about ten days I received another letter, from which I beg leave to quote:

"Yours of April 23 came to hand in good time. I was glad to hear matters and things about the institute were as favorable for the final success of the school as you make them. Now, Mrs. Weaver, neither you nor anybody need ever think that a society of any kind is going to build up on ignorance, or by a set of ignorant people, because a thing of that kind would be contrary to the first principles of human intelligence. A thing of that kind never was was done and never can be. Now this being true, we have the Morris Pratt Institute at stake and must think out some better way; and, now, are those who have the job on hand equal to the task? If we, as a religious body, expect to maintain a position equal to other religious bodies, we must have the support of an educated ministry and laity; hence the importance of sustaining our only institution of learning, and I enclose my check for the last $200 I have besides my yearly annuity."

Noble emulator of the spirit of self-sacrifice! If the Spiritualists of America could become imbued with the spirit of this grand old man, what a different answer we could give to so many, who write saying they desire to become students in the school and ask the question: "Is there any work I can do to help pay my expenses?" The answer we would be glad to make is, the Spiritualists of the nation have made it possible whereby all worthy students not able to bear all expenses can draw from an endowment, hence we bid you welcome.

Finance.—It gives much pleasure to report to this association our financial standing at the close of the school year of 1907. Growing out of an inherent prejudice against an accumulating indebtedness, I had earnestly hoped when our good president left us in November for the work of the school, that with the result of his efforts, together with the lessening of expenses, I would have been enabled to report the cancellation of the entire indebtedness, and that this would have been a day of rejoicing over a free institution. But alas for human hopes! Just as our beloved president was entering upon his most lucrative work the summons came, and his visible work on earth was ended. His loss seemed almost irreparable to the school. It had a double significance. We not only lost a staunch friend, but one who was ever ready to do all in his power for its advancement, and who was, in a way, its financial backer. He had collected and sent to the school the sum of $115.58. Later Mrs. Hull sent $36.

Our donations have fallen short several hundred dollars from last year by reason of Mr. Hull's transition, and in that we did not receive any donation from the N. S. A. But notwithstanding this our Spiritualist friends have in nowise forgotten us. We have received substantial aid in money, fruits, vegetables, and household furnishings. Mrs. A. L. Kane, of North Topeka, Kan., sent to us 200 books, freight prepaid, to be sold at 50 cents each, as a contribution to the endowment. Our good Brother Sprague has taken collections as follows: First Spiritualist Church, Washington, D. C., $11; Wheeling, W. Va., $18.15; Royersford, Pa., $5; Meadville, Pa., $7.37; amounting to $56.85. Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker and Mrs. Ringlep sent us through Mrs. Hull $25. H. C. Edwards, Minnesota, sent a check for $50. F. J. Bristol of Oakfield, Wis., has contributed $50 each year since the commencement of the school. Mr. J. C. Huntley of Judsonia, Ark., sent a note for $50, with annual interest, note payable in six years. A. B. Gleason of Corona, Cal., has given us $240.

We have many names on our books of friends who have contributed from one to ten dollars, accompanied by words of loyalty and encouragement for the work being done in the school, all of which we hold in grateful remembrance. We have paid up an old indebtedness of $763, and have paid all our bills for the current year, with exception of between two or three hundred dollars, due mainly on coal bill.

We are hoping that with contributions received through the summer we can open our school in September with the last dollar paid. I have written to many of the camps asking for a session in which to present the needs of the school and take a collection. To these I have received very friendly answers, cheerfully granting the privileges. Mr. Barrett, Mr. Sprague and Dr. Warne have kindly offered to speak in behalf of the school at the several camps they attend. Three of our graduates have offered theeir services gratuitously—Miss Pfenning, Miss Spaulding and Mrs. Abbott.

An interesting feature of our meeting was an hour given to the students to relate in what way the school has been a benefit to them. Each student in turn seemed to speak from the inmost recesses of the heart, giving such unified testimony of the great good received since becoming a student in thee school, that it aroused the Board and faculty to renewed efforts to carry on the work of the school. In the evening meeting of the Wisconsin State Association, Mr. Barrett made the statement that he had felt very pessimistic of late as to where the speakers for the Spiritualist rostrum were to come from to take the places of those fast passing away. "But," he said, "I am now assured they are coming from this Institute. Many are right here now. I have received a new baptism since coming to this Board meeting."

There is one point I am requested by the Principal to speak of and emphasize. It is that every one who intends to be a student in the school be present at the opening, so as to begin his class work with the others. It is almost as difficult and discouraging for one who comes late to catch up with the class, as for one to overtake a train of cars after it has got fairly under way. Each day brings all that an average student is able to do without time or ability to make up for what is lost.

It is proposed by the Board that on the evening of the opening of the school the 19th of September, there shall be a public installation of the officers and faculty, with an invitation for all interested to be present.

L. S. WEAVER,
Assistant Secretary.

To the Friends of Moses and Mattie Hull.

To the Editor:—I wish to call the attention of the friends of Moses and Mattie Hull, in behalf of Mattie. You all know they gave their all to the benefit of the Morris Pratt School, drawing no salary for their work. But an unlooked-for event has come upon Mattie. Moses was called from his work at a time when he was sending everything to the school. This left Mattie poorly prepared to meet his funeral expenses. If they had been keeping out their salaries from their collections, she would not have been embarrassed. She is now tied down to a debt which is much larger than it would have been if tle is not solely her battle, nor was it Moses' battle. It was also yours. He fell on the field while laboring for you and in your cause. He was your servant. Is it right, is it just, then, that Mattie should be at all the expense of his funeral, just because she was his yoke-fellow? It seems to me that we all have a duty in this matter, and that it will be a privilege to all, or the most of us, to contribute our offering, large or small, in memory of him whom we loved, to his faithful companion.

I hope all will feel a duty in this respect. Some cannot contribute much, but every little will count something, and we who have abundance will contribute accordingly. Contributions may be sent to her at Whitewater, Wis.

DANIEL W. HULL.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

Mediumship.

An Earnest Plea for Helpful Encouragement to Mediums of All Phases and Degrees of Development.

In reading the discussion now going on in the public press in regard to mediumship, I am led to ask the question: "What is a medium?"

If I understand Webster correctly, "a medium is one who stands between. In one sense, as related to our case, that definition is correct. But the definition does not go far enough. A medium is something more than a stand-between; rather one possesed of that peculiar unfoldment that brings them more directly in harmony with the soul of things. Perchance not all in harmony with the same plane of life, but one in harmony with this plane of life, another in harmony with that plane of life, until all planes of life—human life at least—are represented by media suited to that plane.

This unfoldment holds its possessor to the prophetic plane of intelligence, and all who are thus unfolded are prophets of the God of Nature—call them by other names if we will.

I think some of our writers and speakers do the calling of mediumship an injustice, in that some phases and degres of mediumship are condemned as being unworthy our notice, when the fact is there is no phase of mediumship, as we understand mediumship to-day, that is not divine in the strictest sense—a gift of God, if you please, but so measured out that those on what we call the lower planes of life may hear the gospel preached as well, in harmony with their understanding, and I am glad that it is so. Spirits in prison must be taught their way out; must be taught in their own language with instructors beginning a little higher than the plane on which the imprisoned spirit stands.

Some of our humble workers—those who are ever ready and willing to stoop, as it were, but really a pleasure, to lift the fallen up or dispel the darkness of ignorance—are branded as fortune tellers, as though the exercise of the power of fortune telling—reading the past and correctly, in many instances, forecasting the future, could in any sense be considered a crime.

Reading our past correctly, and in a good degree, as was subsequently proven, our future by the handling of cards, I know to be a fact. The lady who turned the cards for me was well respected, and refined, yet, according to our critics, she was a fortune teller, and should be passed by. The truth is, in my opinion, she was living honestly up to her highest plane of unfoldment, still seeking more light. Can any one do more? I have known equally as good results from reading the hand, and better results still from "turning a cup" wherein were coffee grounds with just liquid enough to float them, and A. J. Davis speaks of the magic mirror.

Now the cards, the hand, the coffee cup and the magic mirror revealed nothing, but served as objects for the centralization of thought, or a calming of the outer sense, that the inner sense might become more active, thus seeing through the veil, revealing our past almost to a minute, and a fair outline of our future; in fact revealing some important events that in predicted time did come to pass.

Yet away with all these, nor give them further encouragement; or rather, are not all such persons but babes on the plane of prophecy, needing the milk of kindness and bread of instruction to make them grow?

Jesus said: "Suffer litle children to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

Did Jesus mean the little tots in human form? or babes in spiritual unfoldment?

It seems there was a contention in those days on the propriety of giving encouragement to those who in these days are reckoned as of low development. But Jesus came to the rescue: "Let such come unto me" to the higher planes of wisdom and of intelligence, "for of such is the kingdom of Heaven,"—or rather, such had arisen, perhaps, in a low degree, to the plane of Spirituality, and should be reckoned at least as embryo prophets.

It seems that such things, or things similar, as cards, magic mirrors, coffee or divining cups were used in ancient times as a centralizing thought power to commune with the "Lord," or the then reigning gods. David said: "Bring me an ephod, that I may enquire of the Lord." It seems the ephod was a necessary habiliment for such occasions, and also scarlet colored badger skins were given a prominent place there, and the "Urim"—whatever that may be—was sometimes used to gain interior knowledge.

Oftentimes a table is necessary that raps may be produced, and darkness necessary for physical manifestations; sweet music has a soothing influence, and often while one of mediumistic unfoldment is listening thereto, the outer senses become dormant and the inner sehses predominate for the time being, and during this time the medium seems transported to higher planes of spirituality, and reveals many things not yet in the grasp of materiality.

Nice flowers, either wild or tame, often serve as a key to open the door of the inner understanding, and the medium finds himself carried away to fields Elysian; robed in beautiful garments the loved ones appear, and a reunion is held.

But there are times when the spiritually unfolded needs no flowers, no music, no circle of sitters to enable him to walk, or dwell, as the Christian would say, with God. Involuntarily he views the spiritual side of life, and hears the conversation there. His walk on earth among his fellow men is one of calm uprightness, and the aura or magnetic forces of such persons, unconsciously perhaps, advantageously affects others.

"If a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God."

It is charlatans and tricksters we should guard against, and not the humble in spirit, who, perchance, may be struggling yet to reach a higher plane of life, and sadly need the aid we could easily give them.

I am pretty well convinced that it is neglect of these, "our little ones," to a considerable extent at least, that has caused the dearth of our periodicals. Phenomena will awaken more than will philosophy. And while philosophy is not condemned, children must be taught in harmony with their comprehension. The editors of The Spiritual Telegraph, the first spiritual paper published in the world, acted wisely when they gave notice to their patrons: "Send on your facts of spirit intercourse, nor hesitate; we will clothe them in appropriate language." And this direct evidence thrown broadcast to the world had a wondrous awakening effect. But for some cause phenomena were gradually laid in the shade, and grand essays on the philosophy of life filled their place—strong meat for men, but where was the milk for babes?

It was a comparatively easy matter in these days to find subscribers for our Spiritual papers, but in later years when I would loan a copy of a Spiritual paper, hoping to win a regular reader, it was often handed back to me with the remark: "Its reading may all be true enough, but it is too deep for me; we get more comfort through our weekly seances at home than from reading the papers."

WM. PHILLIPS.

Clackamas, Oregon.

MASS MEETING.

Held at Amesbury, Mass.

The Massachusetts State Association held a mass meeting in Amesbury, and although the weather was extremely bad, a good-sized audience was present at the hall. The platform was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and apple blossoms. Mrs. C. L. Hatch, Secretary, called the meeting to order in the afternoon, and after explaining the absence of the president and vice-president, turned the meeting over to the treasurer, Mrs. C. F. Loring, to act as chairman until the arrival of the vice-president.

After congregational singing and an invocation by Mrs. Litch, Mr. Peel, chairman of the meetings held in Amesbury, made a speech of welcome to the visitors, and extended thanks to all who had braved the elements to be present at this meeting. Mrs. Annie Chapman, Mrs. B. W. Belcher, Mrs. Litch, Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Loring, all took part during the afternoon, Mrs. Loring responding to the welcome given by Mr. Peel.

A bountiful supper was served by the ladies of the W. R. C., after which a social hour was enjoyed. In the evening the meeting was called to order by the vice-president, Mr. J. B. Hatch. He spoke of the absence of the president, Dr. Fuller, and of our regret at his inability to be present. Mrs. N. S. Abbott spoke of organization and of the need of perseverance to carry on a meeting. The chairman had set the theme for the evening for organization. The next speaker was Mrs. Annie Chapman, who told of the needs of the hour, and closed her remarks with communications. Mrs. Adams, of Haverhill, spoke of the field there was to work in Amesbury. She was willing to devote time and energy to forming a society. Mr. Hatch said he thought it was about the only place where there were so many willing helpers, that no one wanted the office of president. He thought it showed a harmonious feeling, and one that should create a good working society. Mrs. Litch told of organized work which the State Association had done. She closed her remarks with communications. Mrs. B. W. Belcher told what the State Association did for the Marlboro society when it was first formed. She closed with messages. Mrs. Varney spoke briefly and gave messages. Mr. Hatch then said he was pleased to announce there was a prospective president in view; that a gentleman would take the position of vice-president, and that about twenty others would be willing to come together and form a society. This statement seemed to be received with great pleasure, and all interested in the undertaking were well pleased, and were given more courage to go on in the good work. The meeting closed with the singing of America, when the officers of the M. S. A. started for Boston, arriving at their several homes in the forenoon, June 6th.

The thanks of the M. S. A. are extended to all who assisted in any way in making the meeting a success; especially to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Nellie S. Morrill, who opened the way for the State Association to hold the meeting, and to the ladies of the W. R. C. for furnishing a supper.

CARRIE S. HATCH, Secretary.

"New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Drawings By Watson Heston. With critical and humorous comments upon the Texts. Heston's drawings are incomparable, and excruciatingly funny. Price, in boards, $1.00.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

A Sample Missionary.

His Career Is Vividly Portrayed—A Sad but Interesting Sketch from Real Life.

I was taking luncheon one day in a tiny restaurant in a certain beautiful town noted as a health resort on the west coast of Japan, when a long-faced little white man, followed by a thin, crab-apple-visaged little woman and a swarm of spindle-legged children, seated themselves at my table. Their native maidservant cared for their wraps.

The man was narrow between the eyes—a sure sign of mental narrowness—and displayed an appetite for broiled chicken that went far to confirm my suspicion that he was a Christian missionary.

I was not mistaken. The pennies of English Sunday-school children had been pouring into his pockets, enabling him to carry the cheerful doctrine of hell fire to the gentle heathen of this one little city for seventeen years. This and much more he told me.

He gave me a history of the town, spoke of its unequaled climate, and regretted that he must leave it to return to Europe to educate his children.

After luncheon he took me to inspect his club. There were only ten white men in the town, but they had a gilt-edged club which was the envy of all the natives, its chief features being billiard tables and a bar well stocked with the inevitable Scotch whisky and tansan.

The holy man clapped his hands thrice, signed a chit, and received from the brown "barkeep" sundry amber and green bottles of "gloom dispeller," a box of Perfectos, and another of cigarettes.

"Arduous life, this of a missionary to the heathen," I suggested.

"Yes, we have much to contend with," he said with a sigh. "The Japanese are quite unscrupulous in adulterating the whisky."

"How often do you hold Christian meetings?"

"Meetings?"

"Yes—for preaching the gospel to these lost souls."

"Oh, at no regular times. You see, this is such a sordid people, in this town. Merchant class, and all that sort of thing. They care for nothing but money-making. They do not seem to get interested in the gospel. Hey, boy! bring matchi-matchi, one box."

"Do you hold street-corner exhortation meetings—or how?" I asked.

"That would be to lose caste," he said, watching with critical eye the blue rings from his cigar. "No, we depend on the general influence. Christian example is a great thing, you know."

He poured out another glass of Scotch.

The example was lost on me.

"Then you must mingle freely with the people, and go in for society?"

He shifted uneasily in his leather-cushioned chair.

"You see," he explained, "society here is peculiar. The men, as I say, are a sordid lot of money-grubbing sinners, and the women, who have homes, are inaccessible. The other kind of women, of whom there are thousands here, mostly descendants of the ancient nobility, are of the men who can never understand, as Kipling says. These shogi ladies were given a grand fete by the Mayor, priests and leading Japanese of the city this week, ending in a gorgeous street parade to the temple, where special services were held in their honor. You should have seen it. The most beautiful and wittiest geisha girls were hired to dust their feet, bear their trains and fan them along the way."

He smacked his lips over the recollection, and gave many details of that magnificent and unique procession of nobility's soiled doves—details which 'twere as well to omit from the pages of a family newspaper. Anyway, they have nothing to do with the case of the missionary, excepting to indicate the general trend of his mind.

But I wanted more light on the work of an expounder of the faith in the Orient. So I led him gently back to the path of redemption, from which his conversation seemed to have a tendency to wander. I asked him:

"How fares it with your flock of converts? In seventeen years you must have become the shepherd of many precious souls in so large a town as this."

"Er—as I said, this is a wanton and sordid population. I have always had a number of native young men who come to see me for lessons in English, and who uniformly professed conversion; but somehow they seem to wander, once they have learned to say: 'Good morning how are you I think so too!' with fluency; and I fear the bunko spirit is rife amongst them. Have another cigar?"

"How large is your congregation, if I may venture to ask?"

"By Jove, let me think. In famine times I have a great many." ("Rice-Christians—I know the breed," I said to myself). "Then I have converted three or four of my servants."

"How many servants have you?"

"Only nine at present. Two others that we had got married and left. By the way, I wish you had time to come up on the bluff to my home. It is the finest place in the city, and the view is charming."

"Thanks. Then you do not find this town an encouraging field for your work?"

"Oh, I can't say that. It is the best place in Japan for my wife's health. Have a match.

"Then you are pretty well satisfied with your work here as a bearer of the Christian message?"

"There are worse locations—China, for example. The houses there are abominable, and the fleas are bad. I am satisfied with Japan."

"Do you find that the Japanese encourage missionary work?"

"Oh, yes; they are very polite."

"Do you feel that they really need a different religion from their present faith of Buddhism and Shintoism?"

"Why, do you know, I feel quite easy about them. They are quite safe. I've been looking into their forms of worship in the many temples hereabouts, and I have come to a very comforting conclusion."

I looked several ???

"Yes," he concluded, as he poured out two fingers of malaria preventive and filled the glass with tansan, "these rascals of Japanese are really Christians, only they don't know it. Boy! A pack of cards. Do you play poker?"

I regretted that I didn't. Thus I escaped making an involuntary contribution to the missionary fund for carrying enlightenment to the dark places of the earth.

I went away from that club and out of the holy man's presence marveling much, and with my hand on my pocketbook.

The lot of the foreign missionary is, indeed, a hard one.

* * * *

Faith, 'tis a sad procession, where the Devil carries the cross!

GRANT WALLACE.

A Mother's Tribute

To a Lovely and Talented Daughter Passed to Higher Life.

Some of the readers of The Progressive Thinker were acquainted with my daughters, Gertrude and Geraldine. Last week the former passed to the higher life.

Calm, beautiful and unafraid to the last moments, she went out into the great unknown, out into the, to us, dark void.

We know she did not go alone, for many of our dear ones awaited her there, and a whiter, purer soul never graced this sphere. Her lips were never stained by a lie, nor her hands by the blood of any creature.

Oh how we miss her! Young and talented, she could have been of so much use in the world, and we cannot help asking why she must go? But who can divine the destiny of such a soul or trace its wanderings up and down the eternities?

I, her mother, feel mingled with my grief thankfulness that she blessed and enriched my life with her short stay with me.

She has answered the call of the soul and has gone up higher, while I, in my helplessness must bow in submission to the inevitable. And while we sit in gloom, broken in spirit and sad beyond words to tell, yet we know that in some way mysterious to us, it is best.

Our home will seem so silent, for hers were the dear hands that brought music from the beyond, our eyes rest sadly upon her fine drawings and paintings. Everywhere we turn something reminds us of her, for from infancy almost she manifested a spirit of genius, and her tireless fingers brought in one way and another her ideas into expression.

She was a Spiritualist in the highest sense, and dreaded death no more than she did sleep.

We feel in our desolation that a great soul has passed by. We touched the hem of her garment, sat for awhile in her light. She is gone and we sit in darkness endeavoring to adjust our weeping eyes to a world less radiant now that she illuminates it not.

May God bless her in her upward flight, is the prayer of her devoted mother.

LAURA B. PAYNE.

Abilene, Texas.

LINES TO GERTRUDE.

Thou art gone from my sight,
Blessed child of my youth,
And my soul weeps on Calvary's Hill.
Whilst I sigh 'mid the clouds and the darkness of night,
For the sound of a voice that is still.

Forst born of my love,
Fare thee well! Fare thee well!
How can I live on without thee?
When thy sweet girlish presence
God lent from above,
No more on this earth I shall see?

It seemed all a dream
When I stood by thy bier
And beheld thy pale, beautiful face,
And thy hands like white marble,
So shapely agleam,
Asleep in their maidenly grace.

That mayhap I should wake
To find thee still here—
The terrible nightmare forgot;
But alas! 'twas not dreaming;
My heart seems to break,
While I wait for a form that comes not.

Not the grief of despair
Do I feel, for I know
That my beautiful one is not dead,
But only arisen,
Thanscendently fair.
Like a bride to her love to be wed.

O, would I could see thee
To-day, blessed one,
Embraced by an ocean of love,
Ecstatic with joy
In the realms of song,
Where thy soul longed to be, in thy home far above.

I know thou art there,
Yet, sometimes when I'm sad
It seems thou draw'st near to my side,
While thy tender caress
Drives away my dull care
And causes my grief to subside.

Not one drop of bliss
Do I grudge the dear heart
In the planes thy soul lovest best,
Nor would I recall thee
Again unto this
Where thou wert so often distressed.

But sometimes, dear child,
When the day becomes still,
And the shadow of twilight descends,
O, may you not soften
This anguish so wild,
As your spirit with my spirit blends.

LAURA B. PAYNE.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Poetical and Prose Works
—BY—
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Mrs. Wilcox's writings have been the inspiration of many young men and women. Her hopeful, practical, masterful views of life give the reader new courage in the very reading and are a wholesome spur to flagging effort. Words of truth so vital that they live in the reader's memory and cause him to think—to his own betterment and the lasting improvement of his own work in the world, in whatever line it lies—flow from this talented woman's pen.

POEMS OF PASSION.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
Many thousands of this book have been issued, showing the estimation in which it is held. Presentation edition, with author's portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF POWER.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
New and revised edition, containing more than one hundred new poems, displaying the author's fine taste, cultivation and originality. With portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
This charming collection comprises many of the best poetic creations of the author. Embellished with portrait. Presentation edition. Price $1.

MAURINE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
An ideal poem about as true and lovable a woman as ever poet created. With portrait of author. Price $1.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.
A birthday book compiled by Ella Giles Ruddy, from the poetical and prose writings of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It epitomizes her inspiring optimistic philosophy with an apposite quotation for each day in the year. With author's portrait, and half-tone illustrations prefacing each month. Cloth, price, $1.

KINGDOM OF LOVE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
A magnificent collection of poems suitable for recitations and readings, true to the very best there is in human nature. Presentation edition, dark red cloth, $1.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE
PART I.--The Pentateuch.
Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lillie Devereux Blake, Rev. Phebe Hanaford, Clara Bewick Colby, Ellen Battelle Deitrick, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, Ursula N. Gestefeld, and Francis E Barr.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE.--PART II.
Judges, Kings, Prophets and Apostles. Comments on the Old and New Testaments, from Joshua to Revelation. The comments are keen, bright, spicy, full of wit, the work of radical thinkers who are not ignorant of the higher criticism. There is not a dull page in either of these books, but each is a galaxy of the bright minds of the day and throw a new light on the Bible teachings relating to woman. Price of each, paper, 50 cents.

WORLD MAKING A scientific explanation of the Birth, Growth and Death of Worlds. by Samuel Phelps Leland Ph. D., LL. D., Emeritus Professor of Astronomy end lecturer on science in Charles City College. A Work of intense interest, by a scientist and profound thinker. Cloth, price, 75 cts.

Aryan Sun Myths, the Origin of Religion.
By Sarah E. Titcomb. with an introduction by Charles Morris, author of "The Aryan Race." Price, cloth, $1.00.

Three Remarkable Books
"The Divine Pedigree of Man."
"The Law of Psychic Phenomena."
"A Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life."
The Divine Pedigree of Man, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God. By Thompson Jay Hudson, LL. D. A most remarkable work, demonstrating the existence of the Soul and Future Life. It is scientific throughout. Price $1.50. Dr. Hudson's work on "The Law of Psychic Phenomena" is also valuable. Price, $1.50. His "Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life" should be read by all. Price $1.50.

SIX HISTORIC AMERICANS.
A Book That Every American Freethinker Will Delight to Own.
By John E. Remsburg.
The work consists of two parts, "The Fathers of Our Republic," and "The Saviors of Our Republic." In regard to Paine's religious views, Mr. Remsburg establishes the negative of the following (1) Was Paine an Atheist? (2) Was he a Christian? (3) Did he recant? Page after page of the most radical freethought sentiments are culled from the correspondence and other writings of Franklin and Jefferson, which show that these men were as pronounced in the rejection of Christianity as Paine and Ingersoll. That Washington was not a Christian nor a believer in Christianity. In support of Lincoln's infidelity he has collected the testimony of more than one hundred witnesses.
The book is handsomely bound in cloth, giving fine portraits of George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant; also portrait of the author.
This book contains 365 pages, printed on heavy paper, well bound in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

THE TALMUD Selections from the contents of that ancient book; its commentaries, teachings, poetry, and legends. Also brief sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polano. 350 pp. Price, cloth, $1.

Spirit Influence.

Illustrating How It Is Manifested in Africa in the Detection of Criminals, as Presented in the Occult Review.

Certainly, Africa did not cease to be the Land of Mysteries and of the Occult with the disappearance of the wonder-working priests of ancient Egypt. Up to the present—and in spite of the inroads being made into the continent by the nations of the West, with all their civilization and its accompanying scepticism—Africa is still a land full of the mysterious and the uncommon. Deeply enshrined in their mystic rites, and most jealously guarded by them, the races of interior Africa do not yield the secrets of their "systems" lightly to any stranger; and the Western mind might well stand amazed at the manifestations of African Occultism. The following brief notes have reference to one or two out of the many tribes inhabiting the interior or hinterland of the British Colony of Sierra Leone proper.

The Western races no doubt can boast of their detective systems; and, in justification of this, they have but to refer the doubter to the records of such famous establishments as Scotland Yard, Pinkerton's, the unique French police organization, and some others of the first rank. Unquestionably, all these merit much praise for their achievements; nevertheless, their records do not compare with those of their brother-professionals, to be found among the tribes of interior Sierra Leone. The best of the Western agencies, at one time or another, have failed to track and to capture, whilst the negro detectives of the interior always succeed in the matter of their quest. The simple and self-evident reason is this, that whilst the Caucassian depends wholly on resources and abilities limited to our material and earthly plane for attaining his end, the negro lays under contribution not only these resources, but more. He ascends much higher, and summons to his help and service the abilities and intelligences of a higher and spiritual plane. Matter is no match for spirit; and Force Spiritual must score, and that very easily too, over the Force Material, the former achieving and conquering where the latter could not even find or effect an entrance. And so it is that the detectives of interior Africa will succeed where the famous ones of the Western races fail; because the former work on systems based on the dread Occultism that is their heritage, handed down by their fathers from hoary antiquity, while the latter solely depend for success on mundane human reasonings and the physical resources which are allowed human beings on this lower plane:—(1) commonly, i. e., as common to all in a general sense; and (2) openly, i. e., with nothing esoteric about it, but plainly and ordinarily attainable by all.

Now, as to the methods of procedure of these African detectives, it is evident that they are necessarily dark and secret, known only to the initiates, not one of whom will divulge them to an outsider, even as the price of life. And now for an illustration of the Occult in African detection of crime, etc:—

In some village or other a robbery has been committed, whilst all the members of the household were away—perhaps at the farm, tilling, or on a visit to some friends in a neighboring village. Thieves have forced an entrance into the hut, and made good spoils of the effects of the inmates. The latter return home to find themselves denuded of their hard earned possessions; naturally they are wild about it, and resolve to leave no stone unturned in their efforts both to discover the culprits and to regain their goods. And so, at nightfall, the custom of their people on such occasions is resorted to: i. e., public proclamation is made by one of the despoiled, everywhere in the village, so that no inhabitant of the same can fail to hear it. Round and round he goes, when the night is fully on and all the people have returned home from their farm and other avocations. Raising his voice loud and high, so as to be heard distinctly by all, he stating the names and descriptions of the articles stolen. Over and over he repeats his proclamation, going to and fro among the houses. He asks of the offender to restore the stolen articles, and threatens sundry and divers ills which he will inflict on the culprits, if, after a certain space of time, restitution is not made. He then announces a period of three or four days as that during which he expects to be again in possession of his property; and, not receiving the same at the expiration of this period, he will resort to some means of detection; to be followed, on attaining success, by the infliction on the culprits of the ills he has threatened. So he exhorts the culprits, whomsoever they may be, to choose peaceful restoration rather than certain and dire calamity. Having said his say, the crier returns to his home. If the guilty ones think better of it, and are moved to fear by the threatenings of the offended parties, there is a way open to them to restore the articles, undetected themselves. It is customary among the people to act on such occasions as follows:—At dead of night, when the village is wrapped in deepest slumber, the effects are removed from their hiding-place by the burglars and quietly deposited in some sheltered spot, in or near the premises of the owners.

Rising up early in the morning to go to their work, the robbed household will find the stolen goods piled outside the house; sometimes in the back veranda or piazza that is attached to the hut; or again, located in the open work-place, or "barray," which is the indispensable "outhouse" of every home in interior Africa. Thus regaining their lost property, they are glad; but first they count up and make sure if everything is restored. In the case where, during the short interval that has elapsed the thieves have made use of any article of value, a substitute of admitted equal value is invariably left; for, being in wholesome fear that the threatened ill will overtake them, once the period of waiting is over and recourse to "detection" is taken, they would rather give a substitute over than under the value. Being again in possession of their own, and within the prescribed period, the matter is allowed to rest there; and the aggrieved parties receive congratulations of their friends and neighbors. Getting to know afterwards, by some means or other, the identities of the culprits, they would nevertheless not do them any ill, as the articles were returned within the time-limit allowed.

But at other times, the thieves, deeming themselves safe from any detection, or perhaps callous as to the consequences, do not restore the spoil. Then, the period given for restitution having expired and the same not being made, the despoiled parties proceed as follows for the detection of the culprits:—

A detective is secured who is one of the cult called "The Finders-Out." He takes from a bag a handful of small stones; these are stones found inside an alligator when it is opened, for the natives of Africa believe that the stones found inside the dead alligator correspond to the years it has lived up to the time of its death. With these stones he divines, trying to "find out" the culprits, or locate them. At the conclusion of his divining, he will announce where the thieves hail from; i. e., whether from the very village where the theft is committed, or from another village near or remote. If the thieves are not of the same town, the town indicated will then be visited by the people who have been robbed; and, after due representations have been made to the headman of the same, and permission obtained, one of them at night-fall goes through the ceremony of public proclamation of their loss, as above narrated, and as usual ends it by announcing the time-limit given for restoration of the stolen articles. If the culprits are so minded, they restore the same in the manner indicated before, and this ends the matter. But in every case where there is no voluntary restitution within the time-limit, the detective having located the culprits—either in the same town that is the scene of the robbery, or in another town—he is called upon to identify the same. Again, the small stones are in evidence; and after a long and tedious manipulation of these, he announces his "finding" to his employer—i. e., he identifies the culprits to the extent of setting forth a minute detailed description of their personalities in the matter of form, face, characteristics and peculiar physical points, even indicating their occupations and the social status of each. In eight cases out of ten the "findings" have proved true. And in every case where one has been wrongly accused by the diviner, in the ensuing "palm-oil" ordeal—which I will dwell upon presently—his innocence will be clearly made known; for this "palm-oil" ordeal is infallible and decisive.

The detailed descriptions thus furnished fit in with the personal appearances, etc., of certain individuals of the place or town which has been indicated as the abode of the culprits; these persons are then charged with the robbery. In answer, there are one of two courses open to them, viz.: either to confess and restore the spoil, and—as the time-limit has expired—pay the usual fine; or brazenly deny the charge and risk the "palm-oil" ordeal which (amongst their people) is regarded as decisive in every case.

In the instances where thieves risk this ordeal, they rest their hopes of escape, not on the fallibility of the agency—for this is out of the question—but on the possible chance of the detective engaged to see into the matter not being a master of the rite, but some unskilful and poorly qualified novice of the same. In this latter instance, there is a chance of an escape, the operator not being fully grounded in all the arts and secret knowledge necessary to successful practice.

The offenders not confessing, etc., but assuming the bold and militant attitude, the "palm-oil" ordeal is resorted to for final decision. A detective of this mysticism is now approached and engaged for the case. On his arrival he brings with him the following articles:—(-) a vessel containing about a pint or so of palm-oil; (2) another open vessel containing liquid of some sort, about a quart measure; (3) a small earthenware pot, and (4) a small, round stone of the size of a marble, and granite-like of substance. He first kindles a good fire, setting thereon his pot, into which he has emptied all the palm-oil in the vessel. He sits on the ground cross-legged, intently gazing on the pot, while the oil is being heated to the boil; around him has gathered a crowd—accusers, accused, spectators, and the headman of the village. When the oil has got to the boil, he takes up the round stone and throws it therein; he waits for a long while, till the stone gets intensely hot; now he is ready to operate.

Reaching for the open vessel containing the mysterious liquid—not natural water, but a distillation from certain herbs and roots possessing mystic powers—he immerses his right hand therein, muttering some mystic formula. Then, withdrawing his hand, he calls on all to witness the proof of his own innocence, as regards the robbery; for the innocent one, after pronouncing the mystic formula over, his hand well immersed in the liquid, will dip his hand into the pot of boiling oil; and, plunging it below the oil, will take out the stone, now intensely hot, lying at the bottom of the pot, and will suffer no harm whatever; but whoever is guilty, on making the same attempt, will suffer the penalty of burning. The detective, having reminded them of these certainties, now approaches the pot of boiling oil; and dipping his hand herein, he takes out from the bottom of the pot the round stone. He grasps it tightly with his naked hand, and rolls it about his palm for a full minute or two. Then he presents it to one or more of the elderly spectators, requesting them just to touch it, each with one finger, i.e., without the ceremony of immersing their hands in the liquid, or the formula muttered over the same; they attempt it; but quickly withdraw their scorched members from the contact.

Once more the detective goes through the ordeal, subjecting himself to the test for the satisfaction of all; and as before, so also now. After being two minutes in his hand, no one could yet safely touch the stone. And now he is ready to subject the accused to the test; but first of all he makes a digression, asking for volunteers to try the ordeal from among the spectators: i. e., those who are innocent of the theft—not having been included in the number of the accused by the former detective.

Of course, there is some hesitation displayed, conscious of their innocence though they are; for it is a rather weird experience. The detective coaxes them, and at last one or two bold spirits step forth from among the ranks of the declared innocents, to offer themselves— with much inward trepidation, but plenty of outward bravery—for the test. One by one they go through it, as the detective himself had done before them—the hand immersed in the mysterious liquid, the operator muttering the formula over it the while; and after plunging the hand into the pot of oil and bringing therefrom the intensely hot stone,—none of them sustain the slightest injury. More volunteers are ready to try now, but the operator refuses to test any of that class; he has come on business, and not for a show-affair; therefore to business he next directs his attention, and requests the accused to draw near.

These, the more strengthened in their hopes because of the escape of the spectator-volunteers, approach without any outward show of uneasiness. The first—say, there are three accused—reaches out his hand and immerses it well in the mysterious fluid, with the operator by him, and as usual muttering the mystic formula. This done, he approaches the pot of oil; the hand is descending into it; down, down, till, as the tips of the fingers touch the oil, lo, an explosion, loud and terrific, and a mighty blaze of fire ascending out of the pot! The wounded man, with yells of pain and rage, leaps backwards, howling and making desperate efforts to put out the flame of fire burning furiously from the finger-tips to near the shoulder-blade. This is unfailing, decisive proof; he certainly is one of the robbers; and, told to confess, he makes a clean breast of it; the headman of the village gives his orders, and he is taken prisoner.

At this stage of the proceedings, the other two accused are summoned before him by the headman, asked as to their complicity in the crime, if they will not confess and so be saved the ordeal, or if it is their purpose to go through with it. But the sufferings of their accomplice act as an incentive to speaking the truth; and so on confession they too are made prisoner.

The detective has performed his task; and now native law takes its course. In those cases where the former diviner-detective had erroneously accused an innocent, when brought to the "palm-oil" ordeal he would go through it unscathed, and thus be declared innocent by their infallible test Whether accused alone, or in company with others, he would pass through it safely; so certain is this rite in the detection of crime, when the operator is an adept therein, a master of his cult. So well-established is the belief in this mystic ordeal that should one in the company of the accused be innocent, he will insist on undergoing the palm-oil test when the gang is brought up, though he has seen one of his fellow-accused horribly scorched and blistered. He is not refused his request; he has his chance; and, in the sight of all, establishes his innocence.

In such cases native law and custom provide a "satisfaction" for the wronged member of the commonwealth; and the parties concerned bear the onus thereof. None but the initiates know the means by which these negro mystics effect their results; but it is certain that they do accomplish the fact.

There is another system of detection employed in the unearthing of stolen goods, or hidden treasure, and practiced by the mystics of quite another school. It is named "The Bowl-Cult," as the principal instrument of detection is a medium-sized wooden bowl. This bowl, measuring a foot or so in diameter at the rim, is covered at the opening and all around the rim with a stout hide stretched taut, and bound firmly in its position by thongs of leather. What articles the hide cover shields from public gaze, none but the initiates and mystics of the cult know. The services of this order of mystics are requisitioned in one or other of the following cases:—

(a) Somebody may have been robbed of some very valuable article. By the agencies of the diviner-detective, and the palm-oil detective, the culprit has been found out; but here comes the difficulty; he is ready to suffer anything rather than disgorge the spoil, because of its great value; on the other hand, at all costs the thing stolen must be regained by the loser; therefore recourse is had to the bowl-detective.

(b) The natives of interior Africa, having no banks or strong boxes, make use of mother earth—the most trusty one—in this capacity, as follows:—it is the general rule to secrete precious articles under the earth, in hidden recesses, or in caves and natural rock excavations, known to the keeper and owner alone. But it often happens that these careful people dying suddenly, the site of the hidden treasure remains unknown to any of the family. He will have mentioned the fact of having secreted treasure, yet told no one of the locality, designing to disclose it only at the time of death; thus, in cases of sudden death, the treasure is temporarily lost. Herein also the bowl-detective is needed for the discovery of the site. We will now look at him as he goes about his business.

A qualified mystic of this cult having been engaged, he arrives on the scene of action, and we will suppose that it is a case of robbery. With him is a boy, who carries on his head alarge parcel, wrapped up in coarse country cloth. This boy is his assistant and is now in his novitiate in the cult. The mystic asks to be taken to the exact spot of the robbery; i. e., to the room whence the thing was abstracted, or to the box, loft, or barn wherefrom the article was stolen. Shown the identical spot, he halts and prepares for his work. First, he relieves the novice of his parcel; and, undoing the cloth covering, he exposes to view the mysterious bowl. He rests it on the exact spot of the robbery; i. e., on the box from within which the spoil was taken; or if in the barn, on the identical spot which the article was occupying before its removal.

This done, aided by his assistant, he goes through a ceremony mainly made up of the recitation of mystic formulae and the muttering of incantations. He also spends some time in high and silent mystic contemplations, and ends all by the utterance of short mysterious invocations; he only understands the aim and intention of this ceremony; he only can tell what it results in; whether in obtaining the aid of superhuman intelligences, or whatever it be; spectators simply witness the facts of the ceremony and the succeeding extraordinary proceedings.

The mystic, ending his preliminary, lifts up the bowl from the spot and rests it on the head of his assistant. A short word pronounced in a tone of command, but in a language mysterious for the layman, and the chase begins! Surer than any Spaniard's blood-hound, on the trail of an escaped person, will the bowl direct the novice-assistant-bearer straight to the spot of concealment. It becomes endued with some mysterious electrical power; and to such a degree that it overcomes the natural volition of the person bearing it. In consequence of this domination, the following things result:—

(1) The bearer of the bowl cannot by his own power, relieve himself of the bowl, and twenty hands would fail to lift it up from his head; they would only hurt the poor bearer; the bowl is so firmly and mysteriously connected with his head that nothing can thence remove it, except another mysterious word of command uttered by a mystic of the cult, after which he lifts it up, and then, most easily, for the bowl as it is does not exceed eight pounds at the turn of the scale.

(2) From the moment the command is given by the mystic—the bowl being already on the head of the native—until the time when, the discovery having been made, the mystic, after another mysterious word of command quietly and very easily removes the bowl from the head of his assistant, the latter is wholly and most absolutely without any will-power of his own; or rather, his powers have become so subjected to the domination of the mysterious bowl, that they may be said to be nullified.

Thus, (a) though he would halt, yet must he move on, the bowl's power impelling him, nolens volens, and so vice versa; (b) though he would turn to the right path, yet must he turn to the left, the overpowering force of the bowl impelling him that way; and so, vice versa. In one word, he has become absolutely a very automaton—the moving power, force, and seeming vitality of which is the mysterious bowl on his head.

And now, we are again with the crowd, near to the detective-agents, as the chief pronounces the word of command, and the chase begins. From the spot of the robbery the bowl follows the trail of the culprit, step by step all along the way, right to the spot of concealment of the stolen articles. Streams and rivers are no hindrances; over land and across water, and to how far place soever the culprit has traveled, so far will the bowl lead the bearer. At the right time for stopping, the bowl-influence checks further progress on the part of the novice. If it is an overlong chase, the mystic can give the bearer a rest by removing the bowl for awhile; on replacing it, the chase is resumed.

From the spot of the robbery, away they start—the novice bearing the bowl on his head and leading the way, with the mystic close at his heels; behind them there is the usual small crowd of curious folk, bent on following the quest to its end. Away they go; out of the house, to the back yard, into the public way-path; on and on, till a bush-track is taken; into the forest they enter, past tangled brushwood, until they reach the thickest part of the forest; and here the bearer cannot move a foot more in advance; twenty hands could not drag him away from the spot, for the bowl has reached the end of its quest. Where the bearer halts, there, or very near thereabouts, is the hiding place. Perhaps a natural cave is at hand; look into it, and you will find the stolen articles; ever unerringly, the bowl leads on to the exact hiding-place.

The chief now pronounces his mysterious words of command, and removes the bowl from off the head of his assistant. The search begins, and in a short space of time the stolen articles are brought to light from under the very spot wherein the bearer halted. The whole crowd returns to the town or village rejoicing, and quite excited by the experience. The detective receives his remuneration, and, with his assistant, departs home.

In the case just narrated the thief was an inhabitant of the very village wherein the robbery was committed; and so he secreted his spoil in the forest usually not very far removed from every native village.

Thus, the quest was a short one, But in other instances where the scene of the robbery is not also the place of abode of the robber, but is a village or two away, the quest is necessarily a longer and more exciting one. For, from the house or place of the robbery in one town, the chase follows the trail past that town, through streams, fields, forests, villages, on and on in the very footsteps of the decamping robber right into the town of his residence, and to the door of his house, if therein he has secreted the things. Permission is then obtained from the headman of that village; and, search being made, sure enough there is the spoil. Sometimes it is dug out of the earth, in his very room, at other times found hidden away in his box of goods. Should it be that the far-away thief, however, has not secreted the spoil in his house, but in some place or other in the fields or forests about his village, thereto, surely, will the bowl lead the novice.

[This account has been printed as nearly as possible in the language of the writer, who is a native of the district, and, whatever may be thought of the narrative, he is speaking from first-hand knowledge.—Ed.]

ISN'T HE A CRANK?

She is really a gem of a wife,
I am free to admit in the main,
We have not much occasion for strife,
I have little cause to complain,
But from fault she's not utterly free,
And there's one that is hard to condone:
It's a great aggravation to me—
She will not let my paper alone.

In the evening I'm anxious to know
All the news of the long, busy day.
But it's seldom she gives me a show
To find out—not, at least, right away.
"Have you seen all the bargains?" I ask
In a slightly ironical tone.
But it's useless to take her to task—
She will not let my paper alone.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism, A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"The Kingship of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world, think. Price, 25 cents.

STRICTLY OPTIMISTIC

A California Lady Looks Upon the World and Wants It Made Beautiful in Every Way.

In number 910 of your splendid paper there appears a letter from Seattle, written by Mrs. H. A. Stockey, which I read at first with considerable amusement, and the second time with real earnestness.

Having a slight acquaintance with Sister Stockey, and knowing how sincere she is and how faithful in her duty, as it appears to her, I am sorry, indeed, that she has allowed herself to come so near the shoals of pessimism, and, worst of all, to lend her intellect to the subterfuge of sarcasm.

Would Sister Stockey have the mediums wear shabby clothes of years gone by, hats of ante-bellum date, and thereby be objects of ridicule, simply because they are mediums? It seems to me that dear old Mother Nature sets the pace each spring, and she expects her sons and daughters to follow her example.

Each spring Dame Nature dons the very prettiest gown she can manufacture, trims her Easter bonnet with beautiful blossoms, and sallies forth to greet her dear sweetheart King Sol, and glory in his admiring glances. The birds are her devoted attendants, and each vies with the other in the beauty of his or her plumage.

Does not the poet sing,

"In the spring the iris deepens
On the plumage of the dove"?

Does not our philosophy teach us that all the world is beautiful, and are human beings to be the only ones who fail to follow the example set by our common Mother, or must it be just the mediums, because they are mediums, who must not try to look attractive and so add to the general effect.

Sister Stockey always looks nice when she goes to the services, and her gown and bonnets are not old style either

I, for one, believe it is the duty of every woman, old or young—and especially the mediums—to so clothe themselves that they will appear to the best advantage. It is a duty they owe to those around them, as well as to themselves and to their work.

Yes, the social gatherings are well attended in Seattle, and are a means of bringing together in a social way not only those who are Spiritualists, but those whom our teachers are trying to reach and help.

But those socials are not for the purpose of drinking beer or gourmandizing, and it is too bad that such an impression should go forth. I feel sure that Sister Stockey could not have meant to convey such an idea.

The police of Seattle are not persecuting the Spiritualist mediums, nor are they meddling with the true, honest workers. Some, it is true, have been arrested and have proved the difference between a SPIRITUAL MEDIUM and a FORTUNE TELLER.

The authorities of Seattle and other cities are doing a good work for the cause of Spiritualism, and they will succeed in ridding our ranks of the Octopus of Commercialism. This very movement will safeguard the ordination of only true media. To be sure this is not being done with any intention of aiding our cause, but rather through gross ignorance and superstition, upheld by dogmatic denominationalism.

Again I say yes to the lines concerning the white slavery of the little children who should be in school or playing in the fresh air. But, Sister, I have personal knowledge of a paper now framing which will soon be ready for the signatures of all good Spiritualists, so that it may be presented to the State authorities, eliminating child labor from the State of Washington.

Please, Sister Stockey, what harm is coming to the children who are going to the orthodox Sunday School? Are they learning anything bad? Are their morals being corrupted in any way? Is it not better they should go there than nowhere at all? I have two boys who have been reared in orthodox Sunday Schools, and I believe they will be honest, honorable men of good moral character. You forget you are crying down the only things that we are hoping will attract the children and young people.

It is a cause for serious thought, I agree, that no lyceum exists in Seattle, but perhaps Sister Stockey in her secret heart knows the reason the once flourishing lyceum went to pieces.

Suppose we change the name of one of our most beautiful ceremonies and call it "dedication" instead of "christening." How would that suit you, Sister?

The church christens a child, and thereby dedicates its life to the church work; the Spiritualists christen the child and thereby dedicate it to a life of purity and spirituality, and the influence of a spiritual home is never lost on such a child.

TEN CENTS ADMISSION! Yes, indeed, every time. One of the fundamental principles of our philosophy is equality; and when every one puts down his or her little ten cents on entering the hall there is at once a feeling of equal rights for all, and we eliminate the possibility of a six-dollar collection (made up of pennies and nickels) from a forty-dollar house.

Come, come, Sister Stockey, climb up out of the fog of pessimism onto the hilltop of good cheer. Throw away your blue glasses for the rosy ones of optimism, for all the world is beautiful, and deep in your heart you love the beautiful, you know you do—clothes, hats and all!

Yours for beauty,
EVELYN L. POMEROY.
Belvidere, Cal.

"The Truth Seeker Collection of Forms and Ceremonies for the Use of Liberals." Price, 25 cents.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

(Advertisement.)

YOUR REAL LIFE TOLD AT LAST!

Startling Predictions for Everybody, Almost Beyond Belief!

REMARKABLE PSYCHIC ASTROLOGER TELLS PAST AND FUTURE WITH AMAZING ACCURACY TO ALL WHO WRITE, ABSOLUTELY FREE.

HE TOLD MISS T. ST. CLAIRE.

Would you like to know, for the asking what the future has in store for you? Would it be any advantage to you to know how your health will be; how your business will go; whether you will be happy or unhappy; what your weak points and strong characteristics are, and how to improve your condition, financially, socially and physically? If so, here is an opportunity you should grasp at once. It will cost you nothing. If you are pleased, tell your friends. That's all. You will be doing them a favor. Who knows what this will do for you?

Professor H. Spencer Lewis seems to have lifted the veil of mystery that has enveloped the science of Astrology for centuries past. Combining his knowledge of Psychic Force with his wonderful system of Astrology, he has brought his method down to an absolutely scientific basis, reading the strange workings of the planets under whose sign one is born with amazing accuracy. So startling are his predictions that those who receive them are almost carried back to the days of great miracles and forced to believe that Professor Lewis must be possessed of a strange but wonderful power. Even astrologers stand amazed at the accuracy with which he foretells the future.

"I followed your advice and succeeded," writes Miss T. St. Claire. "All of your predictions came true. I wish I had sent for the wonderful free reading you gave me before I did."

If you wish a free reading of your life, on a beautiful Astral-Psychic Chart; if you wish to know your lucky and unlucky periods; what pitfalls to avoid; what opportunities to grasp; suggestions on business, friends, enemies, love, marriage ties, travels, sickness, deaths, etc., write a short letter to Prof. H. Spencer Lewis, Room 62, No. 43 West 27th street, New York City, and you will receive it by mail without delay and absolutely free. Be sure to give date of birth and age, and spell out your first name and last name, and write your address plainly. Kindly send ten cents in silver or stamps to cover cost of mailing and chart, and Prof. Lewis will send your reading and a free copy of his new and finely illustrated book, entitled, "Your Past, Present and Future Revealed," without any charge whatever. Be sure to tell your friends to send also.

The Wonders of Life.

By ERNEST HAECKEL, Author of "The Riddle of the Universe." This book is confined to the realm of organic science, and treats of "The Knowledge, Nature, Functions and History of Life." Price, cloth, $1.50.

THE RELIGION OF CHEERFULNESS
By Sara A. Hubbard.

This little booklet sets forth interestingly a leligion which all may admire and experience with benefit to body and spirit. Very nice for a holiday present. Daintily printed and bound, in a case. Price 50 cents.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism
A Treatise on HUMAN CULTURE.

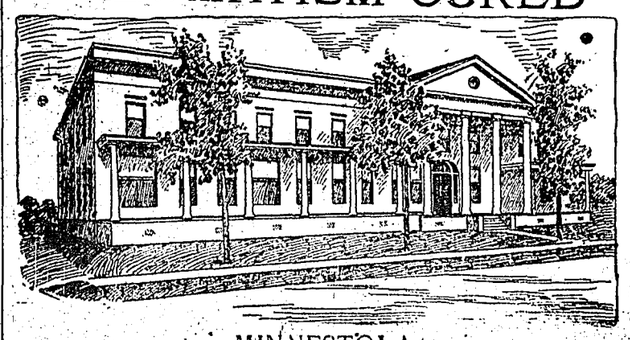
By Leroy Berrier Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

MAHOMET, THE ILLUSTRIOUS.

By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. This work is one of the Library of Liberal Classics. No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting; it should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. Price, 25 cents.



The Majesty of Calmness. The Kingship of Self-Control.

Two dainty white gift books by Wm. George Jordan, treating of individual problems and possibilities in the light of the

New Thought.

They are very interesting and instructive and worth more than the price indicates, as an ornamental and valuable addition to the library. Price, 30 cents each.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,
H. D. C. MILLS.
Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street,

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year	$1 00
Six Months	50cts
Thirteen Weeks	25cts
Single Copy	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania Avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

AN ENTIRELY NEW DEAL.

The POSTAGE on papers has been increased to all the British possessions on this continent...On a single paper we are compelled to pay ONE CENTS each week, amounting to 52 cents a year, whereas previously we only paid the pound rates—a mere trifle. Hence, to all the British possessions on this continent the paper hereafter will be $1.50 per year.

Whence the Name Christian?

Ask the average churchman, or even the preacher, and he will answer very glibly, "It was derived from Christ, the founder of the sect." Acts 11:26, says: "And the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch."

Antioch at that time was a Roman province of Northern Syria, situated on the Orontes some twenty miles from its mouth, and twelve to fourteen miles from the Mediterranean. It was estimated to contain, at that time, 400,000 inhabitants. At this time it contains about 5,000. The people were famed for their wit and readiness at repartee.

Smith, in his unabridged Bible Dictionary, article "Christian," says:

"It is clear the appellation "Christian" was one which * * the early followers of Christ could not have imposed on themselves."

Why not "imposed by themselves?" Because, as Smith informs us further down the page:—

"The name 'Christian' * * is used contemptuously; could not have been applied by the early disciples to themselves, nor could it have come to them from their own nation, the Jews; it must, therefore, have been imposed upon them by the Gentile world, and no place could have been so appropriately given rise to it as Antioch, where the first Church was planted among the heathen."

This occurred in the year 40 of our era. Then this Christian author tells us: "The people of Antioch were ever on the alert for a gibe or mocking taunt." * *

The reader will remember two weeks ago we stated in these columns that Christos, from the Greek, signifies anointed, oiled, greased, besmeared. Then remember the Essenes, from whom there cannot be a doubt the Christians were descended, were in the habit of anointing, oiling, daubing, besmearing with oil, as an accompaniment of baptism; that a "Christian burial" meant the body was anointed with oil before it was ready for the tomb. Next, recall the fact that it was the humble class, akin to the lowly fisherman of Galilee, who embraced the faith; that their costume consisted of a sleeveless tunic or shirt that did not reach the knee, and, as Josephus says: "this was worn until it fell from the body." Is it not then evident it was because of the dirty, greasy habit of these followers of Jesus "they were first called Christians at Antioch?" And that "Christ," now used as a surname, had nothing to do with it?

We state these historical facts as subjects for honest thought, not for contumely or reproach. The world has been shamefully misled by designing priests in this matter, and it is time the truth shall be known.

They Want a Wife.

Some 5,000 Catholic clergy of France are reported to have petitioned the Pope to allow them to marry. They claim a celibate priesthood is obnoxious to a pure life—a fact every person of brains knows. Instead of a single wife, the cusses need two, and then they will aspire to as many more, with concubines added, as the wise Solomon is alleged to have possessed.

Platitudes against sin are as harmful as applause for sin.—Anon.

Small Beginnings, Glorious Ends.

"Folly is joy to him who is destitute." Thus wrote correctly the author of Proverbs. The same writer directs us to "Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit."

Man was but a slight remove from idiocy in the morning of his being. The knowledge he gains as he advances in life is usually but little more than the accumulated wisdom of those who preceded him. Deprive a child of the acquired knowledge preserved in books, or from those engaged in trades and professions, the arts and sciences, with whom he comes in contact, he would only be developed at manhood into a very profound ignoramus.

The province of the educated thinker is to rise above the ignorance of his uncultured ancestors, the silly teachings of earlier ages, and grapple with the wisdom of the now.

There is a big leap from the days of Thales, the Ionian philosopher, who, more than two thousand years ago, discovered that pieces of amber, when rubbed with a dry cloth, attracted small bodies. Thales concluded amber possessed soul, and was nourished by the attracted objects. Galvani, of Bologna, in 1876, discovered, almost by accident, what is now known as galvanism. Franklin, Davie, Rive, Faraday, and others, all along the later years, added to previous knowledge in regard to electricity. The telegraph, the telephone, the dynamo, and wireless telegraphy, have followed in turn, each inventor calling into service prior knowledge, and adding to it. It has been thus with all we know; at first a humble beginning—perhaps an accidental one—and then accumulations and failures which have been overcome by the greater genius or larger acquirements of another. The steam engine, with its mighty possibilities, owed its origin to the rising and falling of the lid of a teakettle to allow the escape of steam.

From the simple to the complex is the order of invention. The signet ring, making an impression on wax, doubtless suggested the printing press, developed in the great machine press throwing off a hundred thousand printed sheets an hour. And the rude dug-out, through innumerable ages of expansion, appears as the mammoth steamship careening over the ocean with its vast wealth of freight and thousands of passengers.

The same law of progress prevails in social circles. The American Republic originated in a single mind. Gradual accretions of individuals developed into the Continental Congress, finally into the powerful government on which rest the hopes, happiness and prosperity of near a hundred millions of the best people on earth.

A single spark may explode a magazine which destroys an otherwise impregnable fortress—on which the liberties of a nation may depend.

They who despond for the future of Spiritualism, and long for the leeks and onions of Egypt, dropping the simile, would again gladly embrace the old Christian faith, with its above-the-clouds heaven, under-the-earth hell and a fallen world, requiring a junior God for its redemption, should cast an eye backward only a short fifty-nine years, listen to the tiny raps at Hydesville, since developed into clear and distinct communications from the unseen, who have passed through the mortal stage of being, and are now dwellers in a world of fadeless joy, where sorrow, anguish and pain are unknown, companioned with the loved and the loving who have escaped the vicissitudes and sufferings of mortal life. Not two or three conscientious believers, as then, but now in every part of the globe there are multitudes who KNOW there is an immortal life, making in the aggregate millions of zealous workers, as moral, upright, truthful and intelligent as can be found anywhere in the wide world.

Another fifty years, with the advance already gained, and the accelerated growth with advancing years—who can conjecture what awaits a cause the immortals are everywhere laboring to advance? Away with frauds. Bring truth only to the front, and await with hope the result.

Novel Penalties.

Within the last few months we have noticed many strange penalties applied by Justices and Judges, in the course of judicial proceedings, for wrongdoing. Only the other day a father was ordered to give his 16-year-old daughter a slapping, which was then and there administered in due form. Police courts very frequently order the defendent to run out of town, or be imprisoned for a long term if found in the city after a few hours named. The severest penalty of this class we have seen—more cruel than the whipping post to many—occurred at Pana, Ill., where Henry Bunch was fined $200 and costs by Judge Springstein; the fine was suspended so long as the culprit shall attend church service every Sunday, work in a first-class barber shop, and try to be a man.

That judge must have had a more exalted opinion of the reformatory character of church service, provided it was orthodox, than many. He should have read the statistics of State penitentiaries, and the church connections of their inmates, before passing such a sentence.

But where the authority for such penalties?

The notion of God which makes him a manufacturer of footstools, our enemies being the raw material, is still popular in some quarters.—Puck.

The Acts of Desecration.

The Vandals, Ghouls and Parasites of Our Angelic Cause, and their Defenders.

The acts of desecration on the part of fake mediums in connection with Spiritualism ARE UNPARALLELED in any other religious or reformatory cause now acting a prominent part before the world. Many fakes who have SULLIED THE FAIR NAME OF SPIRITUALISM with their nefarious work may properly be designated as ghouls, monsters of iniquity, wolves in sheep's clothing, barnacles, parasites, or any other opprobrious name or epithet that expresses their real rotten or putrid nature.

All ALONG THE LINE for the past thirty years there have been those villains who have masqueraded as genuine mediums, presenting a bastard phenomena, which at the time were accepted as direct from the spirit realms, but now known to be FRAUDULENT OF THE DARKEST DYE.

In Los Angeles, Cal., a large fund has been raised to aid the Anti-Fakers in driving out the frauds. This society has at its head Robert T. Hale, and great and lasting good has been accomplished.

It is a mistake, and a great one, too, to suppose that after an exposure the medium continues to do business as usual at the "old stand." Not one of those heretofore exposed will be admitted to any of the camps. For any camp association to announce that such fakes would be admitted to the grounds would raise a storm at once, and the place would be boycotted by all respectable people.

The recent exposure again of "Rev. Dr." Hugh Moore in Los Angeles, shows conclusively that the fake element is being CAREFULLY WATCHED, and their full exposure will come sooner or later, wherever they may hang out their signs.

How this notorious "Rev.-Dr." Moore sent forth his vituperation and abuse against The Progressive Thinker! How his tongue, poisoned with hate, denounced its editor, and then extolled his official organ, The Light of Truth, which exploits a bastard "Altruism" and a mining scheme that has brought HARDSHIP, SORROW, TEARS AND DEEP REGRET TO MANY HOMES.

And right here we desire to say that mediums, speakers and societies who have so lost their self-respect as to send their notices to the organ of "Rev.-Dr." Moore, are requested to not send them to this paper—we do not crave such friendship or such patronage, nor do we want such "friends" who lend their influence to "Rev.-Dr." Moore's and Elsie Reynolds' official organ.

Read carefully what the California papers have to say of this late exposure of the Moores.

Police Raid Two Dens of the Fakes—Fakers Caught With the Goods on Them—Pseudo Persian Is Taken From Pawn Broker's Benefit—"Rev. Dr." Moore and Wife Arrested While Making Ghosts in Parlor Full of Easy Money Dupes.

The following is from the Los Angeles Herald of May 29:

It was a sad night for spookdom.

In darkened rooms all over the city charlatans who were fleecing a horde of gullibles were struck with terror by the whispered news of the arrest of Mazzininanda, chief of fakers, and the downfall of the Moores.

Again Mazzini has been caught in the police dragnet.

Again have the Moores fallen under the ban of the law.

Three weeks ago Mazzini paid a fine of $150 for practicing mediumship without a license. The money was gathered in dollars from fellow-fakers and in dimes from the pockets of poor men and women who could ill afford to contribute to the infamous cause.

A few weeks ago the "Rev. Dr." H. R. Moore was forced by the exposure of the New York World to leave the eastern metropolis and seek pastures new.

Heading for the Mecca of fakers Moore landed in Los Angeles and straightway started "the First Church of Harmonial Philosophy."

Uses Little Daughter

In this alleged Church Moore has practiced mediumship and fortune telling. There he has held his so-called spiritualistic gatherings. Materialization was Moore's strong card.

On Sunday Moore has held meetings in the Woodmen's hall in Mercantile place. There he delivered long-winded prayers, and his group of gullibles sang hymns. But the Sunday meetings were but cleverly laid schemes for advertising his alleged etherealizing and trumpet seances on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and his "broad light" seances on Fridays. At all of these seances he has charged 50 cents admission and the crop of suckers have made the older fakers of Los Angeles turn green with envy.

Niobe, Moore's little daughter, aged 11, has been used in his work. He advertised Niobe would heal from 10 to 5 p. m. daily free. How many persons have been healed by the child wonder would be difficult to discover.

Moore evidently believes in coining the talents of all of his family into good hard dollars. He is reported to have reaped a rich harvest in Los Angeles.

Will Drive Fakers From the City.

Shortly after Moore arrived he went to the city hall and procured a license to practice fortune telling. Under this license his entire family have, the police declare, been practicing all the arts of the alleged modern mysticism.

Mrs. Moore was arrested on a warrant charging her with practicing without a license. Tax Collector Johnson said a few days ago that Moore's license did not give his wife a right to practice clairvoyance.

Captain of Detectives Paul Flammer has declared his intention of ridding the city of the outlaw fakers who refuse to take out the license. In this he has the support of the police commission.

Mayor Harper announced his desire to see the city rid of this class and recently declared his intention to revoke the license of the mediums who were caught in the act of swindling the public.

Mazzini is better known to Los Angeles people. His career as a pseudo Persian mystic has been watched with interest by hundreds of persons who know him to be a fraud. His arrest, the police believe, will forever stop his work of preying upon the sorrows of bereaved mothers and coining their woes into gold.

His pockets were searched and 45 cents, a bunch of keys, a package of tobacco and several cards were brought to light. These were placed in a police envelope and Swami Leo di Mizzinanda was led to his place among drunks, vagrants and crooks in the lower tanks.

In Mazzini's pockets were found a card of H. R. Moore, the medium arrested at the Ninth street raid last night, and the business card of Mrs. M. E. G. Howe, associate editor of the Occidental Mystic. According to the card Mrs. Howe is State organizer of the California State Spiritualists' association.

Mrs. Howe's husband is Arthur Howe, editor of the Mystic. They stood loyally by Mazzini during his former trial, even after he was shown to be a fraud.

The failure of the Howes to repudiate Mazzini after his exposure has been a hard blow to their cause.

Scores of honest Spiritualists are said to have forsaken the C. S. S. A. banners on account of this action.

Moore Caught With the Goods.

H. R. Moore and Cora H. Moore were arrested at 9 o'clock at 816 West Ninth street by Detectives Ritch and Roberds, the capture being made right in the midst of one of their trumpet seances and with a large and appreciative assemblage of dupes present.

A warrant had been sworn out earlier in the evening for the arrest of Mrs. Moore and the officers were instructed to arrest Moore the minute it became apparent that he was collecting money under false and fraudulent pretenses. The arrest was made as directed and the fact that there were not several of the subjects and dupes of these two fakers sent to the receiving hospital for repairs is wholly due to the forbearance of the officers making the arrests, for not only Moore himself but several of his fanatical adherents started a rough house which only the coolness of the officers turned into a rather lame and abject surrender to the majesty of the law.

Silver an Open Sesame.

When the two officers arrived at the spook temple conducted by the Moores, there was a goodly crowd gathered to witness the "manifestations."

There was little difficulty experienced in passing the outside and inside guards that are maintained in the house. The ring of the coin of the republic was magic in its open sesame qualities and Mrs. Moore greedily absorbed two half dollar pieces that were tendered her as admission fees for the strangers.

"Mr. Wright" and "Mr. Buck" were conducted to a nice cosy corner in a small room in which were crowded some twenty-five or thirty other persons. After a survey of the crowd had been made and no suspicious characters discovered. Moore walked to the center of the room and deposited on the floor three telescoping megaphones or trumpets of tin. They were of different lengths and sizes and while he was handling them he talked in a familiar strain with all those present, telling them that as a trumpet medium and producer of spirits he was unexcelled except by by one person and that person had been a long time dead.

After this little preliminary talk the people were arranged around the room in what was seemingly regular order and a number of double slates of the usual "bunk" kind were distributed and the "members of the class" instructed to think real hard of some message they wished to receive from dead and gone relatives or friends, and in time it was stated they would get what was coming to them.

Little Child Is Used.

The lights were then turned out and the room draped in black hangings presented the appearance of the bottom of a coal mine at midnight.

"Now be very quiet," said Spook Doctor Moore's voice, "and I think Pansy will come and see us."

Immediately thereafter "Pansy" arrived.

In a squeaky and rather incoherent voice "Pansy" announced through one of the tin trumpets that she was on the spot.

"How are you, Pansy?" was the greeting that went up from a dozen of the throats of the fanatics present.

"I am very well, thank you, and oh, so happy over here," was the response in the squeaky voice.

Then "Pansy" went on to greet each one present in the room by name and inquired after their personal health and affairs.

Even "Mr. Wright" and "Mr. Buck" were not overlooked, and they were informed that there was a nice warm place waiting for them on the other side where "Pansy" was, ready to greet them.

Then "Pansy" disappeared and "Lightfoot," with a frog in his throat and a voice hoarse from long association with the bottle, came on the scene. "Lightfoot" went through the same vocal gyrations as did "Pansy" and then "Pansy" came back, this time with her "nighty" on, and the people were cautioned not to look, for she was in undress.

Light Reveals All.

Just about this time the unfeeling and vulgar police officers flashed two electric lights on little "Pansy" and her "nighty" and Faker Moore was discovered in the act of dropping one of the tin trumpts to the floor while his seven-year-old daughter disappeared through the folding door at his back.

The moment the denouement came pandemonium reigned in the close room.

Cool, deadly determination exhibited by the officers soon brought the fanatical bluffers to their senses and they finally backed water and Moore and his wife were taken to the police station, whre they waited from 9:30 o'clock to midnight for one of their dupes to gather up bail money for them. At that hour they were released and returned to their spook place on West Ninth street.

It is probable that a number of arrests for disturbing the peace and interfering with an officer may grow out of the arrest of the Moores, as several of their dupes interfered with and made as hard as possible the task of the police in executing their orders.

Moore's Bad Record.

"Rev. Dr." Hugh R. Moore, the new leades of the Los Angeles fake spooksters and the man who was arrested for the crime of obtaining money under false pretenses, formerly worked the same game in New York and other eastern cities that he has been unloading on the Los Angeles public. His work in the east was so raw and crude that he was at last forced to leave that city and seek new regions for gullibles.

Los Angeles was recommended to him as a city which contained many easy marks and where a good live spookster could easily build up a firm bank account by bringing back the departed from the spirit world and exhibiting them to their friends at four bits a throw.

Los Angeles, Cal., has been badly afflicted for several years with a rotten fake element that has attached itself to our ranks, thus partially dimming that angelic light that emanates from pure Spiritualism. Spiritualists as a body do not fully realize the great damage the fake element has done and is now doing, to our cause. Every large city, however, is equally as badly afflicted as Los Angeles, only there are no Anti-Faker societies there to bring to prominent view the vultures in our cause. In Los Angeles, Robert T. Hale stands at the head of the Anti-Faker movement, and he certainly has been doing a most excellent work. A late number of the Los Angeles Herald says, under the head, "DRIVE OUT THE FAKERS:"

"With two more fake mediums in the toils the crusade against these preyers on the poor and simple-minded are again thrown into a panic which will possibly so affect a few that they will leave the city. This will be good riddance; perhaps it is as handy a way as any to dispose of these gentry; but it doesn't go to the root of the evil.

"The Herald in its crusade against the fake mediums and fortune tellers, has been actuated by only one motive: To free the city from the gang of vultures that swooped down on it in the easy days and became entrenched here, fattening off the superstitions of the unwary. The Herald has met with a success that is most gratifying. One of the most notorious of these wretches has been heavily fined, two others are in duress and the whole fraternity is on the run. It is now up to the police to keep them moving, with the ultimate object of making Los Angeles too hot for their nefarious operations.

"The crusade has been a hard one to wage, for the fakers are smooth and cunning. But the actual results so far obtained demonstrate to the most skeptical the truth of every allegation made by the Herald, and prove the need of unrelenting vigor in dealing with these people. They are here; they will operate in secret, if not openly, as long as the iron hand of the law is clad in velvet, and they will rob the innocent but confiding victims in every possible way.

"The Herald is against them; it sees no good in their stay here, and, though gratified by the undoubted success of its warfare so far, will here and now notify them that it has only begun in its determined fight to put them out of business.

"Against legitimate Spiritualism, in which sincere and earnest followers believe as a religion, The Herald has no fight. But as to the fake fortune tellers, the flimflam "mediums," the spookologists and the vultures who fatten off the savings of the poor, the while they dupe them or work in collusion with unscrupulous promoters and agents of various sorts, The Herald will keep after them till the city is purged of their unholy presence. And every capture and exposure makes their stay here the shorter."

HO! FOR ELGIN!

Sunday, June 23, there will be held at Elgin, Ill., a Union Meeting and Basket Picnic of Spiritualists, and the principal object of this notice is to the effect that by clubbing together in clubs of 6 and buying 6 ride commutation tickets (round trip rides), they can be had for $5 each, making the fare but 85 cents for the round trip, with a few cents over for the "bunch," instead of paying $1 for the round trip. This is worth remembering. Tickets can be had at the 5th Avenue terminus of the Aurora & Elgin electric line.

T. WILKINS, Sec'y.

REVIVES AS EMBALMER WORKS.

Supposed Dead Man Found to Be Alive, but Dies in Three Days.

Beaumont, Texas, May 29.—While the supposed corpse of James Fraser, aged 19, of this city, was being embalmed in an undertaking establishment at La Junta, Col., Sunday night, Fraser suddenly revived. It was thought he would survive, but today he died. Fraser was visiting La Junta for his health and was stricken with paralysis Friday.—Chicago Record Herald.

How the Fake Mediums Rob

They are in League with Grafting Brokers. An Organized Clique Has a Hand in All Deals and Each Fake Medium Gets a Percentage. One man is Robbed of $12,000.

A campaign is about to be inaugurated by the Anti-Fakers' league to expose and drive from the city the clique of crooked real estate and mining brokers who are in league with the fake Spiritualists in the swindling of their gullible victims.

The methods employed by this circle in leading the dupes of the Spiritualists into investing their money in mines which never existed and worthless realty is very simple.

The dupe consults the Spiritualist medium in regard to the investing of a sum of money and is advised to purchase a certain unlisted mining stock, with the assurance that soon a great body of ore of fabulous richness will be found in the mine, and that the purchaser of the stock will reap a golden reward.

The mine exists only in the rascally minds of the fake medium and the crooked broker to whom the dupe is referred.

Word is at once sent around to all the fake Spiritualist mediums in the clique, describing the dupe, so that in case some other one is consulted by the prospective victim the same advice may be given. This is very often the case, and by the time the victim consults several of these worthies, and each one gives the same advice, with a few added thousands to the amount to be gained when the ore body is uncovered, the final decision is reached and the broker's office is visited.

Here preparations are made to cinch the game. Ore of great value is exhibited as having been taken from the mine, and the victim is made to believe that a great personal favor is being rendered by letting him in on the glittering proposition. The deal is closed and each Spiritualist medium who has had a hand in the swindling game gets a slice of the spoils.

The victim is then placated from time to time with promises, until he becomes too insistent, when he is coolly informed that mining is only a gamble at best, and that the mine has not turned out as expected.

A victim, through his wife, of this game, who lost his entire savings, aggregating $12,000, and who is now an active worker in the Anti-Fakers' league, told the following story Thursday of how the clique robbed him:

"I had deposited $12,000 about a year ago in one of the Los Angeles banks, in the name of my wife. This represented the savings of a life-time of hard work in the mines of Arizona.

"I was compelled to return to Arizona for a period of three weeks on account of some unfinished business. During that short space of time my wife came under the influence of Spiritualists who induced her to invest the entire amount in absolutely worthless mining stock. Fearing action from me, they then poisoned my wife's mind against me and induced her to enter divorce proceedings, which were denied by the court, because the parties back of the proceedings disappeared to escape prosecution.

"I am one victim in many in Los Angeles, and I am devoting all my time in an effort to bring these rascals to justice."

President Hale of the Anti-Fakers' league substantiated the story in every particular.—Los Angeles (Cal.) Record, May 31.

His Fraudulent Methods.

We, the undersigned, having attended "materializing seances" held at the house of the "Rev." Hugh R. Moore of 120 West 13th Street, New York City, and there received the alleged "spirit forms" of deceased friends, now state and affirm that we recognize in Mrs. H. E. Strickland's manifestations the forms, voices and general characteristics of the "spirit forms" presented at the "Moores," and are now convinced of the fraudulent methods employed by Hugh R. Moore.

A. B. Peden, 219 West 142d Street.
W. C. Holland, 2072 8th Avenue.
A. M. Holland, 2072 8th Avenue.
Mrs. S. C. Hazeltine, 100 West 88th Street.
Eva B. Peden, 219 W. 142d Street.
Wilbur A. Carpenter, 154 W. 16th Street.
Vram Sakayan, 94 Lexington Ave.
Mrs. W. H. Henken, 405 W. 50th Street.
Mrs. C. L. Mulford, 2100 Third Ave.
J. A. Crowe, 170 E. 120th St.
Mr. W. H. Henken, 405 W. 50th Street.
K. W. McCrossan, 1786 Amsterdam Avenue.

To the Editor.—I have just received word from the Mayor. He will refuse to issue a license to "Rev."-Dr. Hugh Moore, or wife, to ever practice Mediumship in this city. Evidently the Anti-Faker Society of Los Angeles has some standing here.

C. W. CARSON.
Secretary of the A. F. S.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Angels of Light,

When Will the End Come to the Gross Deception Practiced in Our Ranks?

Yes, thousands have asked that question, and the end is not yet.

Spiritualists, you MUST AWAKEN, and fully realize the enormity of the tricks and crimes committed in the name of pure Spiritualism.

Is it not strange, exceedingly so, that the "Rev. Dr." Hugh R. Moore could for several years GROSSLY DECEIVE the Spiritualists of New York, his meetings being LARGELY ATTENDED, and yet all his spirit manifestations were the result of TRICKERY, DECEPTION, or JEGERDEMAIN?

In order to carry on his rank deception he received the CORDIAL ENDORSEMENT of two or three Spiritualist papers or journals.

Many have been the DIABOLICAL CURSES heaped upon The Progressive Thinker; many have been the threats made against our life, and spirit circles have been held by the villainous gang of tricksters to throw a malign influence upon us.

We have defied and still defy the whole villainous set.

We are perfectly immune against ALL THEIR EVIL THOUGHTS, or diatribes against The Progressive Thinker.

But we again ask, is it not strange that this Moore combine, could so long DECEIVE THE PUBLIC; bamboozle some of the other Spiritualist journals; get the influence of the excellent Rev. B. F. Austin and his cordial endorsement at the camps, on the rostrum, and month after month, in his journal; and engage Lyman C. Howe as HEAD-LIGHT of his Budd Lake enterprise, a locality impregnated with the very fumes of the infernal regions?

Is it not strange, we repeat, that rank deception, legerdemain and trickery could bring two such grand men as Mr. Austin and Lyman C. Howe in the sphere of the poisonous, baneful and deceptive influence of the Moores?

What is the history of Spiritualism when such deception can be practiced and receive the cordial support of prominent Spiritualist? Will it not in many respects have to be re-written?

Oh! Angels of Light and Love, when will the end come of all such combines as the Moores? When will Spiritualists open their eyes and see the FRAUD PRACTICED, right in their midst, and boldly condemn it?

Spiritualism in its purity can REDEEM THE WORLD, enter into all the ramifications of life, influence statesmen, mould for the better the character of individuals and nations, attract the careful attention of the scientist, merit the cordial support of the philosopher, become the GREAT CENTRAL MAGNET OF THE EARTH and be a household word in every family; but with such advocates as the Moores, aided by prominent Spiritualists and journals, it loses much of its prestige. Choose this day the side on which you will work—the side of ANGELIC LIFE, or the side of DIABOLISM!

TAKE NOTICE!

Spiritualists Everywhere Be On the Alert.

Spiritualists of the United States, do you want Spiritualism properly represented in the report of the Director of the Census? If so, urge the officers of your local and State association to fill and return the card sent them long ago, by the Department. Every opportunity has been given us to prove by figures how many we are, and it will be our own fault if we are incorrectly reported. Spiritualists, have you the courage to stand up and be counted? If so, send in the reports of your local societies.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
600 Pennsylvania Ave., S. E.,
Washington, D. C.

C. P. BRYAN, CHICAGO DIPLOMAT, WALKS WITH REAL PORTUGUESE GHOST.

United States Minister at Lisbon Verifies With Own Eyes Cause of Inability to Keep Servants.

Lisbon, June 9.—Charles Page Bryan of Chicago, the American minister, is trying to unravel a ghost mystery.

Mr. Bryan, who is very kind to his dependents, could not understand why he could not keep a servant. One after another they left him, giving sufficient reasons or excuses.

He made inquiries and learned that the whole household was scared out of its wits by the nightly visitation of a beautiful woman's form, dressed in white with a white mantilla on its head. The apparition passes from room to room sighing dismally.

Mr. Bryan determined to investigate. He stood watch in one of the rooms through which the ghostly woman was in the habit of passing. At first no ghost appeared, then footsteps were heard and the form appeared just as the servants had described, all dressed in white.

Mr. Bryan kept cool and followed the apparition through various rooms of the house until it disappeared. The ghost is supposed to be that of a sister of a former "chef de mission," who died in the house many years ago.—Chicago Examiner.

Heart keeping is the secret of happy housekeeping.—Anon.

A well governed mind learns in time to find pleasure in nothing but the truth and the just.—Anon.

The world is continually growing better to all who are honestly trying to make it better.—Everett McNeil.

Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing.

The Excellent Spirit Message Given Through Her Mediumship.

Springfield, the home of the "Spirit Book," is promised yet another volume to add to its collection from the "spirit world." Spiritualists, the country over, are joyously discussing the alleged receipt by Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, a celebrated medium living in Westfield, N. Y., of a "message from the spirit world," in which the late Samuel Bowles, the famous editor of the Springfield Republican, announced his desire to "write" another book of observations on the spirit life "through the hand of Mrs. Twing." Five books have previously issued from the press, purporting to have been "written" by the late Samuel Bowles through the mediumship of Mrs. Twing. The first book, entitled "Experiences of Samuel Bowles in Spirit Life," appeared in 1880 from the press of the Star Publishing Company of this city, of which H. A. Budington is the editor, and has had a wide circulation. The Bowles family invoked the aid of the law in the hope of preventing this publication, which they deemed libelous, but the law was powerless to stop the spreading of the alleged messages from the dead journalist. The following year appeared a second book, entitled "Contrasts in Spirit Life and Recent Experiences of Samuel Bowles in the First Five Spheres." This, too, was received with great joy by the Spiritualists of America. In 1885 a third book, "Interviews with Spirits," was published, and later "Golden Gleams from the Heavenly Light, by Samuel Bowles Through the Hand of Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing." Recently Mrs. Twing announced that Samuel Bowles has conversed with her from the spirit world and bade her prepare to write another book. The books are similar in character. The spirit author describes the processes of death, the wonders of the spirit life, the homes of the spirits in the several spheres, their power to aid or injure mortals, his visits in the spirit to Springfield where he roamed unobserved through the editorial rooms of the newspaper which he once controlled, his meetings with Springfield people who had "passed over," his interviews with the spirits of world-famous mortals, and so on.

Samuel Bowles, the second, for ten years before his death, was a student of Spiritualism, and is alleged to have expressed his belief in the communion of spirits. He was not, however, at any time a member of any Spiritualist circle, so far as can be ascertained. No doubt he came under the influence of the great Spiritualist propaganda, which reached its hight in this city in 1850. In that year there were several thousand Spiritualists in Springfield, and meetings were held nightly in Beacon Hall on Armory Hill.

How the Books Were Written.

Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, the medium who alleges that she has been in communication with the spirit of Mr. Bowles, is a native of Sherman, N. Y. When a very small child she could see spirits and has always been conscious of their presence from her earliest recollections. She was "controlled by them to write" before she had learned to write herself. In 181 she was married to Herbert S. Twing of Westfield, N. Y., where she now resides. Mrs. Twing was educated in the public schools, and taught for several years in the lower grades of public schools of New York city. In the autumn of 1878, while at her home in Westfield, she alleged that she was compelled one day to write the following message, an unseen power, which she could not resist, controlled the movements of her arm and fingers.

The First Message:

'Madam, excuse my coming. I feel a great pressure upon me as though I must. Yes, I am far from my home, yet thought takes me there in a moment. 'Who was I?' rather say, who am I? Samuel Bowles of Springfield, Mass. Yes, that is my name, but I am puzzled. They told me to come here and perhaps I might get a word home. Strange, strange. I can go there, I can see my wife, my boys. I can hear them, but they are blind to me, perfectly blind. They see me not; they have no smile for me. They will yet learn to wait my coming, and to hope for it as they did when I was away to the Westward. You have been kind, lady, to let me try. If I only could get hold of this or any other hand, I would so rejoice. I would live over the past—live it to a purpose; make them know I live. My father is Samuel Bowles. We have a long line. Yes, my son, too; but what does it all amount to; the name, the glitter, the sounding words, beside one woman's tears? And Henry, poor Henry (Henry Alexander of Springfield, Mass.). There's room for his body in the dear old lot, until of late so empty, it seems.

"Strange do my thoughts go off your fingers. I have been looking, trying to catch the subtle something that makes it possible. I shall work. Madam, allow me to do my work through you. Yes, I have been to the Banner office (Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.). I couldn't make myself plain, though you will not be sorry. They say I have done well for the first time.

SAMUEL BOWLES.

Mrs. Twing placed this message among her home papers, and gave it no further thought. At that time she had never visited Springfield, and knew nothing of Samuel Bowles. She asserts that so little interest does she take in politics and newspapers that she had never heard of him, or if she had she had no remembrance of him when his message came. After leaving Lake Pleasant camp meeting in 1880, she came to this city in September for the purpose of giving private sittings to people here. She had no thought of being used to write a book, and was proceeding with her usual work, when, on the 24th of September, while engaged, as she supposed, in writing a message for one of the members of the Star Publishing Company, she discovered she was writing another message "from Samuel Bowles," urging that she take up the work. "The suggestion was made," says Mrs. Twing, "that perhaps Mr. Bowles might be willing to write the proposed book during my stay in Springfield." Mr. Bowles replied in the following message:

The Second Message.

"Yes, most certainly, I would like to write a clear, concise, and decided statement of what has been my experience here. I can well understand the discussion and ridicule this would stir up, but there I seldom faltered in any act I thought was right, and with the perfect knowledge that earth life is not a farce, beginning and ending there, I feel like saying to the whole world that which, even if they did not believe, would leave its impress and help them a little to cast off the fetters of creeds, and show them that the Eternal Principle of life is really existent over here. I would also like to show the workers in the political field that change of body cannot take away the deep interest in the old republic. I should like to demonstrate the fact, as far as I can, that the force of habit and education over there, clings to us. Imagine senators and congressmen, dropping out of that field suddenly, and turning on the instant to psalm singing and hosannas! They would make the poorest kind of work at it, and not one of them taken over during this campaign but what would have the same interest in the November results, as though he had stood on the shores of time. While if Moody should come, he might enter right into the singing and the praise, and realize, in a measure, his idea of heaven. Why cannot people see that it is not the flesh that thinks, and that the thought principle has only changed bodies, and is the same? What would be heaven for one, is the poorest kind of heaven for another. Therefore, those who praise should feel more thankful to know that Eternal Wisdom has in spirit, as in earth life, made all things with thoughtfulness of the variety that different souls would require to help fill the measure of their happiness."

"On Oct. 15, 1880," continued Mrs. Twing, "Mr. Bowles used my hand to write the first paper of the wonderful little book now known all over the union as the Experiences of Samuel Bowles in Spirit Life. It was completed and published Dec. 1, 1880. The announcement of the work from Samuel Bowles, the great editor, from spirit life, was received with joy by thousands throughout the country."

The Homestead, while disbelieving in the authenticity of these "spirit books," still believes the publication of extracts from the alleged "writings" of Samuel Bowles will interest thousands. The first paper is reproduced entire. Its heading is as follows:

"Samuel Bowles' Entrance Upon Spirit Life."

"As life faded out and I was gradually losing hold of the old body, what had before been an intense pain in my chest, slowly changed to a sensation of heaviness. There was no inclination to throw off the incubus that weighed me down. The sobs in the room and the low tones were like far-away murmurs.

"My busy brain, in a few moments, brought up the vivid scenes of my life—its early struggles, its later successes—all were like a panorama spread out before me. I knew that what had been called the 'King of Terrors, was with me; but I felt no fear. Gradually the scenes in the room receded far away. The efforts of the old form for breath seemed like some other person beside myself. And then the loved ones of my childhood days were around me, with bright faces, holding out their arms and beckoning me over. A sensation then came to me that I was rising up out of myself, and from right over the old head there was another head that thought and saw!

"As my spirit was withdrawn from the body, I could look down on the agonized face and see the last efforts of the life-principle in leaving it. There was no feeling of fear, no pain. Death is not painful. I can recollect now and know there was not even surprise. It was like some half-forgotten lesson that had come back to me with force; but there was no feeling of awe, such as I had often thought must come to the person facing the mystery of death.

"I looked for a river—I saw none. I looked for the boatman, but I beheld only multitudes of glad faces as far as I could see. I had long before given up the thought that there were golden streets and gates of pearl, for I felt if there was an after life, it must be in accordance with nature. I tried to think, I tried to remember the many who were around me; yet they would say: "Not yet; rest, brother, rest."

"And I did rest—such rest as only tired souls have who have just come out of the turmoil of earth life. I did not realize I was rising, and still I had risen to quite a hight, for I remember looking back at the old home and the old body, peaceful now, with hands resting—hands that would nevermore grasp the pen and wield it for my fellow-men. I think even then a feeling of regret rose in my heart as the ambitions of my life appeared to have been cut off in their very prime: I sighed and said: 'Dear old hands, you have served me well, but your work is over."

"Yes, their work is over," said a voice beside me; "you have changed garments. Out of the old there has indeed been resurrected a new body that will take up the tangled thread of life where you laid it down, and wield again a power over the children of the earth that will be felt, and finish a work so nobly begun. Your work is not done; your active brain has worn out one body, therefore death is kinder than life, for every thought of beauty or power shall find its way back as though written in letters of fire. Therefore, brother, rest; but only to begin again with redoubled power."

"Almost unconsciously during this conversation had I been guided and helped into a room which had all the luxury, all the beauty, of our rooms in earth life; and each article was just as tangible to me as the articles in the old life. I looked at my hands and saw hands like the old ones, only every trace of age had passed away. I felt of my body and found I was the same man, clothed as a man, with no difference, only the look of youth. Then again I thought of the old body, and as by magic I could see down an inclined plane in the room where I lay, and I saw those who were performing the last sad offices.

"I was content then, though I knew my loved ones wept. I could see an end to their weeping. I felt a pity for them, yet joy mingled in the cup, for with the clogs of earth-life out of my way, with the strife all passed, a new ambition came to me, to be known yet in the old life; to do a work that should find its way if possible, even to the heart of a nation begun in purity, but made corrupt through greed of men; and I gloried that death was life, and a life that no circumstance or change could blot out.

"I think I rested then; for a while all was a blank; but when I came back to myself, such a glorious view presented itself to me. I was not expecting to see the throne of God, but I saw Nature as never before; lofty mountains, winding rivers, lovely valleys where the green foliage made an arch overhead and left shaded walks; lakes, with many a little boat, filled with pleasure parties; cottages, nestled down among green trees; mansions, that contained souls who had come up through great tribulation; pavilions, beautifully decorated, made with open sides, where there is often a multitude of eager spirits, listening to words that come from the hearts of men and women who have learned their lessons in earth-life and have risen through sorrow, but here have their place as teachers. All was peaceful: brotherly love was one of the conditios prevailing everywhere, as I saw it. I feel even now lost in wonder, when I realize that spirit life is so closely allied to earth life; that the heaven I had dreamed of is only your natural world intensified; that Nature without blemish exists for every soul; that personal life is so important that infinite wisdom has provided for it eternally; that once a man or woman realizes an existence, they go on forever.

"In my future papers I shall try to show the relations of the two worlds, the advantage gained from entering here ripe, instead of in childhood; the effect of war and bloodshed; the efforts of the spirit world to prevent great accidents, and its efficient work when they do occur; our manner of living; the food needed; what our sleep is like, etc., and most of all, the efforts of the spiritual congress to overcome the effect of the blunders made in the earthly one."

SAMUEL BOWLES.

"Mr. Bowles Finds He Had a Wrong Idea of Heaven."

The third paper gives an alleged description of heaven, tells how spirits rest, and how household duties are performed without manual labor. We quote:

"My ideal heaven, the one I thought of in the long hours when death and life were fighting for victory, was one which changed the man—one which made the avaricious man less avaricious; the liar one who would immediately seek for truth; the drunkard one who would wish to drink from pure fountains. But a surprise awaited me. In interviewing myself I found the same ambitions existing, only much stronger. I found that to be, was to retain the properties of self. Therefore, when I first found the work that spirit-life demanded, I thought what a worse than myth was the old ideal song, "There is rest for the weary." I turned aside from the contemplation of the past to see what new resolves the future had in store for me. There are times when the soul would soar upward; but to complete the most perfect work, it must still review the past. Advanced spirits tell me, when at times they would fain look into the mystery of higher spheres, they are called upon by a voice, not to be disregarded, to visit earth-life, and help free some suffering one from the old body. So when we would feel wise and begin to know spirit-life, we are called again to look into the old lessons of earth-life. Thus, whatever comes to us we are not allowed to rise to that hight that the grievous suffering of one of earth-life's humblest children would not awaken our sympathy. The world is full of suffering, and, of course, a spirit to be cognizant of it all must be omnipotent. But, with people of similar temperaments there is a sympathy that, like a magnetic cord, draws the spirit to the sufferer. Our chief growth depends on how we receive the lessons that are taught us through our own suffering, or our sympathy with the sufferings of others.

Heaven Has No Seasons, No Nights.

"The days here are like unto your days there; but no night follows. Still, to every soul there comes at times something like a silvery mist that is soothing and means rest. It comes when the spirit-brain is tired and life begins to assume the weary feeling of the old life. Yet how great is the wisdom that causes these periods of rest as they are needed; for with the precision of the most perfect military encampment each takes his stand guarding those in earth-life. This perfect order does not distress, and those who have been disciplined to it never rebel. We do not count time here. Heaven has no spring or gloomy November. Gradually, as is needed, our foliage drops, but in the old going down there is always the bud left for the new. Flowers that grow spontaneously, let the old stalks wither, and out from the roots come the new."

Spirits Get the Benefit of Our Food.

"The duties of the household, that in earth-life cause such hard work and aching feet, are performed without much manual labor in a way to satisfy every want. Everything moves with regularity. There is no clashing in a well-developed household here. The sympathy between the two worlds is so great that when you are supplying your bodily wants by cooking, we get the spirit of the food which rises, and it is utilized by us; and as our appetites are, such food do we attract to us. I hope I may be understood in this, for I have seen gluttons in earth-life who shrank from death because they feared they would have nothing to eat."

How Spirits Are Clothed.

"I have told you heaven is work, but still no busy hands are making our wardrobe; no tired ones cleanse them. 'Do we always wear the same clothing?' is often asked. I will answer, no; for, as the soul grows, as its capacities for good enlarge, our raiment grows brighter. It changes in texture, and assumes beauties before unknown. Dress in your life depends on the state of the pocket; here, on the state of the soul. Therefore it is not strange to us to see a spirit clothed in the plainest garb, while even then the old body is being arrayed in the finest of satin. On the other hand, I have seen spirits here so gorgeously clothed that they looked like white glittering forms. I have no words to describe the texture or its manufacture, for it comes just as naturally as the spirit body, and as I said, the increase in beauty of body is in proportion to the increase of soul-worth. The manner and fashion of dressing, as in earth-life, we leave entirely behind, save when we wish to appear to our friends in a natural way; then, from the elements we can extract from the clothing of those around, we are taught to clothe ourselves for the time being. Also, in appearing to the clairvoyant's vision we are instructed to appear, if possible, in garbs that have a resemblance to what we wore there, the more readily to be recognized by our friends."

The Medium Asks Questions.

Ques.—What is your house made of, and who made it?

Ans.—You ask what is my house made of? To a mind surrounded by the material, this is very hard to make plain. For ages on the earth plane there have been mansions built and houses of less pretentious appearance, but after doing good service there, they rot and crumble away. The cause of this decay is because the subtle essence which held the material together has departed, and, as matter is ever existent, the finest part, instead of settling into the earth, must rise. Therefore, that essence, as well as that which comes from buildings destroyed by fire, is fashioned, not by hands, but by the All-Creative Power, into our homes. And thus are homes made which cannot fall in their infinite variety to please the most critical taste. No spirit, in a material sense, builds his home; still, as the spirit expands, and his love for the beautiful is increased, the home he lives in will assume more beauty and be capable of changes, until the spirit passes to a higher sphere.

Spirit Grass and Spirit Flowers.

Ques.—You spoke of green grass. What is it made of, and does it go to seed?

Ans.—Yes, I spoke of green grass; but when you wish me to tell of what it is made, as with every other spiritual element, you give me a question I cannot answer. If I asked you what your grass is made of, you would name the different properties existing while I should have to say that our grass consists of the spirit of the properties of earthly grass. Our grass is subject to changes. In some instances I have seen it present the appearance of going to seed. But that was not in contact with our homes, as it is the will of the owner that all should be most beautiful here. Our tastes are much the same as in earth-life, but we work more with our will power than with our hands.

Ques.—You spoke of cool shade trees. Do you have hot and cold weather there?

Ans.—I spoke of the cool shade, not so much because there is exceeding heat to flee from, as that the green shade is pleasant after the glare of light that exists; and, though we have neither very hot or very cold weather, still, there is a variety that makes it pleasant for all. What would be agreeable for one might not be for another, and therefore these things are so well chosen and arranged that all may be satisfied.

Ques.—If you have a variety of temperature, how can flowers of different seasons, in earth-life, bloom together in spirit-life?

Ans.—As to the flowers all blooming together, your earth-world, with its variations of climate, warm in some places, cold in others, is all the time producing for us the very essence or spirit of the finest and most hardy flowers to go on with their eternal growth. Thus, you see, when flowers once exist here, they always will exist, only subject to changes somewhat like the changes you have there. I know this will be enigmatical to you, but see the wisdom of it. If one particular flower always, and without changing, kept the same appearance, it would become monotonous, like those manufactured by hand in earth-life. But it is not so. New buds and blossoms greet our sight—the old ones with their drooping heads, sending out their spirits to the new.

What Spirit Carpets Look Like.

Ques.—What are your carpets made of?

Ans.—You ask of what our carpets are made, and I must again tell you they are a spiritual reproduction of our most beautiful idea of a carpet.

Ques.—How far is your home from earth, and in what sphere is it?

Ans.—Counting by miles, I must be very many of them from the earth, but by magnetic attraction and our powers of locomotion, I am but little ways from the earth, for in an instant I am able to reach down when love calls me.

The spheres, as I have studied them, I wish to make the subject of a work to come hereafter, as I know, with what little I have experienced, I shall give a somewhat different idea of them from what I perceive is in many minds in earth-life. But in these papers, writing, as I do, with only a short experience, I wish to describe scenes from the plane on which I am now existing, and from that which I have passed through. I must, step by step, learn the glories that will open to me, and then tell you. In this effort I trust I have only begun a series of efforts which may grow clearer as I advance.

May all things be made plain to me, because I still would labor for my fellow-men—those who soon, at the longest, are to come over themselves, and see whether my pen pictures have led them into wrong ideas of spirit-life.

How Spirits Sleep.

Ques.—You say in one place you have no night, yet you speak in this paper of the "glare of light." Do you have a glare all of the time? If not, what succeeds it?

Ans.—I have previously stated that there was no night here, or no night like your night, but that each soul had its time for rest, and in order to rest, the conditions necessary must exist. As to the glare of light, I would state that different degrees of light and heat are necessary to the spiritual vegetation ever existent, and that, as in earth-life, we, when the light is most intense, seek for shade. As Nature is ever repeating itself, we find the most exquisite bowers, with green foliage all around, where we can enjoy as much of the cooling breeze as though in earth-life we had come heated and weary to one of Nature's green recesses.

Visits the Republican Office.

In one of the papers reference is made to visits to earth and ghostly jaunts through the Springfield Republican office:

"Though I go with silent footsteps to my old earthly home, no door swings upon its hinges. Though I gaze in loved faces, bathed in tears, no answering tear-drop tells them of my presence. Though I gently touch mementoes of my past, the dull inanimate objects know not their owner is there. Though I go into the old office and walk through the different rooms, and see the well-remembered faces, yet they are bent just as busily over their work as though the one who expressed thought there once, and devised ways for their publication to the world, was not waiting for recognition. Oh! if what there was of life—its works, its recompenses—is all, how worse than a beggar would a spirit feel among his own human friends; how he would laugh at a farce of life which left all behind."

Garfield and Guiteau Meet as Spirits.

The spirit of Samuel Bowles is supposed to have been present on earth at the death of Garfield, at the hanging of Guiteau, and at the meeting in the spirit world of the two, which is described as follows:

"The murdered man and his murderer met here. Would that I had language to fitly portray the meeting. The two murdered men stood face to face. Garfield, with a beautiful love filling his heart, realizing that he should not condemn, said: 'It is well; stand for the truth. The past like a vivid dream has still its place in my memory. The present is full of work; I must help my loved ones left behind, and through the present and the unending future I have no time to hate."

"Guiteau stood, wondering how he remembered the kind words spoken in his childhood's home. He remembered his past hopes and ambitions, and now he wondered all the more what impulse prompted him to murder. As in a dream he recalled his midnight meeting with his supposed God, who he falsely imagined encouraged him to 'remove the President.' He remembered the feeling of being pushed forward, and then a thought came to him that he deliberately planned a murder. He remembered that in prison he was sorry he had not done the work more perfectly and caused less suffering. But after his own life had been sacrificed all came back to him. He is now willing to stand before a condemning world and say 'There is obsession in homes, in churches and politics. I have been an instrument in a false cause.' Oh, Guiteau! brought down to an ignominious death, made more wretched in spirit-life because of the falseness and cruelty of those base spirits who urged him on, but left him at the hour of his extremity.—The Homestead.

THE CHURCHES AND PEACE.

Conference in London.

To the Editor Progressive Thinker:—It is not often I ask for space in your columus of late years—not because I have lost interest in your valuable paper, but I have too much other work at the present to engage my attention I believe, however, I have an important piece of news to communicate to you, and one which I think every true Spiritualist will be glad to welcome. I have always considered the cause of International Peace one which should claim a good share of our speakers' and writers' best thoughts and earnest advocacy.

Through a short letter of mine which was inserted in the Daily News of London, England, a short time since, in answer to one of Rev. Hirst Hollowell's of Rochdale, calling for a conference of all religious faiths (as per inclosed cutting), I received an invitation to attend a preliminary meeting in Exeter Hall, London, on May 6th, when a very interesting session was held in furtherance of a World's Peace Conference. The Bishop of Hereford, Eng., occupied the chair, and a number of prominent Free Church ministers took part in the discussion. I enjoyed the meeting very much, and I believe it will leave a mark on the pages of history. To see the ministers of various denominations and widely different faiths making an effort to sink dogmatic differences and work together in the glorious cause of International Peace, was to me a very inspiring sight.

For years it has been a fond hope of mine that some definite and determined effort should be put forth in support of a prolonged peace. I have written on behalf of it in many different letters to the press, and in a pamphlet on "The World's Fair and the Brotherhood of Man," written in 1891, I advocated the idea. Later on I published a leaflet upon the same lines, and a considerable number of each have been sold or given away to friends in various States.

The idea which gained most favor from those present was that a suitable petition should be drawn up and signed by influential persons of all nations, as far as practical in the limited time at disposal before the meeting of the second Hague Conference; further, that a great conference of religious and other bodies should be held at The Hague just previous to the one already arranged for, or at the same time, and that strongly worded resolutions should be passed asking for the question of "limitation of armaments" to have a fair amount of attention given to it, that the world-wide petition and resolutions should be presented to the Second Hague Conference by a strong delegation; and further, that the churches of the German Empire should be asked to bring pressure to bear upon their government to aid in the matter of limiting the expenditure on armaments. How far the committee will succeed in carrying out this greatly to be desired program remains to be seen, but a sincere and earnest spirit seemed to permeate the assembly, and I trust great good may result from the meeting.

The various camp meetings throughout the States would seem to be a splendid field for increasing public interest in the matter of "disarmament"—gradual, of course, but the bigger slice we can get cut off the better. Modern military and naval expenses, to my mind, constitute a fearful and unjustifiable tax on industry. May something be done speedily to arrest them.

WILLIAM E. BONNEY.

Monk Sherborne, Basingstoke, Eng.

OLD RELIGION FAST VANISHING.

Methodist Professor Startles Cincinnati Ministers by Assertion.

Cincinnati, O., May 27.—Dr. Borden P. Bowne, professor of theology at the Methodist Theological Seminary at Boston, declared to a company of 200 ministers at the Methodist Book Concern this morning that the orthodoxy of fifty years ago has about broken up and vanished. He said that creeds and doctrines and interpretations are going through an evolution toward advanced truth. It behooves the church, said Dr. Bowne, to keep its head clear and cool, for "if the millennium should come in over night a great many of those having 'vested rights' would not just know where to locate themselves."

"It is my firm conviction," said Dr. Bowne, "that the changes in the beliefs and creeds of our church have been for the better. I know of only a few serious persons who would be willing to go back in silence, in political economy and in religion to a time twenty-five years ago."—Chicago Examiner.

A REMARKABLE CASE.

Does It Illustrate Spirit Control, or an Extra Personality in the Person of Charles E. Barnes?—A Puzzling Question for Scientists and Spiritualists to Consider.

Charles E. Barnes, whose disappearance from the Sound steamer Priscilla some time ago as she was making her way from New York to Fall River, was interpreted as a case of suicide, has joined his wife in Europe and the two are on a second honeymoon.

Mr. Barnes was manager here for a typewriter company. After he dropped out of the world nothing was heard of him until two months ago, when he met his brother in Quebec and was awakened from a condition of lost memory considered remarkable. The brother was walking to his office when he met a man whom he thought to be the perfect double of his brother. He stared at the man, who looked up. With startled looks both gazed at each other. Charles Barnes—for the supposed double was the real brother—reeled forward and fell into his arms calling: "Will! Will! what is the matter? Where am I?

Calls for Wife.

The chance meeting on the street had in a flash called back the lost identity, and the memories of the past came surging back to the mind, which had been blank to all that had occurred previous to the landing of the Priscilla at Fall River.

"Where is Kate? Where is my wife? Have I been ill?" were some of the questions which Barnes asked his brother in quick succession.

The story of his disappearance and the belief of all his relatives that he was dead was told to him. Mrs. Barnes, who had been in straitened means, was in Europe chaperoning a party of girls, and as soon as her address was learned, Barnes cabled her. On receiving her reply he sailed to join her.

The most remarkable feature of the whole marvelous tale is the fact that during the years that Barnes was unaware of his identity, he amassed more than $300,000 by fortunate investments in timber and mining claims in Manitoba.

The adventures of Barnes during the three years of his strange mental lapse and the remarkable manner in which his memory was restored, were told yesterday by Mrs. Henry A. Buttz, wife of the president of the Drew Theological Seminary, and aunt of Mrs. Barnes, at her home in Madison, N. J., yesterday.

Memory Plays Trick.

"Mr. Barnes remembers nothing as to how he left the Fall River steamer. He first became conscious and normal, except his loss of memory, while in a lumber camp in the Northwest. All of his past was a complete blank to him, and he began to work with the men in the logging camp. From his cards he supposed that his name must be Charles E. Barnes, and so continued to use his real name. For several months he remained in the camp. Then he got timber land and established a business for himself. His financial success was marked, but nothing of his past came back to him.

"His business often took him to Quebec, and it was on one of these trips that he met his brother. My husband and I were in Rome with Mrs. Barnes. The first news came in a cable to my husband. It was arranged for Mr. Barnes to join his wife; it was impossible for her to return, as she was chaperoning a party of six young women on a tour of Europe."

Mr. Barnes says he does not remember that he was injured or received any shock while he was on the steamer. He was quite run down from business cares and had taken the trip to Boston by sea in the hope that it would afford relaxation. He says he can remember nothing that occurred on the trip.—The Evening Bulletin, Providence, R. I.

ACQUAINTED WITH GOD.

Dr. Leach Urges Hearers to Get More Familiar With the Almighty. . . .

To the Editor:—The following report of a "Sermon" from the Chicago Chronicle, suggests a query as to the intellectual calibre of a congregation who will listen to "teachings" involving such brazen familiarity and narrow conceptions of the First great Cause:

"Dr. W. B. Leach electrified his congregation in the Sacramento Boulevard Methodist church yesterday by calling out, "How are you, God?"

"God is all right," he went on. "It takes a stroke of lightning or an earthquake to wake up some people. The trouble is, the most of us are not on speaking terms with God. Some of us not enough to say thanks for a meal of good things or health or most anything else."

"What I'd like is to see you all on better terms with God. Mark me well, if you don't get acquainted with God here you'll be apt to be unnoticed up yonder. I wish I could introduce some political candidates to God. A good many of them run business of state as if God didn't amount to much. Better look out. God watches you and will require a reckoning. I plead for a little knowledge of God in home, in school, and state. To know him is to love him. God help us all to know, love and serve him."

In striking contrast with the above, Andrew Jackson Davis has written in the Great Harmonia, Vol. 2, page 354, "Concerning the Deity, no human spirit has yet conceived a thought or uttered a word as it conceives of the Father sufficiently magnanimous, sublime or expressive to be applied to even one of the exalted individuals, who though once a resident upon some Earth, now treads the beautiful paths and flowering valleys of the Spirit Home. W. E. P.

Chicago, Illinois.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Billsful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D. Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter.

Eyesight Restored.

Eyeglasses May Be Abandoned.

A Wonderful Discovery That Corrects Afflictions of the Eye Without Cutting or Drugging.

There is no need for cutting, drugging or probing the eye for the relief of most forms of disease, as a new method—the Actina treatment—has been discovered which eliminates the necessity of former torturous methods. There is no risk or necessity of experimenting, as many people report having been cured of failing eyesight, cataracts, granulated lids and other afflictions of the eye after being pronounced incurable, through this grand discovery.

Mr. A. O. T. Pennington, special agent Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "Having used Actina for several years, I cheerfully recommend it for the cure of eye, ear and throat affections. It cured my mother, of cataracts."

Susan Cardwell, Lincoln, Kan., writes: "I am 73 years old. I was so blind I could only know persons by their voices. After using Actina I can now thread a needle without glasses."

Mrs. T. F. Moyle, Waterford, Wis., writes:—"About two years ago I was taken with iritis in both eyes and nearly went blind and it was thought an operation would be necessary. I sent for an Actina last April and it has taken all the inflamation out and my eyes are now well.

Hundreds of other testimonials will be sent on application. "Actina" is purely a home treatment and self-administered by the patient, and is sent on trial postpaid. If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept 34B, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive absolutely free a valuable book, Professor Wilson's Treatise on Disease.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

915

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

Science and a Future Life.

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

"AS IT IS TO BE."

A Very Suggestive Work Which Beams With Spiritual Truths.

This is a beautiful book, by Cora Lynn Daniels, and it scintillates with grand spiritual thought. An idea of this work can be obtained by reading the titles of a few of the chapters therein:

The process of Dying; Light and Spirit; The Law of Attraction; Senses of the Spirit; What Is unconscious Will; Fear; Astrology; The God-Soul of Man; The Drama; A Day in Heaven. Price $1.00.

JIM, or The Touch of An Angel Mother.

BY CARRIE E. S. TWING.

Her dedicatory lines are sufficient to show the spirit of the book as well as the author, it reads, "Because my own children are all under the tender care of the angels, and my heart is hungry for the love of the young, I most lovingly dedicate this book to the children of the world." This book is full of soul elevating and interesting thought. Price, cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

Apollonius of Tyana Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents.

MEDIUMSHIP and its DEVELOPMENT, and how to Mesmerize to Assist Development. By W. H. Bach. Paper 25 cents;

COMMON SENSE By Thomas Paine. A Revolutionary pamphlet, addressed to the inhabitants of America in 1776, with explanatory notice by an English author. Paper. 15 cents.

Why I Am a Vegetarian. An address delivered before the Chicago Vegetarian Society By J. Howard Moore. Price, 25 cents.

THE PRIEST, THE WOMAN —AND— THE CONFESSIONAL.

BY FATHER CHINIQUY.

This is a most valuable book. It comes from an Ex-Priest, whose character is above reproach, and who knows what he is talking about. Everybody should read it. Price, $1.00. It contains the following chapters:

CHAPTER I.
The Struggle before the Surrender of Womanly Self-respect in the Confessional.

CHAPTER II.
Auricular Confession a Deep Pit of Perdition for the Priest.

CHAPTER III.
The Confessional is the Modern Sodom.

CHAPTER IV.
How the Vow of Celibacy of the Priests is made easy by Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER V.
The highly-educated and refined Woman in the Confessional—What becomes of her after unconditional surrender—Her irreparable Ruin.

CHAPTER VI.
Auricular Confession destroys all the Sacred Ties of Marriage and Human Society.

CHAPTER VII.
Should Auricular Confession be tolerated among Civilized Nations?

CHAPTER VIII.
Does Auricular Confession bring Peace to the Soul?

CHAPTER IX.
The Dogma of Auricular Confession a Sacrilegious Imposture.

CHAPTER X.
God compels the Church of Rome to confess the Abominations of Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER XI.
Auricular Confession in Australia, America, and France.

CHAPTER XII.
A Chapter for the Consideration of Legislators, Husbands and Fathers—Some of the matters on which the Priest of Home must Question his Penitents.

Sent Post-paid, Price, $1.00.

RADIANT ENERGY and Its Analysis, Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price, cloth, $1.75.

THE SOUL: ITS NATURE; RELATIONS AND EXPRESSIONS IN HUMAN EMBODIMENTS. Third edition now on sale. Price $1.00. This is one of the best books given by the guides of Mrs Cora L. V. Richmond. They are really lessons, published primarily, as a book of reference for those who have been members of the classes receiving them. This volume is a careful compilation from reports of lessons, containing the bases of the teachings.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Mrs. Lily M. Thiebaud writes from San Bernardino, Cal.: "Our work in San Bernardino is very encouraging. I again accepted the pastorship of the society here, with the promise that I might have another fill my place if I wished to be absent. I gave three Sundays, closing with May 5th, at Riverside. I succeeded in organizing a very enthusiastic society there with Mr. Richard Roberts president and James Boyle, secretary."

Mrs. Amanda Coffman, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been visiting friends in this city for the past week, and thinks she will come again sometime.

Correspondent writes: "The Psychical Research Society of Rockford, Ill., greatly enjoyed an address from Dr. George B. Warne, president of the State Association of Spiritualists, on Sunday evening, June 2. The Dotor has the terrible habit of saying the right thing at the right time in all his lectures. Unless he changes his habits in this regard there will not be enough of him left to spread all over the State, unless he can acquire ability to become ubiquitous. Dr. Warne was followed by Mrs. West of Elgin, as a message bearer. Mrs. West was formerly of this city, and her great worth as a medium is known to all. Her very numerous messages were all gladly welcomed by the recipients, and gave, so far as this writer has information, perfect satisfaction. A business meeting was held after the public exercises, and a letter was read inviting the Society to join that of Elgin in a Grove Meeting on Sunday, June 23, in that city. The invitation was ordially accepted with thanks, and a committee (with Dr. Hammond as chairman), was appointed to do all needful things in regard to transportation, etc., the committee having general supervision of the visitors, who it is expected, will be numerous, as they will there meet visitors from Chicago, and from other societies in northern Illinois, and it is hoped from southern Wisconsin."

Albert P. Blinn writes from Norwich, Ct.: "At the directors meeting of the Association, held at Lake Pleasant, May 14, Francis B. Woodbury of Greenfield, Mass., was elected director in place of Levi A. Randall, resigned, and the clerk was instructed to purchase 14 gasoline arc lamps, to be used to light the grounds during the months of July and August. The water plant is in operation and water is being furnished all the cottages on both the old and new grounds. Dancing parties are being held each Thursday and Saturday evening in the Temple, and arrangements are being made for an appropriate celebration of the "Glorious Fourth."

W. W. Kincaid writes that Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley is expected to be with the society at Meadville, Pa., during June.

Arzella C. Clay writes: "On May 28, friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Amanda Coffman, in Grand Rapids, Mich., and gave a party for the writer, which has lightened my burdens in my old age. A few ladies with church theories attended; as a result they want to get better acquainted with the Spiritualists."

George W. Kates and wife had a successful season of two months in Cleveland, O., for the Ladies' Temple Fund Society, who own their Temple, and conduct all meetings. These ladies are showing what energy and enthusiasm can do for our cause. United work is always productive Mr. and Mrs. Kates have gone to their home near Cheyney, Pa., for rest and recuperation during June and July. Then they will briefly serve the camps at Parkland, Pa., Lake Pleasant, Mass., and Sunapee, N. H. They will serve the Baltimore, Md., church as pastors for the ensuing season. Address them at Cheyney, Pa.

The Meadville (Pa.) Republican says: "Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley, Spiritualist lecturer, addressed a large audience in Odd Fellows' temple Sunday evening. Mrs. Cooley, who has been heard here before, is an able and interesting speaker and her present series of meetings will have large audiences."

Helen Stuart Richings has been lecturing to excellent audiences in Grand Rapids, Mich. She will be in Watertown, N. Y., 26 Main St., where she can be addressed for the next few weeks.

Eteinne Faucht writes: "The Progressive Spiritual Society held its regular Sunday evening meeting at northwest corner of North avenue and Burling street last Sunday. We were once more pleased to have in our midst Dr. and Mrs. Caird, who have suspended the Sunday services of the First Fraternal Order of Spiritualists for the summer season. There were also present Mr. and Mrs. Bloom and Mrs. Wilson, who served the souls with new thought. Our society is pure and spiritual, and attracts only earnest applicants. Six more applicants were initiated last night, June 5, during our regular monthly meeting."

Carrie L. Hatch writes from 9 Appleton St., Boston: "The last meeting of the season was held in the above place. The day was Memorial Day, and the hall was beautifully decorated with flags and flowers. The Memorial Chair was decorated with ribbons and flowers. The weather was all that could be desered. We regretted very much the absence of the president, Mrs. Mattie E. A. Allbe, who was detained at home by the illness of her husband. The meeting was called to order by the vice-president, who spoke of the reason for which we were assembled. The following talent took part: Mrs. Hattie E. Mason, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, Mrs. B. W. Belcher, Miss Etta Willis, and Mrs. W. J. Willis. Mrs. H. Hall sang several selections. The social hour before supper was one of the pleasing features of the day. A bountiful supper was served, and the evening meeting was one of the finest. The flowers were sent to sick members. This meeting closes until October, when this society will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary. Thanks are extended to all who in any way assisted in making the occasion a success, and to all who brought flowers for decorations."

Mrs C. H. Thompson writes: "The Fraternal Daughters held their semi-weekly meeting at the home of Brother and Sister Knapp, 1151 Monroe street, June 6. The afternoon session was taken up with reading, and at 6 o'clock we all partook of supper, at 15 cents per plate; then at 8 our evening session was opened by our president, Mrs. Alice Sexsmith, who was followed with music and recitations. The main feature of the evening was "A Lemon Squeeze." Before having this, Brother Warner, made very interesting remarks on the "Lemon." The two large front rooms were decorated with white and yellow bunting, also with branches from the trees, which were loaded with imitation lemons. These lemons cost 10 cents each, which entitled the purchaser to a reading or a prize. There were 75 people present at the evening meeting, and we are very thankful to say this was one of the real Fraternal socials of which there are many more to follow this summer, and we all send our heartiest appreciation to Sisters Mrs. Knapp and Miss L. Knapp and Brother Knapp for their untiring efforts to make everything they undertake to do, a success. When we counted up our finances we had over fifteen dollars for our treasury. The following mediums took part: Mrs. Dr. Caird, Knapp, Sexsmith, Weaver, Switzer, Adams, Miner and Brother C. A. Thompson. Our next meeting will be held at Mrs J. S. Adams', 1007 W. Harrison street, Wednesday, June 19, 2:30 p. m. We are going to have a "Snipping Party. Come out and get acquainted, and cast dull care away.

W. F. Sargent writes from Springfield, Mo.: "Rev. W. F. Peck of St. Lewis, Mo., has just closed a series of meetings for the First Society of Spiritualists, from which I believe great good will result. He is an earnest, eloquent speaker, and his meetings were well attended by highly appreciative audiences. He is not a trance speaker, nor a medium; he speaks with his eyes open, giving his own sentiments, and is himself responsible for what he says. He deals with the philosophy of Spiritualism, the unity of life, the brotherhood of man, his eternal progress and endless existence, and the happiness in store for him here and hereafter as the reward of right living. He holds up Spiritualism as the evolution of all past religions, a universal and a scientific religion, a religion of good deeds, and moral life. There are a large number of Spiritualists here in Springfield but there has been so much fraud and graft in some who have been here claiming to be mediums for physical demonstrations, that the organization has been broken into fragments, contending against each other, and many have lost heart and hope and withdrawn from all organized effort. Mr. Peck spoke the right word, in the right manner, and helped the cause greatly."

F. Anlauf writes from Oklahoma city, Okla.: "Our meetings here are progressing nicely with a good attendance, Mrs. S. E. G. Thorp, who was ordained a minister of our gospel on May 26, being our principal speaker. Her test work after the lectures is of a high order, and attracts an intelligent class of investigators. Mr. N Becker, formerly of Dixon, Ill., is also doing some splendid work in the test line. The Ladies of the Aid are making every effort to raise sufficient money to buy a building site for a home of our own, and they are doing nicely."

Mrs. Carrie H. Taintor has been lecturing at West Derry, N. H., in the Odd Fellows' Hall. During June she will lecture there. Her meetings have been largely attended. Address her in care of Box 138 for engagements.

Mrs. DeWolf Kizer writes: "I expect to be in Chicago the first of July for a visit, and hope then to see some of my friends before I go to camp."

A. D. Champney, secretary, writes from Rockport, Me.: "Temple Heights Spiritualist Camp-meeting opens August 10 and closes August 18. Speakers: Harrison D. Barrett, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Fred A. Wiggin, Brookline, Mass.; Mrs. A. J. Pettengill, Malden, Mass.; and Mrs. Minerva Barwise, Bangor, Me.; Madam Marie Foster, Boston, Vocalist."

Our Sandusky, Ohio, correspondent writes: "Mrs. Edith McCrosson of Columbus, Ohio, has just closed a very successful engagement with the Psychic Research Society of this city. Her lectures were clear and pointed, while her message work ranked with the best we have ever had, and richly deserve the many words of praise which were bestowed on her at the close of each meeting. The attendance increased every week while Mrs. McCrosson was here, and she made many friends during her stay, who unite in hoping that she may visit our city again in the fall, when our meetings will be resumed.

Mrs. S. Booth writes from Hardwick, Vt., "Mrs. Fannie Spalding of Norwich, Ct., has been speaking for our Society for three Sundays. She held meetings in S. V. Hall, both afternoon and evening. Many have of late been seeking to learn something of the religion of the angels. Mrs. Spalding, by her winning personality, the beautiful and instructive lectures from guides, and the clear and correct tests from the dear little Indian girl Ulla, has done much to deepen the interest. We feel our society has gained a new impetus, and hopes again in the future, to have her with us."

S. A. Huntington writes from Malden, Mass.: "Malden Progressive Spiritual society, Louise Hall, 138 Pleasant street., Mrs. F. S. Sheriff, president. Dr. C. L. Willis of Boston, was the speaker and message bearer on Sunday evening, June 2. Dr. Willis chose for his theme the 56th psalm, giving, as he always does, a very interesting address. After the lecture he gave many fine messages. At the close of his lecture he read a beautiful poem entitled, "There Are Angels I Know." Mrs. Alice M. Whall of Everett, Mass., will be the speaker on June 9, and M. A. George of Boston, on June 16. Circles every Thursday evening at 7:30 p. m., and Sundays 11 a. m., and 3:30 p. m. Supper third Thursday at 6:30 p. m.

Nicholas Becker writes from Oklahoma City, Okla.: "The Spiritualists of Oklahoma City have buckled on the armor anew, and are standing togther and are working hard to spread the truth to those in darkness. The first Spiritualist Society has been re-organized and we are holding public meetings every Sunday at 8 p. m. Hall on Main street. May 26, Mrs. C. M. Thorp of this city, was duly ordained a minister by the State Missionary, Mrs. Alice Baker, of Dallas, Texas. Mrs. Thorp is a good inspirational speaker, and a kind and loveable woman. She is to occupy our rostrum during the year."

The Golden Star Center Spiritual Society will continue meeting through June, July and August, evenings only, at Star Lodge Hall, 378 South Western avenue, assisted by best speakers and mediums. June 16, Dr. Burgess, June 23, Mrs, Kusserow and others. Meetings conducted by Jas. E. Coe.

Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, writes from Mancelona, Mich., in reference to the Forest Home Camp: "Programs are ready. Anyone wishing one or more for circulation can write me for them. If it is all the same, postage is very acceptable. To those who love to linger in nature's beauties and solitude, Bacon says that whoever is delighted with solitude is either a wild beast or a God. To revel in the broad expanse of inland lake and scenery as nature made it, away from the busy, noisy, hot and dusty city; to rest free from fashion and dress, care and worry; to simply be easy and enjoy one's self—you can enjoy all this, and in the mean time listen to some of our best speakers, and with song, recitations and messages pass away the whole duration of camp pleasantly and profitably. Other attractions are likely to be carried out, and we wish to make everyone welcome to our beautiful camp of Northern Michigan.

Carl S. Sollinger writes: "May 26, closed a successful two months' engagment of Rev. Geo. W. Kates and wife, at the first Spiritualists' Temple, Fullerton street, Cleveland, O. Both have added new friends to the many they could count before. The messages given by Mrs. Kates consoled many bereaved and aching hearts, and dried their burning tears. The members of the Temple Society wish them God speed until we meet again. Mrs. Annette J. Pettengill of Malden, Mass., will minister to us during the month of June. In the months of July and August we will hold only Sunday evening service, to give all who cannot go to the camp grounds a chance to hear some truths of our glorious cause."

Emma A. Ellis writes: Dame Nature beamed her most resplendent smiles on the first Summer Social of The Band of Harmony, which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Goodrich, Oak Park, the genial host had decorated the entire lower floor of their beautiful home with branches of wild cherry blooms. The afternoon was devoted to euchre, after which supper was served. In the evening a program of music and recitations was given, closing with an "Auction" of parcels which the ladies had donated. Much hilarity followed the jests and witticisms of the auctioneer. A goodly sum was realized which in a measure mitigated the regret of having to disperse. With thanks to the host and hostess, we journeyed city-ward, promising to meet again Thursday, June 20, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L'Hommedieu, 7748 Peoria street. Take Wentworth avenue car to 78th street, and go west two blocks."

A. W. Bloom writes: "In regard to the excursion to Elgin, Ill., on June 23, you can purchase $6.00 worth of tickets for $5.00 to go and return on any regular train on the Aurora and Elgin Electric line. Children under six years free; children from 6 to 12, one-half fare." The Electric Ry. Co. has made us an offer of a special car or cars attached to the 11:50 forenoon train, if we get 55 to 70 together in one bunch, as that is the seating capacity of a car. Send in your names by Friday, June 21, to make arrangements for the special cars, to the Arrangement Committee, or A. W. Bloom, 1113 Lincoln avenue."

THE ONE LIFE.

Joy to the world! at last 'tis found,
The way that leads to radiant life;
Bright sprits brought the knowledge 'round
That makes us all forget our strife.

They show us that what we call death,
And feared so long, we should not fear,
It leads out to a larger life,
And brings us to a holier sphere.

And so this mystery called death
No longer chains our souls in fear,
We hail it as a welcome guest,
To lead us to a brighter sphere.

Yet this we know, by reason taught,
No place can make our heaven or hell,
But in our hearts and in our minds,
Dire darkness or bright blessings dwell.

The life that springs from inner soul,
Like blossoms from the plant we see,
Will shed its fragrance or its blight
On all around, from you and me.

So let us live the law of love,
With knowledge, wisdom, highest art,
And bring to all, and share with each,
This life of which we all are part.

SARAH STONE ROCKHILL.
Alliance, Ohio.

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

THE N. S. A.

The Fifteenth Annual Convention of of the National Spiritualists' Association Will Be Held in Masonic Temple, F and Ninth Streets, N. W., Washington, D. C., October 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18, 1907.

Day sessions, at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., will be devoted to business only. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend these business meetings, to which no admission fee is charged. Evening exercises will consist of grand programs of varied and entertaining numbers, including vocal and instrumental selections by talented artists; Lectures and Spirit messages at each meeting by many of the most noted and gifted platform workers of the country.

Among those who have been invited and who expect to be present and participate in the evening services are W. J. Colville, Mrs. H. P. Russegue, Mesdames Clara Watson, R. S. Lillie, Zadia B. Kates, Elizabeth Harlow, Elizabeth Lowe Watson, Messrs. Dr. Geo. A. Fuller, J. Clegg Wright, Oscar A. Edgerly, Albert P. Blinn, speakers.

Mediums, Mrs. C. D. Pruden, Katie Ham, Georgia Gladys Cooley, E. W. Sprague, Alice Sexsmith, M. T. Longley, and others.

Come One and All to This Great Convention of 5 Days.

Certificate tickets will not be arranged for this year, but special excursion rates at lower value can be secured from all points by visitors and delegates purchasing tickets for Jamestown Exposition with stop-over privileges of ten days at Washington. Call for these at your railroad offices and stations.

The Ebbitt House of Washington, 14th and F Streets N. W., will be the hotel for our people. The Ebbitt is well located within walking distance of Masonic Temple, and a handsome hotel; its usual rates, American plan, are from $4.00 a day up; our special rates there are $2.50 per day, two persons in a room. Write to the Manager and secure your rooms.

THE ANNUAL RECEPTION will be omitted this year, owing to five days' Convention, The sessions will begin Monday, October 14, at 10 a. m. All are invited.

HARRISON D. BARRETT,
President.
MARY T. LONGLEY, Secretary.

CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION.

It Is Punctured to the Very Core, and Its Deleterious Influence in Many Respects Pointed Out.

It is a source of pleasure to see the Christians of America howling against "the barbarous Russians." However, they are "all in the same boat," all Christians.

Russia is a true Christian nation, and what they do and have done in the lines of cruelty, tyranny, persecution and oppression, are the genuine products of their bloody religion. Its fundamental principles, its history, its fruits and effects, all prove its barbarous nature beyond a reasonable doubt.

In the face of its infamous record we are told "Christianity civilizes peoples, nations, individuals. It never civilized a human being.

"Christian Civilization" is a misnomer, a fraud—it is barbarous, uncivilized.

True civilization has gained headway in opposition to, and in spite of, Christianity. No event of modern times is more encouraging and hopeful for the welfare and prosperity of mankind than the disintegration and decay of Christianity. True progression and learning advance in proportion to its decline.

The Christians of medieval Europe might have given lessons in the art of torture to any of the savage people whose deeds as records in history we abhor. We find nothing worse in barbarians or savages.

It was Christian zeal that instituted the tribunal of the Holy Inquisition. In cold-blooded cruelty and enthusiasm for his "holy faith," the medieval monk stands as a landmark, a memorial of the credulity and stupidity of religious devotees.

Vast numbers of men and women suffered torture and death at the hands of pious fiends, malevolent bigots, the foes of science and learning, of intellectual emancipation.

The bigots claimed they were "doing the will of God," and for their own infamous acts they placed the responsibility on Deity, the very convenient scapegoat of every pious assassin and murderer.

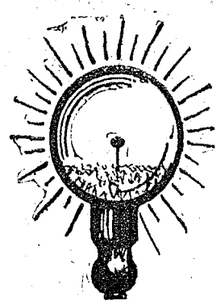
When a man could buy an indulgence he was prepared to commit any crime. No crime was too revolting, no stain too deep to be pardoned or washed away by an endowment for the church. The Jesuits justified lying, theft, intoxication, assassination and every infamy which the vileness and corruption of man could devise. They destroyed learning and science to bring on the night of ignorance and barbarism which brooded over Europe a thousand years.

We need not go far back in history for an example of Christian civilization. The Sandwich Islanders once a prosperous and happy nation before the Christians of America "set their evil eye on them," with the intent to christianize them. However, the missionaries commenced operations in the nefarious work of Christianization. The Christians introduced the drink habit and liquor traffic, and landed cargoes of intoxicating liquors, Holy Bibles, and war implements. They taught the people many vile habits; brought to them loathsome, destructive diseases, and corrupted the nations in various ways. They finally destroyed the original government, took possession of that good land and nearly all the wealth.

There is yet a small remnant of that once great nation soon to fade away and perish.

The Peruvians of South America were exterminated, and the Aztec race of Mexico wiped out of existence by the process of Christian civilization, which is an uncivilized fraud. A worse calamity than Christianization cannot befall a nation.

A. H. NICHOLAS.
Summerland, Cal.



FATE MASTERED

And Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville.

A dainty book of 52 pages, bound in heavy white cover with cat-tail decoration.

Contents: Fate Mastered. Interior Force, Its Practical Evolution. Thought as a Shield. The Human Aura. For sale at this office. Price, 30 cents.

GET THE WONDEREUL HYPNOTIC BALL

5,000 FOR SALE CHEAP

Fine Course of Instruction on how to use it in Hypnotism. Control Others. Heal Yourself and Others.

FREE With Every Ball

I have secured five thousand Hypnotic Balls from the maker, with instructions on how to use them. Enables you to hypnotize and control others, heal yourself and others as if by magic. Send your name and address and one dollar and I will send you one with a free course of instruction on how to use it. Securely packed, by mail, prepaid. Address all orders to

E. SMITH,
Room 4, 43 West 27th St., New York City.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

Passed to higher life at San Bernardino, Cal., May 25, Barbar A, Wilcox, Jr. Funeral services were held May 28 at the chapel of Aldridge & Stephens. Services were in charge of Mrs. Lily M. Thiebaud, pastor of the Spiritual Society, and the members of the Coahuilla Tribe, No. 102, Improved Order of Red Men. The choir sang "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and "There is a home over there." 'Wait and Murmur Not," was sung at the cemetery. Services were beautiful. Mother, father and young wife remain in earth-life home.

Mr. S. H. Ewell passed to the higher life May 28, 1907, at the age of 88 years. His life had been devoted to Spiritualism for over 50 years. The funeral was conducted by the Masonic order of which he was the eldest member. The order of Eastern Stars also attended in a body. The deceased leaves a widow, one son and one daughter.

MRS. J. B. ROBERTS.
Romeo, Mich.

Mrs. Ethel Old, wife of Dr. Alber Old, of Allegheny, Pa., and daughter of Samuel Hough, passed to spirit life May 21st. Services were held in the Universalist Church at Smithton, Friday morning. The home was filled with sympathizing friends as well as the church, and an abundance of beautiful floral offerings gave testimony of the host of friends this dear young wife and mother left behind. Both services were conducted by Georgia Gladys Cooley, and made a lasting impression on all who heard her words of eloquence and comfort.

COR.

Mrs. Oresta Henry of Birmingham, O., passed to the higher life the morning of May 21, aged 79 years. She had been a Spiritualist forty years. No better mother, no more loyal friend than she ever lived. She was loved and greatly respected by all who knew her. She will be missed in this community.

CLARA E. HENRY.

The funeral services of P. A. Thurston took place at the family residence, near Findley, Mich., May 19. Deceased had been a Spiritualist many years. His devoted wife and two beautiful daughters were in full sympathy with him, their home life being an ideal one. At his transition he said to his companion, "Good-bye." She replied, "Not good bye." His answer was, "Good Morning." Thus he met the new life and its opening. His long illness was borne with patient fortitude. A very large attendance attested to the high esteem in which he was held. Mrs. A. E. Sheets officiated.

Mrs, Lydia M. Weed, aged 79 years, passed to spirit life may 22, at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Charles A. White, at 173 Cazenova street, Buffalo, N. Y. Her features so calm and Spiritual in the silent embrace of death, spoke volumes for her knowledge of Spiritualism and of the realm to which she had gone. A mother's love was realized to its fullest extent in this home where she had resided for fourteen years, and it left its silent benedictions. The writer officiated at the funeral services.

W. M. LOCKWOOD.

MODERN ARCHITECTURE

PRACTICAL BUNGALOWS AND COTTAGES FOR TOWN AND COUNTRY

This book contains perspective wash drawings and floor plans of one hundred and twenty-five choice homes, ranging in price from $500 to $2,000, and is invaluable to the home builder, furnishing many new and up-to-date ideas and suggestions in modern architecture. Every plan advertised is made by a licensed architect and been built from to the entire satisfaction of the builder and within the estimated cost invariably. Blue prints are furnished at moderate cost, ranging from $5.00 to $10.00 according to the cost of erection, consisting of floor, roof and foundation plans, front, side and rear elevations, with complete typewritten specifications. Arranged and edited by Fred. T. Hodgson. 12mo. Cloth, 250 pages, 300 illustrations. Price, $1.

THE PATHWAY OF THE HUMAN SPIRIT.

Or, the Pathway of the Spirit Traced.

By J. M. Peebles, M. D., M. A.

Did it pre-exist and does it reincarnate again into mortal life? When did it enter the body? What is its form—how does it relate to the soul body? Can it leave the human body and return again? Can it live in and control another mortal body? These questions and many others are asked and answered by the Doctor in this, his latest book, of two hundred pages. Price 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.
2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.
3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.
4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.
7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.
8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.
9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.
10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.
11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.
12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.
13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts. THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

THE BIBLE New and Revised Edition.

Authenticity, Credibility, Morality.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S GREAT WORK

Ingersoll's desire that somebody should at last tell the whole truth about the Bible has been brilliantly fulfilled. No Freethinker worthy of the name can afford to pass over Remsburg's book in silence. Like Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," may it, let us hope, find admirers and translators in other languages. And again, like Paine's book, may this brilliant work bring to its author the praise of posterity.—Der Freidenker (Milwaukee).

This great work on the Bible by Mr. Remsburg is most valuable—it is an encyclopedia of information in regard to the Bible, and surpasses in importance all other works of the kind now published. It is up-to-date in every particular. Price, $1.25.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death or worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Joy Wilhams—Q. I send a clipping in regard to manna. Is the story of the bible confirmed thereby?

"Some real manna, the kind that was sent from heaven to stay the hunger of the children of Israel when they were going from Egypt into Judea, has been brought to Lynn by Charles Stone, an Armenian. The manna has been placed in the window of John H. Madden's real estate office, 35 Central square.

It came from the region in Armenia which the natives of the country declare was the site of the Garden of Eden, and Mr. Stone has been 15 years getting it here. When he lived in New Jersey 15 years ago a Greek priest there, knowing that Stone's parents lived near the "Garden of Eden," asked him if he could get some manna from that spot. Stone wrote to his father in Armenia to send over some.

"But this manna falls from the sky only in lean years, when crops fail and the poor people would otherwise be without food. For many years after Mr. Stone wrote to his father things prospered in that country, and no manna fell. The past year, according to Mr. Stone, has been a bad one, and one morning the good people near the "Garden of Eden" awoke to find the ground white with this biblical food. Mr. Stone's father sent over to Lynn some 50 pounds, the freight charges on which were $35.

"When the manna falls it is white, but leaves from the trees and on the ground become mixed with it, thus giving it a greenish color. At first glance it looks something like a mossy rock.

"About every minister in Lynn has called to get a near view of the stuff. Mr. Madden himself has eaten quite a lot of it since it came, and has given bites to favored ones among the visitors. When first placed in the mouth the manna has a taste not unlike molasses candy. After being chewed awhile the taste of the leaves asserts itself. Mr. Stone has retained for himself at his office a large chunk of pure white, in which no leaves are mixed, and which has a very toothsome flavor. The manna is said to be very nutritious and to possess valuable medicinal qualities.

"According to Mr. Stone, real manna is a great rarity in this country. This manna corresponds to all the tests mentioned in the bible, even to the verse that says that when manna is left in the noonday sun, it will become full of maggots. A small piece of this was placed in the sun at noon and in a few minutes, Mr. Stone says, it was alive."

A. It would seem from this account that the miracle continues, and God cares for the Armenian poor as faithfully as he did for His chosen people of Israel. In their desperate attempt to account for the manna story, theologians have framed many theories. Some have regarded the manna as a secretion of the Tamarisk tree, and others that it was an edible lichen, carried by the wind. The secretion of the Tamarisk is still gathered and the lichen falls and is gathered in the Sinaitic peninsula. Others take the story as literally a direct action of God. In this they are consistent, for no natural source could supply the enormous quantity said to have fallen. The exaggeration of the clipping is a parallel of the bible. Manna yet falls and at Mount Sinai it is kept for sale to pilgrims and travelers. It is an exudation from a shrub growing on the deserts, called Camel's thorn. The secretion is caused by the puncture of an insect. The sweet juice exudes, hardens into a white flake and falls to the ground, often covering the ground like frost.

The manna of commerce is gathered from plantations of Fraxinus set out for the purpose in Sicily, although the tree is native of all Southern Europe. It has its form of flakes of whitish grey or pale yellow. It is sweet to taste, and slightly bitter. It would not be difficult to obtain fifty pounds of this substance at any time, for the production is constant with the season, and has no relation to the abundant or scanty harvest. The Arabs gather it and regard it as a delicacy.

The description in the bible story perfectly describes this exudation as it exists to-day. The Israelites found it to be a satisfying food and gathered it. Its quantity was magnified by their imagination or the sacred writers, as they did the number of the Hebrews. The Israelites were then, as the Bedouin tribes of Arabs are at present, and with such a pastoral people, the number said to have formed the hosts, would be impossible. Such a tribe coming into a territory abounding in the manna-bearing shrub, would find it an easy task to gather daily a supply of the fallen flakes. Savage and ignorant as they were, they would not perceive the source, and would thus be led to believe the story of their priest-leader, that the delectable food fell from heaven in answer to their prayers.

Of course that the manna is found only in the section of country thought to have been the Garden of Eden is as fanciful as the supposition that the garden was there located. The miraculous food supply, turns out to have been a product of purely natural causes.

There are various sources of this manna, as it exudes from several different species of plants native of arid climates, but the description of this "fifty pound" cake shows that it is the real product gathered in a slovenly manner. So far as its being a rarity in this country, every drug store has it for sale, in a more cleanly form. It was once supposed to possess wonderful medicinal properties, but is now retained only because of the superstition attached to its name. It is a gentle laxative, and is compounded with more active substances, but would not be missed from the list of remedies.

G. F. Smith—Q. Haeckel in "Riddle of the Universe," page 305, says: "Moreover it was precisely through the famous seance at Leipsic in which the physicists Zollner, Ferchner and William Weber were imposed upon by the clever American Conjurer, Slade, that the fraud of the latter was afterwards fully exposed; he was discovered to be a common impostor." Now, I believe it to be a matter of common repute, that Slade degenerated in moral character during his later days, but I do not think that at the time he held these sittings at Leipsic, his wonderful psychic endowments were at all impaired. Will you give the basic facts on which Haeckel rested his statement?

A. This correspondent is correct in inferring that the marvelous gifts of Slade were unimpaired at the time of his visit to Germany. In fact they were at full tide, and some of the best manifestations of spirit power were then given. As for the "basic facts on which Haeckel rested his statement," it must be said he had none. He readily accepted the stories of maligners, because he wanted it so, and forgot and neglected the first rule of science—"Be sure of the facts before drawing conclusions." He drew his conclusions first, and accepted as facts the current gossip of those ignorant of the subect.

Slade at times was dissipated, but dissipation is not a crime, and has no bearing on the genuineness of the manifestations given. He was not an impostor in the vulgar sense that word is used by Haeckel, nor was he exposed as one. It was claimed that he was,, but the evidence was not such as an unbiased jury would receive. The tests given to the German scientists mentioned, one of which was tying a knot in an endless cord, never were exposed, or attempted to be.

It will be remembered that it was because of this remarkable manifestation, Zollner founded his famous hypothesis of the "Fourth Dimension of Space, by which he sought to account for the passage of matter through matter.

The Seybert Commission in their disgraceful report attempt to weaken the force of the tests by degrading the character of the Professor. He was weak-eyed and short-sighted and could have been readily imposed on! The committee had not heard of any exposure of Slade, else it would have so stated and not made this weak argument.

Hence, it will be apparent that Haeckel had no "basic fact." He copied and intensified assertions and from these assertions built a theory itself on assertion. And all this the antithesis of science, and vulgar yielding to clamorous prejudice.

Items from Portland, Ore.

Work in our "Hemlock" city, Portland, Ore., has taken another "boost" along the line of phenomenal mediumship. Some of us had quite dropped into the line of "New Thought" when our beloved brother, John Slater, appeared on the scene and cast a flash-light over our dreams. For five Sunday evenings he has held sway in the new Woodmen of the World hall, with the largest seating capacity in our city. This phenomenal medium has packed this large hall to its utmost, while many have been turned away, with 15 cents collection at the door. This is one of the finest proofs of the demand and support of phenomenal mediumship.

People have been awakened from their long sleep by this wonderful medium.

With Mr. Slater overrun with work he found time to give a benefit to Brother Harry J. Moore, who needs a resting; also the receipts of a large circle to myself, in consideration of my efforts to keep the Ministers and Mediums Protective Spiritual Association going.

Two years ago I organized the above society with 351 members. We are "chartered," and have taken fifteen new members this month of May. We meet every Sunday at 8 p. m. in W. O. W. hall. The local mediums will now occupy the rostrum for the month of June, when we may consider a summer's vacation.

Mediums coming west, address me at number 302 Alisky Bldg., Portland, Ore. REV. SOPHIA B. SEIP.

President of the Ministers and Mediums Protective Spiritual Association.

Psychic Phenomena, Etc.

Continued from Fifth Column.

ology in medicine. For it is a significant fact that men want to know the truth, and when they know it will comply with its known laws. "I have yet many things to tell you, howbeit you cannot bear them now, but when He the spirit of truth will come He will lead you to all truth."

D. S. HAGER, M. D.

Chicago, Ill.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

Psychic Phenomena the Basis of the Jewish and Christian Religion

Modern Methods and Discoveries That Have Helped to Make the Old-time Difficulties Appear in Their True Light.

"The man who denies the phenomena of spiritism to-day is not even entitled to be called a skeptic; he is simply ignorant, and it would be a hopeless task to try to enlighten him."
—Hudson.

Science is gradually unraveling many mysteries of by-gone days. The ancients were not addicted to the habit of investigation, criticism and the use of scientific methods with which our age is justly famous. Many ancient ideas were so intermixed with superstition that a careful analysis of cause and effect becomes a matter of difficulty to the modern student. Recent discoveries have made plain many of the old-time mysteries. They have made it possible for the educated man of to-day to see just what was the cause, effect and motive for many of the old-time obscure phenomena as well as superstitions.

Thus eminent eye specialists of to-day have shown from the meager and almost obscure records of the ailments of prominent men in past ages that they were suffering from eye strain that to-day would be suspected, if not corrected, by the ordinary practitioner of medicine.

Many eminent nerve specialists of our day are liable to recognize in the maladies of man in the past the earmarks of locomotor ataxia, multiple sclerosis and general paresis, now known to be the direct effects of a previous syphilitic infection.

Bacteriology has opened the door that has unlocked the mysteries of many an epidemic disease in bygone days, and the expert bacteriologist, from the meager and almost obscure records of epidemics handed down to our age, is able to trace the earmarks of diseases the exact cause of which has just been discovered in recent years.

Eminent experts in skin diseases from the description in the bible can diagnose not only the cases of true leprosy, but also recognize cases of scabies, psoriasis, vitiligo, tinea versicolor, and other skin affections that were classified under the general head of leprosy by the Jews, and therefore rendered ceremonially unclean.

These earmarks thus plainly show certain conditions in past ages that become stepping stones from which we arrive at knowledge that helps to make past obscure matters plain to the modern student.

It is said that facts, to an ignorant man, are like sticking pins into a cushion. When the pin is removed all traces of it in the cushion are lost. To an intelligent man, however, each fact becomes a stone upon which he constructs a solid foundation.

It is true that religion and superstition were so intimately connected that it is difficult ofttimes to tell just where the one began and the other left off. To the student in modern psychology, and to the investigator in psychic phenomena, however, many of the old-time bible incidents bear the earmarks of phenomena the exact duplicate of which we have to-day, so that he can not only recognize the nature of the phenomena, but the exact conditions required for their manifestation as well.

Modern psychology recognizes the existence of the phenomena of clairvoyance, clairaudience, telepathy and the supra and subliminal trance states. These are, however, considered unreliable, perhaps because we have not yet learned the laws that control them, yet their earmarks are plainly visible through both the Old and New Testaments.

Much is said by students and those who wish to discredit these wonderful phenomena, about the unreliability and triviality of the alleged information that is received through mediums, but it must be evident to any candid student of the bible that the same can be said of many communications received in like manner in the bible, and in fact the very higher criticisms of the bible have their basis to a great extent in this unreliability.

The objection that much of its physical phenomena is given in the dark, and therefore the opportunity for fraud is so great that discredit is thrown upon all the phenomena, appears so reasonable to the uninitiated that it appeals to him as a good excuse to doubt it. To these objections it is only necessary to point to the fact that darkness was a prime requisite in the old bible times just as it is to-day, and therefore this cannot constitute a valid excuse why it should not receive as much credence now as it did then.

The objection in reference to fraud, however, is made by so many people, that a rule laid down by Lieut. Col. Taylor in the Journal of the Society for Psychic research of London, should first be carefully considered. He says: "The conditions under which spiritualistic phenomena occur are so mysterious and so little understood that many investigators are unable to appreciate their bearings on the facts observed, and judging from what they think they should be by what they are, attribute fraud to mediums when in reality a misunderstanding exists on the part of the conditions necessary for the manifestations."

In the following biblical quotations the earmarks of the exact counterpart of the phenomena, with similar conditions that we meet with to-day, stand out very prominent.

Encouraged.

For he that is now called a prophet was aforetime called a seer. I Sam. ix:9.

When Israel went to inquire of God they went to the seer. 1 Sam. ix:9.

Saul called upon Samuel the seer for advice about his father's asses (and paid him with a present of silver). I Sam. ii:8.

Uzziah took instructions from Zechariah who gave instructions in seeing God (perhaps on the order of the present-day developing circle). II Chron. xxvi:5.

Moses wished that all the Lord's children were prophets. Num. xi:30.

Is there not a prophet of the Lord that we may inquire of him? II Kings, ii:11.

I raised up your sons for prophets and you commanded the prophets saying prophesy not. Amos, ii:13.

Trance.

And thou shalt prophesy with them and shalt be turned into another man. I Sam. x:6.

The spirit of the Lord came mightily unto Saul and he shall be turned into another man. I Sam. x:6.

And it came to pass when the spirit rested upon them they prophesied. Num. xi:25.

Caleb to see the promised land because he had another spirit with him. Num. xiv:24.

The spirit of the Lord came upon Caleb's younger brother. Judges, ix:10.

Visions.

The Lord will make himself known in a vision to the prophets. Num. xii:6.

Then a spirit passed before my face and the hair of my flesh stood up (evidently the gooseflesh or chilliness that sensitives to-day complain of). Job iv:5.

Telepathy.

Elisha the prophet telleth the king of Israel what thou sayest in thy bedchamber. II Kings, vi:12. (This I have seen repeated frequently.)

Elisha knew messengers came for him. II Kings, vi:32.

Darkness and Music Required.

In the night did God appear to Solomon. II Chron. i:17.

And the Lord said he will dwell in thick darkness. I Kings, viii:12.

And the Lord appeared to Solomon by night. II Chron. vii:1-2.

He made darkness his hiding place. Psalms, xviii:2.

And God came to Balaam at night. Num. xxii:20.

And when the minstrel played before Elijah the hand of the Lord came upon him. II Kings, iii:16.

After music manifestations. II Chron. v.14.

Women Prophesied.

Daughters of Israel prophesied. Ezek., xiii:10.

They went to Huldah the prophetess and the Lord spoke through her. II Kings, xxii:14; also II Chron., xxiv:22.

Deborah was a prophetess. Judges, iv:4.

Why was the office of prophet, which evidently was of such supreme importance to the early Jewish church, discontinued?

That it was forbidden, even with severe penalty, is also true, and perhaps that it fell into the hands of an ignorant class of people, whose only ambition was personal aggrandizement and financial gain. Moses had no doubt foreseen this among the low-grade Egyptians, and therefore took measures to restrict its use among the common Jewish people. He no doubt intended to keep in the hands of the priesthood, who, because of their superior knowledge and the fact that they were supported out of the public funds, would not lower it as private individuals would, but would rather use it for the benefit of the whole people. It can readily be observed that just so long as they hearkened unto the voice of their prophets they remained united and strong, but when the power of the prophets waned the nation weakened.

In the New Testament the student in psychic phenomena again meets with the same earmarks of the many and varied phenomena. The office of prophet was perhaps as important in the early Christian church as was that of bishop, deacon, or elder, and yet, for some mysterious reason for which there apparently is no information available, it was dropped.

Why did the Christians, as well as the Jews, drop the office of prophet from the church?

Prophecy Encouraged in the Christian Church.

Desire earnestly to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues. I Cor., xiv:39.

Quench not the spirit, despise not prophecy. I Thes., v:20.

Follow after love, yet earnestly desire spiritual gifts. I Cor., xiv:1.

But if a revelation be made to another sitting by, let the first keep silent. I Cor., xiv:30; als 32.

Agabus a prophet from Judea. Acts, xi:28.

And they spoke with tongues and prophesied. Acts, xix:7.

Barnabas and Simeon prophets to church at Antioch. Acts, xiii:1.

Judas and Silas were prophets. Acts, xv:32.

Prophet Agabus by spirit prophesied of famine. Acts, xi:28.

In the XIV Chapter of I Corinthians Paul enumerates practically every phase of modern mediumistic phenomena.

Holy spirit fell on them even before they were baptized. Acts, x:45.

Trance.

Spoke with other tongues. Acts, xix:6.

But it is not ye that speak but the spirit. Matt., x:20; and fell into a trance: Acts, xxii:18.

Christian Women Prophesied.

Anna a prophetess. Luke, ii:36.

Philip the evangelist had four virgin daughters who did prophesy. Acts, xiii:8.

One who is familiar with these phenomena to-day can thus readily see that this was exactly what the early Christian church was so much interested in.

To the careful, conscientious student in these phenomena the question as to the real reason why phenomena have been dropped from both these religions becomes clear from the fact that it is now, and no doubt always was, unreliable, and was constantly preyed upon by the charlatan and the pretender as it is to-day.

The subject is to-day considered one of the most difficult, although the most important, before the intelligent people of the world. If, then, it is difficult to students to-day, with all our knowledge of chemistry, electricity, vibratory theory of the transmission of sound, heat, light and color, with the known laws of gravitation, with the teleseope, spectroscope and microscope, what must have been the difficulty to those who really did wish to know the truth about these matters in past ages. It is no wonder that they were disgusted with it and dropped it entirely.

With modern knowledge, modern appliances and methods, coupled with that indomitable will and perseverance that characterizes our age, I am encouraged to believe that sooner or later something of real practical benefit to mankind will be brought forth. True, it may be small and insignificant at first, but like all small things, there may be possibilities in it that are unlimited.

Indeed it has always brought a great deal of consolation to those who are interested in the research, for while they are naturally of the class of thinkers that would otherwise drift into the ranks of materialists or of infidels, it can truly be said of these men that they have become conscientiously, deeply religious, and every day spent in the work seems to be an impetus to urge them on to do greater work. Dr. Hodgson was stimulated every moment to do more and better work in this line so that it might truly be said for him "well done, thou faithful servant, enter thou into joys." Sir Oliver Lodge recently stated that within the past few years every scientist in Europe has turned preacher, and when it will be remembered that in Europe, because of the work done in the past by the London Society for Psychic Research, practically every scientist is interested in psychic phenomena, the real cause for this religious enthusiasm is manifest.

The Christian church is just now complaining of a lack of religious enthusiasm, and while they have perhaps for good reason in the past condemned these phenomena, yet I am confident that when the real cause of the underlying basis of their religion is carefully studied by intelligent men, over a series of years, just as chemistry, electricity or modern medicine is studied, then men will learn and live by the laws that control it. Then we will begin to appreciate the real meaning of the spiritual kingdom that Jesus talked about. There will then come such a wave of religious enthusiasm that the world has never known its equal.

The fact, then, that modern discoveries show that the basis for the world's most popular religions is psychic phenomena, should make it an important factor in our intellectual development. It should receive financial as well as moral encouragement. It certainly deserves as much help as deep-sea diving, polar expeditions, or flying-machine inventions. As specialism is to-day bringing out and developing the best in everything, so these phenomena which are here and are now observable by all who care to know, should receive the benefit of the age. Men should have special training, however, for this work, and should devote their lives to this special line of research. It should be placed in the hands of intelligent men and women who would be specially trained to observe its phenomena, and to study its cause and effect and then arrive at logical conclusions.

I am convinced that there will then arise a new religion based upon the misunderstood former teachings, that will be as far superior to the old dogmatic religion as modern chemistry is superior to old alchemy, or modern electricity is superior to the primitive fagot; as modern medicine is superior to the old witch doctor, or as the modern building is superior to the old cave our forefathers dwelt in. Then will come a religion of love—a millennium—for men will learn and obey its laws as they now do in chemistry, electricity, asepsis and bacteri-

(Continued in Second Column.)

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

THE SPIRITUAL BIRTH, OR DEATH AND ITS TO-MORROW.—The Spiritualistic idea of Death, Heaven and Hell. A logical statement, proven both by facts and the Bible. By Moses Hull. Price, 10 cents.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE.—By Lillian Whiting. This book is all that the name implies—a spiritual book. Price, $1.00.

THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN, THE PERSIAN EMPEROR.—A wonderful and interesting occult story, written by the author of "A Wanderer in the Spirit Land." Beautifully bound. Price, $1; postage, 12 cents; paper, 50 cents.

THE TALMUD.—Selections from the contents of that ancient book, its commentaries, teachings, poetry and legends. Also sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polang. Price, cloth, $1.00.

THE UNKNOWN.—By the scientific writer, Camille Flammarion. Price, $2.

THE WIDOWS MITE AND OTHER PSYCHOLOGICAL PHENOMENA.—A new book of 588 pages by I. K. Funk. A most remarkable and valuable book. Price $2.00.

THE WONDERS OF LIFE.—A popular study of biological philosophy. By Ernst Haeckel, author of The Riddle of the Universe. Bound in cloth, Price, $1.50.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL.—Series One, Two and Three. Choice volumes of restful and educational reading, uniting the ideal and the real in this life. By Lillian Whiting. Price, each volume $1.

THREE JUBILEE LECTURES.—By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Price, 35 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S EXAMINATION OF THE PROPHECIES.—A consideration of the passages in the New Testament, quoted from the Old and called Prophecies concerning Jesus Christ. Price, 15 cents.

TO THE WOMEN OF AMERICA.—By M. M. Mangasarian. Price, 10 cents.

TRUTHS OF SPIRITUALISM.—This book narrates many of the striking experiences of its author as a lecturer and test medium in the earlier days of Spiritualism. By E. V. Wilson. Price, $1.

TWENTIETH CENTURY GUIDE TO PALMISTRY.—By the Zancigs. A good book for all those interested in this study. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 25 cents.

TWO IN ONE.—A compendium of Biblical Spiritualism. A combination of "The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" into one volume. By Moses Hull. Price, $1.00.

UNCOOKED FOODS AND HOW TO LIVE ON THEM.—By Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Christian. Illustrated. Price, cloth, $1.00.

VACCINATION A CURSE.—By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Treating on a subject of vital importance to everyone. Price, $1.25.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM.—Spiritualism in all ages and among all nations. By W. J. Colville. Price, $1.00.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY.—By Swami Vivekananda. Price, $1.50.

VOLNEY'S RUINS AND THE LAW OF NATURE.—This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.—A new edition, profusely illustrated. A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing. 480 pages, with portrait and 82 illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50; postage, 15 cents.

WAYSIDE JOTTINGS.—Composed of Essays, Sketches, Poems and Songs, gathered from the highways, by-ways and hedges of life, from the inspirational pen of Mattie E. Hull. Price, 75 cts.

WHAT ALL THE WORLD'S A-SEEING.—By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, $1.25.

WHO ARE THESE SPIRITUALISTS, AND WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM?—By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 35 cents.

WHY I AM A VEGETARIAN.—By H. J. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

WOMAN.—A lecture delivered to ladies only, by Mrs. Dr. Hulburt, on the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, marriage and divorce. Price, 10 cents.

WARFARE OF SCIENCE WITH THEOLOGY.—Information not procurable in the libraries of the world in a half century, showing the opposition of the church to science. Two vols., 900 pages. Price $5.00.

WORKS OF E. D. BABBITT, LL. D., M. D.—"Human Culture and Cure." Part First.—The Philosophy of Cure. Price, board cover, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure."—Part Second. Marriage, Sexual Development and Upbuilding. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure."—Parts Third and Fourth. In one volume. Part Third being devoted to Mental and Psychological Forces, and Part Fourth to the Nervous System and Insanity. Price, $1.00.

"Human Culture and Cure."—Part Fifth. The Bodily Organs, Their Diseases and Great Natural Methods for Their Cure. Price, $1.00.

"Principles of Light and Color."—One of the greatest books of the age. Price, $5; by mail, 32 cents extra.

"Religion."—Most thoughtful, spiritual and excellent. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents. Postage, 10 cents.

"Social Upbuilding," including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. Price, paper, 15 cents.

WOMANLY BEAUTY OF FORM AND FEATURE.—By Albert Turner. Price, $1.00.

WOMAN'S BIBLE.—Parts I. and II. The Pentateuch.—A galaxy of scholarly comments by many of our brightest minds regarding much of the Old Testament, and the slight given the women. Price, 50 cents.

WOMAN, CHURCH AND STATE.—A historical account of the status of woman throughout the Christian ages, with reminiscences of the Matriarchate. By Matilda Joslyn Gage. Price, cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

WOMAN.—FOUR CENTURIES OF PROGRESS.—Showing her gradual rise from slavery and bondage of ancient times. By Susan H. Wixon. A lecture of great value. Price, 10 cents.

WORLD MAKING.—A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

ZANONI.—By Bulwer Lytton. Price 50 cents.

A CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE REPUBLIC.—By Judge C. B. Waite, author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200." Price 25 cents.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT THE DEVIL.—By Chas. Bradlaugh, the great English Freethought leader, with a story of his life as told by himself and a history of his Parliamentary struggles. Price, 50 cents.

AFTER HER DEATH.—The Story of a Summer.—Pervaded with pure and sublimely spiritual thought. Something to make the reader pause and reflect almost to entrancement. By Lilian Whiting. Price $1.

AGE OF REASON.—Being an investigation of true and fabulous theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages. By Thomas Paine. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

ANCIENT INDIA.—Its Language and Religions.—Translations of the articles "Religion of the Veda," and "Buddhism." The Study of the Sanskrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Price 25 cents.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.—By Thomas Inman, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

A NEW CATECHISM.—By M. M. Mangasarian. A book suited to express the thoughts of men, women and children living in the new times Price, cloth, $1.

ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST RECITATIONS.—To advance Humane Eduction in all its phases. A book especially adapted to Lyceums. Full of enthusing ideas. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, 25 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. — Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realms. An intensely interesting work, carrying one deeply into the mysteries of the past. By J. M. Roberts. Price, $1.50.

A. P. A. MANUAL.—A complete exposition of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association, with a vivid description of Romanism as it is to-day. Price 15 cents.

APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT.—Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, His Apostles, and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Translated from the original tongues, and now collected into one volume. Price, $1.50.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.—Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price, 15 cents.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.—By Ella Ruddy. Price $1.

A SCIENTIFIC DEMONSTRATION OF THE FUTURE LIFE.—By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price, $1.50.

A SEX REVOLUTION.—By Lois Waisbrooker, author of "Helen Harlow's Vow," "Perfect Motherhood," and many other works. Price, 25 cents.

AS IT IS TO BE.—By Cora Lynn Daniels. This is a most spiritual book and gives a beautiful account of the process of dying. Price, $1.00.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.—A book of short poems, By Emma Rood Tuttle. Neatly bound in blue cloth with silver letters. Price, $1.

ASTRAL WORSHIP.—With a chart in the front cover with signs of the Zodiac. By J. H. Hill, M. D. Price $1.

ATLANTIS, THE ANTEDILUVIAN WORLD.—By Ignatius Donnelly, is a book of rare thought, proving the existence of a continent by the name of Atlantis years ago. Price, $2.

AURAS AND COLORS.—An Esoteric System of Teaching Concerning Halos, Aureolas and the Nimbus. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 60 cents.

BABY CRAFT, or Just What to Do for the Baby.—By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Price 25 cents.

BEHIND THE VEIL.—Written by a spirit in a most interesting manner, and describing his life in the spirit world. Price, 75 cents.

CAN TELEPATHY EXPLAIN?—By Minot J. Savage. Price $1.00.

CELESTIAL DYNAMICS.—A normal course of study in the Astro-Magnetic Forces of Nature. Just the book for Mental Healers or students in the science. 107 pages. Price, $1.00.

CHARACTER BUILDING, THOUGHT POWER.—A dainty little book and helpful. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, 35 cents.

CHRISTS OF THE PAST AND PRESENT. By Rev. Moses Hull. A valuable book. Price, paper, 25 cents.

CLAIRVOYANCE.—A book of 109 neatly printed pages, pertaining to a system of philosophy of clairvoyance, its law, nature and unfoldment. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, cloth, $1.50.

CONCENTRATION.—A series of six symbol cards and a valuable pamphlet on concentration, meditation and inspiration, with instructions how to conquer yourself and develop your innermost faculties. By Laura G. Fixen. Price, 50 cents.

COMMON SENSE.—A book of the Revolution, and yet adapted to the present day. A book to inspire the reader to love his free America. By Thomas Paine. Paper, 15 cents.

CONFUCIUS.—The moral aphorisms and terseological teachings of the sapient Chinese Philosopher. To which is added a correct likeness of the great philosopher and a sketch of his life. By Marcenus R. K. Wright. Price 25 cents.

CONTINUITY OF LIFE A COSMIC TRUTH.—By Prof. W. M. Lockwood, the well-known lecturer. Those who have had the privilege of hearing Prof. Lockwood lecture will understand and appreciate the character of this work. Price, $1.00.

CONTRASTS IN SPIRIT LIFE, and the Recent Experiences of Samuel Bowles.—Given through the mediumship of Carrie E. S. Twing. Price 50 cents.

COSMIAN HYMN BOOK.—A collection of original and selected hymns for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home. Compiled by L. K. Washburn. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS.—This book is just what its title indicates—a thorough exposure of the inner life of those elect of earth. A very interesting book. Price, 35 cents.

CULTIVATION OF PERSONAL MAGNETISM.—By LeRoy Berrier. Price, 50 cents.

CURED.—WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.—By William E. Towne. Price 25 cents.

DATA OF ETHICS.—By Herbert Spencer. Price 50 cents.

DEVELOPMENT OF SPIRITUAL GIFTS.—How to receive Healing from the Unseen Helpers.—By Carrie Fuller Weatherford. Price, paper, 50 cents.

DIALOGUE ON RELIGION, between Rev. John Jutz and Dr. T. A. Bland. Price, 15 cents.

DICTIONARY OF DREAMS.—One Thousand Dreams and Their Interpretations. By Dr. Robert Greer. Price, 25 cents.

DISCOVERY OF A LOST TRAIL.—By Charles B. Newcomb. A book that will help you see the beauty and joy of life. Price, $1.50.

EDITH BRAMLEY'S VISION.—A thrilling appeal to all who are interested in learning how the great forces of the Roman Catholic church are seeking to prevent the progress of liberalism. Price, 15 cents.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.—By Daniel K. Tenney. Price, 75 cents.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM, or a Concordance of the principal passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures, which prove or imply Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price, $1.

ENIGMAS OF PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.—By Jas. H. Hyslop, author of "Science and a Future Life." Price, $1.50.

EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL.—The most learned, accurate, scientific and philosophical analysis of His Satanic Majesty ever published. By Henry Frank, the Independent Preacher of New York City. Price, 25 cents.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.—A valuable book by Sarah Stanley Grimke, Ph. B. Cloth cover. Price, $1.50.

EVERY LIVING CREATURE, or a heart-training through the animal world. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Cloth, price, 35 cents.

FATE MASTERED, DESTINY FULFILLED.—By W. J. Colville. 30 cents.

FATHER TOM AND THE POPE, and the History of the Pope's Mule.—Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth 50 cents.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.—A book that has done more to enlighten the world of Catholicism than any other two published. By Rev. Chas. Chiniquy, ex- priest. Price, $2.25.

FORCE AND MATTER or the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.—A very popular scientific exposition. By Prof. Ludwig Buchner, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.—This beautiful book of beautiful poems is all that the title indicates—profound, sublime and tunefully poetic and restful in its variation. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, cloth, $1.00.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT.—A book of poems. Verses of life to come. By Lilian Whiting. Price, $1. White and gold, $1.25.

FUTURE LIFE.—In the Light of Ancient and Modern Science. A work of immense importance. By Louis Elbe. Price, $1.20.

GERMS OF MIND IN PLANTS.—By R. H. France. Translated by A. M. Simons. Cloth, illustrated, 50 cents.

GOSPEL OF BUDDHA.—According to old records. A translation from Japanese, made under the auspices of the Rev. Shaku Soyen, delegate to the Parliament of Religions. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

GOSPEL OF NATURE.—A book filled from beginning to end with spiritual truth of the most sublime and soul-stirring character. In touch with all life. By M. L. Sherman and Wm. F. Lyon. Price, $1.00.

GREAT ROMAN ANACONDA, or Thirty-seven and a Half Years in the Church of Rome.—A 32-page pamphlet. By Prof. Geo. P. Rudolph, Ph. D. Price, 15 cents.

HAPPINESS AND MARRIAGE.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 cents.

HARMONICS OF EVOLUTION.—A valuable work, by Florence Huntley. Cloth. Price, $2.

HEALTH AND POWER.—A handbook of cure and human upbuilding by aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price, 30 cents.

HEAVEN REVISED.—By Mrs. E. B. Duffey. Price, 25 cents.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY, or Solar Mentality, with illustrations and ephemeris. By Verno Vedra. Cloth, price, $1.50.

HERESY, OR LED TO THE LIGHT. By the well-known writer, Hudson Tuttle. Paper cover only. Price, 30 cents.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP.—By Thomas Carlyle. Price, 50 cents.

HISTORY OF ATHARAEL.—Life in the Stone Age.—Written through U. G. Figley. It is very interesting. Price, 30 cents.

HISTORY OF THE INQUISITION.—Just the book for those seeking information concerning that most damnable institution known in history—the Roman Catholic Inquisition. By Cyrus Mason, M. D. Price, 25 cents.

HOW THE BIBLE WAS INVENTED. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price, 10 cents.

HOW TO GROW SUCCESS.—By Elizabeth Towne. Price, 50 c

The Last Will.

One That Is Highly Spiritualizing, and Will Be Read with Deep Interest.

He was stronger and cleverer, no doubt, than other men, and in many broad lines of business he had grown rich, until his wealth exceeded exaggeration...One morning in his office, he directed a request to his confidential lawyer to come to him in the afternoon. He intended to have his will drawn. A will is a solemn matter, even with men whose life is given up to business, and who are by habit mindful of the future. After giving this direction he took up no other matter, but sat at his desk alone and in silence.

It was a day when summer was first new. The pale leaves upon the tree were starting forth upon the still unbending branches. The grass in the parks had a freshness in its green like the freshness in the blue in the sky and of the yellow of the sun—a freshness to make one wish life might renew its youth. The clear breezes from the South wantoned about, and then were still, as if loath to go finally away. Half idly, half thoughtfully, the rich man wrote upon the white paper before him, beginning what he wrote with capital letters, such as he had not made since, as a boy in school, he had taken pride in his skill with his pen:

IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN—I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound and disposing mind and memory (he lingered on the word memory), do now make and publish this day my LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT, in order, as justly as I may, to distribute my interests in the world among succeeding men.

AND FIRST, that part of my interests which is known in the law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes as my property, being inconsiderable and of none account, I make no account of it in this my will.

My right to live, it being but a life-estate, is not at my disposal, but, these things excepted, all else in the world I proceed to devise and bequeath:

ITEM—And first, I give to good fathers and mothers, but in trust for their children, nevertheless, all good little words of praise and all quaint pet names, and I charge said parents to use them justly but generously as the needs of their children shall require.

ITEM—I leave to children exclusively, but only for the life of their childhood, all and every, the dandelions of the fields and the daisies thereof, with the right to play among them freely, according to the custom of children, warming them at the same time against little thistles. And I devise to children the yellow shores of creeks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, with the dragon-flies that skim the surface of said waters, and the odors of the willows that dip into said waters, and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees.

AND I leave to children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the Night and the Moon and the train of the Milky Way to wonder at, but subject, nevertheless, to the rights hereinafter given to lovers; and I give to each child the right to choose a star that shall be his, and I direct that the child's father shall tell him the name of it, in order that the child shall always remember the name of that star after he has learned and forgotten astronomy.

ITEM—I devise to boys jointly all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played, and all snow-clad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may skate, to have and to hold the same for a period of their boyhood. And all meadows with the clover blooms and butterflies thereof; and all woods, with their appurtenances of squirrels and whirring birds and echoes and strange noises; and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found, I do give to said boys to be theirs, and I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood or coal, to enjoy without let or hindrance and without any encumbrance of cares.

ITEM—To lovers I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red, red roses by the wall, the snow of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of music, or aught else they may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

ITEM—To young men jointly, being joined in a brave, mad crowd, I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry. I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength. Though they are rude and rough, I leave them alone the power of making lasting friendships and of possessing companions; and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses to sing, with smooth voices to troll them forth.

ITEM—And to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave Memory, and I leave to them the volumes of poems of Burns and Shakespeare, and of other poets, if there are others, to the end that they may live the old days over again freely and fully, without tithe or diminution; and to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave, too, the knowledge of what a rare, rare world it is.

WILLISTON FISH.

SPIRITUALISTS, CONSIDER!

You Sweat Poison When Angry, Says Scientist—Breath is Poisonous when Heart is Convulsed with Terror or Hate—Pure Heart, Fragrance—Atmosphere Around Innocent Girl is Actually Perfumed, Says Prof. Gates.

"When you'r angry you sweat poison," says Professor Elmer Gates, the world-famous psychologist of Washington, D. C. Likewise, he adds, you breathe poison as well when your heart is convulsed with hate, fear, jealousy or any violent or wrong emotion.

On the other hand, pure thoughts render the body immune from disease For instance, a Sister of Charity may nurse smallpox patients for months without a taint of the disease. The breath of an innocent young girl is sweet and fragrant, says Dr. Gates.

Professor Gates [as set forth in the Chicago Examiner] has one of the most complete laboratories in this country. For years he has been making experiments for the purpose of establishing his theory that hate, fear, anger, jealousy, worry—in fact wrong thinking of all kinds, not only produce instantaneous reactions in the human system, but there is an actual chemical change in the blood under such conditions and that it is of such a character that the poison generated by the passions is secreted in the blood cells in sufficient quantities to be discovered through anaysis.

From the experiments, Professor Gates declares that different passions produce different kinds of poison. Cyanide of potassium results from anger, oxalates from worry and fear, and so on.

In this way Professor Gates claims to have reduced anger, jealousy, love, grief and anxiety to chemical formulas.

Upon this hypothesis he hopes to establish an entirely new basis for the study of psychology. According to Professor Gates, every change of the mental state of an individual is expressed in the secretions of the body. Treated with the same chemical reagent, the perspiration of an angry man shows one color, that of a man in grief another, and so on through a long list of emotions.

Remorse Makes Breath Pink.

After condensing the volatile constituents of the breath of his subjects, the professor obtained a brownish sediment from anger, a gray sediment from sorrow, and a pink sediment from remorse. It would seem from this that the phrase "painting the town red" had really a significance not generally attributed to it, for the act is generally the precursor to remorse, or, as Hamlet says: "Indeed, it follows hard upon." Sorrow is also painted by the poets in gray colors, and everybody is familiar with the "dark cloud of anger that setled upon the brow" of the villain of melodramatic literature.

But the color-seeing poets and the clairvoyance of the populace, which, under excitement, make striking phrases, have not hitherto been taken seriously in the realm of science. Profesor Gates has demonstrated his theory by such practical tests as those made by Pasteur with toxins and anti-toxins, and claims to have brought to light a basic principle of emotions.

Kills Guinea Pig With Jealousy.

Of the brownish substance got from anger the professor administered doses to men and animals. In every case it produced nervous excitability or irritability. In his experiments with thought conditions, with jealousy he obtained another substance from the breath, which he injected into the veins of the guinea pig. The pig died in a very few minutes.

Professor Gates concludes from his numerous experiments that hate is accompanied by the greatest expenditure of vital energy. This passion precipitates several chemical products. Enough of these would be precipitated in one hour of intense hate, according to him, to cause the death of perhaps fourscore persons, as these ptomaines are the deadliest poisons known to science.

Corroborates Dr. Cole.

In the article on the psychoscope invented by Dr. Cole, which appeared in last Sunday's Examiner, Dr. Cole described the treatment of a patient who had such a hatred for his father that all medicines failed, but who, when he changed his attitude and became naturally loving and respectful, was easily healed. Professor Gates' experiments offer the same testimony. He gives numerous instances where the passion of hate has discolored the body of a mother and poisoned the babe at her breast. Of the coarser tests, such as taking poisons from the perspiration on the brow of a man in great anger or fear, he gives many instances. But of these he does not make so much account, from the fact that there are more or less poisonous ptomaines in the blood, and that they are thrown off by the secretions. But the poisons found in the breath he considers of immense importance to science.

Dr. George G. Butler, with offices in the Columbus Memorial Building, who has made a study of metaphysics as well as of materia medica, said it was a well established fact that the breath of a woman, sweet and fragrant one instant, had been known to change radically the next through sudden passion.

IS HE GUILTY OF MURDER?

Dowie Prayed to Death by Rival Hindoo Elijah, Who Announces Triumph—Mirza Ghulam Ahmad Writes from India to Zion, Declaring He Won Prayer Duel.

Coupled with the announcement that Receiver John C. Hately had ordered Wilbur Glen Voliva to leave Zion City, there were rumors in the north shore town that a new pretender to the mantle of Dr. John Alexander Dowie has appeared.

News that the high priest of the Mohammedan faith may try to claim dominion over all that is left of the following of Elijah III. carries with it the explanation of a long-hidden secret.

Dowie was literally "prayed to death" by a rival prophet, according to the rival's claim.

Mirza Ghulam Ahmad, who asserts he is the promised Messiah of the Mohammedans, made the claim today that it was his prayers that laid Dowie low.

Challenged to Prayer Duel.

From Qadian, in far-off India, Mirza Ghulam Ahmad addressesd himself to all former followers of Dowie to-day in a circular translated from the Punjab. In it he told how three years and a half ago he had challenged Dowie to a deadly praying contest—each one of the prophets to pray to his God that the other would die first.

At that time the challenger of Dowie publicly made the following announcement:

"If the pretender of Elijahship shows his willingness by any direct or indirect means to enter the lists against me he shall leave the world before my eyes with great sorrow and torment."

Dowie very indiscreetly, it appears, challenger as "the foolish Mohammedan" tempted fate and the prophet by referring in a speech subsequently to the dan Messiah," and this, while not an open acceptance of the defi, was sufficient to set the Hindoo prophet to praying for all he was worth.

"May he try as hard as he will to fly from the death which awaits him," prayed the Ahmad, "yet may his flight from such a mighty contest be nothing less than death to him, and calamity will certainly soon overtake his Zion. May he leave the world before mine eyes with great sorrow and torment."

Mr. Ahmad claims also to have put another rival Messiah, a Mr. Piggot, out of business by the same devotional process.—Chicago Daily Journal.

REMINISCENCES.

The Early Veterans in Spiritualism, and Their Churchly Antecedants.

In The Progressive Thinker of May 18 is an article from my old and true friend Newman Weeks, for most of his life a resident of Rutland, Vermont. In that article he gives a list of many of the old workers of fifty years ago, and mine is one of the number, I am put down as coming into Spiritualism from the Methodist church, and only one other, Mr. Horton, is classed as Methodist.

Now I don't wish to stand so nearly alone, and I think Brother Weeks has made some mistake in his classification. For instance, Selden J. Finney was a licensed Methodist preacher. And, unless I am misinformed, Prof. Denton was also a Methodist preacher. Ohio also furnished a Methodist preacher amongst the early workers. Dr. H. L. Gardner was a member of an orthodox church and not a liberal; and Emma Hardinge Britten was in the same position.

I am inclined to think that several other names could be found as coming from the orthodox churches instead of the liberal. But I am glad Brother Weeks has called our attention to some of the old workers in the Spiritualistic field, as it gives me the opportunity to recall the names of several more of the old veterans of the early days. With them all I was personally acquainted, and worked with them many years.

Rev. J. G. Fish was a Baptist minister, not a liberal. The first trance speaker in New York and Boston was Emma Jay (now Bullene). Then came Cora Scott (Mrs. Richmond), and then that white-souled angel from the Green Mountains, Achsa Sprague. R. P. Ambler, John M. Spear and T. L. Harris were Universalist ministers. Frank Wadsworth, N. Frank White, and W. F. Jamieson, who converted Moses Hull, were old-time workers.

During the winter of '56 or '57, I lectured in New York City, and among the supporters of the society there were ten prominent city physicians, with incomes of from ten to twenty thousand dollars. Dr. Gray, the founder of the Homeopathic school of this country, was said to have an income of fifty thousand dollars a year. He was a thorough-going Spiritualist. Dr. H. T. Childs of Philadelphia was one of the old and tireless workers; and most certainly I should add the name of Newman Weeks, my old-time friend. And last, but not least, A. J. Davis, the fountain head of the Harmonial Philosophy, and the getter-up of the famous Rutland Convention.

But space will not allow a longer list of the veterans of the early conflict of Spiritualism with the falsehoods of the ages. J. S. LOVELAND.

TAKE NOTICE.

N. S. A. Delegates to 1906 Convention.

The N. S. A. delegates who asembled at Chicago convention last October, with one voice approved the organization of the Temple Fund Society; but only a portion of your number became personal members of that society. It was reasonable to suppose that you would each and all join the society you so well approved. Your failure to become members will have a lasting effect to make the society a struggle to succeed. As you want it to succeed, I now address this note to you personally, and suggest that you at once remedy the defection that you have thoughtlessly incurred. I feel sure that you are each willing to become members, and only wanted to reach home from the convention before you added your dollar to the fund.

I did not have the opportunity to ask you personally, but not one of you that I did ask refused your name and dollar. The delegates to the conventions bear heavy expenses to do so, and it is not fair to call you to any neglect of duty, for you set a glowing example to all kickers against results by bearing your burden of being present and striving for whatever you deem necessary. In order to show your entire interest in all that is projected, I ask for co-operation in public movements, and now in the Temple Fund Society in particular.

Let all others follow your example, which I trust will be unanimous in the support of what you legislate to accomplish. And all delegates for 1907 will be in good readiness to take part in the T. F. S. by sending their dollar each for the succeeding year, and thus enable us to show that the Temple fund is going to be made a success; and of that there is little doubt, in the opinion of yours fraternally, GEORGE W. KATES,
Cheney, Pa. President.

IT IS PROSPERING.

The Cause At Santa Cruz, California.

To the Editor:—Santa Cruz, Cal., the beautiful city by the sea, situated on the north side of Montery Bay, with the range of Santa Cruz mountains to the north and west to break off any trade winds, is only 75 miles south of San Francisco. It has a population of fourteen thousand, and sea landing with wharfs to accommodate steamers. With all its natural advantages, mountains of cement and lime rock, forests of big redwood groves close by, and the finest climate in the world, it has no extreme heat or cold. It has city water from the mountain trout streams.

Why should not the city support a strong society, and have one or more places where the truths of Spiritualism can be demonstrated?

This is the question, decided after two years' rest from action under the name of the old "Unity Spiritual Society," and on May 5, a new society was duly organized, and named the "First Spiritual Church" of Santa Cruz. By the organized effort of our new society, with over fifty charter members, it is hoped that perfect harmony and success will prevail.

Sister Mattie Hull came from San Jose, and assisted in the second morning meeting in May. Her last Sunday on the coast.

Sister Dr. Dobson-Barker of San Jose, accompanied Mrs. Hull, and with Mrs. E. H. Parker visited the "Big Tree Grove," only six miles away in th San Lornzo Canyon.

Our society desires to have the best platform workers, and will offer the very best possible inducement for those who hold proper credentials, and coming our way.

Our Mayor and city council, through our efforts have inserted in the license ordinance the clause that is prepared by our National Association, and recommended by President Barrett, as follows:

"Provided that nothing in this ordinance shall be so construed as to apply to Spiritualist ministers ordained under the usages of their denomination, and holding papers as such from the California State Spiritualists' Association, and the National Spiritualists' Association.

Additional members are joining each week.

We have the Native Sons' Hall, 118 Pacific, leased by the year. This hall is elegantly furnished, and centrally located. Controlling it for Sundays, we hold regular meetings, morning and evening, and in the afternoon a special meeting will be held as a developing class.

Mrs. Katie Huessmann-Harveston, of 2771 Folsom street, San Francisco, has been our organizer and helper for the month of May, and has been engaged for the month of June. She comes from San Francisco each Saturday, returning Monday evening. This enables her to give private readings, which prove very satisfactory, and convinces many skeptics to accept the truths of Spiritualism. Her platform work is also very convincing in the many ways she demonstrates the phenomena of spirit power. She plays and sings at the piano; her voice is of a rich, melodious, minor tone, and highly appreciated. It is her intention to organize a society at any county seat or town near the coast, and on the railroad, easy of access, and asks Spiritualists or friends interested to correspond with her for that purpose. Let your many readers take notice of this.

Officers elected, as follows: Frank E. Bentlinger, president; W. E. Whitman, vice-president; Mrs. Margaret A. Lay, secretary.

F. H. PARKER.

Santa Cruz, Cal.

The Sunapee Lake Camp.

The Sunapee Lake Spiritualist Camp Meeting Association opens its thirtieth annual session August 4th, 1907, at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., continuing four weeks and closing September 1st.

All speakers have been engaged and arrangements completed for a successful series of meetings.

For the benefit of those who have not visited this charming lake amid the mountains, we will describe the location, and give directions for reaching Blodgett's Landing:

The Concord and Claremont division of the Boston & Maine Railroad runs along the south shore of Sunapee Lake, with a commodious depot at Lake Sunapee Station. Camp meeting tickets to Blodgett's Landing are on sale at all principal stations on the B. & M. line.

Several steamboats await arrival of trains, taking passengers to all points around the lake. Blodgett's Landing is on the east side, and about half way up the lake.

Good hotel accommodations can be secured at the Forest House. Numerous cottages present an attractive appearance, where rooms may be obtained at reasonable rates.

Sunapee Lake is one of the loveliest lakes in the world; nearly 12,000 feet above sea level, with delightful scenery on all sides. We cordially invite your presence and co-operation in these meetings on its shore.

For any further information inquire of J. W. CLAY,
Secretary of the Association,
Sutton, N. H.

SHADOWS.

As sinks to rest the orb of day,
Two little children at their play
Peered forth from out the casement wall,
And sadly watched the shadows fall.
In plaintive tones I heard them say—
"What makes the darks come every day?"

And when within their tiny bed
There nestled close, each little head,
As faint and fainter gleamed the light,
And dark and darker grew the night;
While shadows lingered round the room,
They whispered soft—"The darks have come!"
Then fretted, asked (as she drew near)—

"What makes the darks come, mamma, dear?
Why can't we always see the light?
And why must come the long still night?
We hear soft footsteps on the stair,
And see things floating in the air!"

Ah, prattling babes! they come to all,
These shadows creeping o'er the wall;
Weird forms come stalking through the trees,
And voices murmur in the breeze—
Their love songs—wafted from afar,
And bright eyes shine from every star.

White ghostly visions of the past
Their dusky mantles o'er us cast,
We hear loved footfalls soft and low,
And dream the dreams of long ago;
And with faint whispers of regret
We wonder why our sun has set.

But with the dawn they vanish, all,
Nor leave a trace upon the wall.
So if through vistas of the years
Our lives have wrought less smiles than tears;
And shadows lurk within the bowers,
And thistles grow instead of flowers;

Although the vale may darkened be
That leads to our eternity—
We know the days are fleeting fast,
And we shall see the light at last.

IRENE CLIFTON.

Cincinnati, O.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it fo their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

LIST OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Send in Your dates and Names of Secretaries at Once.

Interest in the various Spiritualist camp-meetings has commenced, and secretaries of the same should report at once to this office, so that proper announcement as to dates and officers can be made.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Semi-Tropic Spiritualist Association desires to correspond with speakers and mediums for engagements at Camp-meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, from August 15th to September 15th, 1907.

GEO. E. LYON, Sec'y.
1974½ E. First St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Onset Camp.

Onset camp commences its thirty-first annual meeting, July 21, and closes August 25. For full programs address the Secretary, Onset, Mass.

New Era Camp, Oregon.

The New Era Camp-meeting begins July 6 and ends July 29. For full programs, address Geo. H. Lazelle, president, Oregon City, or F. F. Dunton, secretary, Liberal.

Forest Home Camp, Mich.

This camp opens Aug. 4 and closes August 25. Any person desiring programs of information regarding campgrounds or camp work, will please write to the secretary, who will answer all inquiries. Mrs. Millie Mitchell, president; Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich.

Chesterfield Camp.

Begins July 25 and ends September 1. Mrs. Flora H. Millspaugh, secretary, Chesterfield, Ind. Send to her for full programmes.

Winfield (Kansas) Camp.

The Winfield Camp Association will hold its fourteenth annual camp-meeting commencing June 30, and closing July 14. Mrs. A. McAlister president, North Manning street, Winfield, Kan.; Mrs. M. C. Sailing, secretary, 1602 South Church street, Winfield, Kan.

Lily Dale Assembly.

The season opens at Lily Dale N. Y., July 13, and closes September 3. For program address Laura G. Fixen, Secretary, 1047 Carmen ave., Chicago, Ill.

Sunapee Lake Camp, N. H.

SunapeeLake Spiritualist Camp at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., commences August 4, and closes September 1. For programs and information, write to John W. Clay, Sutton, N. H.

Camp Progress.

Meetings are held at Mowerland Park, Upper Swampscott, Mass., every Sunday, beginning June 3, and closing September 30. B. H. Blaney, president, 150 Elm street, Marblehead; Mr. H. S. Gardiner, secretary, 28, Cabot street, Salem.

Edgewood Camp, Wash.

Commences July 29, and ends Aug. 19. For full particulars address Geo. E. Knowiden, 955½ Tacoma avenue, Tacoma, Wash.

Delphos (Kansas) Camp.

Opens August 9, closing on the 25th. Address all communications to T. D. Rice, Secretary, Delphos, Kan.

Island Lake Camp.

Island Lake Camp, Island Lake, Mich., opens July 14, extending until August 30. For programs or information write to the secretary, N. G. Swarthout, Fowlerville, Mich. At Brighton after July 1st.

Lake Brady, Ohio.

The sixteenth annual session of this camp will commence June 30, and end September 1. For full particulars address A. G. Keck, Akron, Ohio.

Unity Camp, Mass.

Opens on Suday, June 4, and continues every Sunday until the last of September.

Harmony Grove Camp

Harmony Grove Camp-meeting Association will hold its annual camp, July 22 to August 5. This camp is located three and one-half miles from Escondido, Cal. For further particulars in regard to the camp, address T. J. McFeron, secretary, 528 Fir st., San Diego, Cal.

Niantic Camp, Conn.

TheConnecticut Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, at Niantic Camp Ground, Niantic. Ct.; season of 1807, commences June 12, and continues until September 11. For full particulars address George Hatch, South Windham, Ct.

Haslett Park, Mich.

Thetwenty-fifth annual assembly of Spiritualists at Haslett Park, Mich., commences August 6, and continues to September 3. For programs address E. F. Spross, Okemos, or D. R. Jessop, Williamston.

Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

The twentyfifth annual camp-meeting at Mt. Pleasant Park, opens July 28 and closes August 25. Programs and information given to all who write to Mrs. M. B. Anderson, secretary, Clarkesville, Mo.

Ocean Grove Camp.

The camp is located at Harwichport, Mass., and opens July7, and closes July 21, 1907. For programs and information, write Mrs. Mary B. Small, South Harwich, Mass.

Grand Ledge Camp, Mich.

The Grand Ledge Spiritualist Camp-Meeting opens July 21, and closes August 18, with Mr. Oscar Edgerly as presiding chairman. For full particulars address J. W. Ewing, Grand Ledge, Mich.

Summerland Camp, Cal.

The Summerland Spiritualist Association will hold its annual camp-meeting the last week in June, beginning June 23 and closing June 30. Solon Smith Secretary, Summerland, Cal.

Wonewoc Camp-Meeting.

The Western Wisconsin Camp Association holds its annual camp-meeting in Unity Park, Wonewoc, Wis., July 14 to August 11. For particulars and programs write Gertrude Spooner, secretary, Wonewoc, Wis.

Ottawa Camp.

Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, Forest Park, Ottawa, Kansas, August 16 to 26 inclusive. Write for programs. H. W. Henderson, president, Lawrence, Kansas; Mrs. May Cook-Pearson, secretary, Spring Hill, Kansas.

Parkland Camp, Pa.

Parkland Heights Spiritualists' Home and Camp-meeting Association will open its camp on Sunday, July 7, and continue every Sunday until the last of August. Elizabeth M. Fish, Secretary, Floral Heights, Parkland, Eden, Pa.

Temple Heights Camp.

Temple Heights Spiritualist Camp Meeting commences August 10, and ends August 18. For full particulars addrss A. D. Champney, secretary, Rockport, Me.

Harmony Grove Camp, Cal.

Harmony Grove Spiritualist Camp at Escondido, will open August 11, and close August 25. For full particulars address T. J. McFeron, 528 Fir, San Diego, Cal.

Vicksburg Camp.

Vicksburg Camp, Mich., opens July 28 and closes August 18. For full particulars address Mrs. Jeanette Fraser, Vicksburg, Mich.

Mantua Camp, Ohio.

This camp, located at Mantua Station, Ohio, will open July 9, and continue to August 27. For further particulars, address F. H. Sherwood, secretary, Mantua Station, Ohio.

Queen City Park Camp, Vt.

QueenCity Park Camp, South Burlington, Vt., commences July 29, and ends September 3. For programs address A. F. Hubbard, president, Tyson; S. N. Gould, vice-president, Randolph, or Effie L. Chapman, Cambridge, Vt. After the camp opens address each of the above at Queen City Park, Vt.

Verona Park Camp.

The Verona Park Camp-meeting, Me., will open August 25, and close September 1. A. F. Smith, president, Bangor, Me.; F. W. Smith, secretary, Rockland, Me.

Lake Pleasant, Mass.

This camp will open Sunday, July 28, and continue for 30 days. For Programs address Albert P. Blinn, 17 Oak street, Norwich, Conn.

Snowflake Camp Meeting, Michigan.

It commences August 4 and closes August 25. For programs and full particulars address Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich., inclosing stamp.

Central New York Camp.

Located at Freeville, commences July 20 and closes August 19. B. L. Robinson, McLean, N. Y., secretary. W. K. Kelsey, President, Cortland, N. Y.

A NEW BOOK.

Science and Religion.

By Benjamin F. Loomis, 397 Pages, $1.50, Cloth.

Showing the harmony of the Sciences and their relation to Religion, or the relation of Man to the Universe.

The Macrocosm and the Microcosm.

Showing the harmony between Phrenology and Astrology, or the Influence of the Planets on the Human Mind; and containing the Horoscopes of Jesus Christ and of Adam. Progress of the World explained by the principles of

PHRENOLOGY.

A Cosmic View of Christ.

The Rise and "Fall" of Man

Scientifically Considered, and many other things not commonly found in other books. Address

FOWLER & WELLS CO.,
24 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

MORRIS PRATT INSTITUTE

Whitewater, Wisconsin.

A School under the auspices of Spiritualism. Thoroughly qualified teachers. Prepares for public and private work. A two year's course. It teaches Grammar, Rhetoric, Oratory, History, Logic, Evolution, Psychology, Comparative Religion, Higher Criticism, Lessons in Psychic Development, etc., Practice in Public Speaking and in Composition work.

Admittance to all over fifteen. No examination. Club boarding in building. Tuition Fifty Dollars per year. The most beautiful building in the city. Steam heat throughout. School opens Thursday, September 19, 1907. Closes middle of May, 1908. Write for catalogue to A. J. WEAVER, Principal, Whitewater, Wis.

DR. GEO. B. WARNE, Pres.,
CORA L. V. RICHMOND, Sec.
LODEMA S. WEAVER, Matron.
and Assistant Secretary.

"The Light or Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.

"Spiritual Fire Crackers, Bible Chestnuts and Political Pin Points." By J. S. Harrington. A pamphlet containing 79 pages of racy reading. Price 25 cts.

"Harmonics of Evolution. The Philosophy of Individual life. Based Upon Natural Science, as Taught by Modern Masters of the Law." By Florence Huntley. A work of deep thought, carrying the principles of evolution into new fields. Price, cloth, $2.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.50.

Prayer; its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Tabor. Price 10 cents.

Season For 1907 Opens June 15.

MAPLEWOOD HOTEL
Spiritualist Assembly Grounds,
Lily Dale, New York.

From June 15, 1907 to July 12 rates will be, for room and board, $ per week.

Regular Assembly Season begins on July 12. Transient rates will then be from $1.50 to $2 per day.

Season rates for families and parties, special rates.

M. R. ROUSE Proprietor.

"MISS INCOGNITA,"
Or An Experiment in Love That Is All for This Time."
If you want to know the rest write to The P. P. CO., Box 935, Rome, Ga.

Mrs. E. M. Hitchcock will answer 3 questions by yes or no for 25 cents; business questions preferred. Send own hand writing. Full reading, $1.00. Fern Hill, Wash. Send date of birth.

THE ACME COLLEGE
Of Occult Science Company.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Ohio. Antitheist Spiritual College. Acme mediumship developed. No dark seances permitted. They Marvel at our healing. Send stamp for particulars and testimonials. W. S. McCLINE, Pres.; CORA BENTON, Sec., 1714 Adams avenue, Toledo, Ohio.

FRED P. EVANS,
Noted Medium for
Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,
FRED P. EVANS.
2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all ettere to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Harry, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druth, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for,"—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery, Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts. FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. P. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
230 North Sixth st.
San Jose, Cal.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.
BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—H. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime."—The World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

OUR CHILDREN.

Hints From Practical Experience for Parents and Teachers.—By Paul Carus.

In this little book "Our Children," Paul Carus offers a unique contribution to pedagogical literature. Without any theoretical pretensions it is a strong defense for the rights of the child, dealing with the responsibilities of parenthood, and with the first inculcation of fundamental ethics in the child mind and the true principles of correction and guidance. Each detail is forcefully illustrated by informal incidents from the author's experience with his own children, and his suggestions will prove of the greatest possible value to young mothers and kindergartners. Hints as to the first acquaintance with all branches of knowledge are touched upon—mathematics, natural sciences, foreign languages, etc.—and practical wisdom in regard to the treatment of money, hygiene and similar problems. 207 Pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies." A Review of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmago's oft-repeated articles upon Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., JUNE 22, 1907 NO. 917

WHEN I RETURN.

I'm getting dazed o'er prospects as I never was before,
For so many folks I'd like to be when
I come back once more.
I'd like to be a millionaire and hold mankind in hand,
And make the tyrant rue the day he set foot on this land.
I'd like to feed the starving poor whom tyrants here oppress,
When I come back to earth sometime to grow, unfold, express.

And sometime I would like to be a girl, a woman, wife;
A mother of a family, and live a
grandma's life,
Or be a queen o'er some fair land of earth to rule awhile,
And teach my subjects how to bow and tip their hats and smile.
I'd like to grace the throne of love
from woman's place sometime,
And touch the hearts of men who scoff and laugh at things sublime.

So many things I'd like to do when I return once more;
I'd like to work a little less and rest
when work is o'er.
I'd like to organize a trust upon this earthly plane,
Control the sun, and moon and stars,
the zephyrs and the rain.
I'd like to do so much next time, but how can I expect
To not repeat my work when I must fail to recollect?

I'd like to be a Washington, a Lincoln
or a Paine,
A Horace Greeley, Henry George, a
Grant or James G. Blaine,
I'd like to be the President one term
within this land;
I'd like to join the labor and the money band in hand;
I'd like to be McKinley and a Bryan
through one life,
And then I'd like to come and be a presidential wife.

I'd like to be a Dewey or a Miles, and such great men.
I'd like to be the Great of Earth when
I come back again.
But what's the use of coming back to this same earthly spot
To learn through all experiences the things to be forgot?
Why not move on from sphere to sphere, and rung by rung arise
In spirit on the higher plane, remember and grow wise?

If all must come to earth again their knowledge to complete,
And have experience never had, no
act of life repeat,
And that without a consciousness of scenes and things we pass
Retained, how can we know each time our next succeeding class?
What just recording angel guide will keep our progress free
And full recorded through the route of all Eternity?

It may be true we shall return upon some future day,
To grow, unfold, express, arise,
through contact with the clay,
But if the soul of man lives on beyond this mortal time,
Why should it not go on to progress,
and grow, and learn, and climb?
Why need the soul fall back to rise anew to heights once passed?
Why not pass on, and on, and on,
while consciousness may last?

DR. T. WILKINS.

Thoughts are Forces that Go On For a Time.

Thoughts are things, or rather, Forces, that go on for a time, and maybe eternity; if so, what we say or do is of vast moment. To uplift others we must be above them. To be no better or wiser than your ancestors or neighbors, is not the proper aim. Don't fossilize, but go on toward perfection. To love or be loved is all in all. Tasteless and joyless is life if this is dead or lacking. Be self-poised; not too serious or crafty and funny; not too reticent or talative, especially with the women. Never get in a noisy rage and abuse especially the ones who are in no way to blame for it. How dreadful to see one snappish with loved ones because of something provoking in business, for which they may feel as unhappy as yourself. Try, if possible, to realize how awful it is to put in a child's mind a vicious idea to take root and work havoc and destruction. To poison the fountainhead is surely the crime of all crimes. Don't give way to a gust of anger, and rave and swear; in a word, do nothing to shock or confuse people to make them lose faith in you or your fellow men. Do nothing that will thereafter bring remorse, shame or regret. Seldom is the chance to do good on a big scale afforded; let us, then, improve the many little ones. This is all that is required of us.

C. F. SHORT.

THE ANGEL BABY.

Come, baby, come:
Loving angels bring you, pretty, from
—I cannot see just where;
I am sure it's from some garden in the sunny Soulland fair:
Come, baby, come.

Smile, baby, smile:
I can see your bright eyes, pretty, and your little mouth and nose,
And your rosy hands and fingers, and your teenty-taunty toes:
Smile, baby, smile.

Rest baby, rest:
In my loving arms I fold you, as you
gaze deep in my eyes,
And the beauty and the sweetness seem a vision from the skies:
Rest, baby, rest.

Sleep, baby, sleep:
Fly away to happy Dreamland, while
I sing my lullaby;
Peaceful is your quiet slumber, with your angels ever nigh:
Sleep, baby, sleep.

Gone, baby, gone:
Loving angels take you, pretty, to—
I cannot see just where—
I am sure it's some sweet garden in the sunny Soulland fair:
Gone, baby, gone.

Bye, baby, bye:
Come again to me, my pretty, well I love to have you come;
Loving spirit mothers bring you from your sunny Soulland home:
Bye, baby bye.

Wonderful Results

At the Seances Held by W. T. Stanford with the Medium, Charles Bailey.

Dr. J. M. Peebles writes from Australia: "I am attending Mr. Stanford's seances each week. Mr. C. Bailey, one of the greatest, if not THE greatest medium to-day in the world, is astonishing people with the manifestations that occur in his presence. I have not time to enumerate them, but shall speak of them on my return, in connection with the marvels that I saw in the presence of India's Yogis in the suburbs of Calcutta and also in the mountains."

A friend said to me the other day—one who has been a professed and earnest Spiritualist for many years—"What good is the physical phenomena that you present so persistently to your readers each month?" "Some years ago, before I began to closely study the scientific side of the phenomena, I might have said the same," was my reply. "Since then, however, Spiritualism has entered on a new phase. The latest conclusions and experiments of leading scientists like Professor Larkin, for instance, of the Lowe Observatory, California, have shown us that it will be possible ere long to demonstrate that "the passage of matter through matter" is not the wild, visionary, unreasonable thing that the man in the street imagines, but that it is in accordance with laws of nature that are only just being demonstrated by science. In the April number of this paper the article by Professor Harry C. Jones, "Is Matter Disappearing: Is it simply Electricity?' showed that the electron, the latest definition of what we call matter, is Electricity pure and simple. The Law of Vibrations teaches us also that what we call matter is the result of lower rates of motion, that the planets and their satellites thrown off from the sun in the form of vapor have by a natural law also cooled down and become solidified as the rate of velocity slackened.

What is more natural then—and we inquirers know it to be a fact—for the spiritual chemists on the other side to resolve matter into its original ether and again solidify it? It is this aspect of Spiritualism that is going to arrest the attention of scientists and intelligent inquirers into Spiritualistic phenomena and we shall presently find, as Dr. Channing said in his address in the April number, that later, when we understand the laws that obtain in this universe "a motor car or a steam engine will appear an antiquated means of getting about." Just as it is set forth in that remarkable book of Lord Lytton's, "The Coming Race," when we shall have called "Vril" or Electricity to our aid in these matters.

It was by the exercise of these same laws of nature that the growing of a plant, 18 inches high, at the circle held on March 29th became possible. A Yogi was present, and it was by the power over nature obtained by the Yogis when in earth life that this remarkable phenomenon was produced. It cannot be too often remembered that this mundane existence of ours is full of marvels. Which of us by our own power could make a seed germinate, or clothe with beauty the grass of the field? It is only by "hastening" somewhat these powers of nature that such a thing is possible as the growth of a tree during a comparatively short sitting. It could not be accomplished by the Hindoos, Abdul and Selim, who have not learned to subjugate Nature as the Yogis of India have. To him was handed by the Yogi the seeds which were planted one inch deep in the flower pot. Yogi, who gave the name of "Ram, Ram, Gee," watered the seed, and said in broken English, "Yogi come from India. Yogi go sleep in cave, no eat much, learn great secret. Masters teach Yogi make tree grow big."

The pot was covered with a large basket and after Dr. Channing's address, lasting half an hour, it was lifted and the plant was found to be some inches high. The Yogi then magnetized the plant. It was again covered, and after another control, Abdullah, had spoken and sung, Yogi announced that the basket was not big enough. It was taken off and there was displayed a most beautiful plant, 18 inches high, the top apparently pressed down for want of room to grow higher and with leaves of exceeding freshness and beauty. Dr. Whitcomb explained it was the Camphor tree of India, and beside it were also growing small plants from a peanut, and a bulbous Indian plant, planted by Dr. Peebles. But the great power of the Yogi had been expended on the large plant promised. It is not expected that people who know nothing of these things can accept at once all these facts, which are great spiritual verities to those privileged to witness them.

The minds, even of some Spiritualists, have to be prepared by study for a knowledge of Nature's laws transcending our ordinary notions concerning matter. And I remarked to my friend in conclusion that as Jesus said to the unbelieving crowd, "Even if one rose from the dead" they would not believe, so it is not our aim so much to convince unbelievers, who are too densely materialistic to appreciate the miracles of daily life, as to gradually learn ourselves more of nature's laws, and point the way for those who are craving for more knowledge—more light.

The following is a brief record of sittings held since March 8th:

32ND SEANCE. March 15th. Address by Dr. Channing on "The Influence of the Seven Rules" and prayers written in black and red from Thibet. Bird's nest brought for Dr. Peebles. Clay with spear heads. Hindoo spirit grows plant a few inches.

33RD SEANCE. March 22nd. Address by Dr. Robinson on "The Hittites." He draws map of Asia Minor, etc., on black board. Phenomena. Bone tablet from Thibet. It has a rude carving of Buddha with Thibetian inscription which Dr. Whitcomb translated "The Enlightened One." Bird caught in the light by Abdul. Second bird in small cage. Spear heads in day.

34TH SEANCE. March 29th. Address by Dr. Channing entitled, "The Master Christian." Phenomena. Unbaked cake of Indian meal composed of three kinds. Plant 18 inches high, grown by Yogi as related above.

35TH SEANCE. April 5th. Address by Dr. Channing, on "The State and Condition in the Spirit World of Evil Men." Phenomena. Spear head in clay. Two birds from sitter's coat. Manuscript on outer rind of Palm tree; Thibetian prayers pricked in and placed as an offering to some idol. Electrical conditions prevented production of more phenomena. Short address by Mrs. Robinson.

ADDRESS by Dr. W. Ellery Channing, specially Reported by Mrs. W. Wilson, Shorthand Writer and Typist, Premier Building, Collins St., Melbourne.—"Crimes Against Criminals.'

Perhaps you have been wondering why I selected the subject as announced by Dr. Whitcomb to-night. It is one which should be brought under the notice of every man, woman and child in the community as it affects all—believer and unbeliever alike. From the spirit side of life we see many misdirected efforts, much misspent energy, applied in trying to stem the awful torrent of criminality Which is round about you. To-night I purpose calmly viewing this matter in a common sense light, and I trust you will agree with me and go forth from this place with the desire to bring about a better state of things in the community.

For long ages past man has been tortured and killed for crimes that he has committed. Even at the present day murderers are hanged by the neck till they are dead and before the corpse is cold there is another murderer ready to take his place. In days gone by penalties inflicted upon humanity for paltry crimes were terrible and appalling, such crimes as larceny and forgery being visited by the penalty of death. Thank Heaven, those laws have been repealed. By repealing them it was not intended to produce more crime, but, alas, round about us we see hundreds and thousands of our fellows still steeped in vice and criminality and we know not how to deal with them.

First, let me say, the law should not seek to "punish" a man for his wrong doing. Perhaps you have never heard that statement made before. I am very pleased to make it to-night. The law should not seek to punish, but to reform the criminal. And it should be instilled into him that his fellowmen are not his enemies—that the law is not seeking to rob him, to persecute him, or to vent its spleen upon him. In the past this has been only too common. It is, moreover, impossible to find any punishment that will act absolutely as a deterrent. If death is made the penalty as in the past, men will still thieve and forge and murder. You know this is the truth without my telling it. Take any number of men in society with certain defects in the quality and quantity of brain, with evil passions and appetites and environments and you will have a group of criminals. The criminal is often a product of innumerable causes. He is a creature largely of his environment and a victim of heredity. In the city of New York a certain woman had been arrested 154 times for drunkenness. The authorities traced her ancestors and found that both her father and her brother were drunkards and had committed suicide. On the mother's side there were three drunkards in the family as well as the grandfather and the great-grandfather. Now, this poor woman should in some way have received the commiseration and the pity of her fellows, rather than the condemnation and the punishment that was too often inflicted upon her.

It is remarkable that for so long a period the wisest people of the earth have failed to recognize that in certain people crime is a disease. Take the habitual drunkards of whom we have been speaking. Time and again they are brought before the magistrate and a fine is imposed. There would be just as much reason in inflicting a fine upon poor epileptics because they have fits in the streets. The drunkard is just as much diseased as the epileptic. "But," says someone, "the drunkard is responsible for his actions." Is he? Is the epileptic responsible for his fits? Is the diseased man, and unable to withstand the craving that came upon him at certain times. And it is the same with other criminals.

A statement was once made by a criminal previous to his execution that before he committed a robbery he felt an uncontrollable impulse to steal and under that influence or impulse to steal he was a helpless child.

How shall we reform criminals? By making the gaol or the prison a school house. These unfortunate ones should be taught. Hundreds of men and women are in your penitentiaries to-day whose minds are darkened and clouded. They know nothing of the joys which you experience even when they are free. Thir tastes are depraved, they see no beauty in life, but are often anxious to drown their cares in drink and ribaldry, and in the fellowship of others as evil as themselves. Let me tell you that no great change will be effected until the criminals are educated and taught. But you may ask how this is to be done with men who are receiving their sentences? I will tell you. The judge, in passing sentence upon the criminal, should have the power to say, "I do not state the time during which you will be incarcerated, it depends entirely upon yourself how long you remain in the prison house."

An indeterminate sentence is what is needed in your midst, and there will then be an incentive for the man to behave aright. He should, moreover, be paid for the work he does—a reasonable remuneration—so that when he goes forth from the prison house he will have something in his pocket, and he enabled to withstand temptation. Take the case of most of these criminals. They herd together, they exchange thoughts and ideas, and bitter feelings are engendered against their gaolers and against society. Let them realize that society is not against them but desires them to be good men and women, and I say you will touch the chords in their hearts perhaps never touched before.

Thousands of these men and women go forth from the prison house without money, without friends, with nowhere to go and nothing to do. If, perchance, they get some employment, it becomes known immediately, that they have been in prison. They drift back into the old paths, and in a very short time they are up again before the judge and standing in the felon's dock.

Again, it should be a crime for any officer of the State, policeman or detective, to hound a man after he has come out of prison. I know of instances where detectives have shadowed men from the time they passed the portals of the gaol. Some of them intended to live aright and to get employment. I know of one case where the detective went and said to the man's employer, "Do you know whom you have got in your employ?" "No," said the contractor, "I don't." "You have So-and-So, the criminal," said the detective.

The man was discharged that night. I would make it a crime for any officer of the Crown to do such thing. Is it not often a true complaint of criminals that they were forced into crime because they were forever being "moved on" as it were, with no resting place for their feet, no place where they could stay in safety and begin life anew. There are, however, men and women who wilfully do evil, who make up their minds to be criminals. Such men and women should be separated from the community—not behind prison walls, but upon some island where they could not escape. They would have their freedom there, they would have to work to live—the men on one island and the women on the other—for criminals should never be allowed to populate the world.

Until your governments realize their duty towards criminals this terrible torrent of criminality will go surging on and on. Concerning punishment: How often are you struck with the fact that for certain offences punishment seems inadequate, while for other offenses it is too severe? This is mostly brought about through the ignorance of the prison conditions. (Judicate on the cases in char gistrates and judges too, for to matter. You know we say in Amer or and you say in your land also; leg. lawyers make the best judges. I question it. It is abhorrent to me that any man who has made money out of criminals should at last be elected to fill the position where it is necessary for him to condemn them and pass punishment upon them. But how often is it otherwise?

In some lands the extreme penalty for murder has been abolished. Let me say that from the spirit side of life we declare that it is wrong to hang, electrocute or strangle any living being. This is so for two reasons—one of which is not apparent to most people, and certainly not to legislators. A man commits a murder, and the law says he must pay the penalty with his life. Let me tell you, that in fulfilling that law, society is carrying out that obsolete revengeful Mosaic law which demands "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

No man or company of men, no society has a right to take that which they cannot give—life. Secondly, and this is the most serious reason: the execution of murderers lets loose upon the world in which you live depraved spirits or demons who return, and sometimes in revenge, cause others to perpetrate similar crimes. You are constantly jerking into the spirit world hundreds of those depraved spirits, who, filled with revenge, return, and as I said, cause misery and trouble. I will quote a case that happened in this land some years ago. I am indebted to Dr. Whitcomb for the instance:

A young man cut his sweetheart's throat, and a day or two before he was swung from the gallows, he said, "I felt something come over me that was irresistible, I could not help it, I had to do it."

Over people like yourselves, living good lives and guarding yourselves against all that is evil, these depraved spirits have no power. But look abroad upon society to-night, and see the hundreds and thousands steeped in vice and wickedness—the cringing, crawling drunkard, for instance, is he not a fit subject for a deprived spirit

HERBERT SPENCER'S HERESIES.

His Opinion of the Christian God—Cruelty of a Fijian Deity Small Compared With That of Jehovah—Reprobation and Atonement Termed Abhorrent—Will and Intelligence Cannot Be Ascribed to the Cause of All Things.

If we contrast the Hebrew God described in primitive traditions—man like in appearance, appetites, and emotions—with the Hebrew God as characterized by the prophets, there is shown a widening range of power along with nature increasingly remote from that of man. And on passing to conceptions of him which are now entertained we are made aware of an extreme transfiguration. By a convenient obliviousness a deity who in early times is represented as hardening men's hearts so as that they may commit punishable acts, and as employing a lying spirit to deceive them, comes to be mostly thought of as an embodiment of virtues transcending the highest we can imagine.

The cruelty of a Fijian god who, representing as devouring the souls of the dead may be supposed to inflict torture during the process, is small compared with the cruelty of a God who condemns men to tortures which are eternal; and the ascription of this cruelty, though habitual in ecclesiastical formulas, occasionally occurring in sermons, and still sometimes pictorially illustrated, is becoming so intolerable to the better natured that while some theologians distinctly deny it, others quietly drop it out of their teachings.

Clearly, this change cannot cease until the beliefs in hell and damnation disappear.

Disappearance of them will be aided by an increasing repugnance to injustice. The visiting on Adam's descendants through hundreds of generations dreadful penalties for a small transgression which they did not commit; the damning of all men who do not avail themselves of an alleged mode of obtaining forgiveness, which most men have never heard of; and the effecting a reconciliation by sacrificing a son who was perfectly innocent, to satisfy the assumed necessity for a propitiatory victim, are modes of action which, ascribed to a human ruler, would call forth expressions of abhorrence; and the ascription of them to the Ultimate Cause of things, even now felt to be full of difficulties, must become impossible.

So, too, must die out the belief that a Power present in innumerable worlds throughout infinite space and who during millions of years of the earth's earlier existence needed no honoring by its inhabitants, should be seized with a craving for praise; and having created mankind, should be angry with them if they do not perpetually tell him how great he is.

As fast as men escape from that glamour of earthly impressions which prevents them from thinking, they will refuse to imply a trait of character which is the reverse of worshipful.

Similarly will the logical incongruities be more and more conspicuous to growing intelligence. Passing over the familiar difficulties that sundry of the implied divine attributes otherwise ascribed—that a god who repents of what he has done must be lacking either in power or in foresight; that his anger presupposes an occurrence which has been contrary to intention, and so indicates defect of means; we come to the deeper difficulty that such emotions, in common with all emotions, can exist only in a consciousness which is limited. Every emotion has its antecedent ideas, and antecedent ideas are habitually supposed to occur in God; he is represented as seeing or hearing this or the other, and as being emotionally affected thereby. That is to say, the conception of a divinity possessing these traits of character, necessarily continues anthropomorphic; not only in the sense that the emotions ascribed are like those of human beings, but also in the sense that they form parts of a consciousness which, like the human consciousness, is formed of successive states. And such a conception of the divine consciousness is irreconcilable both with the unchangeableness otherwise alleged, and with the omniscience otherwise alleged. For a consciousness constituted of ideas and feelings caused by objects and occurrences, cannot be simultaneously occupied with all objects and all occurrences throughout the universe. To believe in a divine consciousness, men must refrain from thinking what is meant by consciousness—must stop short with verbal propositions; and propositions which they are debarred from rendering into thoughts will more and more fail to satisfy them.

Of course like difficulties present themselves when the will of God is spoken of.

So long as we refrain from giving a definite meaning to the word will, we may say that it is possessed by the Cause of All Things as readily as we may say that love of approbation is possessed by a circle; but when from the words we pass to the thoughts they stand for, we find that we can no more unite in consciousness the terms of the one proposition than we can think of the other. Whosoever conceives any other will than his own must do so in terms of his own will, which is the sole will directly known to him—all other wills being only inferred. But will, as each is conscious of it, presupposes a motive—a prompting desire of some kind; absolute indifference excludes the conception of will. Moreover, will, as implying a prompting desire, connotes some end contemplated as one to be achieved, and ceases with the achievement of it; some other will referring to some other end, taking its place. That is to say, will, like motion, necessarily supposes a series of consciousness. The conception of a divine will, involves, like it, localization in space and time; the willing of each end, excluding from consciousness for an interval the willing of other ends, It is the same with the ascription of intelligence. Not to dwell on the seriality and limitation implied as before, we may note that intelligence, as alone conceivable by us, presupposes

Religion must always be something emotional, and the culture of emotion is not carried on advantageously in ordinary school-teaching. The system that is best for securing the intellectual element is not best for securing the emotional element.—Bain.

In wonder all philosophy [say religion] began, in wonder it ends, and admiration fills up the interspace; but the first wonder is the offspring of ignorance, the last is the parent of adoration.—Coleridge.

Nothing destroys authority so much

PLYMOUTH SPIRITUAL CHURCH, OF ROCHESTER, N. Y.

An Interesting Letter from the Pastor, Rev. B. F. Austin, Giving Cheerful and Encouraging Data Concerning Its Condition and Prospects.

To the Editor:—I am often asked by letter for some report of our church work here, and to all interested would say, we are making slow but healthful progress in our work. Our large attendance of last fall fell away considerably during the cold weather, as, owing to a variety of reasons, our church was uncomfortable during the severe weather.

Our membership has increased, both in Rochester and our non-resident membership, which now embraces a number who regularly contribute to church funds. A large number of pews have been taken (on the voluntary principle) and the receipts during most of the year have been encouraging.

One cheering feature of our work is that it is not confined to those who attend our church, but through the powerful agency of the liberal press in Rochester we are reaching every week from 50,000 to 75,000 of an audience through the published reports of my lectures in the "Democrat and Chronicle," "Union and Advertiser," and the "Post Express." The two former regularly devote from one-third to one-half column or more to a summary of the morning and evening lectures in Plymouth Church, and thus we are missionizing the public with our liberal teaching.

Another encouraging feature is the fulfillment we are finding of a spirit prophecy given to us when we were debating and deliberating on the question "to purchase or not to purchase" this property. Our spirit friends repeatedly said to us: "You will get aid from unexpected sources." See how this statement has been verified, and is being verified more fully from time to time.

We were in difficulty over our heating when friend Kelsey, from Cortland, came up one Sunday "just to see how we are getting on." As is well known, he is an expert in heating buildings. He soon pointed out a change necessary in our pipes, and as it involved cutting through the floor, and new radiators, he very generously paid the $50 required and gave us advice and radiators free. The angels reward him.

A little later I foresaw a payment of $150 to be made (balance due on our church cushions) this spring, and there seemed no provisions for meeting it. One morning in my mail I found a letter from a Rochester merchant—a stranger to me—asking me to call on him, which I did.

After inquiring about our work in a friendly way, he told me he had been out to hear me a few times and liked our services (though he is a pew-holder in another church. He also said that his mother formerly attended Plymouth Church, and that they had decided to pay off the remaining $150 we owed on the cushions. Angels reward him and his poor old mother, whom I called on personally and thanked.

A few weeks since, at Hartford, I met Margaret Gaule Reidinger, where she was delighting large audiences at the State Convention with her marvelous readings. We talked over Plymouth Church interests at Mrs. Helen P. Russegue's home, where we were stopping. On returning to Rochester I sent Mrs. Reidinger a fine photo of Plymouth Church, and she exhibited this to her Ladies' Aid Society and sent us a pledge for $100. And thus the good work goes on. We need a considerable sum next month to close up our first year's operations successfully. It will come—possibly the reader of this will contribute a part of it.

B. F. AUSTIN.

A CORRECTION.

Professor Denton Was Never a Materialist.

To the Editor:—In the interesting reminiscences of Mr. Newman Weeks, published in your issue of May 18th, I find an error which I am certain he will be willing to see corrected.

Mr. Weeks places the name of William Denton in a list of "good men and true," who, he says, in the early days came into the ranks of Spiritualism from Materialism.

This is a mistake. Mr Denton was never a materialist; he was a Methodist, and from his boyhood commenced preaching Methodism; but the road from Methodism to early (or Wesley's) Spiritualism was short and direct, and he soon found it. Hence he was ready to join the modern movement as soon as the first call was sounded.

ELIZABETH M. F. DENTON.
Wellesley, Mass.

terms of changes primarily wrought by alien activities—the impressions generated by things beyond consciousness, and the ideas derived from such impressions. To speak of an intelligence which exists in the absence of all such alien activities, is to use a meaningless word. If to the corollary that the First Cause, considered as intelligent objective activities, it is replied that these have become such by act of creation, and were previously included in the First Cause; then the reply is that in such case the First Cause could, before this creation have had nothing to generate in it such changes as those constituting what we call intelligence, and must therefore have been unintelligent at the time when intelligence was most called for. Hence it is clear that the intelligence ascribed, answers in no respect to that which we know by the name. It is intelligence out of which all the characters constituting it have vanished.

These and other difficulties, some of which are often discussed but never disposed of, must force men hereafter to drop the higher anthropomorphic characters given to the First Cause, as they have long since dropped the lower.—"Principles of Sociology."

Duty is carrying on promptly and faithfully the affairs now before you. It is to fulfill the claims of to-day.—Goethe.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 36 CHICAGO, ILL., JUNE 22, 1907 NO. 917

WHEN I RETURN.

I'm getting dazed o'er prospects as I never was before,
For so many folks I'd like to be when I come back once more.
I'd like to be a millionaire and hold mankind in hand,
And make the tyrant rue the day he set foot on this land.
I'd like to feed the starving poor whom tyrants here oppress,
When I come back to earth sometime to grow, unfold, express.

And sometime I would like to be a girl, a woman, wife;
A mother of a family, and live a grandma's life,
Or be a queen o'er some fair land of earth to rule awhile,
And teach my subjects how to bow and tip their hats and smile.
I'd like to grace the throne of love from woman's place sometime,
And touch the hearts of men who scoff and laugh at things sublime.

So many things I'd like to do when I return once more;
I'd like to work a little less and rest when work is o'er.
I'd like to organize a trust upon this earthly plane,
Control the sun, and moon and stars, the zephyrs and the rain.
I'd like to do so much next time, but how can I expect
To not repeat my work when I must fail to recollect?

I'd like to be a Washington, a Lincoln or a Paine,
A Horace Greeley, Henry George, a Grant or James G. Blaine,
I'd like to be the President one term within this land;
I'd like to join the labor and the money hand in hand;
I'd like to be McKinley and a Bryan through one life,
And then I'd like to come and be a presidential wife.

I'd like to be a Dewey or a Miles, and such great men.
I'd like to be the Great of Earth when I come back again.
But what's the use of coming back to this same earthly spot
To learn through all experiences the things to be forgot?
Why not move on from sphere to sphere, and rung by rung arise
In spirit on the higher plane, remember and grow wise?

If all must come to earth again their knowledge to complete,
And have experience never had, no act of life repeat,
And that without a consciousness of scenes and things we pass
Retained, how can we know each time our next succeeding class?
What just recording angel guide will keep our progress free
And full recorded through the route of all Eternity?

It may be true we shall return upon some future day,
To grow, unfold, express, arise, through contact with the clay,
But if the soul of man lives on beyond this mortal time,
Why should it not go on and progress, and grow, and learn, and climb?
Why need the soul fall back to rise anew to heights once passed?
Why not pass on, and on, and on, while consciousness may last?

DR. T. WILKINS.

Thoughts are Forces that Go On For a Time.

Thoughts are things, or rather, Forces, that go on for a time, and maybe eternity; if so, what we say or do is of vast moment. To uplift others we must be above them. To be no better or wiser than your ancestors or neighbors, is not the proper aim. Don't fossilize, but go on toward perfection. To love or be loved is all in all. Tasteless and joyless is life if this is dead or lacking. Be self-poised; not too serious or crafty and funny; not too reticent or talative, especially with the women. Never get in a noisy rage and abuse especially the ones who are in no way to blame for it. How dreadful to see one snappish with loved ones because of something provoking in business, for which they may feel as unhappy as yourself. Try, if possible, to realize how awful it is to put in a child's mind a vicious idea to take root and work havoc and destruction. To poison the fountainhead is surely the crime of all crimes. Don't give way to a gust of anger, and rave and swear; in a word, do nothing to shock or confuse people to make them lose faith in you or your fellow men. Do nothing that will hereafter bring remorse, shame or regret. Seldom is the chance to do good on a big scale afforded; let us, then, improve the many little ones. This is all that is required of us.

C. F. SHORT.

THE ANGEL BABY.

Come, baby, come:
Loving angels bring you, pretty, from —I cannot see just where;
I am sure it's from some garden in the sunny Soulland fair:
Come, baby, come.

Smile, baby, smile:
I can see your bright eyes, pretty, and your little mouth and nose,
And your rosy hands and fingers, and your teenty-taunty toes:
Smile, baby, smile.

Rest baby, rest:
In my loving arms I fold you, as you gaze deep in my eyes,
And the beauty and the sweetness seem a vision from the skies:
Rest, baby, rest.

Sleep, baby, sleep:
Fly away to happy Dreamland, while I sing my lullaby;
Peaceful is your quiet slumber, with your angels ever nigh:
Sleep, baby, sleep.

Gone, baby, gone:
Loving angels take you, pretty, to— I cannot see just where—
I am sure it's some sweet garden in the sunny Soulland fair:
Gone, baby, gone.

Bye, baby, bye:
Come again to me, my pretty, well I love to have you come;
Loving spirit mothers bring you from your sunny Soulland home:
Bye, baby, bye.

J. M. D. UNDERHILL.

Wonderful Results

At the Seances Held by W. T. Stanford with the Medium, Charles Bailey.

Dr. J. M. Peebles writes from Australia: "I am attending Mr. Stanford's seances each week. Mr. C. Bailey, one of the greatest, if not THE greatest medium to-day in the world, is astonishing people with the manifestations that occur in his presence. I have not time to enumerate them, but shall speak of them on my return, in connection with the marvels that I saw in the presence of India's Yogis in the suburbs of Calcutta and also in the mountains."

A friend said to me the other day—one who has been a professed and earnest Spiritualist for many years—"What good is the physical phenomena that you present so persistently to your readers each month?" "Some years ago, before I began to closely study the scientific side of the phenomena, I might have said the same," was my reply. "Since then, however, Spiritualism has entered on a new phase. The latest conclusions and experiments of leading scientists like Professor Larkin, for instance, of the Lowe Observatory, California, have shown us that it will be possible ere long to demonstrate that "the passage of matter through matter" is not the wild, visionary, unreasonable thing that the man in the street imagines, but that it is in accordance with laws of nature that are only just being demonstrated by science. In the April number of this paper the article by Professor Harry C. Jones, "Is Matter Disappearing: Is it simply Electricity?' showed that the electron, the latest definition of what we call matter, is Electricity pure and simple. The Law of Vibrations teaches us also that what we call matter is the result of lower rates of motion, that the planets and their satellites thrown off from the sun in the form of vapor have by a natural law also cooled down and become solidified as the rate of velocity slackened.

What is more natural then—and we inquirers know it to be a fact—for the spiritual chemists on the other side to resolve matter into its original ether and again solidify it? It is this aspect of Spiritualism that is going to arrest the attention of scientists and intelligent inquirers into Spiritualistic phenomena and we shall presently find, as Dr. Channing said in his address in the April number, that later, when we understand the laws that obtain in this universe "a motor car or a steam engine will appear an antiquated means of getting about." Just as it is set forth in that remarkable book of Lord Lytton's, "The Coming Race," when we shall have called "Vril" or Electricity to our aid in these matters.

It was by the exercise of these same laws of nature that the growing of a plant, 18 inches high, at the circle held on March 29th became possible. A Yogi was present, and it was by the power over nature obtained by the Yogis when in earth life that this remarkable phenomenon was produced. It cannot be too often remembered that this mundane existence of ours is full of marvels. Which of us by our own power could make a seed germinate, or clothe with beauty the grass of the field? It is only by "hastening" somewhat these powers of nature that such a thing is possible as the growth of a tree during a comparatively short sitting. It could not be accomplished by the Hindoos, Abdul and Selim, who have not learned to subjugate Nature as the Yogis of India have. To him was handed by the Yogi the seeds which were planted one inch deep in the flower pot. Yogi, who gave the name of "Ram, Ram, Gee," watered the seed, and said in broken English, "Yogi come from India. Yogi go sleep in cave, no eat much, learn great secret. Masters teach Yogi make tree grow big."

The pot was covered with a large basket and after Dr. Channing's address, lasting half an hour, it was lifted and the plant was found to be some inches high. The Yogi then magnetized the plant. It was again covered, and after another control, Abdullah, had spoken and sung, Yogi announced that the basket was not big enough. It was taken off and there was displayed a most beautiful plant, 18 inches high, the top apparently pressed down for want of room to grow higher and with leaves of exceeding freshness and beauty. Dr. Whitcomb explained it was the Camphor tree of India, and beside it were also growing small plants from a peanut, and a bulbous Indian plant, planted by Dr. Peebles. But the great power of the Yogi had been expended on the large plant promised. It is not expected that people who know nothing of these things can accept at once all these facts, which are great spiritual verities to those privileged to witness them.

The minds, even of some Spiritualists, have to be prepared by study for a knowledge of Nature's laws transcending our ordinary notions concerning matter. And I remarked to my friend in conclusion that as Jesus said to the unbelieving crowd, "Even if one rose from the dead" they would not believe, so it is not our aim so much to convince unbelievers, who are too densely materialistic to appreciate the miracles of daily life, as to gradually learn ourselves more of nature's laws, and point the way for those who are craving for more knowledge—more light.

The following is a brief record of sittings held since March 8th:

32ND SEANCE. March 15th. Address by Dr. Channing on "The Influence of the Press, Pulpit and prayers written in black and red from Thibet. Bird's nest brought for Dr. Peebles. Clay with spear heads. Hindoo spirit grows plant a few inches.

33RD SEANCE. March 22nd. Address by Dr. Robinson on "The Hittites." He draws map of Asia Minor, etc., on black board. Phenomena. Bone tablet from Thibet. It has a rude carving of Buddha with Thibetian inscription which Dr. Whitcomb translated "The Enlightened One." Bird caught in the light by Abdul. Second bird in small cage. Spear heads in day.

34TH SEANCE. March 29th. Address by Dr. Channing entitled, "The Master Christian." Phenomena. Unbaked cake of Indian meal composed of three kinds. Plant 18 inches high, grown by Yogi as related above.

35TH SEANCE. April 5th. Address by Dr. Channing, on "The State and Condition in the Spirit World of Evil Men." Phenomena. Spear head in clay. Two birds from sitter's coat. Manuscript on outer rind of Palm tree; Thibetian prayers pricked in and placed as an offering to some idol. Electrical conditions prevented production of more phenomena. Short address by Mrs. Robinson.

ADDRESS by Dr. W. Ellery Channing, specially Reported by Mrs. W. Wilson, Shorthand Writer and Typist, Premier Building, Collins St., Melbourne.—"Crimes Against Criminals.'

Perhaps you have been wondering why I selected the subject as announced by Dr. Whitcomb to-night. It is one which should be brought under the notice of every man, woman and child in the community as it affects all—believer and unbeliever alike. From the spirit side of life we see many misdirected efforts, much misspent energy, applied in trying to stem the awful torrent of criminality which is round about you. To-night I purpose calmly viewing this matter in a common sense light, and I trust you will agree with me and go forth from this place with the desire to bring about a better state of things in the community.

For long ages past man has been tortured and killed for crimes that he has committed. Even at the present day murderers are hanged by the neck till they are dead and before the corpse is cold there is another murderer ready to take his place. In days gone by penalties inflicted upon humanity for paltry crimes were terrible and appalling, such crimes as larceny and forgery being visited by the penalty of death. Thank Heaven, those laws have been repealed. By repealing them it was not intended to produce more crime, but, alas, round about us we see hundreds and thousands of our fellows still steeped in vice and criminality and we know not how to deal with them.

First, let me say, the law should not seek to "punish" a man for his wrong doing. Perhaps you have never heard that statement made before. I am very pleased to make it to-night. The law should not seek to punish, but to reform the criminal. And it should be instilled into him that his fellowmen are not his enemies—that the law is not seeking to rob him, to persecute him, or to vent its spleen upon him. In the past this has been only too common. It is, moreover, impossible to find any punishment that will act absolutely as a deterrent. If death is made the penalty as in the past, men will still thieve and forge and murder. You know this is the truth without my telling it. Take any number of men in society with certain defects in the quality and quantity of brain, with evil passions and appetites and environments and you will have a group of criminals. The criminal is often a product of innumerable causes. He is a creature largely of his environment and a victim of heredity. In the city of New York a certain woman had been arrested 154 times for drunkenness. The authorities traced her ancestors and found that both her father and her brother were drunkards and had committed suicide. On the mother's side there were three drunkards in the family as well as the grandfather and the great-grandfather. Now, this poor woman should in some way have received the commiseration and the pity of her fellows, rather than the condemnation and the punishment that was too often inflicted upon her.

It is remarkable that for so long a period the wisest people of the earth have failed to recognize that in certain people crime is a disease. Take the habitual drunkards of whom we have been speaking. Time and again they are brought before the magistrate and a fine is imposed. There would be just as much reason in inflicting a fine upon poor epileptics because they have fits in the streets. The drunkard is just as much diseased as the epileptic. "But," says someone, "he may have control of his actions." Yes, but he is a diseased man, and unable to withstand the craving that came upon him at certain times. And it is the same with other criminals.

A statement was once made by a criminal previous to his execution that before he committed a robbery he felt an uncontrollable impulse to steal and under that influence or impulse to steal he was a helpless child.

How shall we reform criminals? By making the gaol or the prison a school house. These unfortunate ones should be taught. Hundreds of men and women are in your penitentiaries to-day whose minds are darkened and clouded. They know nothing of the joys which you experience even when they are free. Thir tastes are depraved, they see no beauty in life, but are often anxious to drown their cares in drink and ribaldry, and in the fellowship of others as evil as themselves. Let me tell you that no great change will be effcted until the criminals are educated and taught. But you may ask how this is to be done with men who are receiving their sentences? I will tell you. The judge, in passing sentence upon the criminal, should have the power to say, "I do not state the time during which you will be incarcerated, it depends entirely upon yourself how long you remain in the prison house."

An indeterminate sentence is what is needed in your midst, and there will then be an incentive for the man to behave aright. He should, moreover, be paid for the work he does—a reasonable remuneration—so that when he goes forth from the prison house he will have something in his pocket, and he enabled to withstand temptation. Take the case of most of these criminals. They herd together, they exchange thoughts and ideas, and bitter feelings are engendered against their gaolers and against society. Let them realize that society is not against them but desires them to be good men and women, and I say you will touch the chords in their hearts perhaps never touched before.

Thousands of these men and women go forth from the prison house without money, without friends, with nowhere to go and nothing to do. If, perchance, they get some employment, it becomes known immediately, that they have been in prison. They drift back into the old paths, and in a very short time they are up again before the judge and standing in the felon's dock.

Again, it should be a crime for any officer of the State, policeman or detective, to hound a man after he has come out of prison. I know of instances where detectives have shadowed men from the time they passed the portals of the gaol. Some of them intended to live aright, and to get employment. I know of one case where the detective went and said to the man's employer, "Do you know whom you have got in your employ?" "No," said the contractor, "I don't." "You have So-and-So, the criminal," said the detective.

The man was discharged that night. I would make it a crime for any officer of the Crown to do such thing. Is it not often a true complaint of criminals that they were forced into crime because they were forever being "moved on" as it were, with no resting place for their feet, no place where they could stay in safety and begin life anew. There are, however, men and women who wilfully do evil, who make up their minds to be criminals. Such men and women should be separated from the community—not behind prison walls, but upon some island where they could not escape. They would have their freedom there, they would have to work to live—the men on one island and the women on the other—for criminals should never be allowed to populate the world.

Until your governments realize their duty towards criminals this terrible torrent of criminality will go surging on and on. Concerning punishment: How often are you struck with the fact that for certain offences punishment seems inadequate, while for other offenses it is too severe? This is mostly brought about through the ignorance of the persons who adjudicate on the cases—in, magistrates and judges too, for ato matter, You know we say in America and you say in your land also, that lay lawyers make the best judges. I question it. It is abhorrent to me that any man who has made money out of criminals should at last be elected to fill the position where it is necessary for him to condemn them and pass punishment upon them. But how often is it otherwise?

In some lands the extreme penalty for murder has been abolished. Let me say that from the spirit side of life we declare that it is wrong to hang, electrocute or strangle any living being. This is so for two reasons—one of which is not apparent to most people, and certainly not to legislators. A man commits a murder, and the law says he must pay the penalty with his life. Let me tell you, that in fulfilling that law, society is carrying out that obsolete revengeful Mosaic law which demands "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

No man or company of men, no society has a right to take that which they cannot give—life. Secondly, and this is the most serious reason: the execution of murderers lets loose upon the world in which you live depraved spirits or demons who return, and sometimes in revenge, cause others to perpetrate similar crimes. You are constantly jerking into the spirit world hundreds of those depraved spirits, who, filled with revenge, return, and as I said, cause misery and trouble. I will quote a case that happened in this land some years ago. I am indebted to Dr. Whitcomb for the instance:

A young man cut his sweetheart's throat, and a day or two before he was swung from the gallows, he said, "I felt something come over me that was irresistible, I could not help it, I had to do it."

Over people like yourselves, living good lives and guarding yourselves against all that is evil, these depraved spirits have no power. But look abroad upon society to-night, and see the hundreds and thousands steeped in vice and wickedness—the cringing, crawling drunkard, for instance, is he not a fit subject for a depraved spirit to enter? On the spirit side of life craving and gnawing which cannot be satisfied is producing in him an awful punishment. Here he sees an opportunity whereby he can gain a moment's respite. He takes possession of that drunkard who gets drunk again, and on the morrow is haled before the magistrate and fined 5s., or perchance, twenty-four hours imprisonment.

And so it is with other crimes and criminals. Murderers have been deprived of life, and often—for I know it—have they returned and taken possession of depraved men and women, and another murder has been the result. Your legislators, not knowing of this, would close their materialistic ears to the advice that I am giving you. They put me in mind of a judge who once sat in the High Court of England, a stern old man. He said that he believed in giving one chance to the criminal, and, after that, if he sinned again he should be destroyed as vermin. I tell you that when that man passed into the spirit world he would be sorry for such an utterance.

I believe there is good in everyone. Deep down, as I told you the other night, in the human heart there is a spot that may be touched and redeemed by love and sympathy. The cold, cruel judge says, "Away with them! why trouble about them? they won't live right, let them forever be shut up or destroyed."

Ah, my friends, I would say to that man, had you been in his place, had you encountered the adverse circumstances, or events, or environment, that he has done, you would be perhaps to-night in the place of those outcasts.

Again, and this is a subject for the psychologist, as well as the criminologist, I do not affirm that there is a deficiency in brain power or brain matter in the criminal, but there is some defect which needs to be investigated. The results of scientific research will yet prove that many of those people are more sinned against than sinning. Do not think that I am pleading for an easy life for criminals. I abhor all that is wrong and evil, because I know that perfect happiness is only compatible with a good and true life. Some of you have been born in the lap of luxury, you have never known temptation. How easy it is for people who have never known temptation to speak against others.

I wish to say to the ladies present to-night, that during my earth life, and since passing to the spirit, I have observed that women, as a rule, are more severe and quicker to condemn their own sex than men are. Think of the number of fallen women in this and every other large city—pariahs of society, outcasts! Ah! if we could trace that life to its source we should find in most cases that there was some defect in the person, and that she could not help what ultimately produced such disastrous results. Little children! I have always loved children—innocent, prattling children, who will some day possibly be the warriors of your land, its scientists or mechanics. Who knows but in that prattling child may rest the spirit of a Shakespeare, a Milton, a Michael Angelo! But let me tell you that much, almost everything depends on how that child is instructed, and how his little footsteps are guided through life's journey. Hundreds of thousands of children to-day would be better in the spirit world, because their parents know not how to rear them or how to teach them. Let me plead for the little ones for a moment. In teaching them that which is right and good and true, remember always that example is better than precept, and that without example it is impossible to rear your child to be a good man or woman. Try to make them happy, give them good books and pictures if you can afford them, let them enjoy themselves. The weary, crabbed and crotchety business man, who returns home at night after money-grabbing all day, has shrivelled still more his small soul, and his nerves cannot stand the merry prattling of his children. He calls for the nurse to remove them because they irritate him.

Shame on such men! That old Roman matron, the mother of the Gracchi, whom you read of in history, was once conversing with other Roman ladies about their riches. One said "I have a string of pearls, it cost a king's ransom;" another said, "I have the most beautiful jewels in Rome." When they returned to this grand woman to recount her rich trinkets she called her sons, and setting them before these Roman ladies, said, "These are my jewels."

Yes, your children are the jewels that God has given you, and I tell you that if you do not do right by them that in the spirit world you will be punished as sure as truth reigns. If you send them to an orthodox Sunday school, and you are a Spiritualist, you are inconsistent, if you do not add your testimony to the teaching they get there.

Make no mistake. I cannot understand any man who believes in the spiritual philosophy sending his children to an orthodox Sunday school, and saying nothing about the great truths that are not taught there, but letting the myths and fables and the legendary stories sink into the minds of those children without telling them the truth as you understand it.

I have just been told that my time has expired. I trust you will think over my few remarks on this subject, and that you will realize with me that we commit offences against criminals inasmuch as we do not deal with them rightly. Society at present is so constituted that we are turning out criminals every day, and it behooves someone to protect and to show a more perfect way, which I have done this night, with pleasure, and to the best of my ability. CHARLES BRIGHT.

—Harbinger of Light, Australia.

Religion must always be something emotional, and the culture of emotion is not carried on advantageously in ordinary school-teaching. The system that is best for securing the intellectual element is not best for securing the emotional element.—Bain.

In wonder all philosophy [say religion] began, in wonder it ends, and admiration fills up the interspace; but the first wonder is the offspring of ignorance, the last is the parent of adoration.—Coleridge.

Nothing destroys authority so much as the unequal and untimely interposition of authority itself, and the attempt to enforce that submission which can only be the result of free choice.—Burke.

HERBERT SPENCER'S HERESIES.

His Opinion of the Christian God—Cruelty of a Fijian Deity Small Compared With That of Jehovah—Reprobation and Atonement Termed Abhorrent—Will and Intelligence Cannot Be Ascribed to the Cause of All Things.

If we contrast the Hebrew God described in primitive traditions—man like in appearance, appetites, and emotions—with the Hebrew God as as characterized by the prophets, there is shown a widening range of power along with nature increasingly remote from that of man. And on passing to conceptions of him which are now entertained we are made aware of an extreme transfiguration. By a convenient obliviousness a deity who in early times is represented as hardening men's hearts so as that they may commit punishable acts, and as employing a lying spirit to deceive them, comes to be mostly thought of as an embodiment of virtues transcending the highest we can imagine.

The cruelty of a Fijian god who, representing as devouring the souls of the dead may be supposed to inflict torture during the process, is small compared with the cruelty of a God who condemns men to tortures which are eternal; and the ascription of this cruelty, though habitual in ecclesiastical formulas, occasionally occurring in sermons, and still sometimes pictorially illustrated, is becoming so intolerable to the better natured that while some theologians distinctly deny it, others quietly drop it out of their teachings.

Clearly, this change cannot cease until the beliefs in hell and damnation disappear.

Disappearance of them will be aided by an increasing repugnance to injustice. The visiting on Adam's descendants through hundreds of generations dreadful penalties for a small transgression which they did not commit; the damning of all men who do not avail themselves of an alleged mode of obtaining forgiveness, which most men have never heard of; and the effecting a reconciliation by sacrificing a son who was perfectly innocent, to satisfy the assumed necessity for a propitiatory victim, are modes of action which, ascribed to a human ruler, would call forth expressions of abhorrence; and the ascription of them to the Ultimate Cause of things, even now felt to be full of difficulties, must become impossible.

So, too, must die out the belief that a Power present in innumerable worlds throughout infinite space and who during millions of years of the earth's earlier existence needed no honoring by its inhabitants, should be seized with a craving for praise; and having created mankind, should be angry with them if they do not perpetually tell him how great he is.

As fast as men escape from that glamour of earthly impressions which prevents them from thinking, they will refuse to imply a trait of character which is the reverse of worshipful.

Similarly will the logical incongruities be more and more conspicuous to growing intelligence. Passing over the familiar difficulties that sundry of the implied divine attributes otherwise ascribed—that a god who repents of what he has done must be lacking either in power or in foresight; that his anger presupposes an occurrence which has been contrary to intention, and so indicates defect of means; we come to the deeper difficulty that such emotions, in common with all emotions, can exist only in a consciousness which is limited. Every emotion has its antecedent ideas, and antecedent ideas are habitually supposed to occur in God; he is represented as seeing or hearing this or the other, and as being emotionally affected thereby. That is to say, the conception of a divinity possessing these traits of character, necessarily continues anthropomorphic; not only in the sense that the emotions ascribed are like those of human beings, but also in the sense that they form parts of a consciousness which, like the human consciousness, is formed of successive states. And such a conception of the divine consciousness is irreconcilable both with the unchangeableness otherwise alleged, and with the omniscience otherwise alleged. For a consciousness constituted of ideas and feelings caused by objects and occurrences, cannot be simultaneously occupied with all objects and all occurrences throughout the universe. To believe in a divine consciousness, men must refrain from thinking what is meant by consciousness—must stop short with verbal propositions; and propositions which they are debarred from rendering into thoughts will more and more fail to satisfy them.

Of course like difficulties present themselves when the will of God is spoken of.

So long as we refrain from giving a definite meaning to the word will, we may say that it is possessed by the Cause of All Things as readily as we may say that love of approbation is possessed by a circle; but when from the words we pass to the thoughts they stand for, we find that we can no more unite in consciousness the terms of the one proposition than we can think of the other. Whosoever conceives any other will than his own must do so in terms of his own will, which is the sole will directly known to him—all other wills being only inferred. But will, as each is conscious of it, presupposes a motive—a prompting desire of some kind; absolute indifference excludes the conception of will. Moreover, will, as implying a prompting desire, connotes some end contemplated as one to be achieved, and ceases with the achievement of it; some other will referring to some other end, taking its place. That is to say, will, like motion, necessarily supposes a series of consciousness. The conception of a divine will, involves, like it, localization in space and time; the willing of each end, excluding from consciousness for an interval the willing of other ends, it is the same with the ascription of intelligence. Not to dwell on the serriality and limitation implied as before, we may note that intelligence, as alone conceivable by us, presupposes existence independent of it and terms of changes primarily wrought by alien activities—the impressions generated by things beyond consciousness, and the ideas derived from such impressions. To speak of an intelligence which exists in the absence of all such alien activities, is to use a meaningless word. If to the corollary that the First Cause, considered as intelligent objective activities, it is replied that these have become such by act of creation, and were previously included in the First Cause; then the reply is that in such case the First Cause could, before this creation have had nothing to generate in it such changes as those constituting what we call intelligence, and must therefore have been unintelligent at the time when intelligence was most called for. Hence it is clear that the intelligence ascribed, answers in no respect to that which we know by the name. It is intelligence out of which all the characters constituting it have vanished.

These and other difficulties, some of which are often discussed but never disposed of, must force men hereafter to drop the higher anthropomorphic characters given to the First Cause, as they have long since dropped the lower.—"Principles of Sociology."

Duty is carrying on promptly and faithfully the affairs now before you. It is to fulfill the claims of to-day.—Goethe.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be

PLYMOUTH SPIRITUAL CHURCH, OF ROCHESTER, N. Y.

An Interesting Letter from the Pastor, Rev. B. F. Austin, Giving Cheerful and Encouraging Data Concerning Its Condition and Prospects.

To the Editor:—I am often asked by letter for some report of our church work here, and to all interested would say, we are making slow but healthful progress in our work. Our large attendance of last fall fell away considerably during the cold weather, as, owing to a variety of reasons, our church was uncomfortable during the severe weather.

Our membership has increased, both in Rochester and our non-resident membership, which now embraces a number who regularly contribute to church funds. A large number of pews have been taken (on the voluntary principle) and the receipts during most of the year have been encouraging.

One cheering feature of our work is that it is not confined to those who attend our church, but through the powerful agency of the liberal press in Rochester we are reaching every week from 50,000 to 75,000 of an audience through the published reports of my lectures in the "Democrat and Chronicle," "Union and Advertiser," and the "Post Express." The two former regularly devote from one-third to one-half column or more to a summary of the morning and evening lectures in Plymouth Church, and thus we are missionizing the public with our liberal teaching.

Another encouraging feature is the fulfillment we are finding of a spirit prophecy given to us when we were debating and deliberating on the question "to purchase or not to purchase" this property. Our spirit friends repeatedly said to us: "You will get aid from unexpected sources." See how this statement has been verified, and is being verified more fully from time to time.

We were in difficulty over our heating when friend Kelsey, from Cortland, came up one Sunday "just to see how we are getting on." As is well known, he is an expert in heating buildings. He soon pointed out a change necessary in our pipes, and as it involved cutting through the floor, and new radiators, he very generously paid the $50 required and gave us advice and radiators free. The angels reward him.

A little later I foresaw a payment of $150 to be made (balance due on our church cushions) this spring, and there seemed no provisions for meeting it. One morning in my mail I found a letter from a Rochester merchant—a stranger to me—asking me to call on him, which I did.

After inquiring about our work in a friendly way, he told me he had been out to hear me a few times and liked our services (though he is a pew-holder in another church. He also said that his mother formerly attended Plymouth Church, and that they had decided to pay off the remaining $150 we owed on the cushions. Angels reward him and his poor old mother, whom I called on personally and thanked.

A few weeks since, at Hartford, I met Margaret Gaule Reidinger, where she was delighting large audiences at the State Convention with her marvelous readings. We talked over Plymouth Church interests at Mrs. Helen P. Russegue's home, where we were stopping. On returning to Rochester I sent Mrs. Reidinger a fine photo of Plymouth Church, and she exhibited this to her Ladies' Aid Society and sent us a pledge for $100. And thus the good work goes on. We need a considerable sum next month to close up our first year's operations successfully. It will come—possibly the reader of this will contribute a part of it. B. F. AUSTIN.

A CORRECTION.

Professor Denton Was Never a Materialist.

To the Editor:—In the interesting reminiscences of Mr. Newman Weeks, published in your issue of May 18th, I find an error which I am certain he will be willing to see corrected.

Mr. Weeks places the name of William Denton in a list of "good men and true," who, he says, in the early days came into the ranks of Spiritualism from Materialism.

This is a mistake. Mr Denton was never a materialist; he was a Methodist, and from his boyhood commenced preaching Methodism; but the road from Methodism to early (or Wesley's) Spiritualism was short and direct, and he soon found it. Hence he was ready to join the modern movement as soon as the first call was sounded.

ELIZABETH M. F. DENTON.
Wellesley, Mass.

New York State Association.

Annual Report of Pres't H. W. Richardson.

In submitting this, my report, to the 11th Annual Convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists, I am glad to be able to say that more people are now investigating psychic manifestations than at any time before since the birth of Modern Spiritualism; but much of this research is done in a quiet, independent way, and outside of the public work of our societies.

The organized movement has opened the doorway, and the angels are reaching the people, which is certainly gratifying to conscientious workers in this cause. But what would be still more gratifying would be to see these new converts take part in society work, giving the added strength of their influence as well as their financial support.

But we are glad the people are receiving the knowledge of our beautiful philosophy. And when Spiritualism is generally understood and accepted, and the human race lifted out of its materialistic thought into a more progressive, more spiritual thought atmosphere, we will not care so much who shook the tree, or who gathered the plums.

There are obstacles in this work, as there are in all reform movements, but the philosophical way is to work in patience and perseverance, remembering that there is strength and growth in the overcoming of obstacles, and the more formidable the obstacle the greater the victory and the greater the possible gain in growth and development.

Missionary Work.

This department of State work has been continued by your faithful missionary and organizer, Mrs. T. U. Reynolds, during a considerable part of the past year, the details of which will be given you in her report of the Convention.

This is a very important feature of the organization work, and the duties of those to whom it is intrusted involves the inconvenience of being continually on the move from place to place, and consequent lack of many home comforts, and of that quietude which contributes so much to human happiness. But devotion to the cause, and the consciousness of doing good to others, seems to have inspired our missionary to put forth her best endeavor and to throw her whole life into this work, the result of which cannot be measured in dollars and cents, nor even known to the human mind, but which I am certain is greatly appreciated by the multitudes who have been privileged to attend her meetings, as well as by the members of the State board.

Under the conditions that have prevailed, perhaps all has been done in this direction that could have been expected. But I want to urge upon this convention, and upon every Spiritualist in the State of New York, the importance of providing conditions that shall make it possible to accomplish much larger results during the coming year. There is a broad field for missionary work. Several large cities in this State have no organized Spiritualist societies, which is also true of a multitude of villages and hamlets. In many of these places there are no avowed Spiritualists, or at least none are willing to come forward and assist in the arrangements for holding meetings. But with ample funds available, suitable meeting places could be engaged, meetings advertised, and the people would come out, and an interest would in most cases be awakened that would bear fruit in the future of our movement.

There is still much ignorance concerning Spiritualism and its mission, and when these truths are presented in their proper light, prejudice will give way to knowledge, and the advocates of our cause will be multiplied and the number of auxiliary societies largely increased.

There are thousands of Spiritualists in New York State, and one dollar annually from each of these would create a fund sufficient to put more missionaries in the field, carry forward a much larger work in the direction I have indicated. I trust this convention, or the incoming board, may be able to devise some method for largely increasing this branch of State work.

Mass Meetings.

During the year State Association Mass Meetings were held in Potsdam, in New York City, and in Buffalo, and the results in each instance were favorable to the State Association as well as to the societies in the localities where held, not so much in a financial way as in creating interest and reaching new people.

After missionary work, perhaps Mass Meetings, conducted as an organization movement for propaganda work, are next in importance. Wherever such State Association meetings have been held, the outcome has been favorable, the interest increased and beneficial results have followed.

I recommend that the incoming board be instructed to extend this feature of State work, so as to reach more of the larger towns of the State.

As to the smaller towns, the missionary work is supposed to reach them, although in some instances it might be advantageous if an assistant could accompany the regular missionary for a State meeting.

Local Societies.

Our local auxiliary societies, as a rule, seem to be doing good, effective work, and I am of the opinion that their reports to the convention will show that the cause is progressing favorably through this branch of State work.

This is especially true of those societies where speakers have been engaged for the year or a term of months at a time, which indicates the advantage of settled speakers where it is possible.

Two local societies in the State have since our last convention purchased and now occupy their own meeting places, notably the Plymouth Spiritual Church of Rochester, and the Spiritual Society of Hornell. This is gratifying and augurs well for the permanency of the movement. These are good examples to follow.

The State Association has issued six new charters during the year, largely the result of the missionary work; and besides these six, some two or three other societies are about ready to apply for charters, and will, we believe, do so soon.

We welcome these groups of workers to our ranks, believing mutual advantages and added force will accrue to them as well as to the State Association in this co-operation for the uplift of humanity.

There are still three or four societies in this State holding charters were issued before New York State Association was chartered.

At the last National Convention the matter of exclusive jurisdiction of the State Associations was given consideration, and a request was to be sent to all such societies in States that are chartered auxiliaries to the National Association asking them to relinquish their National Charter and take charters from the Association of the State in which they are located. In this connection I suggest that these societies within the border of New York State be invited to transfer their allegiance and give the State Association the benefit of their influence and support, which benefit I trust will be mutual.

Children's Lyceums.

The inability of your president to visit many of the local societies precludes his giving any detail report on this part of the State work. But our State superintendent of Children's Lyceums, Mrs. Reynolds, will report to the convention. We are, however, confronted with the fact that the number of young persons identified with Spiritualism is not what it should be, and the person who will demonstrate some practical method for strengthening this weak point in our movement will confer a great favor on the workers and do much to promote the cause.

State Days and Camps.

The management of Lily Dale Assembly recognizes this State Association. In 1906 a day was set apart in their summer program as "New York State Day," and for the Assembly season of 1907, July 24th is designated as New York State Day. Mrs. T. U. Reynolds and your president are named to speak on that day. The date is about the middle of the Assembly season, and comes in a week which bristles with good things, and it will be a good week for New Yorkers to attend that beautiful Spiritualist resort. Thomas Grimshaw, of St. Louis, pastor of a very flourishing Spiritualist church in that city; Mrs. R. S. Lillie, of California; Miss Elizabeth Harlow, of Columbus, Ohio, and Hon. Wendall C. Warner, will be there during that week, and in behalf of the Lily Dale Assembly I invite you all to come to Lily Dale for New York State day, July 24, 1907, and enjoy the good things there to be presented.

Mediums' Certificates.

Under the rules and instructions adopted at the last convention, mediums' certificates and other printed blanks were provided to be used for meeting the needs in this direction.

Few mediums have thus far availed themselves of this privilege. But I realize that those intrusted with the duty of determining who of our mediums are, and who are not competent and worthy, to receive the recognition which these certificates are intended to convey, have no easy task before them, should conditions arise whereby large numbers of mediums apply for certificates.

Thus far, however, the system can hardly be said to have had a fair trial, consequently I have no suggestions or recommendations to make regarding the matter.

Legislation.

At the time of our last annual convention there was then pending before the Common Council of the City of Buffalo a proposed ordinance imposing a license to be paid by persons who practice clairvoyance, fortune telling, etc.

Your president opposed this ordinance and endeavored to secure its defeat, or at least to secure its modification so as to exempt the legitimate practice of clairvoyance.

I attended the hearings given by the ordinance committee and was assisted by able counsel.

Finally an old State law was unearthed which prohibited the practice of clairvoyance, witchcraft, etc. This old piece of legislation had been forgotten, but answered a convenient purpose in this instance, for it was an easy matter to show the Councilmen the inconsistency of licensing persons to practice a thing which was prohibited by a State law. Hence the whole matter was dropped and nothing heard from it since.

During the present session of the New York State Legislature a bill has been enacted and become a law called the Medical Unification bill, which revolutionizes the system of State control of the practice of medicine.

In some respects this law is more sweeping than the old law. But since "Among the exemptions from the application of this law is the practice of religious tenets of any church," and since the New York State Association is chartered "to conduct religious and other meetings" to foster charter and maintain Spiritualist societies and enterprises for religious and missionary purposes germane to the phenomena, science, philosophy, and religion of Spiritualism, it would seem that ours is clearly a religious organization within the meaning of the law, and that Spiritual healing in all its forms fairly comes under this exemption clause, especially when done by those who are working under the State organization or its auxiliary local societies.

The Pioneer

The Spiritualists owe a great deal to the pioneers in their movement.

The veteran worker who has borne the brunt of the battle in the heat of the day; the pioneer who has stood up for these truths when the opposition was strong, sometimes almost fierce, and who was met with ridicule, vituperation and ostracism because he or she ventured to express truths that were not understod, consequently were not appreciated by the masses, is certainly entitled to some consideration at the hands of us whose ways are ways of pleasantness as compared with the road they were forced to travel.

The National Association maintains a pension fund and receives donations and disburses these funds to the veterans who are needy and worthy.

Some of us are regular contributors to the National Pension fund. But I submit to you the question and ask you to consider it. Has not the time already arrived when New York State Association should move in this direction and begin to make provisions for our superannuated workers?

I urge that this convention give careful consideration to this matter.

Correspondence and Literary Bureau.

With sufficient available means for carrying on a correspondence and literary bureau, and with the right person in charge, it would seem that much good work could be done.

Judiciously selected and carefully edited literature could be used to good advantage.

ed with perseverance and love for the cause, ways would suggest themselves for securing a foothold in unworked towns, by getting in touch with one or more good reliable Spiritualists as a nucleus, and by applying the methodical system of modern business institutions, interest could be awakened, and the influence of our movement largely augmented.

The work of this bureau could be made the forerunner to the work of the Missionary and Mass Meeting, the one complementing the other—all co-operating for one general purpose. Spiritualists of New York State, are you willing to make the moderate sacrifice which will enable the incoming board of trustees to give this system a trial?

Memberships.

As was stated in your president's last Annual Report, until local societies are established in many more of the towns and villages of the State, there will be a demand for direct individual membership, to enable isolated Spiritualists and those in localities where there is insufficient numbers to support a local society, to become a part of the organized movement.

Direct individual members are entitled to participate in the deliberations of the Annual Convention and have a voice in directing the work of the association.

At the last Annual Convention a rule was adopted requiring the trustees of the State Association to pass upon the acceptance of applications for membership, which rule has been complied with for the past year.

As we have already stated, if the thousands of worthy Spiritualists in the State would uphold the hands of the State officers and faithful workers by becoming members of this association, their influence would count for much, and their dollars as annual dues would materially assist in enlarging the scope of the work of our missionaries and organizers along the lines heretofore mentioned.

In addition to the active memberships, provision is made for Life Memberships by the payment of $25, which entitles life members to all the privileges of direct individual members during life without payment of annual dues.

We now have quite a list of Life Members, and will gladly welcome additions to this list during this convention, and on through the coming year.

The money which I invested a few years ago in a Life Membership is the best investment I have, and the one upon which I expect to receive dividends when I enter the spirit world.

The Spiritualist Press.

While the Spiritualist press is not officially a part of the State or National organizations, the editors of all Spiritualist papers are doing a great deal for the organized movement. Their columns are always open to notices of important public meetings, reports of conventions and general information concerning our organized work. The advertising thus given gratis for our New York State Association, if paid for at regular advertising rates, would amount to a goodly sum each year, and while we all feel very grateful to the editors, I feel that we owe them something more than gratitude, and that we can, at least, assist these men who are doing so much for our department of the Spiritualistic work, by soliciting subscriptions and doing all in our power to enlarge the circulation of their papers. In doing this we not only help the editors of the papers, but we do much to forward our own work in the general movement. The press is the greatest educational factor in the world today. And the Spiritualist press is doing for our cause in particular what the secular press is doing for the world in a general way.

Every Spiritualist should take at least one of the Spiritualist papers. And I urge that the workers resolve themselves into a committee of the whole, and work with one accord to extend the circulation and the influence of the Spiritualist press.

We had hoped to have Brother Bach, of the Sunflower, with us at this convention, but he wrote your president a few days ago that he would be unable to come, which we all very much regret. But let us remember him with something substantial in the way of subscribers, as well as the editors of "Reason," "The Progressive Thinker," and others.

We are not unmindful of the kindly attitude and attention shown by the secular press toward psychic manifestations and Spiritualist teachings, and as our movement and its purposes become better understood it will receive still greater attention from that source.

The Future of Spiritualism.

We claim for Spiritualism that it is a progressive movement. Almost sixty years of co-operation between advanced teachers in higher spheres and conscientious men and women on the earth plane have borne its fruit and made a marked impress upon human thought and contributed largely to the world's advancement, intellectuality, materially and spiritually.

The foundation for this progressive movement is the proof of continuity of life, together with the fact of spirit intercommunion.

Through the one the prevailing materialism of fifty years ago has been practically wiped out, while through the other many useful and beautiful lessons have been revealed from master minds in the spirit world, which has changed the whole modern conception of the future life, of the universe, and of God.

Spiritualism has removed the sting of death by showing that it is a natural and beautiful event, a welcome visitor to the matured soul whose labors on earth are finished, and who through this change graduates into a higher department of life's great school.

It immensely enlarges man's conception of the universe, and of an all-pervading intelligence called God; and confirms the poetic ideal that "This universe is one stupendous whole, whose body Nature is, and God the Soul." So that to-day science is forced to recognize the all-pervading life-force pulsating in every atom of a Spiritual universe, of which this world is only an infinitesimal part.

Mediumship in its varied forms is an important agency in this work, without which the higher forces could not act upon the human mind. Thought force is an instrumentality used by the higher intelligences to convey the messages and impress them upon the sensitive brain of the mediumistic individuals. And Spiritualism is the one religious movement which encourages and defends mediumship.

The time may come—yes, we believe the time will come, in fact it has already come to many people, but we believe it will eventually come to all—when, through the intuition of impressional mediumship, each individual will be directly involved by etween the two worlds will become generally recognized fact. But that s for the future, and to-day we must neet and deal with the conditions of o-day.

Brother Austin has well said, "The Ethical Standard of Modern Spiritualism is not surpassed by that of any other system of religion or philosophy." That ethical questions are receiving increased attention is unquestionably true. But the practical application of the lofty principles and ideals which constitute the essence of Spiritualist teachings, by bringing them into and making them a part of the everyday life, is the legitimate work of Spiritualism.

That thoughts are things, has in this 20th century become something more than a beautiful theory. It is a recognized fact in Nature; and the thought atmosphere of to-day is becoming surcharged with those lofty principles of Love, Equity and Justice, which stand for Brotherhood.

The stirring of conscience is manifesting itself in the minds of the people, and the Brotherhood of Man, exemplified and lived on this earth, is the ideal toward which the thought of to-day is pointing.

We, as Spiritualists, have opened the way for master minds in Spiritual realms to bring this thought more forcibly before the people.

For a generation the American people have been money mad, and life has been measured by accumulations of wealth. The poor have imitated the rich, the rich have made new records of extravagance, while selfishness and greed have run riot. But indications now point to a Spiritual awakening. A change for better material conditions seems to be coming. From the press, the pulpit, the platform, and from the home also, is coming a healthy protest against measuring life by dollars and cents; and Spiritualism in opening the way for angelic teachers to be heard, has been largely instrumental in this awakening of the people.

Spiritualism ever stands for freedom. It is educational in its methods. It teaches men and women to think. They have thought themselves out of the bondage of creedal theology, and it is now a fact that the whole tone and subject matter of modern preaching has been modified and elevated by spirit teaching and the propaganda of Spiritualism.

Brother and sister Spiritualists, this victory is yours. You have, by the aid of your angel helpers, won this great battle in the war for Freedom. But a greater conflict is before you.

Momentous problems now confront the American people, upon a wise solution of which depends the future welfare and happiness of generations yet unborn.

The money power is now in control of the means of production in this country. The lands, the machinery, and the means of transportation are owned and manipulated by this tremendous power of concentrated wealth, in a way to deprive the masses of a just and equitable share of the wealth being produced.

Men, women and children are fettered and bound by this system. Spiritual growth and progress are thus hampered and hindered and the world's progression is held in check. The cry of Freedom from this material thraldom is going up from millions of fettered souls. The cry for Justice and Equality of opportunity are vibrant in the air, and as soldiers in the battle for Freedom, and as the natural leaders in reform, is it not our duty to move forward in the educational work of teaching the people to put into practical application in the everyday affairs of life the spirit of Brotherhood and the principles of Justice?

Universal Brotherhood is the ideal of to-day. Sometime it is to become a living reality right here on this earth; and I should feel that I was recreant to my duty if I failed to do my humble part toward liberating the people from the present thraldom of commercialism and establishing in its stead a system of Justice and Brotherhood.

It is a Spiritual movement, born in the angel world, and they need our loving co-operation in establishing these ideals here on earth.

Many of our speakers are earnest advocates of this reform movement, and some societies are making it a part of their regular work. I notice one society advertises Universal Brotherhood meetings for Sunday afternoons. I suggest that this convention set apart an hour for the discussion of ways and means whereby more effectual work can be done along these lines and not unduly encroach upon the other society work.

H. [illegible]RICHARDSON, President.
[illegible]al sphe[illegible]ra, New York.
[illegible]he eleh[illegible]
[illegible]reind[illegible]
[illegible]wed.

Seriously Considered.

A Devout Spiritualist Takes into Consideration Subjective Mediumship and Promiscuous Control, and Reasons Therefrom.

Subjective mediumship and the promiscuous control of sensitives is and must be recognized by those who have any experience along this line as a menace to both mortals and spirits. (See Psychological Crime.)

While exceptions may justly be claimed, they should only be claimed in cases where strict and constant safeguards are provided by competent spirit controls, who in all sincerity seek to counteract the evil influence which is spread abroad by the ignorant, the low and vicious among them.

When it is known that this low class creates so much and unspeakable misery among the dwellers on both sides of life, it is but fair and reasonable to expect that the higher developed class should feel a strong desire to prevent, check or counteract such nefarious work, and enlighten the ignorant, elevate the low, and tame the vicious with kindness, and liberate their victims from bondage, and by reforming them, increase the numbers of invisible helpers for the work of redemption.

Granted that we recognize in the law of nature a Constructive and Destructive Principle, as taught by the Masters of the School of Natural Science, and granted that the enlightened spirits and their willing mediums violate this law of nature, and invoke this Destructive Principle to carry on their noble work, and are fully aware of its penalty, and cheerfully suffer the consequence, would this not be a great sacrifice offered on the Altar of Love for the sake of humanity?

Would not the exact Scale of Justice at least balance even when the good motives and its good results are considered? In other words, could no amount of good works overbalance the harm done in this case? Are the violators forever doomed to sink below the line of despair and irrevocably lost in dissolution? Or may they enter the broad field of hope and restitution where to recuperate their lost prestige? I hope they can, and do, and will, so love and duty won't get rusty.

As long as spirits of the higher spheres cannot be seen nor approached by those on the lower planes, violations of this law of nature and the Destructive Principle can hardly be avoided by those in their labor of love and rescue. And while I most highly esteem the Great School and its exact and profound science, and its wise and true Master's aim and endeavor, as exemplified in the peerless work of the three volumes, comprising the Harmonics of Evolution, The Great Psychological Crime, and the Great Work, I cannot but feel exceedingly sorry to know that the Master's noble efforts are so misjudged, misconstrued, unappreciated—yea, even scorned and condemned, and, alas! even by those who seem so eager in search of truth; and lo, behold! when they find it, turn the other way, because there are so many lions in the way.

It is this ultra-exactitude of this School which allows no exception to the rule of its formulary, that is the stumbling block to so many, and the cause of so much rash and unfair criticism; and critics, instead of heralding its truths, do like the fox in the parable, for whom the grapes hung too high, and so denounced them as sour.

I sense in the Master's work THE DAWNING OF A MILLENNIAL DAY, but I also realize that between now and then there lies a wide stretch of time, and a great need of charity for constant exercise; and as the harvest is overripe and the laborers few, I feel constrained to plead for the honest mediums and the exalted spirits who are prompted by love and charity, and work unselfishly for the benefit of their fellow-beings.

The man who steals a million dollars is a thief, and so is he who only steals a loaf of bread, for both have violated the same law; they only differ in degree. But the one who steals a loaf of bread to feed the starving, will surely be exonerated through the law of love, if love is the fulfillment of the law.

If honest mediums and their good spirit friends are guilty of breaking the law, they stand on the same level with the one who stole the bread to feed the hungry; and therefore I would gladly laud such mediums and such spirits, whose life-work is dedicated to uplift humanity, educate the spirits in darkness, relieve the obsessed and obsessing, even though they must infringe upon the laws of nature, and stand good for its penalty.

When we consider the vast numbers of spirits who are but the victims of our faulty social and educational systems; who wander about an aimless, homeless and hopeless throng, forever menacing and victimizing the constantly increasing multitudes of sensitives; when we observe the reckless hypnotist, who knows but little and cares less about the fatal psychological consequences of his science, and thereby multiplies the number of sensitives, and when we reflect upon the planchette and kindred instruments and devices which look so nice, neat and harmless, and are interesting to play with, and yet so insidious, and have proved so dangerous that dynamite or strychnine would have been a god-send instead, then we stop and calmly reflect.

They open the way to subjective control of any and all kinds of spirits, and they have wrought wreck and ruin in many a family, and also have increased the numbers of subjective sensitives; and yet the feeble voice of warning will be lost in the roaring whirlpool of the turbulent Stream of Life. Since our bold and blundering prophets hit so many amiss, nobody takes their predictions very seriously any more than if dice were shaken on their propositions.

Nevertheless there are unfailing signs discernible to the observing student, which indicate a sure fulfillment of an ominous prophecy that is based upon natural deductions, rational and logical conclusions. Any reader in possession of the strange story of Ahrinziman will find this prophecy on the last page of the book, where highly intelligent spirits announce a repetition of the witchcraft days, but to be exceedingly worse in scope, severity and consequences.

Such who have suffered through the reckless development of psychic powers, or the in-born weakness among friends or family relations from their ignorant or vicious spirit controls, under the form of insanity or obsession, should not be catechised or reprimanded for choosing the better way of the gers which too often lurk in the background of the others.

Those who charge the Masters of that School with selfishness and intellectual pride, or worse yet, with gross ignorance and stupidity, overlook entirely the most conspicuous points in their exact formulary, which plainly indicates that such qualifications would bar anyone from attaining to mastership—at least in that school.

Now, I am not doped or developed enough to declare with others that "whatever is is right," or that "all is right in the ultimate;" but I would rather say that whatever is right, let that be right, and don't twist it out of shape and place and make it unrecognizable thereby.

And as to the ultimate, I know absolutely nothing about it, except what I get in the soap bubbles from others. Is it any wonder that so many go wrong when the line of demarkation is blurred to indistinctness? And that by maxims and axioms which seem to have been the ejaculations of some gentle toper while being ousted from a barroom, and ever since have passed as the Oracles of Delphi?

Mediumship demands a sacrifice much greater than is bargained for by the shallow flippants who crave for a cheap notoriety and seek renown through its attainment. For them Mastership is out of the question until duly and truly prepared they can realize its superiority

G. A. WOLTER.

DR. J. M. PEEBLES.

He Is Still in Australia Doing an Excellent Work.

To the Editor:—It gives me pleasure to forward you by this mail a portion of the controversy that I've been having with preachers and clergymen in Australia. The Rev. Mr. Brazier, an English clergyman, attacked Spiritualism through the press, and of course I promptly replied.

In theological controversies I am in my element. The daily "Age," in this city, refused to publish my last reply to the Rev. Mr. Brazier, and so the Victorian Association of Spiritualists took the matter up, and put it into print, Mr. Stampford alone taking 500 copies. A copy will be sent to every Preacher in Australia.

I have now lectured in this city to the V. A. S. Society about two months, and have three more Sundays to fill out my engagement. They now wish to employ me for six months, but I must be on my way homeward. I left Michigan, you know, last September.

I go soon from this city, a very pious city, running no street cars on Sunday until about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and printing no daily newspapers on Sunday. The city numbers about 500,000, and on each Sunday evening there are 27 places, including parlors, drawing rooms and halls where Spiritism is proclaimed.

I go from here to Sydney, New South Wales, where I lecture for two Sundays, morning and evening, in the Unitarian Church, of which the Rev. Mr. Walters is the pastor. He is favorably inclined to Spiritualism, and is very popular in the city, doing active work in all the reform movements. From Sydney I go on to Brisbane to speak a month of Sunday's, morning and evening; then to the Fiji Islands, where I expect to remain two weeks, witnessing several of the manifestations among the natives, known for their power to walk oln burning coals with bared feet then on among other Islands of the Pacific Ocean, tending towards Honolulu and Vancouver.

My health is excellent. I not only lecture on Sundays, but two or three times during the week upon vegetarianism, anti-vaccination, temperance, and other reform movements.

My 85th birthday, coming off in March in this city was made by the Spiritualists a grand rallying evening in the Austral Hall building. With music and declamations and speeches, and some fine presents, they sent me along the line of my 86th milestone march with a real zest. Some of my old friends were present who listened to me 35 years ago, on my first visit to Australia. Never do I forget my friends, and never do I lose the friendship of a true friend.

I am attending Mr. Stanford's seances each week. Mr. C. Bailey, one of the greatest, if not THE greatest medium to-day in the world, is astonishing people with the manifestations that occur in his presence. I have not time to enumerate them, but shall speak of them on my return in connection with the marvels that I saw in the presence of India's Yogis in the suburbs of Calcutta and also in the mountains.

Pardon this prosy letter I only called my typewriter to mention the enclosing of the printed brochures.

I sorrowed to tears over the departure of my friend, Moses Hull. I last saw him in San Diego, Cal., and listened to his burning words of eloquence. He was a great biblical expounder. Though slightly differing on some minor points now and then, we were for nearly forty years the very best of friends. When in San Diego we talked of our white hairs and what we believed was awaiting us in those higher realms invisible. Expecting then to go first, I promised to manifest to him on the first feasible opportunity. Well, he went first.

He was a good and a grand man, and unquestionably has gone up higher into those holier realms of existence..

May heaven's choicest blessings rest upon Mattie Hull, the eloquent and the faithful; and upon Professor Weaver, the discreet, devoted and the erudite. He is the right scholar in the right place. Hold up his hands, Spiritualists, and sustain him with your money and your influence in the support of the Morris Pratt Institute. This also will be the best monument that you can erect to the memory of Moses Hull. Cordially yours,

J. M. PEEBLES, M. D.

"THE WATER WITCH."

Some Reflections on What the Writer Regards as a Superstition.

To the Editor:—I have been very much interested in the discussion going on with regard to the "Water Witch," or the finding of water with a crotched stick. I was surprised at finding such intelligent persons clinging to the old superstition that has attached to so natural a phenomenon. A crotched stick, a witch hazel, or anyone of the elastic wood is taken in the hands, the palms upward, with the point of the stick upward, grasped firmly. Then the hands turned inward, thus bending the prongs out of their natural position which they will try to regain as a matter of course.

The "Witch" now commences to walk around, holding the point upward, the hands well pressed toward each other, and the muscles on the inside of the hand are released, either consciously or unconsciously, and at once, the stick begins to turn in either direction to regain its natural position.

One will at once observe that in the beginning the prongs of the stick are bent upward, and after it has turned in the hands of the "Witch," they are straight.

By a little practice anyone can cause the stick to turn in either direction, toward or from, the person holding it, whether walking or standing, simply by the action of the muscles on the inside of the hands. The "Witch" touching the person who has hold of the stick, has no effect on the same, it only attracts the attention of the person when he unconsciously releases the muscles of the palms of the hands and allows its natural position.

The prong should be about as stiff as the person can easily bend.

GEO. THOMAS.

Easton, N. Y.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH

OR

Dial Planchette.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than twelve years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by, its aid, and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the

FORMATION OF CIRCLES AND CULTIVATION OF MEDIUMSHIP

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

WORLD MAKING A scientific explanation of the Birth, Growth and Death of Worlds, by Samuel Phelps Leland Ph. D., LL. D., Emeritus Professor of Astronomy and lecturer on science in Charles City College. A Work of intense interest, by a scientist and profound thinker. Cloth, price, 75 cts.

THE RELIGION OF CHEERFULNESS
By Sara A. Hubbard.

This little booklet sets forth interestingly a religion which all may admire and experience with benefit to body and spirit. Very nice for a holiday present. Daintily printed and bound, in a case. Price 50 cents.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism
A Treatise on
HUMAN CULTURE.
By Leroy Berrier Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

MAHOMET, THE ILLUSTRIOUS.
By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. This work is one of the Library of Liberal Classics. No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. Price, 25 cents.

The Majesty of Calmness. The Kingship of Self-Control.

Two dainty white gift books by Wm. George Jordan, treating of individual problems and possibilities in the light of the

New Thought.

They are very interesting and instructive and worth more than the price indicates, as an ornamental and valuable addition to the library. Price, 30 cents each.

THUMBSCREW AND RACK.
Torture implements employed in the 15th and 16th centuries for the promulgation of Christianity, with pictorial illustrations. By George E. Macdonald. Price, 10 cents.

RATIONAL MEMORY TRAINING.

Hints and helps in memorizing figures, lists of words, prose and poetic literature, new language, etc. By B. F. Austin, author of several other works. Price, 50 cents.

HARMONICS OF EVOLUTION.
The Philosophy of Individual Life, Based Upon Natural Science

As taught by modern masters of law. By Florence Huntley. An exceedingly interesting and distinctly valuable contribution to the literature of evolution, unfolding its laws from the deeper and clearer spiritual aspect, and indicating the defects of the Darwinian theory. Spiritualists and Mazzinians alike will [illegible]

Dr. J. M. Peebles In Melbourne, Australia.

As it is not possible [as set forth in the Harbinger of Light] to give detailed reports of Dr. Peebles' most successful course of lectures in Melbourne, which are all expressions of the outlook he has attained from an advocacy of its claims during more than half a century, a chat I had with him on the trend of Spiritualism will convey to readers the heart of his teaching. He speaks on the platform with all the enthusiasm of a young man, and is as ready to defend the truth as when he paid his first visit to Australia over 30 years ago. For one whose life is so harmonious, so full of deep religious sentiment, it is astonishing to him that Spiritualists generally have not become more spiritual-minded and more harmonious.

"I am sorry," he says, "that many consult spirits not for ennobling ends, but to get glimpses of the future, which they should realize must be the outcome of their life to-day." "I tell you," he says, "what I have learned, myself, from an exalted source, though I do not wish you to accept it unless it appeals to your own reason, regarding the commencement of what is called modern Spiritualism by the Rochester Knockings. At the initiation of this new gospel to the world there was a a combination of great souls in the spirit realms, who gave the first impetus to this movement which will presently fill the world. Many great souls withdrew when the awakening was complete, and future work was left to other controls. As is known to most leading investigators, including Dr. Hodgson, and others, it is as little known in the spheres as on the earth that communication between the two is possible. Mr. W. T. Stead's "After Death" shows this in Julia's impatience at not getting established at once "A Bureau of Communication" for both discarnate and incarnate spirits. The truth began to spread after the first awakening in lower spiritual spheres and, as a consequence, the movement, as a whole, became controlled and obsessed by a lower class of spirits. The outcome of this degeneration is that the more thinking and earnest Spiritualists are rapidly moving toward a religious philosophy which is in perfect harmony with the religion of the Christ. Jesus said to His disciples, "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you," simply because they were "Sensitives," and the early Apostolic Church was Christian Spiritualism. Jesus of Nazareth stood on the very pinnacle of ancient Hebrew Spiritualism, and Paul, inspired by this thought, said: "We shall be saved by His life."

The World Advancing Toward Spiritualism.

Everyone is progressing spiritually, said Dr. Peebles, in his optimistic fashion. Christian denominations as well as Spiritualists are receiving the light. The Methodists of U. S. A. are proposing to modify their creeds. Orthodox churches, generally, are progressing toward the ideal of a Christian Spiritualism and away from cramping creeds and professions of faith. Spiritualism is a universal force in the world not confined to Spiritualists, but influencing many who have never seen a medium. This applies to Spiritualists also. Some of the best I know have never sat in a circle, but have developed their own spiritual natures by "living the life" and the study of our grand literature. They have thus grown to that state of consciousness in which they just as naturally converse with spirits as music responds to music, and love responds to love. Spiritualists should work in every reform movement. Dr. Peebles has carried this out during his long career. Anti-vaccination, temperance, both in eating and drinking—he is both a teetotaller and vegetarian—and every movement tending toward peace and harmony have had his consistent and hearty support. Dr. Peebles says the best speakers on the spiritualistic platforms in America are giving forth the higher teachings he advocates, and mentions in this connection Mrs. Brigham, of New York; Mrs. Cora Richmond, of Chicago; Mrs. Lillie, Los Angeles, Cal.; Mr. Wiggins, of Boston; B. F. Austin, Plymouth Church, Rochester, and some others.

Dr. Peebles' 85th Birthday.

On March 23d a birthday celebration was held at the V. A. S. rooms, which was largely attended. Mr. James Smith read a poem written especially for the occasion, and published in the April issue. Short addresses were given by Mr. Waschatz, president; Mr. W. H. Terry, Mrs. Bright, Miss Hinge and Mrs. Waschatz. Replying to the several addresses, Dr. Peebles said, with some emotion and a striking enthusiasm, that he was almost overjoyed with the manifest appreciation and warmth of expression breathed from the old friends and otherkindly souls present, sending him with so many kindly words and good wishes along by sea and by land on his 86th year of life's journey. He referred to several present—W. H. Terry, James Smith, and others—who greeted him on his first arrival in Melbourne in 1872. And referring to his lectures in the theater and the Temperance Hall, he mentioned Mr. Charles Bright (husband of the present editor of the "Harbinger of Light") as the chairman of his first meeting.

At this time the daily press was severely critical and sometimes radically unjust, pronouncing Dr. Peebles a bold blasphemer, and Spiritualism a Yankee-begotten humbug, but a generation of years has wrought wonders with the Australian press. With a few exceptions, its impartiality and liberality are commendable.

Speaking of his age, he said: "People are about as old as they think they are. They grow old because they expect to. It is a bad habit. Most unwisely many act as aged persons are expected to act. They drop business and doze in rocking-chairs, and recalling the the past, babble about it. The dead line of three score years and ten should be blotted out of both consciousness and memory. Laziness I abhor, and consider industry the best stuff for the making of both statesmen and saints. Books feed me, while crowds and parlor tattle starve me. Often do I go away hungry from the multitude, and enter into the silence where I find the bread of inspiration that the masses know not of.

"If you have jealousles and envies among you, do not mention them to me; they are the blotches on the face of humanity. They indicate a low phase of spiritual unfoldment. Naturally I am myself an optimist. Often in my lifelong journey, misunderstood, sometimes misrepresented, at other times shamefully slandered and frequently walking on thorn-piercing pavements, I stopped not by the wayside to bemoan the rough pathway, but traveled on, inspired by faith within, and warmed by God's sunshine above me. Never did I witness a starless night. If clouds shut away the glimmerings of the stars from my vision, I knew that they were still above shining in peerless radiance, and that the morning would come. Spiritualism has been an anchor to my soul. It demonstrates a future existence, encourages the desponding, and does not say good-night to the dying, but tells of a good-morning just over there, where the loved meet, and parting is unknown.

"Never happier hours did I pass than when hearing the good, grey, American poet, Walt Whitman, read to me paragraphs from his inimitable "Leaves of Grass." These lines struck me as exquisitely beautiful:—

"All seems beautiful to me,
I can repeat over to men and women,
You have done such good to me
I would do the same to you;
I will recruit for myself and you
as I go,
I will scatter myself among men and
women as I go,
I will toss a new gladness and roughness among them,
Whoever denies me it shall not trouble me,
Whoever accepts me, he or she shall be blessed, and shall bless me."

Among Dr. Peebles' other activities during his stay in Melbourne was a newspaper controversy in the "Age" with Rev. Mr. Brazier, an Anglican clergyman, in answer to that gentleman's strictures in the columns of the 'Age" on "Spiritual Communications." We give the whole of Dr. Peebles' letter for the benefit of friends at a distance who may not otherwise see it:

Spiritual Communications,

To the Editor of the "Age."

Sir:—The contribution in the 'Age" of 9th inst., reporting the Rev. Mr. Brazier's sermon upon Spiritualism was interesting, much of which was in my own line of thought, such as that "our departed friends exist," and that they "exist in conscious and intelligent state." He might have gone further, and said that in Biblical times there were trances and visions, and the gift of tongues and healing, and the "discerning of spirits (I Cor., xii: 10), and inasmuch as spiritual beings communed with mankind in the past, should they not still continue to communicate with mankind? They do thus communicate. There are thousands—aye, millions—in the most enlightened countries in the world noted for their intelligence, conspicuous for their integrity, famous for their scientific attainments, prominent for their good moral characters and scholarly research, who will solemnly testify that after years of candid investigation, and upon strictly scientific principles, they have demonstrated the truth of present-day spiritual manifestations—manifestations from their friends whose bodies rest beneath the willows. The testimony of these millions is as direct and overwhelming as it is unimpeachable. Both Spiritualism and theosophy are the direct antitheses of materialism. Take Spiritualism from the Bible and you rob it of all life, for it is the "spirit that giveth life." The primitive Christians were religious Spiritualists. When John was about to worship a spirit whom he took to be God, the voice said, "See thou do it not, for I am thy fellow-servant and of thy brethren the prophets." On the mountain of Transfiguration there appeared in glory two men (long dead)' Moses and Elias, and "behold they talked," and so forth.

True, as the Rev. Mr. Brazier states, there were, and there are, evil spirits. No intelligent Spiritualist denies this, and the Roman Catholic Church has had its exorcists for the casting out of these obsessing spirits. Hence it is wise, as the apostle taught, to "try the spirits." But Spiritualists as a body do not "deny that Jesus Christ was the Son of God;" but do deny that He was the very God. They accept these words of Peter—Jesus Christ, "a man approved of God by wonders," and so forth. Personally, and most emphatically, do I believe that "Jesus Christ came in the flesh, and that he reigns to-day in the heavens," the brightness of theFather's glory. There are, be it said with sorrow, spiritists—not Spiritualists—who deny that Jesus Christ existed. This is the output of a painful ignorance. Spiritism should never be confounded with Spiritualism. The two words are not synonymous. Spiritism is little more than Babylonian or Judaistic necromancy, telling fortunes, hunting coal fields, and divining for selfish purposes.

Spiritualism and true Christianity are in perfect accord. And certainly Spiritualists believe that they should "try the spirits"—test the communicating spirits; and they also believe in testing Spiritualists themselves, as to whether or not they "walk in the spirit"—the spirit of truth, integrity, purity and love. And they further believe in trying or testing Christians—Christian believers—and they test them by these words of Jesus Christ, "And these signs shall follow them that believe in My name, they shall cast out devils (demons, obsessing spirits); they shall speak with new tongues. * * * They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Do these signs, these phenomena, follow Christians to-day? Here is a further test of a Christian rule laid down by Christ:—"Verily he that believeth on Me the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father" (John xiv:12). This language cannot be misunderstood. Do Christians do these "greater works"? Will they turn to II Corinthians, xiii: 5, where they will read:—"Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith."

"Swedenborg, who consciously conversed with the spirits from both the heavens and the hells for 27 years, wisely opposed promiscuous spirit intercourse for selfish, sordid interests. I do the same. It was really unfortunate in Mr. Brazier to be so deceived by a spirit—"a lying spirit"—and in my opinion the only way to effectually prevent lying spirits from returning to earth and communicating is for our world to prevent sending so many conscienceless liars over into the spirit world. Is it not possible that this lying spirit that deceived Brother Brazier was the very spirit—or one of that class—whom the Lord sent forth to persuade Ahab? These are the words: "Now, therefore, behold the Lord hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, and the Lord hath spoken evil concerning thee," and Jeremiah exclaimed from the depths of a sorrowing soul, "Oh, Lord, thou hast deceived me and I was deceived."

"It should be understood that dying effects no moral or spiritual change in a human being. They all take with them to the future life their consciousness, their memories and their tendencies, and they retain them until they progress and unfold, becoming more Christ-like. To this end Jesus Christ, we are told, descended into hell (Hades) and preached to the "spirits in prison," and the fact of this preaching implies future repentance and progress.

Spiritualism has come to stay. It is the genuine gospel of the Christ. It is God's living witness of a future conscious existence. It reproves the erring, comforts the sick, and dries the mourner's tears, and is making rapid strides throughout the world. Archdeacon Colley, of England, is preaching it in unmistakable language from his pulpit. The vicar, or rector, of Emmanuel Church, Boston, America, is preaching the ministry of spirits and the laying on of hands. The philosophy of Spiritualism is similar to the new theology of the Rev. Mr. Campbell. It is liberal Christianity in its pristine purity, and is destined to uplift humanity and usher in the millennial age of human brotherhood and a present heaven of peace and good will to men.—Yours, etc.,

April 9. J. M. PEEBLES, M. D.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

A VERY IMPORTANT MATTER.

What Is the Present Status of Spiritualism?

It is to be hoped that the Spiritualists of the United States have some pride in presenting their movement to the world as it really is in respect to numbrs, societies, and wealth. Up to the present time, less than one-third of the 760 societies in the United States have made their returns to the Census Bureau. Naturally, many interested people are asking if less than one-third of our leaders have any love for their religion. It rests with the Spiritualists to have their movement properly presented in the report of the Director of the Census.

Mr. North is doing everything in his power to collect reliable statistics with regard to Spiritualism. I have done my best to aid him; I have sent out over 600 letters of inquiry to which very few replies have been received. Some of the good people to whom I have written inform me that they are too busy to furnish desired information; others write long letters about their societies but do not fill the cards as requested; others still make no reply whatever.

It is probable that some of the people to whom these letters go, think that they are getting even with the N. S. A., or spiting its President, by refraining from giving attention to these important letters. They are simply injuring the cause they profess to love by withholding the desired facts. Neither the N. S. A. nor its President, gains anything prsonally by receiving these communications. The statistics gathered are turned over to the government by whose clerks compilations are made, showing the standing of Spiritualism in our country,

It should be a matter of pride to all Spiritualists to have their religion stand on equal footing with other denominations by having authenticated data placed in the hands of the government. Is it not the duty of the officers of all local societies and camp meetings to make returns at the earliest possible moment in harmony with facts? Why should not all the members of the Board of Trustees of the N. S. A., likewise the members of all State Boards, be willing to aid in this good work?

We have very few days remaining in which to report the facts regarding the various activities connected with the Spiritualistic movement. Prompt action is now ncessary. I appeal therefore, to the officers of all the local societies, and other associations, to fill the cards forwarded them, according to instructions, and mail them at once to me. Credit is given to everyone who makes returns for his local organization. I am gaining nothing for myself by doing this work; it is for Spiritualism that this added labor has been undertaken. Unless there is co-operation on the part of all local workers, Spiritualism will make a poorer showing in the census report of the present year than it did in the one made by Supt. Porter, in 1890.

Spiritualists, will you not arouse yourselves to the duty of the hour by giving your immediate attention to this important work? It will be your fault if your religion shows a falling off where it should show a decided gain. Once more let me urge you to give this matter considerate attention.

Yours for Spiritualism,
HARRISON D. BARRETT.

Poem by Theodore Tilton.

I stood beside a burial urn
And thought how life is but a day,
And how the nations each in turn
Have lived and passed away.

The earth is peopled with the dead
Who live again in deathless hosts,
And come and go with noiseless tread,
A universe of ghosts.

They follow after flying ships,
They flicker through the city's marts,
They hear the cry of human lips,
The throb of human hearts.

They waken us at morning light,
They cheer us in our daily care;
They bring a weary world at night
To bow the knee in prayer.

Their mission is of heaven assigned,
To comfort sorrow 'til it cease,
And in the dark and troubled mind
To light the lamp of peace.

Oh, what a wondrous life is theirs,
To fling away their mortal frame,
Yet keep their human loves and cares
And yearnings still the same.

Oh, what a wondrous life is ours,
To dwell within this mortal range,
Yet parley with the heavenly powers,
Two worlds in interchange.

So leaning on the burial urn,
I thought how life has double worth
If man were only wise to learn
That heaven is on the earth.

THEODORE TILTON.

THE CAUSE AT LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Communication from Mrs. E. G. Howe.

During the last few weeks the cause of Spiritualism in Los Angeles has been attracting much interest among the outside people. The Truthseeker's Society, the oldest in the city, has had such speakers as J. L. Dryden, Dr. Adah Patterson, Emilie Kratz, and Lettie M. Allen.

The Society of Spiritual Progression has a regular pastor in Mary C. Vlasek, who, in addition to her duties in connection with her society, is the conductor of the Union Lyceum, the only lyceum in Los Angeles. This society has also a Ladies' Auxiliary, The Sunshine Club, which is organized for, and does, a great deal of charitable work in Los Angeles. A Young People's League was recently organized in connection with this work, with 36 members, which affiliated with the State Association on May 12, with special services. The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Truth Seekers, "The Guiding Star," held a basket picnic at the Spiritualist camp grounds at Edendale on May 30, at which time they presented the camp association with a large American flag. Arthur S. Howe, president of the State Association, presided, and made the presentation speech for the Guiding Star Association, of which he is a member, which was ably responded to by the president of the camp association, Arthur Prentice.

The day was a most enjoyable one, although the recent exposure and arrest for not paying a license had brought among a few of the Spiritualists a little discord, which, however, was on the outside, and did not interfere with the meeting.

At the present time the movement in Los Angeles is one of complete harmony among the affiliated societies, although the city officials are compelling a few to pay the license of thirty dollars a month or leave the city, it is hoped that as an organized movement we may soon receive recognition.

There are a few self-styled Spiritualists in this city who do not belong to any society, are not interested in consolidation of effort, and who through their own classification of everything into one class, and that Spiritualism, which has been very misleading to the general public, as well as to Spiritualists themselves, who were not in touch with the organized movement.

We have had in this city for some few months Hugh R. Moore, recently of New York, who, while he has been known in the East as a Spiritualist, came to this city and established a "Church of Humanity," and as he did not affiliate with the Societies, they paid no attention to his work, although through recent exposure by those who feel it their duty to expose such impostors who work under the cloak of Spiritualism, Mr. and Mrs. Moore were classed as with the Spiritualists.

The enclosed copy from the Los Angeles Herald of June 5 will explain the position of the State Association Board. All who claim Spiritualism as their religion are not working with the organization of Spiritualism, and while we deplore the fact, we are unable at present to do more than protect those who are, and do work for it.

A mass meeting was held at Long Beach on Sunday, June 2, which was one of the best we have held.

Three sessions were held, and each was well attended, and many were turned away in the evening for lack of room, although the Odd Fellows' Hall is a large one. This society was recently organized, and bids fair to be a strong one. Other locations in California are awakening to the fact that the only protection, as well as recognition, to the Spiritualist movement, can only be obtained by a more united and uniform effort for organization, and are uniting with the State Association for more efficient work and a greater protection for the worker. MRS. M. E. G. HOWE, 323 Temple St. State Organizer.

A SPIRITUAL MESSAGE.

The Progress of Soul Development Is An Impulse of the Infinite.

Every created soul has an atmosphere, an aura of its own. During life the concentrating and refining forces constitute a self-restoring power. In all processes of life the spiritual essences are evolved containing the elements of form, consistence, color—all the characteristics of life they represent. The rose has within the spirit germs of the whole family of roses. The lily—the peerless immortal flower—has the undying essence of purity and beauty to become embodied in still finer life through all spiritual spheres and conditions. All evolve the elements of form, character, to be reincarnated into finer forms, re-endowed with conscious life of immortality. Animals, vegetables and minerals are endowed with immortal life and being.

The spiritual essences are delicate, fine, formed of ethereal elements, transfused in harmony, beauty and inconceivable superiority of indestructible life.

Thus with the soul, evolved in the current of magnetic force, it brings forth the material for reincarnation, walks forth amid the beauty of a true reincarnation which is the keystone of the arch that unfolds the true faith in immortality. The soul cannot be corrupted or destroyed; it is the life inspiration and fulfillment — eternal unfoldment, the reincarnation.

Folded close within the soul is the organism of a true humanity. The soul develops according to the laws of its own life—its capacity and progress. The progress of soul development is an impulse of the Infinite—wave meets wave with intensified emotion, thought stirs the soul with infinite love. Sympathy and love are the great powers of life.

Love generates spiritual radiance which transcends expression. Every true aspiration clothes the soul in brightness. The tender blooms of flowers are like living sunbeams where color blends in perfect harmony with ethereal vibrations. Through the mist of new-born harmonies, ethereal light breaks upon the higher spheres; the reincarnated soul ascends the heights clothed in divine beauty, sandaled with light, robed in perfect whiteness, scattering over all the bloom of love, the awakening of a new life divine, with love, harmony and happiness. PLANET.

Written through the hand of Mrs. C.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth-bound, price $1.

PRESENT CLAIMS OF SPIRITUALISM.

Mrs. Russegue Explains What It Stands For and Gives Psychometric Tests,

Special Spiritualistic services are being held here this week under the auspices of the Montreal Church of Spiritualism. The services express the initiatory stages of a permanent organization, which those interested in occult manifestations intend to establish. The idea is to secure the services of a pastor or lecturer, who will promote the study of spiritualistic phenomena and form a continuous bond of union between the members.

In order to give stimulus to the movement, Mrs. Russegue, one of the most celebrated mediums and clairvoyants on the continent, is here on a visit. She opened the campaign yesterday with two exceedingly able and interesting addresses, in Karn Hall, and these will be followed up by others to-night, to-morrow night and Wednesday night—all expository and explanatory of modern Spiritualism.

The services were well attended, and there can be no doubt Mrs. Russegue succeeded in exciting the interest and riveting the attention of her audiences. She speaks with great fluency and charm. Her diction is lofty and pure. Her voice thrills and penetrates. She has great mental power; and she appeals to the reason as well as the imagination of her hearers. After each of her addresses which she preceded by prayer, and Scripture readings, she gave a series of psychometric tests, in which by means of articles collected from members of the audience she located their owners, and sketched their life history in a way that made the subjects feel that they were under the scrutiny of some subtle, mysterious and uncanny power that was capable of probing the hidden depths of character and bringing to light qualities that those concerned may have believed themselves to possess, but which they could in few cases have defined with such precision and none with such wonderful eloquence.

Mrs. Russegue is well advanced in years, has evidently had ripe experience of life and a profound knowledge of human nature.

Her morning discussion was an exposition of what Spiritualism stands for, while in the evening she explored the world of thought, showing how much mankind owed to thought in the general industrial economy and social conditions under which we lived. The evening address was in a sense complementary to the morning one.

Spiritualism, it was explained, implied a larger spiritual perception, the betterment of humanity, a higher conception of spiritual unity, a better and higher conception of truth, a closer relationship between God and ma...

Paul had said that he who would learn spiritual things must become spiritually minded, and Spiritualism implied this as well as closer relationship between the souls of men and women and the infinite—between the human and divine. Spiritualism meant the living of higher and holier lives—purity of life and character, for it was through pure, godly and holy lives that we became the medium of the transmission of the divine messages to mankind.

Revelation Still Going On.

The great distinction between the church of Spiritualism and other churches was that the dogmas and doctrines of the other churches were fixed and definite. The revelations from the divine power, the infinite and absolute Ruler of the Universe, ended with the sacred writings. Spiritualism, on the other hand, believed in their continuity. The emanations from the divine were as potent in the world to-day as they had ever been. God's laws were eternal and unchangeable; but we were in the midst of changes, and modern Spiritualism provided the means by which the divine message could be conveyed to all generations of mankind. It was a spiritual intelligence that brought forth wireless telegraphy.

Speaking of immortality, Mrs. Russegue contended that it was through Spiritualism alone that proof of spiritual life was to be obtained. "No spirit," said she, "ever came back to the world to tell us that we were to die. They all told us that we were to live forever."—Montreal Daily Herald, Canada.

A GREAT FELLOW.

The Devil Has Helped to Demonstrate Immortality.

The theologians are in the habit of making the most stupendous assertions, based on pure assumptions and preconceived ideas, which no reasoning will touch.

So often we think of saying, "Some dogs are more logical than some theologians." One of these writers asserts that Sir Oliver Lodge recently lectured on "Scientific Immortality," and that this "nothing but sound lecturer" offered not a single "scientific argument to prove his glowing belief in immortality." Lodge, in his papers and addresses has always summarized the most advanced discoveries and theories bearing on a future life. He utilizes the material furnished by the best reasoners and master logicians of every age. These facts can no longer be ignored by thinking men.

Some men reason to a contrary conclusion, after reading the most logical statement, and this writer, in speaking of the "facts" in Hyslop's book, "Evidence for a Future Life," says that its author has never found any scientific proof of immortality. Hyslop is a professor of logic ond the logic of his book in favor of spirit identity, seems unanswerable.

Now, if spirits have proved their identity, they exist; if they exist, then a future life is a fact. Our Spiritualistic friends believe that immortality has been demonstrated, and that spiritistic experiment has so far furnished the only valid evidence; but the theologians assert that Spiritism is the work of the Devil. Let us give the Devil his due, assuming that the Devil exists. If the Devil has helped to demonstrate immortality, let us honor the Devil some, because he has done more for us than the theologians have been able to do. Can the theologians furnish us with any proof of immortality, or any clear and definite statement assuring it? If not, I fear the Devil will get them at last.

DR. C. C. CARTER.
Lancaster Ohio.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

SPIRIT MESSAGES.

Given Through the Mediumship of Mrs. Nellie Davis, of Kewanee, Ill.

I should like to send out a letter this evening, if I thought mamma would see it, and I would give her a little comfort, for mother and my sister Addie and my brother Herschel are still in earth-life. Mamma thought that no just God could take me away, when I was needed so badly at home, and I want to explain now that I was the only support the family had after Father passed away, and I tried to do more than my frail body could endure, so my body would no longer hold my ambitious spirit.

I stand by you so many times, Mamma; I read your heart and I sense your thoughts, and you wonder so many times if I am happy, and if I know all you have to contend with. Yes, dear Mamma, I know all, and that is the reason I come here where I find the gateway open to everyone. Knowing that there are those connected with the family who are interested in Spiritualism, and there are many who knew me that have tried to comfort my people by getting them to understand that the spirit can return, so I am here to-day, hoping to say something that will be convincing to them. I want to say to my brother that I was with you on May 28 when you went out leaving Mamma so sad, and did not return until two o'clock the next morning. You first entered a saloon, two blocks from home, where you met Frank W. and Ira M., and they asked you to go to the vaudeville show. You accepted the invitation. There you met Blanche and accompanied her home. She stopped on the way at a friend's home for about twenty minutes, and you waited on the outside and sat down on the curbing. You told her that you were going away, and was not going to tell anyone where you were going. When you returned home Mamma was sitting up waiting for you.

Now, some may wonder why I write as I do. But I have often heard my brother say, if some one would come and tell him something that he was sure they had no way of knowing about, that he would believe that we could return. Then again I thought if he knew that father and I knew what he was doing, he would lead a better life. So for his good and for Mamma's happiness I write as I have. I wish also to send thanks and appreciation to the ones who were so kind to me at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, as that is where I passed out.

Now I don't know of anything more to say of interest, more than trying to prove my identity. My mother's name is Nancy and my father's William.

Please put me down as Effie Geneva Sargent. I passed away about 16 years ago.

EFFIE GENEVA SARGENT.

How beautiful it is to be able to send out a few words to those in earth-life, after passing away.

I have been some little time in the spirit world. As near as I can count the time, I think it is about seven years. I was a young girl when I passed away—only seventeen, and as I look back now to that life with its faded memory, I realize how little I knew of life, nor what I must pass through if I had lived on earth longer.

I dreaded to leave home and my parents and brothers, for I knew just how they would miss me; and while they knew where I was going, and that I would be happy, it did not make it much easier for them to part with me.

Oh, I wanted to tell them that all was done that could be done for me, and my time had come, and I know if they could only see the beauty and happiness that surrounds me in my spirit home, and how good and kind everyone is to me they would not feel badly about my going away.

I used to talk to the girls about what I was going to do when I got older, and I am glad to come back and tell them that many of the things I had planned have been outwrought and fulfilled in my spiritual home. I said I would have little children around me (for I always wanted to have a sister) that I could train. I would have music and other studies that would be helpful to them.

Now in my spirit home I have little ones that I am training, and we have music and flowers and beautiful things to cultivate their love of them and all that is refined and sweet.

And other plans that I had in view, young as I was then, but inspired, I think, by spirits, by forces that I did not understand, they have all been outwrought and fulfilled. As the years have passed, while my people on earth have been going through their experiences, sometimes they meet with things that are very hard to bear, and I have thought so many times, that if they could only know that Maggie was with them, looking after them, they would be glad that I had not gone far away. And I am waiting to meet them in the bright beyond; to welcome them to my spirit home, where there is music and flowers and sunshine, and to show them something of the joys which I am sure they will be pleased to find after the cares and trials of earth-life are gone.

I hope they will know of my coming here, and I have some things I would like to tell them about that will be a great benefit to them.

I will say that my father's name is Thomas and my mother's name Mary.

I know they will all be glad to hear from me. I must go now. I send my love to all my friends.

MAGGIE HARDY.

"The Truth Seeker Collection of Forms and Ceremonies for the Use of Liberals." Price, 25 cents.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

"THE LIFE BOOKS"

BY RALPH WALDO TRINE.

What All the World's A-Seeking, or The Vital Law of True Life, True Greatness, Power and Happiness. Contents—The Principle; The Application; The Unfoldment; The Awakening; The Incoming; Character Building Thought Power. Price, $1.25.

In Tune with the Infinite. Contents—Prelude; The Supreme Fact of the Universe; The Supreme Fact of Human Life; Fullness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; The Secret, Power and Effects of Love; Wisdom and Interior Illumination; The Realization of Perfect Peace; Coming Into Fullness of Power; Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; How Men Have become Prophets, Seers, Sages and Saviors; The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion; Entering Now Into the Realization of the Highest Riches. Price $1.25.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. "The moment we fully and vitally realize who and what we are, we then begin to build our own world even as God builds His."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Every Living Creature. "The tender and humane passion in the human heart is too precious a quality to allow it to be hardened or effaced by practices such as we often indulge in."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Character Building Thought Power. "A thought, good or evil, an act, in time a habit, so runs life's law; what you live in your thought world, that, sooner or later, you will find objectified in your life."—From title-page. Price 35 cents.

The Wonders of Life.

By ERNEST HAECKEL, Author of "The Riddle of the Universe." This book is confined to the realm of organic science, and treats of "The Knowledge, Nature, Functions and History of Life." Price, cloth, $1.50.

BOOKS BY— LILIAN WHITING.

THE LIFE RADIANT.—Cloth, $1.00 net. Decorated cloth $1.25. In this, her new book, Miss Whiting aims to portray a practical ideal for daily living that shall embody the sweetness and exaltation and faith that lend enchantment to life. It is, in a measure, a logical sequence of "The World Beautiful." Leading into still diviner harmonies. "The Life Radiant" is characterized by the same essential qualities that have marked "The World Beautiful."

CONTENTS—The Golden Age Lies Onward; Discerning the Future; The Ethereal Realm; The Power of the Exalted Moment; The Nectar of the Hour.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE; or Death as an Event in Life. cloth, $1.00 A book from her pen means new flashes of insight, a revelation of Spiritual truth almost Emersonian in kind.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL; First, Second and Third Series. Three volumes, $1.00 per volume.

CONTENTS OF VOL. I.—The Duty of Happiness; Nectar and Ambrosia; Believe in the wings; The Vision and the Splendor; The Enlargement of Relations; Friends Discovered, not made; A Psychological Problem; The Supreme Luxury of Life; Exclusive and Inclusive; Through Securing Nothing; The Woman of the World; The potency of Charm; Fine Souls and Fine Society; The Laws of Our Country; In Newness of Life; The Heavenly visitors.

AFTER HER DEATH.—A Story of a Summer. Price, $1.00. The ideas in the book will afford comfort to many, and should bring positive aid in sorrow to such as will receive its message.—Hartford Post.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT—Verses of the Life to Come. New edition, with additional poems. $1.00. Decorated cloth. $1.25. Lilian Whiting's verse is like a bit of sunlit landscape on a May morning.—Boston Herald.

KATE FIELD; A Record, with several portraits of Miss Field, including one by Elihu Vedder. Decorated cloth. $2.00

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning. With Portrait. Decorated cloth, $1.25.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY.

Lectures by the Swami Vivekananda, on Raja Yoga or Conquering the Internal Nature, and other subjects; also, Patanjali's Yoga Aphorisms, with commentaries and a copious glossary of Sanskrit terms. Revised and enlarged. 12mo., Cloth, $1.50. Raja Yoga is an ancient system of Indian Philosophy, and one of the four chief methods that the Vedanta Philosophy offers to obtain freedom and perfection. Swami Vivekananda became a familiar figure in several American cities during the three years following the Parliament of Religious at Chicago; he was cordially received in America, where the breadth and depth of his teachings were soon recognized. His teachings are universal in their application. The book is cheap at $1.50. For sale at this office.

MOLLIE FANCHER,

The Brooklyn Enigma.

An authentic statement of facts in the life of Mary J. Fancher, the psychological marvel of the nineteenth century. Unimpeachable testimony of many witnesses. By Abram H. Dailey. With illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50.

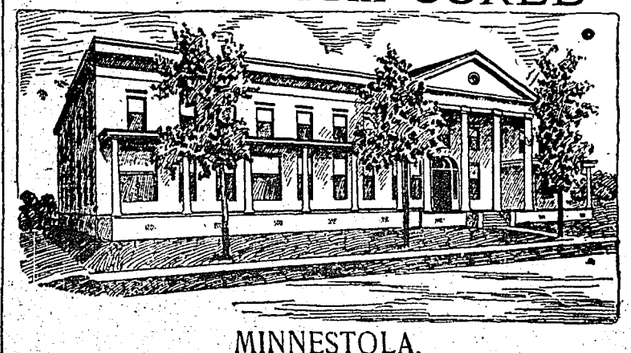
STARTLING FACTS, OR Deeds of Darkness Disclosed

This work devotes special attention to Auricular Confession and its relations to sacerdotal celibacy, convents, monasteries, morality and civil and religious liberty. It is intended to be an embodiment of facts and documentary evidence of the pernicious influence of the confessional; a trenchant showing up of Romanism, based upon standard Catholic authorities; an eye-opener concerning the methods and spirit, the moral turpitude and evil works of Romanism. Cloth, 75 cents.

ANCIENT INDIA,

Its Language and Religions. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Paper, 25 cents.

WOMAN: Four Centuries of Progress. A Lecture delivered at the Freethinker's International Congress, Chicago, Ill., October, 1893. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, 10c.



The Universe By L. M. Rose.

This booklet contains 71 pages of explanation regarding force; the beginning of creation; what matter is; what life is; immortality; psychic science; the soul of things, and ends with a poem entitled "Song of Psyche," by Emma Nickerson-Warne. Price 25 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

By the Editor of the National, with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorce, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,
H. D. C. MILLS.
Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

Dr. J. M. Peebles In Melbourne, Australia.

As it is not possible [as set forth in the Harbinger of Light] to give detailed reports of Dr. Peebles' most successful course of lectures in Melbourne, which are all expressions of the outlook he has attained from an advocacy of its claims during more than half a century, a chat I had with him on the trend of Spiritualism will convey to readers the heart of his teaching. He speaks on the platform with all the enthusiasm of a young man, and is as ready to defend the truth as when he paid his first visit to Australia over 30 years ago. For one whose life is so harmonious, so full of deep religious sentiment, it is astonishing to him that Spiritualists generally have not become more spiritual-minded and more harmonious.

"I am sorry," he says, "that many consult spirits not for ennobling ends, but to get glimpses of the future, which they should realize must be the outcome of their life to-day." "I tell you," he says, "what I have learned, myself, from an exalted source, though I do not wish you to accept it unless it appeals to your own reason, regarding the commencement of what is called modern Spiritualism by the Rochester Knockings. At the initiation of this new gospel to the world there was a combination of great souls in the spirit realms, who gave the first impetus to this movement which will presently fill the world. Many great souls withdrew when the awakening was complete, and future work was left to other controls. As is known to most leading investigators, including Dr. Hodgson, and others, it is as little known in the spheres as on the earth that communication between the two is possible. Mr. W. T. Stead's "After Death" shows this in Julia's impatience at not getting established at once "A Bureau of Communication" for both discarnate and incarnate spirits. The truth began to spread after the first awakening in lower spiritual spheres and, as a consequence, the movement, as a whole, became controlled and obsessed by a lower class of spirits. The outcome of this degeneration is that the more thinking and earnest Spiritualists are rapidly moving toward a religious philosophy which is in perfect harmony with the religion of the Christ. Jesus said to His disciples, "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you," simply because they were "Sensitives," and the early Apostolic Church was Christian Spiritualism. Jesus of Nazareth stood on the very pinnacle of ancient Hebrew Spiritualism, and Paul, inspired by this thought, said: "We shall be saved by His life."

The World Advancing Toward Spiritualism.

Everyone is progressing spiritually, said Dr. Peebles, in his optimistic fashion. Christian denominations as well as Spiritualists are receiving the light. The Methodists of U. S. A. are proposing to modify their creeds. Orthodox churches, generally, are progressing toward the ideal of a Christian Spiritualism and away from cramping creeds and professions of faith. Spiritualism is a universal force in the world not confined to Spiritualists, but influencing many who have never seen a medium. This applies to Spiritualists also. Some of the best I know have never sat in a circle, but have developed their own spiritual natures by "living the life" and the study of our grand literature. They have thus grown to that state of consciousness in which they just as naturally converse with spirits as music responds to music, and love responds to love. Spiritualists should work in every reform movement. Dr. Peebles has carried this out during his long career. Anti-vaccination, temperance, both in eating and drinking—he is both a teetotaller and vegetarian—and every movement tending toward peace and harmony have had his consistent and hearty support. Dr. Peebles says the best speakers on the spiritualistic platforms in America are giving forth the higher teachings he advocates, and mentions in this connection Mrs. Brigham, of New York; Mrs. Cora Richmond, of Chicago; Mrs. Lillie, Los Angeles, Cal.; Mr. Wiggins, of Boston; B. F. Austin, Plymouth Church, Rochester, and some others.

Dr. Peebles' 85th Birthday.

On March 23d a birthday celebration was held at the V. A. S. rooms, which was largely attended. Mr. James Smith read a poem written especially for the occasion, and published in the April issue. Short addresses were given by Mr. Waschatz, president; Mr. W. H. Terry, Mrs. Bright, Miss Hinge and Mrs. Waschatz. Replying to the several addresses, Dr. Peebles said, with some emotion and a striking enthusiasm, that he was almost overjoyed with the manifest appreciation and warmth of expression breathed from the old friends and otherkindly souls present, sending him with so many kindly words and good wishes along by sea and by land on his 86th year of life's journey. He referred to several present—W. H. Terry, James Smith, and others—who greeted him on his first arrival in Melbourne in 1872. And referring to his lectures in the theater and the Temperance Hall, he mentioned Mr. Charles Bright (husband of the present editor of the "Harbinger of Light") as the chairman of his first meeting.

At this time the daily press was severely critical and sometimes radically unjust, pronouncing Dr. Peebles a bold blasphemer, and Spiritualism a Yankee-begotten humbug, but a generation of years has wrought wonders with the Australian press. With a few exceptions, its impartiality and liberality are commendable.

Speaking of his age, he said: "People are about as old as they think they are. They grow old because they expect to. It is a bad habit. Most unwisely many act as aged persons are expected to act. They drop business and doze in rocking-chairs, and recalling the the past, babble about it. The dead line of three score years and ten should be blotted out of both consciousness and memory. Laziness I abhor, and consider industry the best stuff for the making of both statesmen and saints. Books feed me, while crowds and parlor tattle starve me. Often do I go away hungry from the multitude, and enter into the silence where I find the bread of inspiration that the masses know not of.

"If you have jealousies and envies among you, do not mention them to me; they are the blotches on the face of humanity. They indicate a low phase of spiritual unfoldment. Naturally I am myself an optimist. Often in my lifelong journey, misunderstood, sometimes misrepresented, at other times shamefully slandered and frequently walking on thorn-piercing pavements, I stopped not by the wayside to bemoan the rough pathway, but traveled on, inspired by faith within, and warmed by God's sunshine above me. Never did I witness a starless night. If clouds shut away the glimmerings of the stars from my vision, I knew that they were still above shining in peerless radiance, and that the morning would come. Spiritualism has been an anchor to my soul. It demonstrates a future existence, encourages the desponding, and does not say good-night to the dying, but tells of a good-morning just over there, where the loved meet, and parting is unknown.

"Never happier hours did I pass than when hearing the good, grey, American poet, Walt Whitman, read to me paragraphs from his inimitable "Leaves of Grass." These lines struck me as exquisitely beautiful:—

"All seems beautiful to me,
I can repeat over to men and women,
You have done such good to me
I would do the same to you;
I will recruit for myself and you
as I go,
I will scatter myself among men and
women as I go,
I will toss a new gladness and roughness among them,
Whoever denies me it shall not trouble me,
Whoever accepts me, he or she shall
be blessed, and shall bless me."

Among Dr. Peebles' other activities during his stay in Melbourne was a newspaper controversy in the "Age" with Rev. Mr. Brazier, an Anglican clergyman, in answer to that gentleman's strictures in the columns of the 'Age" on "Spiritual Communications." We give the whole of Dr. Peebles' letter for the benefit of friends at a distance who may not otherwise see it:

Spiritual Communications.

